[d] 3. In the day of thy power &c.] The blessed effects of the Gospel, upon its publication, are here foretold. "The people" of Christ are those given Him by his Father, and gathered to Him by the preachers of his word. "The day of his power" is the season of their conversion, when the corruptions of nature can no longer hold out against the prevailing influences of grace; when the heart, will, and affections, turn from the world to God; and they make, as the first disciples did, a free and voluntary offer of themselves, and all they have, to their Redeemer. Then it is that they appear "in the beauties of holiness," adorned with humility, faith, hope, love, and all the graces of the Spirit. With regard to the last clause of this verse, Bishop Lowth, in his admired Lectures, has observed, and proved, that it may be fairly constructed to this effect:—More than the dew from the womb of the morning is the dew of thy progeny; that is, Thy children, begotten to thee through the Gospel, shall exceed in number, as well as brightness and beauty, the spangles of early dew, which the morning discloseth to the delighted eye of the beholder. The whole verse, therefore, containeth a lively character of the subjects of Christ's spiritual kingdom, who are described by their relation to Him as "his people;" by their "willingness" to obey and serve Him; by their honourable attire, the rich and splendid robes of "holiness;" and by their multitudes, resembling the drops of "dew" upon the grass. Bp. Horne.

[e] 4. The Lord sware, &c.] From Christ's regal office, and the administration thereof by the sceptre of his word and Spirit, the prophet passeth to his sacerdotal office, which was also conferred on Him by the decree of the Father, and that decree, as we are told, ratified by an oath; "Jehovah hath sworn, and will not repent," or change his purpose. The oath of God was the great seal of heaven, designed to intimate the importance of the deed to which it was set, and "to shew to the heirs of promise the immutability of his counsel," Heb. vi. 17. Whether this oath passed at the actual consecration of Messiah to the priesthood upon his ascension, or at his designation thereto by covenant before the world, sufficient it is for our assurance and comfort that it did pass. We have a priest in heaven, who standeth continually pleading the merits of his sacrifice once offered upon the cross: "who ever liveth to make intercession for us;" and who is ready, at all times, to bless us, "by turning away every man from his iniquities," Acts iii. 26; by aiding us against our enemies, and supporting us under our necessities. Oblation, intercession, and benediction, are the three branches of the sacerdotal office, which our great High Priest now exerciseth for us, and in the exercise of which the Father hath condescended in the most awful manner to promise, that He will hear and accept Him on our behalf. His priesthood is not, like that of Aaron, figurative, successive, and transient, but real and effectual, fixed and incommunicable, eternal and unchangeable, according to that pattern of it exhibited to Abraham, before the law, in the person of Melchizedek, Gen. xiv. 18—20, and discoursed upon at large by the apostle, Heb. vii. throughout. Bp. Horne.

[f] 5, 6. The Lord upon thy right hand: &c.] This is a description of the vengeance which King Messiah should take on his impenitent adversaries. By "the Lord," or, "my Lord, upon my right hand," the same person must undoubtedly be understood, who is mentioned in the first verse under the same title, "as sitting at the right hand of Jehovah." And the Psalmist, who has hitherto addressed Himself to Messiah, or the Son, must be supposed now to make a sudden apostrophe to Jehovah, or the Father; as if He had said, "This my Lord Messiah, who sitteth at thy right hand, O Jehovah, shall smite through kings in the day of his wrath;" the kings of the earth will endeavour to destroy his religion, and put an end to his kingdom; the Neros, the Domitians, the Diocletians, the Maxentiuses, the Julians, &c. &c., shall stand up, and set themselves in array against Him; but "the Lamb shall overcome them;" He shall "judge" and punish the "heathen" princes, with their people, when in arms against his church; He shall raise up those who shall successfully fight his battles, and strew the ground with their "carcases." As Messiah hath done to the antichristian powers of old, so shall He do to all others, before or at his second advent. There is a day of forbearance, during which He will have his church to be, like Himself, oppressed and afflicted, humble and resigned: but there is also a future day of wrath and recompense, when the sins and provocations of her persecutors shall be ripe for judgment; when their triumphs and her sufferings shall be at an end; when they shall fall for ever, and she shall ascend to heaven. Bp. Horne.

[g] 7. He shall drink of the brook, &c.] The means, by which Christ should obtain his universal kingdom, and everlasting priesthood, seem here to be assigned. In his "way" to glory, He was to drink deep of the waters of affliction; the swollen "torrent" occurred in the way, and presented itself between Him and the throne of God. To this "torrent in the way" the Saviour descended; He bowed Himself down, and "drank" of it for us all: "and therefore did he lift up his head;" that is, He arose victorious, and, from the Easter-day, third Psalm Morn. Serv.

PSALM cxi.[h] Confitebor tibi.

I Will give thanks unto the Lord[i] with my whole heart : secretly among the faithful, and in the congregation.

2 The works of the Lord are great[k] : sought out of all them that have pleasure therein.

3 His work is worthy to be praised, and had in honour : and his righteousness endureth for ever.

4 The merciful and gracious Lord[l] hath so done his marvellous works : that they ought to be had in remembrance.

all things that they stand in need of. Dr. Hammond.

5 He hath given meat[m] unto them that fear him : he shall ever be mindful of his covenant.

6 He hath shewed his people the power of his works : that he may give them the heritage of the heathen.

7 The works of his hands are verity and judgement : all his commandments are true.

8 They stand fast for ever and ever : and are done in truth and equity.

9 He sent redemption unto his people[n] : he hath commanded his covenant for ever; holy and reverend is his Name.

10 The fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom[o] : a good understanding have all they that do thereafter : the praise of it endureth for ever.

PSALM cxii.[p] Beatus vir.

BLESSED is the man that feareth the Lord[q] : he hath great delight in his commandments.

2 His seed shall be mighty[r] upon earth : the generation of the faithful shall be blessed.

3 Riches and plenteousness shall valley in which the torrent ran, ascended to the summit of that holy and heavenly mount, where He reigneth, till "his enemies be made his footstool." St. Paul hath expressed the same sentiment in literal terms: "He humbled himself, and became obedient unto death, even the death of the cross: wherefore God also hath highly exalted him," Phil. ii. 8. Bp. Horne.

---

[h] Psalm cxi.] This is one of the proper Psalms appointed by the church to be read on Easter-day. It containeth, 1, a resolution to praise Jehovah in the congregation, 2, 3, for his great and glorious works, and, 4, for the appointed memorials of them: 5, 6, his mercies to the church are celebrated, and, 7, 8, the equity and the stability of his counsels declared: 9, the blessings of redemption, and the new covenant, are mentioned, as they were prefigured of old in God's dispensations toward Israel. 10, Religion is proclaimed to be true wisdom. Bp. Horne.

[i] 1. I will give thanks unto the Lord &c.] Jehovah is to be "praised," not only with the voice and the understanding, but with the "heart," with the "whole" heart, and all its affections, tuned, like the chords of the son of Jesse's harp, to a song of gratitude and love. Solitary devotion hath, doubtless, its beauties and excellencies; but how glorious is it to hear the voices of a whole Christian "congregation" break forth into hallelujahs! Bp. Horne.

[k] 2, 3. The works of the Lord are great: &c.] The subjects of man's praise are the "works" of God. Every one of these works, whether in the natural or the spiritual system, is "great." But the "work" of all others, in which the "honour and glorious majesty" of Jehovah appeared, and which the Christian church celebrates with this Psalm, is the salvation and exaltation of our nature, by the resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead; an event which contained in it the accomplishment of the ancient promises, and thereby demonstrated to all the world the everlasting truth, fidelity, and "righteousness" of Him who made them. Bp. Horne.

[l] 4. The merciful and gracious Lord &c.] Jewish feasts were "memorials" of the "wonders" wrought for Israel of old; Christian festivals are "memorials" of the "wonders" wrought in Christ for all mankind, to whom, no less than to Israel, God hath now shewed Himself "gracious and full of compassion." Bp. Horne.

[m] 5. He hath given meat &c.] Agreeably to the "covenant" which God made with Abraham, as concerning his children according to the flesh, He "fed" and supported them in the wilderness, He overthrew their enemies by the might of his "power," and He put them in possession of Canaan, which before was "the heritage of the heathen." Agreeably to the covenant which God made with the same Abraham, as concerning all believers, those "children of the promise which are counted for the seed," He feedeth them in the world with the true manna, the bread which cometh down from heaven; He hath again "shewed the power of his works" in the overthrow of idolatry; and again by the conversion of the nations, given to his church "the heritage of the heathen." Bp. Horne.

[n] 9. He sent redemption unto his people: &c.] He who "sent redemption" to Israel by the hand of Moses, hath now "sent redemption" by the power of Jesus to all the world: He who, at mount Sinai, established his "covenant" with his people, and gave them a law, hath now established his "covenant" with the Gentiles, and published to them his Gospel from Sion. "Holy is his name," and therefore "terrible" to those, who, under all the means of grace, continue unholy. Bp. Horne.

[o] 10. The fear of the Lord is the beginning of wisdom: &c.] The "fear of God" is the first step to salvation, as it exciteth a sinner to depart from evil, and to do good; to implore pardon and to sue for grace; to apply to a Saviour for the one, and to a Sanctifier for the other. Religion is the perfection of wisdom, practice the best instructor, and thanksgiving the sweetest recreation. Bp. Horne.

[p] Psalm cxii.] This Psalm seems to be intended for a short commentary upon the former: shewing how well and wisely they consult their own good and be in his house[s]: and his righteousness endureth for ever.

4 Unto the godly there ariseth up light in the darkness: he is merciful, loving, and righteous.

5 A good man is merciful, and lendeth: and will guide his words with discretion.

6 For he shall never be moved[t]: and the righteous shall be had in everlasting remembrance.

7 He will not be afraid of any evil tidings: for his heart standeth fast, and believeth in the Lord.

8 His heart is established, and will not shrink: until he see his desire upon his enemies.

9 He hath dispersed abroad, and given to the poor: and his righteousness remaineth for ever; his horn shall be exalted with honour.

10 The ungodly shall see it, and it shall grieve him[u]: he shall gnash with his teeth, and consume away; the desire of the ungodly shall perish.

PSALM cxiii.[x] Laudate, pueri. Easter-day, first Psalm Even. Serv.

PRAISE the Lord, ye servants[y]: O praise the Name of the Lord.

2 Blessed be the Name of the Lord: from this time forth for evermore.

3 The Lord's Name is praised[z]: from the rising up of the sun unto the going down of the same.

4 The Lord is high above all

---

happiness, who observe God's commandments, especially those concerning doing good to others. Bp. Patrick.

The Psalmist enumerateth the blessings attending the man who feareth Jehovah; 1, the pleasure which he taketh in doing his will; 2, the prosperity of his seed; 3, the plenteousness in his house; 4, his comfort in trouble; 5, his internal joys; 6, the honour with which he is remembered; 7, 8, his holy confidence in God; 9, his good deeds, and the reward of them; 10, the envy, wretchedness, and perdition of the wicked. The blessings of the Gospel are spiritual and eternal; and they are conferred upon the members of the Christian church through Christ their head, who is the pattern of all righteousness, and the giver of all grace. Bp. Horne.

[q] 1. Blessed is the man that feareth the Lord: &c.] The man, who duly "feareth God," is delivered from every other fear; the man who "delighteth in God's commandments," is freed from every inordinate desire of earthly things; and such a man must needs be "blessed." Bp. Horne.

[r] 2. His seed shall be mighty &c.] A father's piety derives the benediction of heaven upon his children. The posterity of faithful Abraham were often spared and favoured on account of their progenitor. Bp. Horne.

[s] 3. Riches and plenteousness shall be in his house: &c.] It sometimes pleaseth God to bestow on his servants, as He did on Israel of old, the good things of this world. And a rich man is therefore happier than a poor man, because "it is more blessed to give than to receive," Acts xx. 35. But the true "wealth" of Christians is of another kind; their "riches" are such as neither moth can corrupt, nor thief steal. Grace and glory are in the "house" of Christ, and everlasting "righteousness" is the portion of his children. Bp. Horne.

[t] 6. For he shall never be moved: &c.] Nothing can deprive the person here described of his felicity. When his work is done, his body will go to its repose in the dust, but the "memorial" of his name and of his good deeds will be still fresh as the morning breeze, and fragrant as the flower of the spring. "He feareth no evil report," no blast of slander and malice can touch him; no tidings of calamity and destruction can shake his confidence in God. And, whatever may be his lot upon earth, and even there the charitable man will frequently be had in "honour," at the last day, certainly, when the thrones of the mighty shall be cast down, and the sceptres of tyrants broken in pieces, then shall he lift up his head, and be exalted to partake of the "glory" of his Redeemer, the author of his faith, and the pattern of his charity, who gave Himself for us, and is now seated at the right hand of the Majesty in the heavens. Bp. Horne.

[u] 10. The ungodly shall see it, and it shall grieve him: &c.] The sight of Christ in glory with his saints will, in an inexpressible manner, torment the crucifiers of the one, and the persecutors of the others; as it will shew them the hopes and wishes of their adversaries all granted to the full, and all their own "desires" and designs for ever at an end; it will excite an envy which must prey upon itself, produce a grief which can admit of no comfort, give birth to a worm which can never die, and blow up those fires which nothing can quench. Bp. Horne.

[x] PSALM cxiii.] This Psalm is a thankful commemoration of the glory and condescension of God, and the great and signal works of his providence to the most afflicted abject creatures, never more discernible than in the work of redemption. Dr. Hammond.

The servants of God are, 1, exhorted to praise his name, 2, at all times, and, 3, in all places, on account, 4, 5, of his power and glory, 6, 7, of his mercy in redeeming man, and, 8, making the Gentile church to be a joyful mother of children. This Psalm is appointed to be read on Easter-day. Bp. Horne.

[y] 1. Praise the Lord, ye servants: &c.] Christians are the "servants" of Jesus Christ; and a most delightful part of their service it is, to "praise" his holy and saving "name" in the church, which now useth this Psalm among others, and with it "blesseth the name" of her Lord and Saviour, from age to age. The Psalmist wished and prayed that this might be done, and he foresaw that it would be done, while the world should last, upon earth, and afterwards "for evermore" in heaven. Bp. Horne.

[z] 3. The Lord's Name is praised: &c.] At the diffusion of the Gospel through the world, the name of Christ was praised "from the east to the west," in churches every where planted by the apostles and their successors: and the grand subjects of joy and triumph among believers were, the superiority of their Master heathen : and his glory above the heavens.

5 Who is like unto the Lord our God, that hath his dwelling so high : and yet humbleth himself to behold the things that are in heaven and earth?

the poor. Bib. Trans. needy out of the dung-hill. Bib. Trans.

6 He taketh up the simple[a] out of the dust : and lifteth the poor out of the mire;

7 That he may set him with the princes : even with the princes of his people.

giveth her a family. Dr. Hammond.

8 He maketh the barren woman to keep house[b] : and to be a joyful mother of children.

EVENING PRAYER.

Easter-day, second Psalm Even. Serv.

PSALM cxiv.[c] In exitu Israel.

WHEN Israel came out of Egypt[d] : and the house of Jacob from among the strange people, a people of strange language. Bib. Trans.

2 Judah was his sanctuary : and Israel his dominion.

That is, God's. Bib. Trans.

3 The sea saw that, and fled[e] : Jordan was driven back.

4 The mountains skipped like rams[f] : and the little hills like young sheep.

5 What aileth thee, O thou sea[g], that thou fleddest : and thou Jordan, that thou wast driven back?

ailed. Bib. Trans.

6 Ye mountains, that ye skipped like rams : and ye little hills, like young sheep?

7 Tremble, thou earth, at the presence of the Lord : at the presence of the God of Jacob.

8 Who turned the hard rock into a standing water[h] : and the flint-stone into a springing well.

lake of water. Dr. Hammond. a fountain of waters. Bib. Trans. See Vocab.

---

over the "heathen nations" and their idols; the exaltation of "his glory above the heavens," and all the powers therein; the might of his arm, and the majesty of his kingdom. Bp. Horne.

[a] 6. He taketh up the simple &c.] Such is his mercy to the poor sons of Adam in their fallen estate, that from the lowest and most abject condition, from the pollutions of sin, and from the dishonours of the grave, He raiseth them to righteousness and holiness, to glory and immortality; He setteth them on high, with the inhabitants of the heavenly Jerusalem, "with the princes of his people," the leaders of the armies above, with angels and archangels before his throne. Bp. Horne.

[b] 8. He maketh the barren woman to keep house: &c.] In the sacred history of the Old Testament, we meet with frequent instances of barren women who were miraculously made to bear children. Isaac, Joseph, Samson, and Samuel, were thus born of Sarah, Rachel, the wife of Manoah, and Hannah. To these may be added from the history of the New Testament, the instance of Elisabeth, the wife of Zacharias, and mother of St. John the Baptist. These examples may be considered as preludes to that marvellous exertion of divine power, whereby the Gentile church, after so many years of barrenness, became, in her old age, "a fruitful parent of children, and the mother of us all." Wherefore it is written, "Sing, O barren, thou that didst not bear; break forth into singing, and cry aloud, thou that didst not travail with child; for more are the children of the desolate, than the children of the married wife, saith the Lord," Isa. liv. 1; Gal. iv. 27. Bp. Horne.

[c] Psalm cxiv.] This is another of the Psalms appointed by our Church to be read on Easter-day. It celebrates the Exodus of Israel from Egypt, and the miracles wrought for that people, prefiguring the redemption of our nature from sin and death, and the wonders of mercy and love wrought for us by Jesus Christ. Bp. Horne.

[d] 1, 2. When Israel came out of Egypt: &c.] When Jehovah delivered Israel from the bondage of Egypt, He chose them for his peculiar people; his presence resided in their camp, as in a "sanctuary," or temple; and He ruled them, as an earthly king exerciseth sovereignty in his "dominions." This world, and the prince of this world, are to us, what Egypt and Pharaoh were to Israel. The redemption of our nature by the resurrection of Christ, answereth to their redemption by the hand of Moses. When we are baptized into the death and resurrection of our Lord, we renounce the world, its pomps and vanities; and should, therefore, quit its corrupt "language," manners, and customs, with as much alacrity and expedition, as "the family of Jacob" left those of Egypt. We are the "sanctuary," the temple in which Christ dwelleth by his Spirit; we are the subjects of his spiritual "kingdom," we are his peculiar people; in one word, we are his "church," and succeed, as such, to all the titles and privileges formerly conferred on Israel. Bp. Horne.

[e] 3. The sea saw that, and fled: &c.] Although forty years intervened between the two events here mentioned, yet, as the miracles were of a similar nature, they are spoken of together. In the passage of Israel through the Red Sea, we may contemplate our passage from a death of sin to a life of righteousness through the waters of baptism; as our translation from death temporal to life eternal is figured by their entrance into the promised land through the river Jordan. Bp. Horne.

[f] 4. The mountains skipped like rams: &c.] The tremours of mount Sinai and the neighbouring hills, when the law was given, afforded some specimen of that power which was afterwards exerted in the overthrow of idolatry, and the casting down of every high thing that exalted itself against the Gospel at its publication. See Heb. xii. 25. Bp. Horne.

[g] 5—7. What aileth thee, O thou sea, &c.] If the divine presence hath such an effect upon inanimate matter, how ought it to operate on rational and accountable beings? Let us be afraid, with an holy fear, at the presence of God, in the world by his providence, and by his Spirit in our consciences; so that we may have hope and courage in the day when He shall arise to shake terribly the earth; when "every island shall fly away, and the mountains shall be no more found," Rev. xvi. 20. Bp. Horne.

[h] 8. Who turned the hard rock into a standing water: &c.] He, who brought water out of the sacramental

PSALM cxv.[l] Non nobis, Domine.

NOT unto us, O Lord, not unto us, but unto thy Name give the praise : for thy loving mercy, and for thy truth's sake.

2 Wherefore shall the heathen say : Where is now their God?

3 As for our God, he is in heaven[k]: he hath done whatsoever pleased him.

4 Their idols are silver and gold[l]: even the work of men's hands.

5 They have mouths, and speak not : eyes have they, and see not.

6 They have ears, and hear not; noses have they, and smell not.

7 They have hands, and handle not; feet have they, and walk not : neither speak they through their throat.

8 They that make them are like unto them[m] : and so are all such as put their trust in them.

9 But thou, house of Israel[n], trust thou in the Lord : he is their succour and defence.

10 Ye house of Aaron, put your trust in the Lord : he is their helper and defender.

11 Ye that fear the Lord, put your trust in the Lord : he is their helper and defender.

12 The Lord hath been mindful of us[o], and he shall bless us : even he shall bless the house of Israel, he shall bless the house of Aaron.

13 He shall bless them that fear the Lord : both small and great.

14 The Lord shall increase you more and more : you and your children.

15 Ye are the blessed of the Lord : who made heaven and earth.

16 All the whole heavens are the Lord's[p] : the earth hath he given to the children of men.

---

rock in the wilderness, hath since caused rivers of living water to flow through the world, from the Rock of our salvation; nay, He hath dissolved the stony hearts of sinners, and made to spring up in them fountains of this water of life. For these great instances of his power and his love, we are taught to bless his holy name, when we sing this Psalm, as an evangelical hymn, on the day of our Lord's resurrection. Bp. Horne.

[l] Psalm cxv.] This Psalm was probably made in some time of great distress: but by whom, or on what particular occasion, is very uncertain. Bp. Patrick.

The Church, 1, 2, prayeth that God would glorify Himself in her salvation; 3, she declareth her faith in Him; 4—8, exposeth the vanity and folly of idolatry; 9—11, exhorteth her children to rely upon Jehovah; 12—15, foretelleth how He will bless, prosper, and increase his people, 16—18, never suffering the voice of praise and thanksgiving to cease upon the earth. Bp. Horne.

[k] 3. As for our God, he is in heaven: &c.] Should the insulting adversary ask the above question, "Where is now their God?" the faithful are ready with their reply, "Our God is in the heavens;" He is, where He ever was, upon his glorious throne, high over all the kingdoms of the world, and the powers of created nature; from thence He observeth and ordereth all things here below; what we suffer is by his appointment; and, at his good time and pleasure, He both can and will relieve us: "He doeth whatsoever He pleaseth." Bp. Horne.

[l] 4—7. Their idols are silver and gold: &c.] A beautiful contrast is formed between the God of Israel and the heathen idols. He made every thing, they are themselves made by men; He is in heaven, they are upon earth; He doeth whatsoever He pleaseth, they can do nothing; He seeth the distresses, heareth and answereth the prayers, accepteth the offerings, cometh to the assistance, and effecteth the salvation of his servants; they are blind, deaf, and dumb, senseless, motionless, and impotent. Equally slow to hear, equally impotent to save in time of greatest need, will every worldly idol prove, on which men have set their affections, and to which they have, in effect, said, "Thou art my God." Bp. Horne.

[m] 8. They that make them are like unto them: &c.] Idolaters, like the objects of their worship, are rather lifeless images than real men. What our Lord said of the Jews, is applicable to them, and indeed to all who reject the knowledge of the true God, and the doctrines of salvation: "Having eyes they see not, having ears they hear not." They see not the things which belong unto their peace; they hear not the word of instruction and exhortation; they speak not of religion and the kingdom of heaven; they work not the works of piety and charity; they walk not in the path of the divine commandments; they are spiritually blind, deaf, dumb, lame, and impotent; and when their idols are destroyed, they will perish in like manner. Bp. Horne.

[n] 9—11. But thou, house of Israel, &c.] Let the men of the world make to themselves gods, and vainly trust in the work of their own hands or heads; but let the church repose all her confidence in Jehovah, her Saviour and Redeemer, who alone can be her defender and protector; more especially, let her ministers, the sons of the true Aaron, do this, who are the peculiar portion of their God, employed continually in his service, and designed to build up others in faith and hope; and let all, who have been instructed, by their ministry, in the fear of the Lord, trust always in Him, nor suffer any apprehension of danger or distress to separate them from Him. Bp. Horne.

[o] 12—15. The Lord hath been mindful of us, &c.] The heart of the Psalmist is full of "blessing," and on his tongue is the word of kindness and comfort. The "blessings," formerly confined to Israel, have since been extended to the whole race of mankind. Jehovah, ever "mindful" of his creatures, hath visited the world by his Son and by his Spirit; He hath formed a church from among the Gentiles, appointed a priesthood and ministry in it, and given his benediction to both; He hath "blessed" with the blessings of grace, "them that fear him," of all nations, and of every degree; He hath "increased" and multiplied his people exceed-

17 The dead praise not thee, O Lord: neither all they that go down into silence.

18 But we will praise the Lord: from this time forth for evermore. Praise the Lord.

MORNING PRAYER.

Churching of Women.

PSALM cxvi.[q] Dilexi, quoniam.

I Am well pleased: that the Lord hath heard the voice of my prayer;

2 That he hath inclined his ear unto me: therefore will I call upon him as long as I live.

sorrows. Bib. Trans.

3 The snares of death compassed me[r] round about: and the pains of hell gat hold upon me.

See Vocab.

I found. Bib. Trans.

4 I shall find trouble and heaviness, and I will call upon the Name of the Lord: O Lord, I beseech thee, deliver my soul.

then called I. Bib. Trans.

5 Gracious is the Lord, and righteous: yea, our God is merciful.

6 The Lord preserveth the simple: I was in misery, and he helped me.

7 Turn again then unto thy rest, O my soul[s]: for the Lord hath rewarded thee.

dealt bountifully with thee. Bib. Trans.

8 And why? thou hast delivered my soul from death: mine eyes from tears, and my feet from falling.

9 I will walk before the Lord: in the land of the living.

10 I believed, and therefore will I speak[t]; but I was sore troubled: I said in my haste, All men are liars.

have I spoken. Bib. Trans.

11 What reward shall I give unto

What shall I render. Bib. Trans.

---

ingly; and the faithful members of the Christian church are now "the blessed of Jehovah, who made heaven and earth," and who is, consequently, possessed of all power in both. Bp. Horne.

[p] 16—18. All the whole heavens are the Lord's: &c.] He who Himself dwelleth in the highest heavens, where He is praised and glorified by angels, hath "given the earth" for an habitation, at present, "to the sons of men," whose duty it is to praise and glorify Him here below, as the angels do above. Now as "the dead cannot praise Him," as they who sleep in the silent grave cannot celebrate Him, we may be certain, that He will not suffer his people to be destroyed and extirpated, but will always preserve a church to "bless him" in all ages, till the end of the world; when the dead shall be raised, and the choirs of heaven and earth shall be united, to praise and glorify Him together before his throne for evermore. Bp. Horne.

[q] Psalm cxvi.] It is not certain by whom, or upon what occasion, this Psalm was composed. It plainly appears, however, to be a song of thanksgiving for deliverance from trouble, either temporal, or spiritual, or both. To render it of general use, let it be considered as an evangelical hymn, in the mouth of a penitent, expressing his gratitude for salvation from sin and death. 1, 2, He declareth his gratitude to God, who hath vouchsafed to hear his prayer; 3—9, describeth his distress, his deliverance out of it, and subsequent peace and comfort; 10, he acknowledgeth himself to have been tempted to despond, but was supported by faith, in the day of trouble; 11—16, he determineth to receive the cup of salvation, to praise and to serve Jehovah, who thus delivereth the souls of his people. Bp. Horne.

This Psalm is highly applicable to the case of those, who have been blessed with deliverance from sickness and distress; and therefore the Church has appointed it to be used in the solemn thanksgiving of women after childbirth. Travell.

[r] 3. The snares of death compassed me &c.] These "sorrows" or "snares of death" once "compassed" the human race: these "pains of hell" were ready to seize on every son of Adam. The awakened and terrified conscience of a sinner hath felt the oppression of the former, and experienced some foretaste of the latter. In this situation he is described by St. Paul as crying out, "O wretched man that I am, who shall deliver me from the body of this death?" Let him take the course which the Psalmist took; let him "call upon the name of the Lord," even the Lord Jesus, who put Himself in the sinner's place, and suffered for him unspeakable "sorrows and pains;" let him do this, and he shall be saved; and shall sing the praises of his almighty Saviour, in the words of this beautiful Psalm. Bp. Horne.

[s] 7. Turn again then unto thy rest, O my soul: &c.] That peace of conscience, and joy in the Holy Ghost, which the penitent experienceth, as the effect and fruit of pardon, afford him some idea of the rest and felicity of heaven; and, accordingly, he speaks as one translated to those happy mansions, where there is no more death, neither sorrow, nor crying, because there is no more sin. Remission of sins ought to be followed by newness of life, and the resolution of him whose "soul" hath been "delivered from death, his eyes from tears, and his feet from falling," should always be this, "I will walk before the Lord," as one under his inspection, "in the land of the living," or amongst the redeemed in the church; until the time come for me to depart hence, and to be numbered with the saints in glory everlasting. Bp. Horne.

[t] 10. I believed, and therefore will I speak; &c.] In afflictions and distresses, those of the spirit and conscience more especially, the soul is tempted to despond, and can only be supported by faith exerting itself in prayer: "I believed, and therefore have I spoken," or "therefore spake I," that is, as above, verse 4, "I called upon the name of the Lord; O Lord, I beseech thee, deliver my soul." And this I did, though so "greatly afflicted," that I had "said in my haste," in my hurry and trepidation occasioned by fear and amazement, "All men are liars;" there is no credit to be given to their promises of deliverance; I am lost and undone for ever. Yet my faith failed not entirely, and, lo, my prayer hath been heard and answered. St. Paul, relating the troubles which came upon him, and the manner in which he sustained them, thus citeth a part of the 10th verse: "We, having the same spirit of faith, according as it is written, I believed, and therefore have I spoken: we also believe, and therefore speak; knowing that He, which raised up the Lord Jesus, shall the Lord[u]: for all the benefits that he hath done unto me?

12 I will receive the cup of salvation: and call upon the Name of the Lord.

13 I will pay my vows now in the presence of all his people: right dear in the sight of the Lord is the death of his saints[x].

14 Behold, O Lord, how that I am thy servant: I am thy servant[z], and the son of thine handmaid; thou hast broken my bonds in sunder.

15 I will offer to thee the sacrifice of thanksgiving: and will call upon the Name of the Lord.

16 I will pay my vows unto the Lord, in the sight of all his people: in the courts of the Lord's house, even in the midst of thee, O Jerusalem. Praise the Lord.

PSALM cxvii.[a] Laudate Dominum.

O Praise the Lord, all ye heathen[b]: praise him, all ye nations.

2 For his merciful kindness is ever more and more towards us: and the truth of the Lord endureth for ever. Praise the Lord.

PSALM cxviii.[c] Confitemini Domino.

Easter-day, third Psalm Even. Serv. and King Charles's Rest. fourth Psalm Morn. Serv.

O Give thanks unto the Lord[d], for he is gracious: because his merey endureth for ever.

2 Let Israel now confess, that he raise up us also by Jesus, and shall present us with you," 2 Cor. iv. 13, 14. Bp. Horne.

[u] 11. What reward sholl I gire unto the Lord: &c.] The grateful penitent now asketh, what return he shall make to his kind Benefactor, for the most valuable of all blessings conferred upon him. And he presently resolveth to make the only return in his power, namely, to acknowledge and declare before men the goodness of Jehovah, ascribing all the glory where it is all due. This he determineth to do, by "taking the cup of salvation," which, as Dr. Hammond observes, among the Jews was twofold: one offered in a more solemn manner in the temple, Numb. xxviii. 7; the other more private in families, called the cup of thanksgiving, or commemoration of any deliverance, begun by the master of the family, and attended, on festival days, with a suitable hymn; such as was that sung by our Lord and his disciples on the night when He advanced that cup into the sacrament of his blood, which hath ever since been to Christians "the cup of salvation," and which all penitents should now receive in the church, with invocation, thanksgiving, and payment of the "vows" made in time of trouble. Bp. Horne.

[x] 13. — right dear in the sight of the Lord is the death of his saints.] That is, it is rated at so high a price by God, as that He will not easily grant it to any one who most desires it of Him. We may add, that much less will God be easily prevailed on to give up his people to death eternal. Rather will He work wonders of mercy and loving-kindness to save them. Bp. Horne.

[z] 14—16. Behold, O Lord, how that I am thy servant: &c.] Every penitent is the "servant" of God, "the son of his handmaid," the church, "loosed from his bonds," and redeemed from a state of slavery under sin, the world, and the devil, that he may serve a better Master, whose "yoke is easy, and his burden light." This blessed Master is from thenceforth the object of his love, duty, and adoration: to Him he "offereth the sacrifice of thanksgiving," to Him he "payeth his vows," among his fellow-servants in the church on earth; longing for that day to come, when, loosed also from the bonds of death and the grave, he shall be admitted to sing hallelujahs with saints and angels, in the "courts" of the eternal temple, even "in the midst of thee, O Jerusalem," the holy, heavenly, and glorious city of God most high! Bp. Horne.

[a] Psalm cxvii.] This Psalm, like the 100th, seems to be altogether prophetical of the joy that all the world should conceive, at the coming of the Messiah, to give salvation, first to the Jews, and then to all other nations, according to his faithful promise. Bp. Patrick.

[b] 1. O praise the Lord, all ye heathen: &c.] It is remarkable, that of so short a Psalm one verse is quoted in the New Testament by St. Paul; the second verse is explained, though not quoted. Two questions naturally arise, upon reading the Psalm; first, Who are the "nations and people," exhorted to praise Jehovah? secondly, What is that "merciful kindness," and that "truth," for which they are exhorted to praise Him? The apostle hath given a satisfactory and decisive answer to both these questions, Rom. xv. 8, 9, &c. "Now, I say, that Jesus Christ was a minister of the circumcision for the truth of God, to confirm the promises made unto the fathers, and that the Gentiles might glorify God for his mercy; as it is written, Praise the Lord, all ye Gentiles, and laud him, all ye people." From the apostle's reasoning, the verse of our Psalm, which he hath cited, appears to be a proof, that "the Gentiles," or the heathen world, should one day "glorify God;" they are, therefore, the "people," whom the Psalmist, in the spirit of prophecy, exhorted to "praise Jehovah." It appears also, why the Gentiles were to glorify God; namely, for his "mercy" and "truth," shewn in confirming or accomplishing the "promises" concerning their vocation and conversion, "made unto the fathers;" to Abraham, and his seed for ever; to all believers, whether of the circumcision or the uncircumcision. Such, then, is the "merciful kindness" of Jehovah, which is said, in the Psalm, to be "great," mighty, and powerful, "toward us;" such his "truth," which is affirmed to "endure for ever;" as the promises were made good to the Gentiles, when the Jews, because of unbelief, had been cast off. Let the hallelujahs of the redeemed be suitable to that "mercy," and co-eternal with that "truth." Bp. Horne.

[c] Psalm cxviii.] This Psalm was most probably composed by David, when he was newly settled in the kingdom, and had brought up the ark of God to his royal city. But, though this was the occasion, David, or at least the Spirit of God, which indited this Psalm, had a higher design in it, especially in the latter part, which was to carry the reader's thoughts beyond the type to the antitype, the Messiah and his kingdom, who was chiefly intended by it. This is apparent, both from the testimonies produced of it to that purpose in the New Testament, and from the consent of the Hebrew doctors both ancient and modern. Poole.

is gracious : and that his mercy endureth for ever.

3 Let the house of Aaron now confess : that his mercy endureth for ever.

4 Yea, let them now that fear the Lord confess : that his mercy endureth for ever.

5 I called upon the Lord in trouble[e] : and the Lord heard me at large.

6 The Lord is on my side : I will not fear what man doeth unto me.

7 The Lord taketh my part with them that help me : therefore shall I see my desire upon mine enemies.

8 It is better to trust in the Lord[f] : than to put any confidence in man.

9 It is better to trust in the Lord : than to put any confidence in princes.

10 All nations compassed me round about[g] : but in the Name of the Lord will I destroy them.

11 They kept me in on every side, they kept me in, I say, on every side : but in the Name of the Lord will I destroy them.

12 They came about me like bees, and are extinct even as the fire among the thorns : for in the Name of the Lord will I destroy them.

13 Thou hast thrust sore at me[h], that I might fall : but the Lord was my help.

14 The Lord is my strength, and my song : and is become my salvation.

answered me, and set me in a large place. Bib. Trans. amply granted my petitions. Dr. Nicholls.

quenched as the fire of thorns. Bib. Trans.

Thou, O mine enemy. Poole.

In this Psalm, a king of Israel appears leading his people in solemn procession to the temple, there to offer up the sacrifice of praise and thanksgiving, for the marvellous deliverance from his enemies, and a glorious victory gained over them. After inviting the whole nation, 1—4, to join with him upon this joyful occasion, he describeth at large, 5—18, his danger, and his deliverance from it, which latter is wholly attributed to the power and goodness of Jehovah. After this there ensues a kind of sacred dialogue. Being come to the temple, the victorious monarch speaks the 19th verse; they that open the gate the 20th ; he again, as he enters, the 21st ; they with him seem to speak the next four verses, to the 25th ; the priests of the temple the 26th, the first part to the king, the other to the people ; the people the 27th ; he the 28th ; the 29th is the chorus verse, concluding as it began. The repeated application made of the 22nd verse in the New Testament, and the appointment of the Psalm, by the Church, to be used on Easter-day, lead us to consider the whole as a triumphant hymn, sung by King Messiah, at the head of the Israel of God, on occasion of his resurrection and exaltation. Bp. Horne.

[d] 1—4. O give thanks unto the Lord, &c.] The subjects of "thanksgiving" here proposed are Jehovah's "goodness" and his "mercy." He is the sole fountain of absolute and essential "goodness," the source of all excellency and perfection; and his "mercy" is the channel by which He communicateth this goodness, in an overflowing stream, to his people who are, therefore, exhorted to praise Him. The Christian church is now "the Israel of God ;" her ministers constitute the true "house of Aaron," being the spiritual progeny of our great High Priest ; and the Gentiles, not the Jews, are they who know and "fear Jehovah." Let these all celebrate, for these all have experienced, the benefits and blessings of "eternal mercy," by the resurrection of Jesus from the dead. Bp. Horne.

[e] 5. I called upon the Lord in trouble : &c.] The true value of every deliverance is to be estimated by the nature of the "distress" which required it. The rescue of David from his enemies, or that of Israel from captivity, might deservedly be extolled with the songs of Sion. How much more, then, is the church universal bound to lift up her voice in honour of Jehovah, who hath redeemed her from her spiritual adversaries, and freed her from the bondage of corruption, through Him who "died for her sins, and rose again for her justification ;" who, in the days of his flesh, being, on her account, in "distress" and affliction, "called upon Jehovah, and was answered," by an "enlargement" from the narrow prison of the grave, to a boundless and glorious kingdom ! Bp. Horne.

[f] 8. It is better to trust in the Lord : &c.] Armies of "men," however numerous, and to appearance powerful, may be routed and dispersed at once. "Princes" may not be able to help us; if able, they may fail us, as not being willing to do it ; if both able and willing, they may die, ere they can execute their purpose. But that hope, which is placed in God, can never, by these, or any other means, be disappointed. Bp. Horne.

[g] 10. All nations compassed me round about : &c.] As David and Israel were encompassed by hostile nations, over whom, through God's assistance, they often triumphed ; so the Son of David, in the day of his passion, was surrounded by the furious multitude of Jews and Gentiles seeking his life; and, after the same example, his mystical body, the church, hath frequently been, on all sides, vexed and persecuted in the world. But through the power of Jehovah, Christ overcame, and is set down on the right hand of the Majesty on high. The church, likewise, hath often risen superior to the efforts of her innumerable and malicious enemies, whose fury hath blazed forth against her with the sudden fierceness of "fire," when it is applied to a heap of dry "thorns ;" and hath been as soon at an end ; she hath triumphed, yea, and she will finally triumph, "in the name of the Lord her God." Bp. Horne.

[h] 13. Thou hast thrust sore at me, &c.] The church may consider herself as victorious over her great adversary, the author of all evil, who had made his grand effort to effect her destruction, by putting to death her champion and king, Messiah. But Jehovah appeared at the time appointed, to bring Him, and, virtually, all that should believe in Him, from the dead. "Thou hast thrust sore at me, that I might fall ; but Jehovah helped me." Risen, therefore, with Christ, from the grave, we proceed to praise Jehovah, in the words which Moses and Israel first used, when they had ascended from the depths of the sea, and beheld their enemies destroyed for ever ; "Jehovah is my strength, and my song, and is become my salvation," Exod. xv. 2. And never doth that sacred day come round, on which the resurrection of Jesus is celebrated, but "the voice of rejoicing is in the tabernacles of the righteous." Bp. Horne.

safety or deliverance. See Vocab.

15 The voice of joy and health is in the dwellings of the righteous: the right hand of the Lord bringeth mighty things to pass.

16 The right hand of the Lord hath the pre-eminence: the right hand of the Lord bringeth mighty things to pass.

17 I shall not die[i], but live: and declare the works of the Lord.

18 The Lord hath chastened and corrected me: but he hath not given me over unto death.

19 Open me the gates of righteousness[k]: that I may go into them, and give thanks unto the Lord.

20 This is the gate of the Lord: the righteous shall enter into it.

21 I will thank thee, for thou hast heard me: and art become my salvation.

22 The same stone which the builders refused[l]: is become the head-stone in the corner.

23 This is the Lord's doing: and it is marvellous in our eyes.

24 This is the day which the Lord hath made[m]: we will rejoice and be glad in it.

25 Help me now, O Lord[n]: O Lord, send us now prosperity. Save now. Bib. Trans.

26 Blessed be he that cometh in

[i] 17. I shall not die, &c.] As Christ is risen, "we shall not die but live;" we shall not die eternally, but we shall live in this world, the life of grace; in the world to come, the life of glory; that we may, in both, "declare the works" and chant the praises of God our Saviour. We are "chastened" for our sins, but "not given over to death" and destruction everlasting; nay, our being "chastened" is now a proof that we are not so "given over;" for "what son is he whom the father chasteneth not?" Heb. xii. 7. Bp. Horne.

[k] 19—21. Open me the gates of righteousness: &c.] The faithful, like David and his people of old, demand admission into the courts of the Lord's house, there to praise Him for his great and manifold mercies. But we may extend our ideas much farther, and consider the whole company of the redeemed, as beholding the angels ready to unbar the gates of heaven, and throw open the doors of the eternal sanctuary, for the true disciples of the risen and glorified Jesus to enter in. "Open ye," may believers exclaim in triumph to those celestial spirits, who delight to minister to the heirs of salvation, "open ye the gates of righteousness," those gates, through which nothing unclean can pass, "that the righteous nation which keepeth the truth may enter in," Isa. xxvi. 2, and sing, with your harmonious choirs, the praises of Him who sitteth upon the throne; for He hath overcome the sharpness of death, He hath opened the kingdom of heaven to all believers. "This is the gate of the Lord into which the righteous shall enter," to take possession of the inheritance prepared for them, "to thank" Him who hath "heard them, and is become their salvation." Bp. Horne.

[l] 22, 23. The same stone which the builders refused: &c.] Whether this passage had first a reference to the case of David, who, as a figure of Messiah, was brought from a state of rejection and persecution to the throne of Israel; it is neither possible nor needful to ascertain. That the verses belong, in a full and proper sense, to Messiah, is confessed by the Rabbis, and acknowledged by all. No text in the Old Testament is quoted by the writers of the New so often as this, which we meet with in six different places; namely, Matt. xxi. 42; Mark xii. 10; Luke xx. 17; Acts iv. 11; Eph. ii. 20; 1 Pet. ii. 4. The sum and substance of the New Testament applications and expositions is, that Jesus Christ is the stone here mentioned; that He was rejected and set at nought by the chief priests and Pharisees, the then builders of the church; but that, being chosen of God, and precious to Him, this most valuable stone, thus despised and rejected of men, thus thrown among the rubbish, and buried in it, was, at length, from such a state, exalted to be the chief corner-stone in the building, the main support of the edifice, and a centre of union for Jew and Gentile, the two parts of which it consisted; that this was the work of God and the admiration of man. And what can be more truly marvellous, than that a person, put to death as a malefactor, and laid in the grave, should from thence arise immortal, and become the head of an immortal society; should ascend into heaven, be invested with power, and crowned with glory; and should prepare a way for the sons of Adam to follow Him into those mansions of eternal bliss? Bp. Horne.

[m] 24. This is the day which the Lord hath made: &c.] Of the day on which Christ arose from the dead, it may, with more propriety than of any other day, be affirmed, "This is the day which Jehovah hath made." Then it was that the "rejected stone" became the "head of the corner." A morning then dawned which is to be followed by no evening; a brighter sun arose upon the world which is to set no more; a day began, which will never end; and night and darkness departed, to return not again. For thus saith the Lord to his church by the prophet Isaiah, "Thy sun shall no more go down, neither shall thy moon withdraw itself; for the Lord shall be thine everlasting light, and the days of thy mourning shall be ended," Isa. lx. 20. Easter-day is in a peculiar manner consecrated to Him, who, by his resurrection, triumphed over death and hell. On that day, through faith, we triumph with Him; we rejoice and are glad in his salvation. Bp. Horne.

[n] 25. Help me now, O Lord: &c.] Or, as in the Bible translation, "Save now." As a prelude to the triumphant manner in which Jesus Christ, after his resurrection, should ascend to the heavenly Jerusalem, He entered the earthly city, before his passion, amidst the acclamations of the multitude, who hailed Him as King of Sion, and with palm-branches, the emblems of victory, in their hands, sung before Him these words, partly taken from our Psalm, "Hosanna to the Son of David: blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord: Hosanna in the highest." The word, "Hosanna," is in the original, "Save now!" The form of words used by the people was both a petition and a congratulation; as if they had said, Let us beseech Jehovah, in the language of the 118th Psalm, to grant salvation to the Son of David, and to send us now prosperity under Him: Blessed is He who thus cometh, not in his own name and power, but in the name and power of Jehovah, according to the prophecies concerning Him, to deliver us from all our enemies: ratify, O Jehovah, in the highest, or in heaven, these petitions which we make for the salvation and prosperity of our King, that thy blessings upon Him and us may be established on the Name of the Lord : we have wished you good luck, ye that are of the house of the Lord.

we have blessed you. Bib. Trans.

27 God is the Lord who hath shewed us light[o] : bind the sacrifice with cords, yea, even unto the horns of the altar.

28 Thou art my God[p], and I will thank thee : thou art my God, and I will praise thee.

29 O give thanks unto the Lord, for he is gracious : and his mercy endureth for ever.

EVENING PRAYER.

PSALM cxix.[q] Beati immaculati.

[r]BLESSED are those[s] that are undefiled in the way : and walk in the law of the Lord.

sincere. Bib. Trans. Marg.

2 Blessed are they that keep[t] his testimonies : and seek him with their whole heart.

3 For they who do no wickedness : walk in his ways.

4 Thou hast charged : that we shall diligently keep thy commandments.

5 O that my ways were made so direct : that I might keep thy statutes!

directed to keep. Bib. Trans.

6 So shall I not be confounded[u] : while I have respect unto all thy commandments.

ashamed. Bib. Trans.

7 I will thank thee with an unfeigned heart[x] : when I shall have learned the judgements of thy righteousness.

8 I will keep thy ceremonies[y] : O forsake me not utterly.

statutes. Bib. Trans. even those, for which I see no reason but thy will. Bp. Patrick.

---

earth. Since the resurrection of our Lord, the faithful have expressed, in these two verses, the same wishes and prayers for the increase of his kingdom, and the prosperity of his house and family, of his ministers and his people: "We bless you that are of the house of Jehovah." Bp. Horne.

[o] 27. God is the Lord who hath shewed us light: &c.] As Jehovah hath manifested his power and glory, by raising Christ from the dead; as He hath, by so doing, "shewed us the light" of life and immortality; let us observe the festival, which is designed to perpetuate the memory of so great and joyful an event. "Christ, our passover," saith an apostle, "is sacrificed for us; therefore let us keep the feast," 1 Cor. v. 7. Let us keep it, only changing legal for evangelical sacraments and ceremonies; let us go to the altar, not to see a figure of the Lamb of God, as He was to be slain; but to behold a representation of Him as He hath been slain; to behold, in figure, his body broken, and his blood poured out; to eat the bread of life, and drink the cup of salvation. Bp. Horne.

[p] 28, 29. Thou art my God, &c.] The prophet declareth his resolution to "praise" and to "exalt," to magnify and to glorify, his "God;" he then concludes, as he began, with exhorting all the world to do the same. Preserve to us, blessed Lord, the use of these divine hymns in thy church, until, at the resurrection of the just, we shall celebrate an Easter in heaven, and sing them new in the kingdom of God. Bp. Horne.

[q] Psalm cxix.] This Psalm is divided, (most probably for the advantage of memory,) according to the number of letters which compose the Hebrew alphabet, into twenty-two portions of eight verses each; and not only every portion, but every verse of that portion, begins with the letter appropriated to it. David must, undoubtedly, have been the author. He describeth, in a series of devotional meditations, the instruction and the comfort, which, through all vicissitudes of mind and fortune, he had ever found in the word of God. The many strong expressions of love towards the law, and the repeated resolutions and vows to observe it, will often force us to turn our thoughts to the true David, whose "meat and drink it was, to do the will of him that sent him." Between the verses of each portion a connexion is frequently to be traced, but it doth not often seem to extend from one portion to another. Bp. Horne.

It is observable that the word of God is here diversly called by the names of "law, statutes, precepts or commandments, judgments, ordinances, righteousness, testimonies, way, and word." By which variety the Psalmist designed to express the nature, and the great perfection and manifold parts and uses of God's word. Which is called his "word," as proceeding from his mouth, and revealed by Him to us: his "way," as prescribed by Him for us to walk in: his "law," as binding us to obedience: his "statutes," as declaring his authority and power of giving us laws: his "precepts," as declaring and directing our duty: his "ordinances," as ordained and appointed by Him: his "righteousness," as exactly agreeable to God's righteous nature and will: his "judgments," as proceeding from the great Judge of the world, and being his judicial sentence to which all men must submit: and his "testimonies," as it contains the witnesses of God's mind and will, and of man's duty. And there are very few of the 176 verses contained in this Psalm, in which one or other of these titles is not found. Poole.

[r] 1—8.] This first portion is a declaration of the happiness of those, who observe God's laws; the habitual practice of which is the grand preservative from evil, and the greatest incitement to joy and gratitude. Travell.

[s] 1. Blessed are those &c.] By sin, misery entered into the world; holiness alone, therefore, can lead us to happiness. "The law of Jehovah" is the path of life, and by "walking in the way" we shall attain to the end. Bp. Horne.

[t] 2. Blessed are they that keep &c.] The divine revelations and institutions, whether of the old or the new law, are called God's "testimonies;" they are the witnesses of his will, and the pledges of his love. They are committed to the church, as a precious deposit, or trust, to be by her children "kept," and observed. In and by these God is to be sought; "they that seek him with their whole heart," with ardent and undivided affection, fail not to find Him, as an instructor and a comforter; and they who find Him, find all things, and are "blessed" indeed. Bp. Horne.

[u] 6. So shall I not be confounded: &c.] All the commandments have the same author, and the same sanction. He who thinketh to atone for the breach of one, by the observation of another; he who reserveth to wander from. Bib. Trans.

In quo corriget?

[z] WHEREWITHAL shall a young man[a] cleanse his way: even by ruling himself after thy word.

10 With my whole heart have I sought thee: O let me not go wrong out of thy commandments.

11 Thy words have I hid within my heart[b]: that I should not sin against thee.

as the most precious treasure. Bp. Patrick.

12 Blessed art thou, O Lord: O teach me thy statutes.

13 With my lips have I been telling[c]: of all the judgements of thy mouth.

declared. Bib. Trans.

14 I have had as great delight in the way of thy testimonies: as in all manner of riches.

15 I will talk of thy commandments: and have respect unto thy ways.

16 My delight shall be in thy statutes[d]: and I will not forget thy word.

Retribue servo tuo.

[e] O Do well unto thy servant[f]: that I may live, and keep thy word.

18 Open thou mine eyes[g]: that I may see the wondrous things of thy law.

---

himself a licence of indulging any favourite, darling lust, while in general he preserveth the appearance of an exemplary conduct; is a hypocrite: and, unless he repent, will be brought to "shame," if not before men here, yet before men and angels hereafter. Bp. Horne.

[x] 7. I will thank thee with an unfeigned heart: &c.] The Scriptures are styled "God's righteous judgments," as containing an account of his decrees and determinations concerning us, with a history of cases and precedents, entered upon record for our admonition. By these we are to form our opinions, and to regulate our conduct. And when we shall have so "learned" these, as to walk according to them, we shall praise God with an "upright heart;" our tongue will utter what our hearts feel. Bp. Horne.

[y] 8. I will keep thy ceremonies, &c.] The result of our meditations on God's word, and on the advantages of studying, in order to observe its directions, should always be a resolution so to do, and a prayer for grace to execute that resolution. Lord, we "will keep thy statutes;" be thou, therefore, ever with us, and "forsake us not;" or, if at any time, to try our faith, and to exercise our patience, thou shouldest depart from us and leave us to ourselves for a time, short be thy absence, and speedy thy return: "O forsake us not utterly!" Bp. Horne.

[z] 9—16.] The second portion teacheth us, that the law of God is the surest guide to youth: and when this law is once rooted deeply in the heart, it will influence the whole character. The tongue will be employed in proclaiming its excellence, and it will be productive of more true pleasure than can be afforded by the greatest possessions of this world. Travell.

[a] 9. Wherewithal shall a young man &c.] Youth enters upon the journey of life, headstrong and inexperienced, with a bias of original corruption, and all the passions awake. In such circumstances how shall a young man direct his steps, so as to "escape the pollution that is in the world through lust?" 2 Pet. i. 4. He must for this purpose, take with him the directions to be found in the Scriptures of truth. "I have written unto you, young men," says the beloved disciple, "because ye are strong, and the word of God abideth in you, and ye have overcome the wicked one." Bp. Horne.

[b] 11. Thy words have I hid within my heart: &c.] The young man who would cleanse his way, and take heed according to God's word, must "lay up that word in his heart;" for from the heart are the "issues of life," the thoughts, the words, and the actions: when God ruleth in the heart by his word and Spirit, these become his subjects; then "the kingdom of heaven is within us," and all is obedience, peace, and love. Bp. Horne.

[c] 13. With my lips I have been telling: &c.] The best sign that God hath "taught us his statutes," and the greatest inducement to Him to teach us still more and more, is a readiness to make others partakers of those blessings, which we ourselves have received from Him. Jehovah fashions the "lips" of man, and He expects that they should be employed in his service. "Out of the abundance of the heart, the mouth speaketh," and the stream will always shew the nature of the fountain. Bp. Horne.

[d] 16. My delight shall be in thy statutes: &c.] By frequent meditation and continual practice, the divine "statutes" will become our "delight:" and from the pleasures, as well as from the cares of the world, we shall gladly fly to them for recreation and comfort. Of holy exercises there is great variety, and spiritual joys are without number. Lord, make us to "delight ourselves in thy statutes," and when we delight in what we learn, we shall easily retain it in memory; "we shall not forget thy word." Bp. Horne.

[e] 17—24.] The Psalmist, convinced of the powerful influence of God's law, earnestly prays for grace to enable him to persevere, through every circumstance of life, in the constant practice of it. Well knowing the guilt and punishment of those who transgress it, he deprecates their fate, and determines that no authority, how great soever, shall deter him from adhering to it. Travell.

[f] 17. O do well unto thy servant: &c.] In the foregoing parts of the Psalm, we have heard the believer declaring the excellency of God's word, and expressing both his desire and his resolution to observe its directions. He now beseecheth God to remove all impediments, and to accomplish this work in him. Bp. Horne.

[g] 18. Open thou mine eyes: &c.] So far are we naturally from being able to "keep" the word, that we are not able to understand it. The law of God is full of divine and spiritual truths, concealed under literal histories, visible signs, and external ceremonies. To discern these "wondrous," because the hidden, mysterious "things," our "eyes," the eyes of our understanding, must be "unveiled;" that "veil" must be taken off, which St. Paul affirmeth to be upon the hearts of the Jews, "in reading the Old Testament," and which will continue there, until they turn to the Lord Jesus Christ. Then the veil will be taken away, and they will behold Him, and the redemption by Him, as vehemently desireth them. Dr. Hammond.

19 I am a stranger upon earth[h]: O hide not thy commandments from me.

20 My soul breaketh out for the very fervent desire: that it hath alway unto thy judgements.

21 Thou hast rebuked the proud: and cursed are they that do err from thy commandments.

reproach and contempt. Bib. Trans.

22 O turn from me shame and rebuke[i]: for I have kept thy testimonies.

23 Princes also did sit and speak against me[k]: but thy servant is occupied in thy statutes.

24 For thy testimonies are my delight: and my counsellors.

Adhæsit pavimento.

[l] MY soul cleaveth to the dust[m]: O quicken thou me, according to thy word.

declared. Bib. Trans.

26 I have acknowledged my ways[n], and thou heardest me: O teach me thy statutes.

27 Make me to understand the way of thy commandments: and so shall I talk of thy wondrous works.

28 My soul melteth away for very heaviness: comfort thou me according unto thy word.

29 Take from me the way of lying[o]: and cause thou me to make much of thy law.

---

prefigured in their law, and foretold by their prophets. Pride, prejudice, and interest, will compose a veil, through which a Christian shall see as little of the New Testament, as a Jew doth of the Old. Lord, convince us of our blindness, and restore us to our sight. Bp. Horne.

[h] 19. I am a stranger upon earth: &c.] The above request for divine illumination is enforced by this argument, that the petitioner is a "stranger," and a sojourner upon "the earth;" he is travelling through a foreign country, to his native city, where are his kindred, his treasure, and his heart: as a sojourner, he hath renounced the world, which is therefore become his enemy; as a stranger, he is fearful of losing his way: on these accounts he requesteth, that God would compensate the loss of earthly comforts, by affording the light of heaven; that He would not "hide his commandments," but shew and teach him those steps, by which he may ascend towards heaven, rejoicing in hope of future glory. Bp. Horne.

[i] 22. O turn from me shame and rebuke: &c.] "Shame and rebuke," "reproach and contempt," are liberally bestowed by the world upon men, who, being not of it, reprove its deeds by their exemplary conduct. These, to beginners more especially, are sore lets and hindrances in the way of duty; and, after the example of David, we may beseech God to "remove" them from us, when we suffer them in his cause, and know ourselves to be innocent of the crimes laid to our charge. In the mean time, to comfort ourselves under them, let us remember, that He, who alone, in the strict and unlimited sense of the words, could say, "I have kept thy testimonies," sustained the utmost degree of "reproach and contempt" for our sakes, and was patient and resigned under it all, until God "removed" it from Him by a glorious resurrection. Bp. Horne.

[k] 23. Princes also did sit and speak against me: &c.] "Princes" and rulers have often "sate" in council upon the "servants" of God, and "spoken," in judgment, false things "against them," as they did against their blessed Master in the days of his flesh. David hath taught us how to act in such circumstances. We are not to renounce the Creed, or the Commandments, should it so happen that "the rulers and the Pharisees" neither believe the former, nor observe the latter; but rather, we should "meditate," more than ever, in the Scriptures; that we may draw from thence comfort in the troubles, and direction in the difficulties, which persecution bringeth upon us; always bearing in mind, when princes command any thing contrary to the word of God, that our service is due to a higher Master; "thy servant did meditate in thy statutes." Bp. Horne.

[l] 25--32.] The sense of this fourth portion is, that the commandments of God afford the greatest comfort to the soul of the afflicted; and the gracious answers, which He vouchsafes to the prayers of the distressed, should encourage them to a strict observance of his laws, and especially to avoid all falsehood and deceit. Travell.

[m] 25. My soul cleaveth to the dust: &c.] The Psalmist, in a state of affliction and humiliation, still seeketh relief, by prayer, from the Scriptures. His circumstances vary, but his affection to the word of God continueth the same. Every one, whose affections are set on things below, hath reason to exclaim with David, "My soul cleaveth to the dust." From this kind of death we are "quickened," or made alive, by the Gospel, through that same Spirit which raised Christ from the dead, and which shall raise us also at the last day. Bp. Horne.

[n] 26. I have acknowledged my ways, &c.] We should freely and ingenuously "declare" to God in prayer our sins, our temptations, our sorrows, and our undertakings; it argues love, confidence, and sincerity, so to do; it is a means of acquainting us with our own state, of which generally we are ignorant; and it will not fail to procure us those aids from above, of which we stand in need. God will "hear" us; He will pardon our offences, strengthen us in our trials, dispel our grief, and prosper the work of our hands upon us. Bp. Horne.

[o] 29, 30. Take from me the way of lying: &c.] It is plain that "the way of truth," in the latter of these two verses, is opposed to "the way of lying," or of falsehood, in the former. The one comprehends every thing in doctrine and practice that is right, and therefore "true:" the other denotes every thing which is wrong, and therefore "false." Of these two ways man hath his choice. God points out to him the former by his word, and offers to conduct him in it by his Spirit. Satan shews him the latter, and endeavours to seduce him into it by his temptations. The Psalmist declareth himself to have "chosen" God's way, and to have "laid" the Scriptures "before him," as the chart by which he was to direct his course. He therefore prays that the other way may be far "removed" from him; and that God would vouchsafe him such a thorough 30 I have chosen the way of truth: and thy judgements have I laid before me.

31 I have stuck unto thy testimonies[p]: O Lord, confound me not.

put me not to shame. Bib. Trans.

32 I will run the way[q] of thy commandments: when thou hast set my heart at liberty.

shalt enlarge my heart. Bib. Trans.

MORNING PRAYER.

Legem pone.

[r]TEACH me, O Lord, the way of thy statutes: and I shall keep it unto the end.

34 Give me understanding[s], and I shall keep thy law: yea, I shall keep it with my whole heart.

35 Make me to go[t] in the path of thy commandments: for therein is my desire.

do I delight. Bib. Trans.

36 Incline my heart unto thy testimonies[u]: and not to covetousness.

37 O turn away mine eyes, lest they behold vanity: and quicken thou me in thy way.

38 O stablish thy word in thy servant: that I may fear thee.

Turn away my reproach which I fear. Bib. Trans.

39 Take away the rebuke that I am afraid of[x]: for thy judgements are good.

40 Behold, my delight[y] is in thy commandments: O quicken me in thy righteousness.

Et veniat super me.

[z]LET thy loving mercy[a] come also unto me, O Lord: even acquaintance with the "way" of truth, as might prevent him from ever wandering into the path of error. Bp. Horne.

---

[p] 31. I have stuck unto thy testimonies: &c.] Having once chosen our road, it remains that we persevere in it; since better had it been for us, never to have known the way of truth, than to forsake it, when known; and we have the same reasons to go on, which induced us to begin. The Psalmist doth not only say, "I have followed," but "I have stuck unto thy testimonies;" I have adhered so closely and firmly to them, that temptation has in vain essayed to allure, and persecution as vainly attempted to force me from them. And therefore he beseecheth God so to continue his grace and favour, that he may never, by falling from his stedfastness, disgrace his Master, his cause, his brethren, himself, nor be put to shame at the last day. "O Lord, put me not to shame!" Bp. Horne.

[q] 32. I will run the way &c.] The true Christian is always proceeding in the way of godliness, though not always with equal pace. In grief, whether for temporal or spiritual losses, the heart is contracted, and the spirits are all summoned home to comfort and support it, so that the faculties are left feeble and sluggish; and then the progress can be but slow. This was the Psalmist's case. But even then he promises, that, when God, by sending him joy and gladness, should "enlarge his heart," dilate his spirits, and put life and strength into his actions, he would quicken his pace in proportion, and, with renewed vigour and alacrity, "run the way" of the divine "commandments," until it should have brought him to rest and felicity in the bosom of God. Bp. Horne.

[r] 33—40.] This portion is an earnest supplication to God for instruction in his law, the practice of which will secure the heart from the mischievous influence of covetousness and vanity, as well as from the evil effects of groundless fears; and will promote that salutary fear of God, which sets a man above the reproach of the wicked. Travell.

[s] 34. Give me understanding, &c.] Much "understanding" is needful in order to the "observation" of the law, that we may know what is commanded, and what is forbidden, and how far; that we may avoid the snares laid for us in the way of duty; that we may respect things according to their due rank and worth; that we may do good works in their proper time, place, and manner; above all, that the affections may be directed by the judgment, and not the judgment by the affections. The law cannot be observed, unless it be understood; and it is understood in vain, unless it be observed. Bp. Horne.

[t] 35. Make me to go &c.] He, who teacheth us the way to heaven, must also "conduct" us in it, and the same grace must give light and strength. The Scripture is our rule, the Spirit is our guide; and, from beginning to end, it is God who inclines, prepares, and enables us "to go in the" clean and pleasant "path of his commandments." Happy the soul that can say to God, "therein do I delight:" which is, at the same time, a reason for her to ask, and for Him to grant, a continuance and perseverance therein. Bp. Horne.

[u] 36. Incline my heart unto thy testimonies: &c.] The wit of man may conceive, and his tongue may utter, great things of God and holiness, while his heart is averse from both; therefore David saith, not only "give me understanding," but "incline my heart." And as God only can change the disposition of the heart, to God he preferreth his petition. It is to be observed, that by the words, "Incline not my heart to covetousness," is meant, "suffer not my heart to be inclined," or, "give it not over, to covetousness." Bp. Horne.

[x] 39. Take away the rebuke that I am afraid of: &c.] The "rebuke" or "reproach," which we have all most reason to dread, and to pray that God would keep far from us here and hereafter, is that of having forsaken and apostatized from those statutes and "judgments" revealed in the Scriptures, which we own to be so "good," so pleasant, and so profitable. Bp. Horne.

[y] 40. Behold, my delight &c.] The Psalmist appealeth to God, the searcher of hearts, for the truth of the protestation he was about to make, that the desire of his soul was toward the divine Word; not only toward the promises, to believe and embrace them, but also toward the "precepts," to observe and to do them. He therefore prayeth, with confidence, that God would finish the work He had begun, and enable him to carry his wishes into execution, by continually "quickening" and enlivening him more and more through grace, to finish his course in "righteousness," and to obtain that crown which is to be the reward of it. Bp. Horne.

thy salvation, according unto thy word.

him that reproacheth me. Bib. Trans. See Vocab.

42 So shall I make answer unto my blasphemers : for my trust is in thy word.

43 O take not the word of thy truth [b] utterly out of my mouth : for my hope is in thy judgements.

44 So shall I alway keep thy law : yea, for ever and ever.

45 And I will walk at liberty [c] : for I seek thy commandments.

46 I will speak of thy testimonies also [d], even before kings : and will not be ashamed.

47 And my delight shall be [e] in thy commandments : which I have loved.

48 My hands also will I lift up unto thy commandments, which I have loved : and my study shall be in thy statutes.

namely, to the practice of them. I will set vigorously about them. Dr. Hammond.

Memor esto servi tui.

O Think upon thy servant [g], as concerning thy word : wherein thou hast caused me to put my trust.

Remember the word unto thy servant. Bib. Trans.

50 The same is my comfort in my trouble : for thy word hath quickened me.

affliction. Bib. Trans. enlivened. See Vocab.

51 The proud have had me exceedingly in derision [h] : yet have I not shrinked from thy law.

declined. Bib. Trans.

52 For I remembered thine everlasting judgements [i], O Lord : and received comfort.

judgements of old. Bib. Trans.

---

[c] 41—48.] From this portion we learn, that the goodness and mercy of God will fortify the heart against the tongue of the slanderers: and the practice of his righteous law will be the truest source of delight, and will embolden a man to speak the truth with confidence and courage, and to persevere in the path of duty. Travell.

[a] 41. Let thy loving mercy &c.] Persecution and affliction, of which they never fail, in some way or other, to have their share who live godly in Christ Jesus, should teach us, like David, to fly for refuge to that "mercy," from whence proceedeth all "salvation," temporal and eternal; and to pray, without ceasing, for the accomplishment of that "word," which promiseth to the people of God deliverance out of all their troubles. Bp. Horne.

[b] 43. O take not the word of thy truth &c.] While affliction presseth hard upon us, while our deliverance is deferred, and the enemy is suffered to reproach and blaspheme, our prayer must be that God would give us courage, and utterance, still to confess Him before men, and boldly to speak his "word of truth," for the edification of some, and the confutation of others; as knowing, that our faith is not vain, nor shall we be disappointed of our "hope," since both are built upon the "judgments," or revealed decrees, of Him who can neither err nor deceive. Bp. Horne.

[c] 45. And I will walk at liberty: &c.] No external pressure can take away that spiritual "liberty," which the faithful Christian experienceth when he hath made an open confession of the truth, and is determined at all events to do his duty. Then he is no longer straitened by fear, but set at large by love. "The truth maketh him free, and he walketh in the liberty of the children of God;" a liberty which they only obtain "who seek his precepts," and, by the performance of them, are rescued from the bondage both of tyrannical desires and slavish fears. Bp. Horne.

[d] 46. I will speak of thy testimonies also, &c.] A prophet may be called "before kings," either in the course of his office, to instruct them, or else in a judiciary way, to give an account of his faith. In either case, if he "walketh at liberty," he will "speak of God's testimonies," with due reverence to the person and authority of his prince, but as one who is neither afraid nor "ashamed" to declare the whole counsel of heaven to any being upon earth. Bp. Horne.

[e] 47. And my delight shall be &c.] He who would preach boldly to others, must himself "delight" in the practice of what he preacheth. If there be in us a new nature, it will "love the commandments of God," as being congenial to it: on that, which we love, we shall continually be "meditating;" and our meditation will end in action; we shall "lift up the hands which hang down," Heb. xii. 12; that they may "work the works of God, while it is day; because the night cometh, when no man can work," John ix. 4. Bp. Horne.

[f] 49—56.] It is the sum of this portion, that the promises of God, made known in his word, and the remembrance of his former mercies, are the surest ground of consolation under every kind of distress. The progress of wickedness will fill the mind of the upright with horror: but, on the other hand, true religion will never fail to produce a degree of joy and happiness under every circumstance. Travell.

[g] 49. O think upon thy servant, &c.] God promiseth salvation before He giveth it, to excite our desire of it, to exercise our faith, to prove our sincerity, to perfect our patience. For these purposes, He seemeth to have sometimes forgotten his word, and to have deserted those whom He had engaged to succour and relieve; in which case, He would have us, as it were, to remind Him of his promise, and solicit his performance of it. The Psalmist here instructeth us to prefer our petition upon those grounds: first, that God cannot prove false to his own word; "Remember the word unto thy servant:" secondly, that He will never disappoint an expectation which Himself hath raised; "upon which thou hast caused me to hope." Bp. Horne.

[h] 51. The proud have had me exceedingly in derision: &c.] A true servant of God believeth the promises, and practiseth the precepts, of his blessed Master. The haughty infidel will scoff at him for one part of his conduct; the insolent worldling will ridicule him for the other. But neither will induce him to disbelieve, or to disobey. Bp. Horne.

[i] 52. For I remembered thine everlasting judgements, &c.] The great remedy against that temptation, which ariseth from the reproaches of our scornful and insulting adversaries, is here prescribed, namely, a "remembrance of God's judgments of old," whether we understand the "judgments" of his mouth, or those of his hand; his righteous decrees for the punishment of bad, and reward of good men, or the many and wonderful instances of his executing those decrees, from the beginning of the world, recorded in the sacred history. These Horror hath taken hold upon me. Bib. Trans.

53 I am horribly afraid[k]: for the ungodly that forsake thy law.

54 Thy statutes have been my songs[l]: in the house of my pilgrimage.

55 I have thought upon thy Name[m], O Lord, in the night-season: and have kept thy law.

56 This I had[n]: because I kept thy commandments.

Portio mea, Domine.

°THOU art my portion, O Lord[p]: I have promised to keep thy law.

I intreated thy favour with. Bib. Trans.

58 I made my humble petition in thy presence with my whole heart: O be merciful unto me, according to thy word.

59 I called mine own ways to remembrance: and turned my feet unto thy testimonies.

60 I made haste, and prolonged not the time: to keep thy commandments. delayed not. Bib. Trans.

61 The congregations of the ungodly have robbed me[q]: but I have not forgotten thy law. companies. Bib. Trans. Marg.

62 At midnight I will rise[r] to give thanks unto thee: because of thy righteous judgements.

63 I am a companion[s] of all them are sources of real and endless "comfort" upon such occasions; because nothing can happen to us, which hath not happened to God's people "of old;" no case, of which there is not a precedent in Scripture, where we may read the process of similar trials, their issue, and the final sentence of the Judge, which is still the same, and whose rule of procedure and determination is invariable. Bp. Horne.

---

[k] 53. I am horribly afraid: &c.] The consequence of a due meditation on God's judgments will be a compassion for the "wicked," on whom those judgments, in the end, fall; so that instead of feeling for ourselves, on account of the injuries they do us, we shall feel for them, who are thereby drawing down vengeance and destruction on their own heads. "Daughters of Jerusalem," said the blessed Jesus, when led to be crucified, "weep not for me, but weep for yourselves, and for your children," Luke xxiii. 28. Bp. Horne.

[l] 54. Thy statutes have been my songs: &c.] The soul, which descended from above, and longs to return thither again, is a stranger and sojourner upon earth. The body is "the house of her pilgrimage," in which she is confined during her state of exile. And how harsh soever the usage may be which she receiveth from the world, she ever findeth joy and comfort, as once did the fugitive and wandering son of Jesse, in making God's "statutes" the subjects of her psalms, and hymns, and spiritual "songs," until death shall restore her to liberty. Bp. Horne.

[m] 55. I have thought upon thy Name, &c.] By the "name" of God, his nature, so much at least of it as we are concerned to know, and are capable of receiving, is revealed to us. Such a love had the Psalmist for it on that account, that, as in the day God's statutes were his songs, in the night God's name was the subject of his meditation. With his tongue he praised Him in the day, with his heart he desired Him in the night-watches. The good effect of hours thus secretly passed in holy exercises, will appear openly in our lives and conversations: "I have remembered thy name, O Lord, in the night, and," as the fruit of it, "have kept thy law." Bp. Horne.

[n] 56. This I had, &c.] As one sin is often the consequence and the punishment of another, so one act of obedience is the issue and the reward of another; and to him, who hath well used the grace already received, shall more be given. "This I had," this ability to perform my duty, and to delight in the performance of it day and night, was vouchsafed unto me, "because I kept thy commandments," because I was not heretofore disobedient, but employed the strength with which thou, O Lord, hast endued me, not in doing mine own will, but thine. Bp. Horne.

[o] 57—64.] The Psalmist here teaches us, that happy are they, who choose the law of God for their rule of conduct; who, if they happen to slip, delay not to return into the path of uprightness. The violence of the oppressor will not deter them from the punctual performance of their duty; nor prevent them from associating with those, who are engaged in the same happy course with themselves. Travell.

[p] 57. Thou art my portion, O Lord: &c.] Happy the man, who can sincerely say, "Thou art my portion, O Lord;" I have considered, and made my choice; from henceforth, I renounce all things for the love of thee; thou art sufficient for me; thee only I desire to enjoy, and, therefore, thee only I desire to please; "I have said that I would keep thy words." Bp. Horne.

[q] 61. The congregations of the ungodly have robbed me: &c.] To be robbed, or plundered of his possessions in this world, was by no means a case peculiar to David. The primitive Christians were continually so treated; and our Lord gives all his disciples warning to stand prepared for such events, ready in disposition, in heart and mind, to quit all, as they who first followed Him literally did. The apostle tells us of some, who not only bore patiently, but even "took joyfully, the spoiling of their goods;" the reason, which he assigns for so extraordinary a behaviour, deserves to be noted and remembered; "knowing that they had in heaven a better and an enduring substance," Heb. x. 34. They who part with earth to gain heaven, and exchange the world for its Maker, certainly lose nothing by the bargain. Nay, there will come an hour, when, for the foretaste of glory which a good conscience affordeth to its happy possessor, the dearest lover of mammon would joyfully give up all the gold of Peru, and all the diamonds of Indostan. Bp. Horne.

[r] 62. At midnight I will rise &c.] So far were temporal losses from causing the Psalmist to forsake God, that he sought Him the more earnestly and fervently on that account; rising "at midnight to give thanks" for all his "righteous judgments" and dispensations towards his servants. Thus Paul and Silas, not only impoverished but imprisoned, for the testimony of Jesus, yet, in that situation, with their feet fast in the stocks, sang "praises at midnight." And although there be no obligation upon men to "rise at midnight," in order to "give thanks;" yet, if they who awake at that, or any other time, would accustom their hearts, that fear thee : and keep thy commandments.

64 The earth, O Lord, is full of thy mercy : O teach me thy statutes.

Bonitatem fecisti.

[t] O Lord, thou hast dealt graciously[u] with thy servant : according unto thy word.

Teach me good judgements. Bib. Trans. 66 O learn me true understanding[x] and knowledge : for I have believed thy commandments.

afflicted. Bib. Trans. 67 Before I was troubled, I went astray. Bib. Trans. wrong[y] : but now have I kept thy word.

68 Thou art good and gracious[z] : O teach me thy statutes.

forged. Bib. Trans. 69 The proud have imagined a lie[a] against me : but I will keep thy commandments with my whole heart.

70 Their heart is as fat as brawn[b] : grease. Bib. Trans. but my delight hath been in thy law.

71 It is good for me that I have been in trouble[c] : that I may learn afflicted. Bib. Trans. thy statutes.

72 The law of thy mouth is dearer unto me[d] : than thousands of gold and silver.

EVENING PRAYER.

Manus tuæ fecerunt me.

[e] THY hands have made me[f] and fashioned me : O give me un-at least, to so divine an exercise, they would find it always productive of the most comfortable effects. Bp. Horne.

[s] 63. I am a companion &c.] As no sufferings should make us neglect our intercourse with God, so neither should they tempt us to forsake the communion of saints, or fellowship of them who "fear God, and work righteousness." These are knit together in love, as members of the same mystical body, insomuch that "if one member suffer, or be honoured, all the members should suffer or be honoured with it;" these we should own at all times, in prosperity and in adversity; with these should our acquaintance and conversation be, for the mutual improvement and consolation of them and of ourselves. Of such was David a "companion," and such the Redeemer Himself "is not ashamed to call brethren," Heb. ii. 11. Bp. Horne.

[t] 65—72.] The Psalmist in this portion, with gratitude to God for his former gracious dealings towards him, prays for further instruction in his duty; acknowledging that the school of affliction had taught him his errors, and confirmed him in the right course. Having this confidence, he looks with contempt on the base calumnies of his enemies, who are puffed up with their own pride and importance; and is prompted to set a higher value upon religion, than upon all the treasures in the world. Travell.

[u] 65. O Lord, thou hast dealt graciously &c.] As the sense of our wants should prepare the mind for prayer, so gratitude for blessings received should tune the heart to praise. Let a man carefully recount the divine mercies shewn to him from his birth, considering withal how unworthy he hath been of the least of those mercies, as also how far preferable his state is to that of many others; and he will find reason "in all things to give thanks," to acknowledge, with David, the goodness and truth of Jehovah, and to say, "Thou hast dealt well with thy servant, O Lord, according to thy word." Bp. Horne.

[x] 66. O learn me true understanding &c.] From thanksgiving, the Psalmist returneth again to prayer, as, while we continue in this world, we must all do. Bp. Horne.

[y] 67. Before I was troubled, I went wrong: &c.] We collect from this verse, that prosperity is too often the parent of sin; that adversity is, first, its punishment; then, its remedy; and that every considerate man, who hath been afflicted, will thankfully acknowledge as much. Bp. Horne.

[z] 68. Thou art good and gracious: &c.] In other words, as Bishop Patrick hath well connected and paraphrased it, "Thou art in thine own nature kind and good; and nothing else can proceed from thee, who designest our good, even when thou afflictest us; take what methods thou pleasest with me, only teach me effectually to do as thou wouldest have me." Bp. Horne.

[a] 69. The proud have imagined a lie &c.] Every disciple of Christ, who, like his Master, goeth contrary to the ways of the world, and condemneth them, must expect to be, like that Master, slandered and calumniated by the world. To such slanders and calumnies, a good life is the best answer. When a friend once told Plato, what scandalous stories his enemies had propagated concerning him, "I will live so," replied that great philosopher, "that nobody shall believe them." Bp. Horne.

[b] 70. Their heart is as fat as brawn: &c.] "The fatness of the heart," implieth, in this place, two things in those of whom it is affirmed; luxury, and its consequence, insensibility to those spiritual and divine truths, which are not only the study, but the "delight," of temperate and holy persons. Bp. Horne.

[c] 71. It is good for me that I have been in trouble: &c.] God's statutes are best learned in the school of affliction, because by affliction the great impediments to our learning them are removed; pride is subdued, and concupiscence is extinguished. "He that hath suffered in the flesh," saith an apostle, "hath ceased from sin," 1 Pet. iv. 1; and in an immunity from sin consisteth one of the greatest felicities of heaven. Bp. Horne.

[d] 72. The law of thy mouth is dearer unto me: &c.] Affliction taketh from us the inclination to offend, and it giveth us, in return, a knowledge of that law which "is better," and which, when we are thoroughly acquainted with it, we shall esteem to be better "than thousands of gold and silver:" better in its nature, for it is from heaven, they are from the earth; better in its use, for it bringeth salvation to our souls, whereas they can only procure sustenance for the body; better in point of duration, for the benefits of one are certain and eternal, the advantages of the others temporal and uncertain. Blessed are they who seek in the Scriptures the true riches; who traffick for the spiritual gains of celestial wisdom; for surely "the merchandise of it is better than the merchandise of silver, and the gain thereof than fine gold," Prov. iii. 14. Bp. Horne.

derstanding, that I may learn thy commandments.

74 They that fear thee[g] will be glad when they see me : because I have put my trust in thy word.

75 I know, O Lord, that thy judgements are right : and that thou of very faithfulness hast caused me to be troubled. afflicted me. Bib. Trans.

76 O let thy merciful kindness be my comfort[h] : according to thy word unto thy servant.

77 O let thy loving mercies come unto me, that I may live : for thy law is my delight.

78 Let the proud be confounded, for they go wickedly about to destroy me : but I will be occupied in thy commandments.

79 Let such as fear thee[i], and have known thy testimonies : be turned unto me. turn to my side, and become my friends. Bp. Patrick.

80 O let my heart be sound[k] in thy statutes : that I be not ashamed. sincere. Dr. Hammond.

Defecit anima mea.

[l]MY soul hath longed for thy salvation[m] : and I have a good hope because of thy word. fainteth. Bib. Trans. but I hope in thy word. Bib. Trans.

82 Mine eyes long sore for thy word : saying, O when wilt thou comfort me? fail. Bib. Trans.

83 For I am become like a bottle in the smoke[n] : yet do I not forget thy statutes.

84 How many are the days of thy servant[o] : when wilt thou be avenged of them that persecute me? execute judgment on. Bib. Trans.

---

[e] 73—80.] We are here taught, that He, who made man, must ever be his best instructor : and, though his judgments may sometimes be severe, yet, as they are founded on truth and equity, they must command the approbation of those, who make his law their study. When the wicked aim at the destruction of the righteous, the surest refuge of these is, by earnest prayer to implore the divine protection : which will defeat the malice of their enemies, and inspire all those with confidence who love and fear the Lord. Travell.

[f] 73. Thy hands have made me &c.] The formation of man was the last and noblest work of God, and it is a standing miracle of divine wisdom and power. The consideration, that God made us, is here urged as an argument why He should not forsake and reject us, since every artist hath a value for his own work, proportioned to its excellence. It is, at the same time, an acknowledgment of the service we owe Him, founded on the relation which a creature beareth to his Creator. And the petition implieth in it a confession of our present inability to know his will without his revelation, and to do it without his grace. Bp. Horne.

[g] 74. They that fear thee &c.] They who "fear God" are naturally "glad when they see" and converse with one like themselves ; but more especially so, when it is one whose faith and patience have carried him through troubles, and rendered him victorious over temptation ; one who hath "hoped in God's word," and hath not been disappointed. Every such instance affordeth fresh encouragement to all those, who, in the course of their warfare, are to undergo like troubles, and to encounter like temptations. Bp. Horne.

[h] 76. O let thy merciful kindness be my comfort : &c.] In the former verse the criminal, finding that the hand of God was upon him, had owned the justice and the faithfulness of his Judge in the punishment inflicted. Judgment having thus had her perfect work, the offender, now humbled and penitent, maketh application to the throne of grace, and sueth for that mercy, which God, by his "word," hath promised to his servants, who are chastened, not for their destruction, but for their salvation. Bp. Horne.

[i] 79. Let such as fear thee, &c.] David beseecheth God, if any good men had been alienated from Him, either through fear, prejudice, or offence, that they might return to Him, join, and acknowledge Him. Bp. Horne.

[k] 80. O let my heart be sound &c.] This is a prayer necessary for all men to use at all times, but more particularly in seasons of persecution and temptation. By "soundness of heart" is meant solidity and stedfastness in grace and virtue, as opposed to the mere form of godliness, or fair shew of the hypocrite, which conceal the rottenness and corruption lurking within ; and also to the sudden and vanishing goodness of the temporary convert, which quickly disappears like the morning dew, and withers like the seed sown on a rock. When internal holiness accompanies and actuates that which is external, when the word is thoroughly rooted, and faith hath acquired the sovereignty over our desires, then our "hearts" are "sound in God's statutes," and there is hope, that, in the day of trial, we shall not give our brethren cause to be ashamed of us, nor be ourselves "ashamed" before God. Bp. Horne.

[l] 81—88.] In this portion we see that the pious soul looks to God for comfort in every distress : and though worn away with sorrow and long expectation, yet knowing that the mercies of God are sure and certain, he commits his cause to his divine providence ; he is neither dismayed by the persecutions of the wicked, nor deterred from the performance of his duty in obeying the divine laws. Travell.

[m] 81. My soul hath longed for thy salvation : &c.] Thus have the true servants of God, in every age, expressed their ardent desire of his salvation. Thus did the patriarchs, the prophets, the kings, and the faithful people, formerly wish to behold the advent of their Saviour in the flesh ; until Simeon, taking Him in his arms, spoke what they would all have spoken had they been present, "Lord, now lettest thou thy servant depart in peace, according to thy word ; for mine eyes have seen thy salvation." Bp. Horne.

[n] 83. For I am become like a bottle in the smoke : &c.] "Bottles" among the Jews were made of skins. One of these, if exposed to heat and "smoke," would become shrivelled and useless. Such a change will labour and sorrow cause in the human frame ; and the Psalmist here complaineth, that his beauty and his strength were gone ; the natural moisture was dried up ; in consequence of which the skin shrivelled, and both colour and vigour departed from him. Disease and old age will produce the same sad effects in us all ; but the body's weakness is the soul's strength ; as the not according to thy law; that is, quite contrary to it. Dr. Hammond. wrongfully. Bib. Trans.

85 The proud have digged pits for me : which are not after thy law.

86 All thy commandments are true[p] : they persecute me falsely; O be thou my help.

87 They had almost made an end of me[q] upon earth : but I forsook not thy commandments.

88 O quicken me after thy loving-kindness : and so shall I keep the testimonies of thy mouth.

In æternum, Domine.

[r] O Lord, thy word : endureth[s] for ever in heaven.

90 Thy truth also remaineth from one generation to another : thou hast laid the foundation of the earth, and it abideth.

91 They continue this day according to thine ordinance : for all things serve thee.

92 If my delight had not been in thy law : I should have perished in my trouble.

93 I will never forget thy commandments : for with them thou hast quickened me.

94 I am thine[t], O save me : for I have sought thy commandments.

95 The ungodly laid wait for me to destroy me : but I will consider thy testimonies.

96 I see that all things come to an end[u] : but thy commandment is exceeding broad.

I have seen an end of all perfection. Bib. Trans.

Quomodo dilexi!

[x] LORD, what love have I unto thy law[y] : all the day long is my study in it.

---

outward man decayeth, the inward man is renewed : "I do not forget thy statutes." Bp. Horne.

[o] 84. How many are the days of thy servant: &c.] The well-beloved John heard a question, of the same import with this, asked by the spirits of the martyrs, that had left their bodies, and were waiting in the separate state for the day of retribution. The answer, which was made to them, may likewise satisfy our impatience, when suffering affliction and persecution : "I saw under the altar the souls of them that were slain for the word of God, and for the testimony which they held. And they cried with a lond voice, saying, How long, O Lord, holy and true, dost thou not judge and avenge our blood on them that dwell on the earth? And white robes were given unto every one of them, and it was said unto them, that they should rest yet for a little season, until their fellow-servants also, and their brethren that should be killed as they were, should be fulfilled," Rev. vi. 9, &c. Bp. Horne.

[p] 86. All thy commandments are true: &c.] Man is perfidious and deceitful, God is "faithful" and true; He hath promised to "help" those who suffer "wrongfully," and He will, in the end, shew Himself to be the avenger of all such. Bp. Horne.

[q] 87. They had almost made an end of me &c.] However low the church, or any member thereof, may, by persecution and tribulation, be brought upon earth, yet nothing can separate them from the love of God, while they "forsake not his precepts," nor disbelieve his promises. The soul, we know, must forsake the body; but God will forsake neither. Bp. Horne.

[r] 89—96.] How strictly are we bound to obey the laws, and to trust in the promises of that gracious God, whose truth is eternal, who hath established every thing in heaven and earth by fixed and immutable laws, and made all things subservient to his power! Well may we depend upon Him and implicitly follow his will, who is our almighty Protector, and whose word will endure when all things else shall fail. Travell.

[s] 89. O Lord, thy word: endureth &c.] The eternity of Jehovah, and the immutability of his counsels, are considerations which afford comfort and encouragement to his people, when their enemies are in arms against them. Even in this world the unwearied "heavens" continue to perform invariably their operations upon themselves and the bodies placed in them; while the globe of the "earth," retaining its original form and coherence of parts, still, as at the beginning, supports and maintains the successive "generations" of men, which live and move upon it, to whom the faithful promises of God are fulfilled from age to age. Thus doth the unchangeable order of nature itself point out to us the truth of her great Author, and at the same time reprove the eccentrick motions of rebellious man. The heavens and the earth "continue this day according to thine ordinance," O Lord, "for all things are thy servants;" all invariably serve thee, except man, who alone was endowed with reason, that he might obey and glorify thee in this life, and that which is to come! Bp. Horne.

[t] 94. I am thine, &c.] The double relation which we have the honour to bear to God by creation and by redemption, as the work of his hands, and the purchase of his blood, is a most endearing and prevailing argument with Him, to "save" us from our enemies. But then let it be remembered, that no man can say to God with a good conscience, "I am thine," unless he can also go on and say, "I have sought thy precepts," I desire to serve and obey thee alone; since, after all, "his servants we are to whom we obey;" and if sin be our master, how can we say to a master, whose interest is directly opposite, "I am thine?" Bp. Horne.

[u] 96. I see that all things come to an end: &c.] Or, "I have seen an end of all perfection." Of "all perfection" in this world, whether of beauty, wit, learning, pleasure, honour, or riches, experience will soon shew us the "end." But where is the end or boundary of the word of God? Who can ascend to the height of its excellency; who can fathom the depth of its mysteries; who can find out the comprehension of its precepts, or conceive the extent of its promises; who can take the dimensions of that love of God to man which it describeth, or that love of man to God which it teacheth! The knowledge of one thing leadeth us forward to that of another, and still, as we travel on, the prospect opens before us into eternity, like the pleasant and fruitful mountains of Canaan, rising on the other side of Jordan, when viewed by Moses from the top of Pisgah. O happy reign of celestial wisdom, permanent felicity, true riches, and unfading glory; while we contemplate thee, how doth the world lessen, 98 Thou through thy commandments[z] hast made me wiser than mine enemies : for they are ever with me.

they, namely, God's commandments. See below.

99 I have more understanding than my teachers : for thy testimonies are my study.

100 I am wiser than the aged : because I keep thy commandments.

I understand more than the ancients. Bib. Trans.

101 I have refrained my feet from every evil way : that I may keep thy word.

102 I have not shrunk from thy judgements : for thou teachest me.

departed. Bib. Trans.

103 O how sweet are thy words unto my throat[a] : yea, sweeter than honey unto my mouth.

taste. Bib. Trans.

104 Through thy commandments I get understanding[b] : therefore I hate all evil ways.

MORNING PRAYER.

Lucerna pedibus meis.

[c]THY word is a lantern unto my feet[d] : and a light unto my paths.

lamp. Bib. Trans.

106 I have sworn[e], and am stedand shrink to nothing in our eyes! Thy blessings faith now beholdeth, but it is charity which shall hereafter possess and enjoy them. Bp. Horne.

[x] 97—104.] We learn from this portion, how excellent and amiable is that divine law, the practice of which makes a man superior to his enemies, and gives a degree of wisdom, greater than can be obtained from the experience of old age, or from the instructions of those, whose occupation it is to communicate knowledge to others. Whoever would observe this law, must absolutely abstain from evil; which will be the best proof of his understanding, and will secure to him a happiness superior to all the delights of sense. Travell.

[y] 97. Lord, what love have I unto thy law: &c.] Words cannot express the love which a pious mind entertaineth for the Scriptures. They are the epistle of God to mankind, offering reconciliation, peace, and union with himself in glory; containing reasons why we should love Him and each other, with directions how to shew forth that love, which, as the apostle saith, is "the fulfilling of the law," Rom. xiii. 10. On some portions of these Scriptures should our "meditation" be continually, and "each day" should add something to our knowledge, to our faith, to our virtue. Bp. Horne.

[z] 98. Thou through thy commandments &c.] The "commandments" of God were "ever with" David; the "testimonies" of God were his "meditation;" and the "precepts" of God it was his care to "observe;" therefore his wisdom exceeded the policy of his "enemies," the learning of his "teachers," and the experience of the "ancients." Thus, by the wisdom of the Scriptures, did the holy Jesus, in the days of his flesh, confound his adversaries, astonish the teachers of the law, and instruct the aged. And it is the high prerogative of the Scriptures, at all times, to render youth and simplicity superior to the inveterate malice and subtilty of the grand deceiver and his associates. Bp. Horne.

[a] 103. O how sweet are thy words unto my throat: &c.] The soul hath its "taste," as well as the body, and that taste is then in good order, when the "words" of Scripture are "sweet" to the soul, as "honey" is to the mouth. If they are not always so, it is because our taste is vitiated by the world and the flesh; and we shall ever find our relish for the word of God to be greatest, when that for the world and the flesh is least, in time of affliction, sickness, and death; for these are contrary, one to the other. In heaven the latter will be no more, and therefore the former will be all in all. Bp. Horne.

[b] 104. Through thy commandments I get understanding: &c.] He who delighteth to study the Scriptures, will "understand," from them, the true nature of righteousness and of sin; he who doth understand the nature of each, will love the former; and, in proportion, "hate" the latter: and with that, which we thoroughly hate, we will not bear to have any connexion; with suspicion and jealousy we shall eye it approaching; with courage and constancy we shall arm and fight against it; we shall make no peace, nor so much as a truce with it; but, as faithful soldiers and servants of Jesus Christ, we shall aim at that utter extermination of it, which we have vowed, and which, through the Spirit of grace and power, will be accomplished, but not, perhaps, totally, till our life and warfare shall end together. Bp. Horne.

[c] 105—112.] From this portion it appears that we cannot err from the right path, if we positively determine to follow the clear light of God's word: this will illuminate our understandings, when we offer our supplications to God to assist us in distress. Though we should be at the point of death, or exposed to the crafty malice of the wicked, we must adhere with steady perseverance to the law of God, which is the noblest inheritance that we can possess. Travell.

[d] 105. Thy word is a lantern unto my feet: &c.] Man is a traveller, his life is a journey, heaven is his end, his road lies through a wilderness, and he is in the dark. Thus circumstanced, how earnestly and devoutly ought he to pray, "O send out thy light and thy truth; let them lead me, let them bring me to thy holy hill, and to thy tabernacles!" Ps. xliii. 3. For surely, "the commandment is a lamp, and the law is light; and reproofs of instruction are the way of life," Prov. vi. 23. The word of God discovereth to us our errors; it sheweth us where we lost our way, and how we may recover it again. If we take this "lamp" in our hand, it will not only point out our course in general, but also direct us in every step, and guide our "feet" aright in the "path" of holiness and peace. Thus through the devious and lonely wilds of Arabia, was Israel once conducted to the land of promise, by the illuminating pillar, or rather by Him whose presence dwelt in the midst of it. Bp. Horne.

[e] 106. I have sworn, &c.] Such being the direction afforded by the word of God to a benighted pilgrim, David had obliged himself, in the most solemn manner, to follow that direction. Every Christian doth, at his baptism, in like manner, "promise and vow to keep God's commandments, and to walk in the same all the days of his life." The nature and extent of these engagements must be interpreted according to the covenant of grace, under which they are made. The command to us sinners is, that we should repent, and believe in Him, who will pardon our failings, and fastly purposed : to keep thy righteous judgements.

107 I am troubled above measure[f]: quicken me, O Lord, according to thy word.

108 Let the free-will offerings[g] of my mouth please thee, O Lord : and teach me thy judgements.

109 My soul is alway in my hand[h]: yet do I not forget thy law.

110 The ungodly have led a snare for me : but yet I swerved not from thy commandments. erred. Bib. Trans.

111 Thy testimonies have I claimed[i] as mine heritage for ever : and why? they are the very joy of my heart.

112 I have applied[k] my heart to fulfil thy statutes alway : even unto the end. inclined. Bib. Trans.

Iniquos odio habui.

I Hate them that imagine evil things : but thy law do I love. I hate vain thoughts Bib. Trans.

114 Thou art my defence[m] and shield : and my trust is in thy word. hiding place. Bib. Trans.

115 Away from me, ye wicked[n] : I will keep the commandments of my God.

116 O stablish me[o] according to uphold. Bib. Trans.

---

strengthen our infirmities, that we may walk as becometh his disciples, who, though they ought not to commit sin, may yet, by divine grace, be restored and saved from it. "These things write I unto you, that ye sin not. And if any man sin, we have an advocate with the Father, Jesus Christ the righteous; and he is the propitiation for our sins," 1 John ii. 1. Bp. Horne.

[f] 107. I am troubled above measure: &c.] The faithful servants of God may be "afflicted:" they may be "very much" and grievously afflicted: but let them consider, that by afflictions, their corruptions are purged away, their faith is tried, their patience perfected, their brethren are edified, and their Master is glorified. Let them still firmly rely on the divine promise of grace and salvation: still humbly pray for its accomplishment in themselves: "Quicken me, O Lord, according to thy word." Bp. Horne.

[g] 108. Let the free-will offerings &c.] The "offerings" of the believer are prayer, praise, and holy resolutions and vows, like that of the Psalmist above, "to keep God's righteous judgments," in which he therefore petitioneth to be every day more and more "taught" and instructed by the Spirit of truth. Christians are called by St. Peter, "a royal and holy priesthood, appointed to offer up spiritual sacrifices, acceptable to God, by Jesus Christ," 1 Pet. ii. 5. 9. Bp. Horne.

[h] 109. My soul is alway in my hand: &c.] To have one's "soul," or life, "in one's hand," is a phrase often used in Scripture, and implieth going in continual danger of one's life: see Judges xii. 3; 1 Sam. xix. 5; and xxviii. 21; Job xiii. 14. Great and incessant as David's perils were, he did not "forget" God's promises, nor his precepts, but trusted in the former, and performed the latter. St. Paul knew, that "in every city bonds and afflictions awaited him: but none of these things," saith he, "move me, neither count I my life dear unto myself, so that I might finish my course with joy," Acts xx. 23, 24. Bp. Horne.

[i] 111. Thy testimonies have I claimed &c.] The "testimonies" of God's will, his word and his sacraments, are the bonds and the deeds by which we hold our heavenly "inheritance, as heirs of God, and joint heirs with Christ." Of these deeds, and this inheritance, no power can deprive us; and when "they are the rejoicing of our hearts," we shall not, by preferring an earthly inheritance, deprive ourselves of them. Bp. Horne.

[k] 112. I have applied &c.] Or "inclined." The "inclination of the heart" to good is the work of God: but man is, nevertheless, in this, as in other instances, said to perform it, when he listens to the call, and obeys the motions, of his grace. We are not to judge of ourselves by what we sometimes say and do, but by the general disposition and tendency of the heart and its affections. When, after repeated trials, we find that the love of God casts the scale against the love of the world; when it is our glory, our delight, our treasure, our meat and drink, to do his will, and, against all opposition, to persevere in doing it, "even unto the end;" then are we the true disciples of that Master, whose heart was evermore inclined to good; who alone performed a perfect and spotless obedience, and persisted in working the work of Him that sent Him, until, with his last breath, He declared upon the cross, "It is finished." Bp. Horne.

[l] 113—120.] The sum of this portion is, that if we are sincerely attached to God's law, which will prove our surest protection from every kind of evil, we cannot but despise and avoid the company of the ungodly. But we must be firm in our obedience, and steady in our application to God for help. His rejection of the wicked should make us delight in his law, and dread nothing so much as his displeasure. Travell.

[m] 114. Thou art my defence &c.] From vain thoughts, and vain persons, the Psalmist teacheth us to fly, by prayer, to God, as our refuge and protector. This course a believer will as naturally take, in the hour of temptation and danger, as the offspring of the hen, on perceiving a bird of prey hovering over their heads, retire to their "hiding-place," under the wings of their dam; or as the warrior opposeth his "shield" to the darts which are aimed at him. Bp. Horne.

[n] 115. Away from me, ye wicked: &c.] Safe under the protection of the Almighty, David bids the wicked "depart from him;" he neither fears their malice, nor will follow their counsels, being resolutely determined to adhere to his duty, and to "keep the commandments of his God." He, who hath formed David's resolution, must, like him, disclaim and renounce the society of "evil-doers:" for every man will insensibly contract the good or bad qualities of the company which he keeps; and should, therefore, be careful to keep such as will make him wiser and better, and fit him for the goodly fellowship of saints and angels. Bp. Horne.

[o] 116. O stablish me &c.] A resolution to fly from evil, and to do good, is properly followed by an earnest and repeated prayer, to be "upheld" in the performance of it by divine grace, "according to God's word" and promise. How necessary is this prayer to be made by creatures whose tempers and dispositions are ever varying; who have so many and so formidable adversaries to contend with; and on whom their temporal condition hath so much influence! Bp. Horne.

thy word, that I may live : and let me not be disappointed of my hope.

117 Hold thou me up, and I shall be safe : yea, my delight shall be ever in thy statutes.

118 Thou hast trodden down all them that depart from thy statutes : for they imagine but deceit.

contrive, plot See Vocab.

119 Thou puttest away all the ungodly[p] of the earth like dross : therefore I love thy testimonies.

120 My flesh trembleth for fear of thee[q] : and I am afraid of thy judgements.

Feci judicium.

I have done judgement and justice. Bib. Trans.

[r] I Deal with the thing that is lawful and right[s] : O give me not over unto mine oppressors.

122 Make thou thy servant to delight in that which is good : that the proud do me no wrong.

123 Mine eyes are wasted away[t] with looking for thy health : and for the word of thy righteousness.

fail for thy salvation. Bib. Trans. See Vocab.

124 O deal with thy servant according unto thy loving mercy : and teach me thy statutes.

125 I am thy servant, O grant me understanding : that I may know thy testimonies.

126 It is time for thee, Lord[u], to lay to thine hand : for they have destroyed thy law.

work. Bib. Trans. made void. Bib. Trans.

127 For I love thy commandments[x] : above gold and precious stone.

128 Therefore hold I straight all thy commandments[y] : and all false ways I utterly abhor.

---

[p] 119. Thou puttest away all the ungodly &c.] "Ungodly" men and hypocrites are mingled among the sons and servants of God, as "dross" is blended with the pure metal, and appeareth to be part of it. But the fiery trial of divine judgment soon discovereth the difference. The false pretences of the hypocrite are detected, and the glory of the wicked vanisheth away. In times of visitation, Christ sitteth among his people, "as a refiner and purifier of silver," purging away all dross, that out of what remains may be made "vessels of honour, meet for the Master's use," to serve and to adorn the sanctuary. See Mal. iii. 3; Isa. i. 25; 2 Tim. ii. 21. Bp. Horne.

[q] 120. My flesh trembleth for fear of thee: &c.] At the presence of Jehovah, when He appeareth in judgment, the earth trembleth and is still. His best servants are not exempted from an awful dread upon such occasions; scenes of this kind, shewn in vision to the prophets, caused their flesh to quiver, and all their bones to shake. Encompassed with a frail body, and a sinful world, we stand in need of every possible tie; and the affections both of fear and love must be employed, to restrain us from transgression; we must, at the same time, "love God's testimonies, and fear his judgments." Bp. Horne.

[r] 121—128.] The following portion teaches us, that a firm adherence to the ways of truth and righteousness is the best security against oppression. The apparent delay of the divine interference in our favour will sometimes weary out our expectations; but it should quicken our prayers to God for the increase of his mercy, and for the enlargement of our understanding in the way of our duty. The enormous transgressions of wicked men demand the execution of the divine judgments; but they, who are sincerely devoted to God's law, will value it above all earthly treasures, nor will they be tempted by any seeming advantage to do any thing base and dishonest. Travell.

[s] 121. I deal with the thing that is lawful and right: &c.] He who is engaged in a righteous cause, and hath acted uprightly in the support of it, may, so far, without incurring the censure of boasting, or trusting to his own righteousness, make David's plea, "I have done judgment and justice;" as if he had said, Thou, O my God, knowest that I am innocent of the crimes whereof my implacable enemies accuse me, and that I have done no wrong to those who seek to take away my life; deliver not thine injured servant, therefore, into their hands; "leave me not to mine oppressors." The Son of David might use the words in their full and absolute sense, and plead for a glorious resurrection, on the foot of his having performed a perfect obedience to the law. Bp. Horne.

[t] 123. Mine eyes are wasted away &c.] Salvation, whether temporal or spiritual, may be delayed; the "eyes" of the sufferer may "fail" with looking upward, and his earnest expectation may be ready to break forth, in the words of Sisera's mother, "Why is his chariot so long in coming? Why tarry the wheels of his chariot?" But what saith God, by his prophets and apostles? "Though it tarry, wait for it, because it will surely come," Hab. ii. 3. "Yet a little while, and he that shall come, will come," Heb. x. 37. The "word," which hath promised it, is the word of truth, faithfulness, and "righteousness;" the attributes of God are engaged for its accomplishment, and He cannot deny Himself. Bp. Horne.

[u] 126. It is time for thee, Lord, &c.] The "law" of God is "made void" or "destroyed" by those who deny its authority, or its obligation; by those who render it of none effect through their traditions, or their lives. When a deluge of wickedness and impiety entering at these gates hath overwhelmed a land, "it is time for the Lord to work;" the great Lawgiver will then exert his power, and vindicate his authority speedily. There is a certain measure of iniquity, which when communities, or individuals respectively, have filled up, the destroying angel comes forth, and executes his commission. How ought a man to fear, lest the next sin he commits should fill up his measure, and seal his eternal doom! Bp. Horne.

[x] 127. For I love thy commandments: &c.] As the wickedness of those increaseth who "make void the divine law," the zeal and "love" of believers should increase in proportion, to stem the torrent; and this may be done, to a surprising degree, by a few persons, who, after the example of the first Christians, can forsake all to follow their Master; who have the sense and the courage to prefer truth, wisdom, holiness, and heaven, to falsehood, folly, sin, and the world; who can resolutely reject the glittering temptation, and say, without hypocrisy, to their God, "I love thy com-

Mirabilia.

[z] THY testimonies are wonderful[a]: therefore doth my soul keep them.

The entrance of thy words giveth. Bib. Trans.

130 When thy word goeth forth[b]: it giveth light and understanding unto the simple.

panted. Bib. Trans. I longed for. Bib. Trans.

131 I opened my mouth[c], and drew in my breath: for my delight was in thy commandments.

132 O look thou upon me, and be merciful unto me: as thou usest to do unto those that love thy Name.

133 Order my steps in thy word: and so shall no wickedness have dominion over me.

134 O deliver me from the wrongful dealings of men: and so shall I keep thy commandments.

135 Shew the light of thy countenance upon thy servant: and teach me thy statutes.

136 Mine eyes gush out with water[d]: because men keep not thy law.

Justus es, Domine.

[e] RIGHTEOUS art thou, O Lord[f]: and true is thy judgement.

---

mandments above gold; yea, above fine gold." Bp. Horne.

[z] 128. Therefore hold I straight all thy commandments: &c.] For the same reason that the children of God, in the worst of times "love his commandments," they love them "all," not observing such only as they can observe without giving offence, but, regardless of the censures of the world, doing their duty in every particular; not "hating" some "evil ways," and at the same time walking in others, but extending and manifesting their aversion to all alike. Of such persons it is evident, that they make a conscience of their doings, and their conduct appears to be uniform; the adversary will have no evil thing to say of them; they will do real service to the cause which they maintain; and, after having honoured their Master before men, they will by Him be honoured before men and angels. Bp. Horne.

[a] 129—136.] How astonishing, as we learn from this portion, is the wisdom of God's law, which affords knowledge and instruction to the most unlearned! The heart of the righteous man will pant after the attainment of this knowledge; and he will beseech God so to direct his ways, that he may neither be enslaved by sin, nor be oppressed by the wicked; but may keep steady in the path of God's commandments, the neglect of which is the cause of great lamentation to the righteous. Travell.

[a] 129. Thy testimonies are wonderful: &c.] The Scriptures are "wonderful," with respect to the matter which they contain, the manner in which they are written, and the effects which they produce. They contain the sublimest spiritual truths, veiled under external ceremonies and sacraments, figurative descriptions, typical histories, parables, similitudes, &c. When properly opened and enforced, they terrify and humble, they convert and transform, they console and strengthen. Who but must delight to study and to "observe" these "testimonies" of the will and the wisdom, the love and the power, of God most high! Bp. Horne.

[b] 130. When thy word goeth forth: &c.] The Scriptures are the appointed means of "enlightening" the mind with true and saving knowledge. They shew us what we were, what we are, and what we shall be; they shew us what God hath done for us, and what He expecteth us to do for Him; they shew us the adversaries we have to encounter, and how to encounter them with success; they shew us the mercy and the justice of the Lord, the joys of heaven, and the pains of hell. Thus will they "give to the simple," in a few days, an "understanding" of those matters, which philosophy, for whole centuries, sought in vain. Bp. Horne.

[c] 131. I opened my mouth, &c.] An eastern traveller, fatigued through toil, and parched by heat, doth not, with more vehement desire, gasp for the cooling breeze, than the servant of God, in time of temptation and trouble, "panteth" after that spirit of refreshment and consolation, which breathes in the Scriptures of truth. Bp. Horne.

[d] 136. Mine eyes gush out with water: &c.] David, who, through this whole Psalm, so often and so ardently beseecheth God to "teach him his statutes," declareth in this verse, his continual grief of heart, occasioned by seeing others break those statutes. Thus Lot, among the Sodomites, was "vexed from day to day," not so much at their usage of himself, as at "seeing and hearing their unlawful deeds," 2 Pet. ii. 8. Thus Jeremiah telleth the ungodly of his time, "If ye will not hear, my soul shall weep in secret places for your pride; and mine eyes shall weep sore, and run down with tears," Jer. xiii. 17. Thus the holy Jesus "looked round about on the Pharisees, being grieved for the hardness of their hearts," Mark iii. 5; and "wept over" a city which had always persecuted, and was then about to crucify Him, because it "knew not the things which belonged to its peace," Luke xix. 41. Accept, O Lord, the tears which our blessed Redeemer shed, in the days of his flesh, for us, who should, but, alas! too often cannot, weep for our brethren, or for ourselves; and give us, at least, the grace of holy mourning, which in thy sight is of great price. Bp. Horne.

[e] 137—144.] According to the instruction here given to us, the perfect righteousness and purity of God's laws demand our obedience, and the sad neglect of them, to which we are witness, must provoke our indignation and wear our spirits. However mean and contemptible our situation may be, we must continue firm in the practice of those eternal laws of truth and righteousness, which will be our surest comfort in the hour of distress. Travell.

[f] 137. Righteous art thou, O Lord: &c.] This portion of our Psalm is employed in celebrating the righteousness of God, manifested to us by his word, and by his dispensations, which that word both recordeth and explaineth. It is said of the emperor Mauritius, that, upon seeing all his children slain before his face, at the command of that bloody tyrant and usurper, Phocas, himself expecting the next stroke, with a philosophy truly divine, he exclaimed aloud, in these words of David, "Righteous art thou, O Lord, and upright are thy judgments." By faith he was assured of this great truth, and nobly confessed it, notwithstanding all appearances to the contrary. The last day will demonstrate the same thing to the whole world, 138 The testimonies that thou hast commanded : are exceeding righteous and true.

139 My zeal hath even consumed me[g] : because mine enemies have forgotten thy words.

very pure. Bib. Trans.

140 Thy word is tried to the uttermost[h] : and thy servant loveth it.

despised. Bib. Trans.

141 I am small, and of no reputation : yet do I not forget thy commandments.

142 Thy righteousness is an everlasting righteousness[i] : and thy law is the truth.

anguish. Bib. Trans.

143 Trouble and heaviness[k] have taken hold upon me : yet is my delight in thy commandments.

144 The righteousness of thy testimonies is everlasting : O grant me understanding, and I shall live.

EVENING PRAYER.

Clamavi in toto corde meo.

[l] I Call with my whole heart : hear me, O Lord, I will keep thy statutes.

146 Yea, even unto thee do I call : help me, and I shall keep thy testimonies.

147 Early in the morning[m] do I cry unto thee : for in thy word is my trust.

I prevented the dawning of the morning. Bib. Trans.

148 Mine eyes prevent the night-watches : that I might be occupied in thy words.

are beforehand with them. See Vocab.

149 Hear my voice, O Lord, according unto thy loving-kindness : quicken me, according as thou art wont.

150 They draw nigh that of malice persecute me : and are far from thy law.

151 Be thou nigh at hand, O Lord : for all thy commandments are true.

152 As concerning thy testimonies[n], I have known long since : that thou hast grounded them for ever.

Vide humilitatem.

[o] O Consider mine adversity, and deliver me : for I do not forget thy law.

---

and open the mouths of men and angels to declare, concerning all the divine proceedings, what the good Mauritius acknowledged, at the time, with regard to the murder of his children. Bp. Horne.

[g] 139. My zeal hath even consumed me: &c.] "Zeal" is a high degree of love; and when the object of that love is ill-treated, it venteth itself in a mixture of grief and indignation, which are sufficient to wear and "consume" the heart. This will be the case, where men rightly conceive of that dishonour, which is continually done to God by creatures whom He hath made and redeemed. But never could the verse be uttered, with such fulness of truth and propriety, by any one, as by the Son of God, who had such a sense of his Father's glory and of man's sin, as no person else ever had. And, accordingly, when his zeal had exerted itself in purging the temple, St. John tells us, "his disciples remembered that it was written, The zeal of thine house hath eaten me up." The place where it is so written is Psalm lxix. 9; and the passage is exactly parallel to this before us. Bp. Horne.

[h] 140. Thy word is tried to the uttermost: &c.] "Tried, refined, purified, like gold in the furnace:" absolutely perfect, without the dross of vanity and fallibility, which runs through human writings. The more we try the promises, the surer we shall find them. This pure word hath likewise in it a power of purifying us. It containeth precepts and examples of purity, helps and encouragements to purity, and the Spirit of purity goeth with it, and worketh by it. Bp. Horne.

[i] 142. Thy righteousness is an everlasting righteousness, &c.] Men may decree wickedness by a law, or they may change their decrees, and, with them, what was right to-day may be wrong to-morrow. But the law of God is "righteousness," and it is "truth," to-day, and for ever. His justice, goodness, and fidelity, are unchangeable; He will never forsake us, unless we forsake Him, but will remember us in our lowest estate, if, in that estate, we "do not forget his precepts." Bp. Horne.

[k] 143. Trouble and heaviness &c.] We need not take pains, as many do, "to find trouble and anguish," for they will one day "find us." In that day, the revelations of God must be to us instead of all worldly "delights" and pleasures, which will then have forsaken us; and how forlorn and desolate will be our state, if we should have no other delights, no other pleasures, to succeed them, and to accompany us into eternity! Let our study be now in the Scriptures, if we expect our comfort from them in time to come. Bp. Horne.

[l] 145—152.] It is the purport of this portion of the Psalm to teach us, that our earnest desire to keep God's laws should make us constantly vigilant in our duty: this will be the best means of obtaining help from Him, who is ever true to his promises, and who will protect his faithful servants from the malicious attacks of their enemies. Travell.

[m] 147. Early in the morning &c.] It is a certain sign that our hearts are set upon a work, when the thoughts of it cause sleep to depart from us, and we awake readily, constantly, and early, to the performance of it. David delighted in the holy exercises of prayer and meditation; therefore he "prevented the dawning of the morning," and was beforehand with the light itself; therefore his "eyes prevented the watches," that is, the last of those watches, into which the night was by the Jews divided; he needed not the watchman's call, but was stirring before it could be given. Climate and constitution will, doubtless, make a difference, and claim considerable allowance: but by Christians, who enjoy their health, in temperate weather, the sun should not be suffered to shine in vain, nor the golden hours of the morning to glide away unimproved; since of David's Lord, as well as of David, it is said, "In the

Plead. Bib. Trans.

154 Avenge thou my cause[p], and deliver me : quicken me, according to thy word.

Salvation. Bib. Trans. See Vocab.

155 Health is far from the ungodly[q] : for they regard not thy statutes.

156 Great is thy mercy, O Lord : quicken me, as thou art wont.

157 Many there are that trouble me[r], and persecute me : yet do I not swerve from thy testimonies.

decline. Bib. Trans.

158 It grieveth me when I see the transgressors : because they keep not thy law.

159 Consider, O Lord, how I love thy commandments[s] : O quicken me, according to thy loving-kindness.

160 Thy word is true from everlasting : all the judgements of thy righteousness endure for evermore.

Principes persecuti sunt.

[t]PRINCES have persecuted me[u] without a cause : but my heart standeth in awe of thy word.

162 I am as glad of thy word : as one that findeth great spoils.

163 As for lies, I hate and abhor them : but thy law do I love.

164 Seven times a day do I praise thee[x] : because of thy righteous judgements.

165 Great is the peace[y] that they have who love thy law : and they are not offended at it.

nothing shall offend them. Bib. Trans. or, they shall have no stumbling-block. Marg.

---

morning, rising up a great while before day, He went out and departed into a solitary place, and there prayed." Mark i. 35. Bp. Horne.

[n] 152. As concerning thy testimonies, &c.] This portion of our Psalm endeth with the triumph of faith over all dangers and temptations. "Concerning thy testimonies," the revelations of thy will, thy counsels for the salvation of thy servants, "I have known of old," by faith, and by my own experience, as well as that of others, "that thou hast founded them for ever; they are unalterable and everlasting as the attributes of their great Author, and can never fail those who rely upon them, in time, or in eternity. Bp. Horne.

[o] 153—160.] From this portion we learn, that our perseverance in the time of our duty is the strongest encouragement to expect the divine blessing and protection : God will not afford his favour and support to those who transgress his laws; we cannot but lament their errors, and must strive earnestly to avoid them, if we truly reverence God and his unchangeable commandments. Travell.

[p] 154. Avenge thou my cause, &c.] God is the Patron of his people, to "plead" their "cause;" their Redeemer, to "deliver" them out of troubles; the Author and Fountain of their life, to "quicken" and support them. We may, therefore, have recourse to Him at all times, as an Advocate, a Saviour, and a Comforter, for the defence of our cause, the deliverance of our persons, and the support of our hearts. And all this, "according to his word," in which He hath engaged thus to patronize, to rescue, and to strengthen, those who trust in Him, and apply to Him. Bp. Horne.

[q] 155. Health is far from the ungodly : &c.] The "health" or "salvation" which is nigh to the faithful, because they diligently and earnestly seek to know and to do the will of God revealed to them in his word, is "far from the wicked," because "they seek not his statutes," nor concern themselves to know what they are, much less to observe and practise them. Bp. Horne.

[r] 157, 158. Many there are that trouble me, &c.] Persecution tempteth men to apostasy, and is the great trial of our fidelity to God and to his word. He who, in such circumstances, forgetteth his own sufferings, to commiserate the sin and folly of his persecutors, is a true follower, as David was a forerunner, of Jesus Christ. Bp. Horne.

[s] 159. Consider, O Lord, how I love thy commandments : &c.] It is observable how the Psalmist delighteth to dwell on these two sweet notes; the "loving-kindness" of God in promising salvation, and his "truth" in the constant performance of that promise to his church, while she "loves" and adheres to his "precepts." Thus it hath been "from the beginning," and thus it will be, until the whole counsel of heaven shall at length be fulfilled, by the resurrection and salvation of the just. Bp. Horne.

[t] 161—168.] The sense of this portion is, that an inviolable attachment to truth and righteousness, and an abhorrence of deceit and wickedness, will give us courage under the severest persecutions; and will be a purer source of joy than any acquisition we can obtain. We cannot too often express our gratitude and praise for the blessings of God's providence; and if we value our own peace of mind and expect favour from Him, who seeth all that we do, we must seek it in the way of his commandments. Travell.

[u] 161. Princes have persecuted me &c.] David was "persecuted," by Saul and his associates, "without a cause." The life of Saul was spared by him, because "he stood in awe of God's word," and preferred the comfortable reflection of having obeyed its injunctions to all the "spoil," and to those many advantages, that would have accrued to him, by the overthrow and death of his implacable adversary, who acknowledged, upon the occasion, "Thou art more righteous than I," 1 Sam. xxiv. 17. The sufferings of the body are soon over; the joys of conscience have no end. Bp. Horne.

[x] 164. Seven times a day do I praise thee : &c.] They who, like David, during the time of persecution and affliction, put their trust in God and wait his decision of their cause, will always find reason, as David did, to "praise him seven times a day," or continually, for his just decrees and "righteous judgments" concerning them. Bp. Horne.

[y] 165. Great is the peace &c.] Amidst the storms and tempests of the world there is a perfect calm in the breasts of those, who not only do the will of God, but "love" to do it. They are at peace with God, by the blood of reconciliation; at peace with themselves, by the answer of a good conscience, and the subjection of those desires which war against the soul; at peace with all men, by the spirit of charity; and the whole creation is so at peace with them, that all things work

166 Lord, I have looked for thy saving health : and done after thy commandments. salvation. Bib. Trans.

167 My soul hath kept thy testimonies[z] : and loved them exceedingly.

168 I have kept thy commandments and testimonies : for all my ways are before thee.

Appropinquet deprecatio.

[a]LET my complaint come[b] before thee, O Lord : give me understanding, according to thy word.

170 Let my supplication come before thee : deliver me, according to thy word.

171 My lips shall speak of thy praise : when thou hast taught me thy statutes.

172 Yea, my tongue shall sing of thy word : for all thy commandments are righteous.

173 Let thine hand help me : for I have chosen thy commandments.

174 I have longed for thy saving health, O Lord : and in thy law is my delight. salvation. Bib. Trans.

175 O let my soul live[c], and it shall praise thee : and thy judgements shall help me.

176 I have gone astray like a sheep[d] that is lost : O seek thy servant, for I do not forget thy commandments.

MORNING PRAYER.

PSALM cxx.[e] Ad Dominum.

WHEN I was in trouble[f] I called upon the Lord : and he heard me.

2 Deliver my soul, O Lord, from together for their good. No external troubles can rob them of this "great peace," no "offences" or stumbling-blocks, which are thrown in their way by persecution or temptation, by the malice of enemies, or the apostasy of friends, by any thing which they see, hear of, or feel, can detain or divert them from their course. Heavenly love surmounts every obstacle, and runs with delight the way of God's commandments. Bp. Horne.

---

[z] 167. My soul hath kept thy testimonies: &c.] The "love of God's testimonies," and the consideration, that all "our ways are before him," and subject to his immediate inspection, are two powerful motives to obedience. The plea of having "kept the divine precepts," &c., in the mouth of David, or any other believer, intendeth sincerity, not perfection; and is alleged as an evidence of grace, not as a claim of merit. Christ alone kept the old law, and He enableth us to observe the new. Bp. Horne.

[a] 169—176.] The Psalm concludes with an earnest address to God for his gracious assistance, and with strong expressions of joy and gratitude for all the instances of his mercy. The Psalmist pleads his observance of God's law as the surest claim to his loving-kindness, and beseeches the Almighty to exert in his behalf that tender care and solicitude, which a shepherd employs in restoring a worried and wandering sheep to the fold. Travell.

[b] 169. Let my complaint come &c.] The Psalmist still continueth instant in prayer for "understanding," to direct him in the midst of dangers and temptations, and for "deliverance" out of them all, when God shall see fit to accomplish the promises made in his "word." These are blessings, for which a man cannot be too frequent, or too earnest, in his petitions to the throne of heaven. Bp. Horne.

[c] 175. O let my soul live, &c.] The "life" which God granteth and preserveth to us, whether it be the natural life of the body, or the spiritual life of the soul, (for both are from Him,) should be employed in "praising" Him. This return for his mercies we are always ready to promise, when we are in danger, but often forgetful to perform, when delivered out of it. Bp. Horne.

[d] 176. I have gone astray like a sheep &c.] It is doubtful, whether David here speaks of his misery, or his sin; of his "wandering," as an exile in foreign lands, or of his "going astray" from the "commandments" of his God, though he had not altogether "forgotten," but was desirous of returning again to the observance of them, and therefore beseeches the great Shepherd to "seek" and bring back his "lost sheep." In the application of the passage to ourselves, it matters not which interpretation we adopt, since we are both sinners and exiles; exiles, because sinners; "we have erred and strayed from God's ways, like lost sheep," and are, for that reason, excluded from our heavenly city and country, to wander for a time in the wilderness. Restore us, O Lord Jesu, by thy grace to righteousness, and by thy power to glory! Bp. Horne.

[e] Psalm cxx.] This, and the fourteen Psalms which follow it, are entitled, "Psalms of degrees, or of ascensions." For what reason they were so called, is altogether uncertain. Certain, however, it is, that they are most instructive and pleasing compositions, wonderfully calculated to elevate the soul to God; and that the Christian, as he proceeds from one degree of virtue to another, in his way towards eternal felicity, cannot employ himself better than in meditation on them. In the first of these Psalms, the author, most probably David, complaineth of the falsehood, the treachery, and the violence of men, amongst whom he grieveth that his pilgrimage is prolonged. Bp. Horne.

[f] 1. When I was in trouble, &c.] The prophet relateth the success of his prayer made to Jehovah in time of trouble. He "cried," and was "heard." The particular species of trouble, under which he then laboured, was that caused by the malice and treachery of his adversaries, who either with "lying lips" bore false witness against him, or "with a deceitful tongue" tried to ensnare him, and to draw something from him, on which they might ground an accusation. Thus the Jews dealt with Christ; and men of their cast and complexion have, in all ages, dealt thus with his true lying lips: and from a deceitful tongue.

3 What reward shall be given or done unto thee[g], thou false tongue: even mighty and sharp arrows, with hot burning coals.

Sharp arrows of the mighty, with coals of juniper. Bib. Trans.

4 Wo is me[h], that I am constrained to dwell with Mesech: and to have my habitation among the tents of Kedar.

5 My soul hath long dwelt[i] among them: that are enemies unto peace.

6 I labour for peace, but when I speak unto them thereof: they make them ready to battle.

PSALM cxxi.[k] Levavi oculos.

I Will lift up mine eyes unto the hills[l]: from whence cometh my help.

2 My help cometh even from the Lord: who hath made heaven and earth.

3 He will not suffer thy foot to be moved[m]: and he that keepeth thee will not sleep.

Will not let thee be subverted. Bp. Patrick.

4 Behold, he that keepeth Israel: shall neither slumber nor sleep.

5 The Lord himself is thy keeper[n]: the Lord is thy defence upon thy right hand; shade. Bib. Trans.

6 So that the sun shall not burn thee by day: neither the moon by night.

smite. Bib. Trans.

7 The Lord shall preserve thee from all evil[o]: yea, it is even he that shall keep thy soul.

8 The Lord shall preserve thy going out, and thy coming in: from this time forth for evermore.

doing any thing of what sort soever; when thou goest out to work, or comest home to rest. Dr. Hammond.

---

followers. From such "lips" and such "tongues" God only can "deliver" the persons and the reputations of the most innocent. Bp. Horne.

[g] 3. What reward shall be given or done unto thee, &c.] The purport of the question plainly is this: What profit or advantage do you expect to reap from this practice of lying and slandering? what will at last be its end and its reward? Then followeth the answer: "Mighty and sharp arrows," or "Sharp arrows of the mighty one," who is the avenger of truth and innocence; with a fire that burns fiercely, and burns long, like that which was made of "juniper," or some wood used in those days, remarkable for increasing and retaining heat; punishments justly inflicted on a tongue, the words of which have been keen and killing as arrows, and which, by its lies and calumnies, hath contributed to set the world on fire. We read in the Gospel, of one who exclaimed, "Send Lazarus, that he may dip the tip of his finger in water, and cool my tongue; for I am tormented in this flame." Bp. Horne.

[h] 4. Wo is me, &c.] The Psalmist lamenteth his long continuance among those deceitful and malicious men, whom he compareth to the wild, barbarous, and idolatrous Arabs, the descendants of "Kedar," the son of Ishmael, Gen. xxv. 13. When our Lord was upon earth, the Jews were become the spiritual Ishmaelites, sons of the bond woman, persecutors of the sons of the free woman, and the children of promise. "O faithless and perverse generation," saith He, how long shall I be with you? how long shall I suffer you?" Matt. xvii. 17. "And as then he that was born after the flesh persecuted him that was born after the Spirit, even so it is now," Gal. iv. 29. Bp. Horne.

[i] 5. My soul hath long dwelt &c.] If this was the case of David, much more might the Son of David make the same complaint, that He "dwelt with them that hated peace;" that although He was "a man of peace," meek, lowly, and gracious in his deportment to all around Him; although He came to make peace, and to reconcile all things in heaven and earth; although his conversation and his preaching were of peace, and love, and the kingdom of God; yet no sooner did He open his mouth to "speak" upon these divine subjects, but his enemies were up in arms, ready to apprehend, to accuse, to condemn, and to crucify Him. Marvel not, O disciple of Jesus! if the world hate and oppose thee; but pray only, that when thou shalt be used as He was, thou mayest be enabled to bear that usage as He did. Bp. Horne.

[k] Psalm cxxi.] In this Psalm, the prophet, 1, 2, introduceth a person, most probably an Israelite, on his way to Jerusalem, expressing his trust and confidence in Jehovah, the Maker of heaven and earth, of whose favour and protection, at all times, and in all dangers, the prophet, 3—8, assureth him. These promises, like those in the ninety-first Psalm, were, in their full and spiritual sense, made good to Messiah, and are now daily accomplishing in the members of his mystical body, the Christian church. Bp. Lowth supposes the two first verses to be spoken by David, when going out to war, and the answer of encouragement to be made by the high priest from the holy place. In this case, the idea of warfare is added to that of pilgrimage, and the Psalm rendered still more applicable to us, as well as to the true David our King. Bp. Horne.

[l] 1, 2. I will lift up mine eyes unto the hills: &c.] The true Israelite, amidst the dangers of his earthly pilgrimage and warfare, looketh continually towards the heavenly city, whither he is travelling. Faith sheweth him afar off the everlasting "hills from whence cometh the help," which must bring him in safety to them. He "lifteth up his eyes" in prayer to the Almighty, whose temple and habitation are thereon. He putteth not his trust in any creature, but imploreth aid immediately of "him who made heaven and earth," and who, consequently, hath power over all things in both. Bp. Horne.

[m] 3, 4. He will not suffer thy foot to be moved: &c.] In the first two verses, we heard the believer declaring his resolution to trust in God. The prophet now commendeth that resolution, and encourageth him to persevere in it. Bp. Horne.

[n] 5. The Lord himself is thy keeper: &c.] The meaning is, that the good man, during his journey through life, shall be under God's protection at all seasons; as Israel in the wilderness was defended from the burning heat of the sun, by the moist and refreshing shadow of the cloud; and secured against the inclement influences of the nocturnal heavens, by the kindly warmth and splendour diffused from the pillar of fire. Bp. Horne.

[o] 7, 8. The Lord shall preserve thee from all evil: &c.] To dissipate our fears, and remove every ground of PSALM cxxii.[p] Lætatus sum.

I Was glad when they said unto me[q]: We will go into the house of the Lord.

2 Our feet shall stand in thy gates: O Jerusalem.

3 Jerusalem is built as a city[r]: that is at unity in itself.

compact together. Bib. Trans.

4 For thither the tribes go up[s], even the tribes of the Lord: to testify unto Israel, to give thanks unto the Name of the Lord.

5 For there is the seat of judgement[t]: even the seat of the house of David.

6 O pray for the peace of Jerusalem[u]: they shall prosper that love thee.

7 Peace be within thy walls[x]: and plenteousness within thy palaces.

prosperity. Bib. Trans.

8 For my brethren and companions' sakes[y]: I will wish thee prosperity.

I will now say, Peace be within thee. Bib. Trans.

9 Yea, because of the house of the Lord our God: I will seek to do thee good.

PSALM cxxiii.[z] Ad te levavi oculos meos.

UNTO thee lift I up mine eyes: O thou that dwellest in the heavens.

2 Behold, even as the eyes of ser-

---

diffidence, Jehovah promiseth, by his holy prophet, to "preserve us from all evil," which might befal us in the way, either by turning it aside, or turning it finally to our advantage, so that we shall not perish, but see our labours happily begun and ended in Him; He "shall preserve our going out, and our coming in," until, through all the vicissitudes of this mortal state, He shall have brought us into his "holy temple," there to become "pillars," and to "go no more out." Rev. iii. 12. Bp. Horne.

[p] PSALM CXXII.] The author of this Psalm, as we are informed by its title, was David. The subject of it is, that joy which the people were wont to express, upon their going up in companies to keep a feast at Jerusalem, when the divine services were regulated, and that city was appointed to be the place of publick worship. Every thing, which can be said upon this topick, must naturally hold good in its application to the Christian church, and the celebration of her feasts. Bp. Horne.

[q] 1, 2. I was glad when they said unto me: &c.] Great was the joy of an Israelite, when his brethren called upon him to accompany them on some festive occasion, to the tabernacle, or temple at Jerusalem; great is the joy of a Christian, when he is invited, in like manner, to celebrate the feasts of the church, to commemorate the nativity, or the resurrection, and to eat and drink at the table of his Lord. Bp. Horne.

[r] 3. Jerusalem is built as a city: &c.] As if it were said, Jerusalem is a lovely place: the very buildings, being so uniform, are very beautiful; and an emblem of that union of minds, both in charity and united intercessions, which is the most amiable and graceful thing in the church of God. Allusion is here made to what sacred story tells us of the city, the buildings of which, having lien scattered and dispersed, were joined together and compacted by David, and so made one city. 1 Chron. xi. 7, 8. Dr. Hammond.

[s] 4. For thither the tribes go up, &c.] All the "tribes" of Israel, three times in the year, were seen "going up" to Jerusalem in compliance with the "testimonies," the injunctions and institutions of their law, to acknowledge the mercies, and to give thanks unto the name of "Jehovah," who had done such great things for them. Bp. Horne.

[t] 5. For there is the seat of judgement: &c.] The Israelites resorted to Jerusalem, because it was the metropolis of the country, and there was the residence of their monarchs, after the kingdom was established in "the house of David." But, alas! that metropolis is desolate, and "the thrones of judgment," which were therein, have been long since cast down to the ground. A Jerusalem, however, remains, which shall never be moved; in that Jerusalem is the throne of eternal judgment erected, and the Son of David sitteth upon it. See Luke i. 32; Matt. xix. 28. Bp. Horne.

[u] 6. O pray for the peace of Jerusalem: &c.] In this latter part of our Psalm, the members of the Israelitish church are exhorted to pray for its peace and welfare. What that church was, the Christian church militant upon earth now is, and demandeth, in like manner, the prayers of all Christian people for its peace and welfare in a troublesome and contentious world. Its increase here below is in reality the increase of Jerusalem above, of which it is a part, and ought to be a resemblance. Heaven has therefore decreed, that they who contribute their labours, as well as their prayers, to promote so good and so glorious an end, shall enjoy its protection, and its blessing shall be upon the work of their hands; "they shall prosper that love thee." Bp. Horne.

[x] 7. Peace be within thy walls: &c.] Come, O thou divine Spirit of peace and love, who didst reside in the soul of the holy Jesus, descend into his mystical body, and fill us, who compose it, with all his heavenly tempers; put an end to heresies, heal all schisms, cause bitter contentions to cease, abolish every enmity, and make us to be of one mind in thy holy city; that so, "peace being within her walls," her citizens may give themselves to every profitable employment, and "plenteousness" of grace, wisdom, and truth, as well as of earthly blessings, may be in all her "palaces." Thus will she become a lively portrait of that place which is prepared for them that love one another, where, with one heart and one voice, they shall ascribe "salvation and glory to God and to the Lamb." Bp. Horne.

[y] 8. For my brethren and companions' sakes: &c.] In these concluding verses, the Psalmist declareth the two motives, which induced him to utter his best wishes, and to use his best endeavours, for the prosperity of Jerusalem; namely, love of his brethren, whose happiness was involved in that of their city; and love of God, who had there fixed the residence of his glory. These motives are ever in force, and ought surely to operate with marvellous energy upon our hearts, to stir us up to imitate the pattern now before us, in fervent zeal and unwearied labour, for the salvation of men, and the glory of their great Redeemer; both which will then be complete, when the church militant shall become triumphant, and the heavenly paradise shall be filled with plants taken from its terrestrial nursery. Bp. Horne.

[z] PSALM CXXIII.] This Psalm containeth, 1, 2, an act

vants[a] look unto the hand of their masters, and as the eyes of a maiden unto the hand of her mistress : even so our eyes wait upon the Lord our God, until he have mercy upon us.

3 Have mercy upon us, O Lord[b], have mercy upon us : for we are utterly despised.

4 Our soul is filled with the scornful reproof of the wealthy : and with the despitefulness of the proud.

Papists' Conspiracy, second Psalm Morn. Serv. and King Charles's Rest. first Psalm Morn. Serv.

PSALM cxxiv.[c] Nisi quia Dominus.

IF the Lord himself[d] had not been on our side, now may Israel say : if the Lord himself had not been on our side, when men rose up against us;

2 They had swallowed us up quick : when they were so wrathfully displeased at us. alive. See Vocab.

3 Yea, the waters had drowned us[e] : and the stream had gone over our soul.

4 The deep waters of the proud : had gone even over our soul.

5 But praised be the Lord[f] : who hath not given us over for a prey unto their teeth.

6 Our soul is escaped even as a bird out of the snare of the fowler : the snare is broken, and we are delivered.

7 Our help standeth in the Name of the Lord[g] : who hath made heaven and earth.

PSALM cxxv.[h] Qui confidunt. Papists' Conspiracy, third Psalm Morn. Serv.

THEY that put their trust in the Lord[i] shall be even as the mount of confidence in God, with, 3, 4, a prayer for deliverance from that reproach and contempt which infidelity and sensuality are wont to pour upon the afflicted people of God. Bp. Horne.

---

[a] 2. Behold, even as the eyes of servants &c.] The servants of God, like other servants, if they are injured and suffer violence, expect redress and protection from the master whose they are, and whom they serve. Under the law of Moses, a master was to demand satisfaction, and to have it made him, for any hurt done to his servant. And shall not the best of masters avenge wrongs done to those who serve him; and done perhaps, because they serve him? Without doubt, he will avenge them speedily, and reward the sufferers gloriously. Bp. Horne.

[b] 3, 4. Have mercy upon us, O Lord, &c.] Unbelieving, ungodly, and worldly men, who are "at ease," and boast themselves in the multitude of their riches, will always be ready to cast upon the afflicted servants of Christ some portion of that reproach and contempt, which were so plentifully poured upon their blessed Master, in the day of his passion, and indeed through his whole life. With these they may justly complain that "their souls are exceedingly filled," insomuch that they are compelled to exclaim with redoubled earnestness, "Have mercy upon us, O Lord, have mercy upon us." And let them know for their comfort that the Lord will "have mercy upon them" in that day, when sensuality shall be succeeded by torment, and pride shall end in shame and confusion; when patient poverty shall inherit everlasting riches, and oppressed humility shall be exalted to a throne above the stars. Bp. Horne.

[c] Psalm cxxiv.] In this Psalm, which, as we are informed by the title, hath David for its author, the church describeth the danger in which she had been, and giveth to God alone the glory of her deliverance out of it. Bp. Horne.

[d] 1. If the Lord himself &c.] The people of Israel, rescued from impending ruin, break forth into a joyful acknowledgment of that almighty aid, to which they were indebted for their deliverance. "Men" rose up against them, but "Jehovah" was on their side; men intended to devour, but God interposed to save. May not "the Israel of God" say, in like manner, "If the Lord had not been on our side," when our spiritual enemies, sin, death, and hell, were in arms against us, surely now "they had swallowed us up quick," and we had perished everlastingly! Bp. Horne.

[e] 3. Yea, the waters had drowned us: &c.] The redeemed are astonished, upon looking back, at the greatness of the danger to which they had been exposed. They can compare the fury and insolence of their adversaries to nothing but overwhelming floods and desolating torrents; and they consider themselves as snatched by a miracle from instant destruction. Bp. Horne.

[f] 5. But praised be the Lord: &c.] The marvellous deliverance of Israel is illustrated by two other images. It is compared to the escape of a lamb from the jaws of a wolf, or a lion; and to that of a bird, by the breaking of the snare, in which it had been entangled, before the fowler came to seize and to kill it. Save us, O God, from the rage and the subtilty of our spiritual adversary; save us from his teeth, when he would devour; from his snares, when he would deceive: suffer us not, either by persecution or temptation, to fall from thee; let the lion gnash his teeth, and the fowler look for his captive, in vain; that so we too may sing this song of Sion in thy heavenly kingdom. Bp. Horne.

[g] 7. Our help standeth in the Name of the Lord: &c.] The great lesson which this Psalm, from the beginning to the end, inculcates, is, that for every deliverance, whether of a temporal or spiritual nature, we should, in imitation of the saints above, ascribe "Salvation to God and to the Lamb." Bp. Horne.

[h] Psalm cxxv.] In this Psalm, the church is comforted with the promises, 1, 2, of God's protection, and, 3, of his removing, in due time, from his inheritance the rod of the oppressor; when, 4, the faithful will be rewarded, and, 5, apostates punished with other workers of iniquity. Aben Ezra, as cited by Dr. Hammond, applieth the Psalm to the days of Messiah. Bp. Horne.

[i] 1, 2. They that put their trust in the Lord &c.] The stability of the church, and the protection afforded her by Jehovah, were of old represented by the mountain on which the divine presence resided, and by the hills which encompassed Jerusalem, so as to render that city in a manner impregnable. While her inhabitants continued to "trust in the Lord," this was the case. But when they became faithless and disobedient, she became weak, and like another city. Let not our "trust

Sion : which may not be removed, but standeth fast for ever.

2 The hills stand about Jerusalem : even so standeth the Lord round about his people, from this time forth for evermore.

3 For the rod of the ungodly[k] cometh not into the lot of the righteous : lest the righteous put their hand unto wickedness.

shall not rest on. Bib. Trans.

4 Do well, O Lord[l] : unto those that are good and true of heart.

5 As for such as turn back unto their own wickedness : the Lord shall lead them forth with the evil-doers; but peace shall be upon Isrsel.

EVENING PRAYER.

King Charles's Rest. second Psalm Morn. Serv.

PSALM cxxvi.[m] In convertendo.

WHEN the Lord turned again[n] the captivity of Sion : then were we like unto them that dream.

2 Then was our mouth filled with laughter[o] : and our tongue with joy.

3 Then said they among the heathen : the Lord hath done great things for them.

4 Yea, the Lord hath done great things for us already : whereof we rejoice.

5 Turn our captivity[p], O Lord : as the rivers in the south.

6 They that sow in tears[q] : shall reap in joy.

7 He that now goeth on his way weeping, and beareth forth good seed : shall doubtless come again with joy, and bring his sheaves with him.

Churching of Women.

PSALM cxxvii.[r] Nisi Dominus.

EXCEPT the Lord build the house[s] : their labour is but lost that build it.

---

in God" be a presumptuous, ungrounded assurance; but let it be a confidence springing from faith unfeigned, out of a pure heart, a good conscience, and fervent charity. Then shall our situation, whether as a church, or as individuals, resemble that of the holy mount in the beloved city, and our God will be unto us a fortress, and a wall round about. But let us never forget, that the promises to us, like those to Israel, are conditional: "Because of unbelief they were broken off; and we stand by faith." Bp. Horne.

[k] 3. For the rod of the ungodly &c.] God may, and often doth, permit "the rod" or power "of the wicked to fall upon the lot of the righteous," in this world. But it is only for the purposes of chastisement, or probation. The rod is not suffered to "rest," or abide there too long, lest "the righteous," harassed and worn down by oppression, and seeing no end of their calamities, should be tempted to "put their hands to iniquity," and practise that wickedness which they find to prosper so well here below. Bp. Horne.

[l] 4. Do well, O Lord: &c.] The "good and true of heart" are they who stand steady in every change of circumstances: who complain not of God's dispensations; but, believing every thing to be best which He ordains, adhere to Him with a will entirely conformed to his, in adversity no less than in prosperity. To these Jehovah will finally "do good;" and they shall receive the reward of their faith and patience: while such as, in time of trial, have fallen away, and returned no more, shall be "led forth" to punishment "with the workers of iniquity," to whose company their apostasy hath joined them. And then "peace shall be upon the Israel of God," with joy and gladness for evermore. Bp. Horne.

[m] Psalm cxxvi.] In this Psalm, the children of Sion, 1—4, describe the joy consequent upon their restoration from captivity; 5, they pray God to bring back the rest of their countrymen, and to complete his work; 6, 7, they foresee and predict the success of their labours in rebuilding their ruined city with its temple, and cultivating again their desolated country. The return of Israel from Babylon holds forth a figure of the same import with the exodus of that people from Egypt. And this Psalm, like the prophecies of Isaiah, representeth the blessed effects of a spiritual redemption, in words primarily alluding to that temporal release. Bp. Horne.

[n] 1. When the Lord turned again &c.] That Cyrus should issue a decree for the Jews to return to their own country, and to rebuild their city and temple; that he should dismiss such a number of captives, not only without money and without price, but should send them home laden with presents, Ezra i. 1—4; this was the work of Jehovah, who only could thus "turn the captivity of Sion." A restoration so complete, so strange and unlooked for, brought about at once, without any endeavours used on the side of Israel, seemed in all these respects as a "dream;" and the parties concerned, when they saw and heard such things, could scarcely believe themselves to be awake. Bp. Horne.

[o] 2. Then was our mouth filled with laughter: &c.] The people of God soon find, that they are not mocked with illusions, but that all about them is reality and truth. Then sorrow and sighing, fear and distrust, fly away together. Joy fills their hearts, and overflows by their tongues, in songs of praise. The nations hear, and are astonished, and own the hand of Jehovah in the restoration of his people: "Jehovah hath done great things for them." The chosen people echo back the gladsome sound, and reply, with transports of gratitude, "Jehovah hath done great things for us, whereof we are glad." Every word of this agreeth not more exactly to the return from Babylon, than it doth to that eternal redemption thereby prefigured, which is the grand subject of thanksgiving in the Christian church. Bp. Horne.

[p] 5. Turn our captivity, &c.] The joy occasioned by Cyrus's proclamation having been described in the former part of the Psalm, we may now suppose some of the Jews ready to set out on their return home; at which time, and during their journey, they prefer this petition to God, that He would be pleased to bring back the rest of their countrymen, who, like "floods" rolling down upon the thirsty regions of the "south," might people the land, and by their labours put an end to the desolations of Judah Bp. Horne.

[q] 6, 7. They that sow in tears: &c.] The fatigue of travelling from Babylon to Judea; the melancholy

2 Except the Lord keep the city : the watchman waketh but in vain.

3 It is but lost labour[t] that ye haste to rise up early, and so late take rest, and eat the bread of carefulness : for so he giveth his beloved sleep.

Whereas or since. Dr. Hammond.

4 Lo, children and the fruit of the womb[u] : are an heritage and gift that cometh of the Lord.

5 Like as the arrows[x] in the hand of the giant : even so are the young children.

6 Happy is the man[y] that hath his quiver full of them : they shall not be ashamed when they speak with their enemies in the gate.

PSALM cxxviii.[z] Beati omnes.

Form of Matrimony.

BLESSED are all they that fear the Lord[a] : and walk in his ways.

2 For thou shalt eat the labours of thine hands[b] : O well is thee, and happy shalt thou be.

3 Thy wife shall be as the fruit-

---

prospect of a long-depopulated country, and ruined city; the toil necessary to be undergone before the former could be again brought into order, and the latter rebuilt; all these considerations could not but allay the joy of the released captives, and even draw many tears from their eyes. They are therefore comforted with a gracious promise, that God would give a blessing to the labours of their hands, and crown them with success, so that they should once more see Jerusalem in prosperity, and behold in Sion the beauty of holiness. This promise is conveyed under images borrowed from the instructive scenes of agriculture. Here, O disciple of Jesus, behold an emblem of thy present labour, and thy future reward. Thou "sowest," perhaps, "in tears;" thou doest thy duty amidst persecution and affliction, sickness, pain, and sorrow; thou labourest in the church, and no account is made of thy labours; no profit seems likely to arise from them. Nay, thou must thyself drop into the dust of death, and all the storms of that winter must pass over thee, until thy form shall be perished, and thou shalt see corruption. Yet, the day is coming, when thou shalt "reap in joy;" and plentiful shall be thy harvest. For thus thy blessed Master "went forth weeping, a man of sorrows, and acquainted with grief, bearing precious seed," and sowing it around Him, till at length his own body was buried, like a grain of wheat, in the furrow of the grave. But He arose, and is now in heaven; from whence He "shall doubtless come again with rejoicing," with the voice of the archangel and the trump of God, "bringing his sheaves with him." Then shall every man receive the fruit of his works, and have praise of God. Bp. Horne.

[r] PSALM cxxvii.] If this Psalm were written by Solomon, or by David for Solomon, as the title importeth, it was probably used again at the time of rebuilding the city and temple, after the return from Babylon. But indeed it is a Psalm which can never be out of season, the design of its author being to teach us the necessity of dependence upon God and his blessing, in every work to which we set our hands. Bp. Horne.

[s] 1, 2. Except the Lord build the house: &c.] In every undertaking, the blessing of God must accompany the labours of man, to render them effectual. No work can prosper without Him, nor can any design miscarry under his favour and protection, which are equally necessary to be obtained by the builder in time of peace, and by the soldier in time of war. Bp. Horne.

[t] 3. It is but lost labour &c.] The Psalmist doth not, certainly, intend to say, that labour and diligence are vain, but that they are so, except the Lord be with the labourer: the business is not to be done by all the industry and pains, all the carking and caring in the world, without Him; whereas, if his aid be called in, if part of our time be spent in prayer, not the whole of it in prayerless toiling and moiling, our work will become easier, and go on better; a solicitude and anxiety for its success and completion will no longer prey upon our minds by day, and break our rest at night: we shall cheerfully fulfil our daily tasks, and then, with confidence and resignation, lay our heads upon our pillows, and God will "give to his beloved" a sweet and undisturbed "sleep," which shall fit them to return every morning, with renewed vigour and alacrity, to their stated employments. This seemeth to be the import of the verse. Bp. Horne.

[u] 4. Lo, children and the fruit of the womb: &c.] The labours of mankind, first in building houses and cities, and then in guarding and securing their possessions, are undergone, not with a view to themselves alone, but to their families, which they would establish and perpetuate. The Psalmist, therefore, in the preceding verses, having taught men to expect a happy settlement only from the favour of Jehovah, now directs them to look up to Him for the farther blessing of a numerous and virtuous progeny. Bp. Horne.

[x] 5. Like as the arrows &c.] Children, when well educated, are like so many "arrows in the hand of a strong man;" ready winged with duty and love, to fly to the mark; polished and keen, to grace and maintain the cause of their parents, to defend them from hostile invasions, and instantly to repel every assailant. Bp. Horne.

[y] 6. Happy is the man &c.] In a house full of dutiful children consisteth the happiness of their parents, who then can never want friends; friends, that will at no time be "ashamed," but will at all times rejoice to appear for them, to meet their "enemies" and accusers "in the gate," or place of judgment; there to answer any charge against them, to vindicate them in their persons, their good name, or their property. It is a glorious sight to behold children thus standing forth in the defence of their parents. Bp. Horne.

[z] PSALM cxxviii.] This Psalm containeth a promise made to him who, 1, feared Jehovah, and walked in his ways, that he should be blessed, 2, in his person, and, 3, 4, in his family, and that he should see the good of Jerusalem. The Psalm was, probably, sung at the marriages of the Israelites, as it is now a part of the matrimonial service among us. Bp. Horne.

[a] 1. Blessed are all they that fear the Lord: &c.] Happiness belongeth not to the rich, the powerful, and the prosperous, as such; but in every state and condition, blessed is the man that "feareth Jehovah," that so feareth Him as to obey Him, and to "walk in his ways," notwithstanding all the obstructions he may meet with from the world, the flesh, and the devil. Bp. Horne.

[b] 2. For thou shalt eat the labours of thine hands:

ful vine[c] : upon the walls of thine house.

4 Thy children like the olive-branches : round about thy table.

5 Lo, thus shall the man be blessed[d] : that feareth the Lord.

6 The Lord from out of Sion shall so bless thee[e] : that thou shalt see Jerusalem in prosperity all thy life long.

7 Yea, that thou shalt see thy children's children : and peace upon Israel.

King Charles's Rest. third Psalm Morn. Serv. afflicted. Bib. Trans.

PSALM cxxix.[f] Sæpe expugnaverunt.

MANY a time have they fought against me[g] from my youth up : may Israel now say.

2 Yea, many a time have they vexed me from my youth up : but they have not prevailed against me.

3 The plowers plowed upon my back[h] : and made long furrows.

4 But the righteous Lord : hath hewn the snares of the ungodly in pieces.

5 Let them be confounded and turned backward : as many as have evil will at Sion. hate Zion. Bib. Trans.

6 Let them be even as the grass growing upon the house-tops[i] : which withereth afore it be plucked up;

7 Whereof the mower filleth not his hand : neither he that bindeth up the sheaves his bosom.

8 So that they who go by say not

&c.] The person is here beautifully changed, and to the man who feareth Jehovah is addressed an enumeration of those blessings which shall attend him. He is to "eat the labour of his hands," that is, the fruit, or returns of his labours. Hereby it is implied, that he is not to be idle, but to "labour," that he may eat; that he is not to be niggardly, but to "eat," when he has laboured; that he is neither to be unjust, by living upon the labours, nor enslaved, by depending upon the bounty, of others, but to eat of "his own" labours; and that he, whose labours procure him a sustenance, hath enough to be "blessed" and happy. "Happy shalt thou be, and it shall be well with thee:" every thing shall happen, which God seeth to be best for thee in this life, and (as saith the Chaldee Paraphrast on the place) "it shall be good to thee in the world to come." Bp. Horne.

[c] 3. Thy wife sholl be as the fruitful vine: &c.] Marriage was ordained by God to complete the felicity of man in a state of innocence; and the benediction of heaven will ever descend upon it, when undertaken in the "fear of the Lord." The vine, a lowly plant, raised with tender care, becoming, by its luxuriancy, its beauty, its fragrance, and its clusters, the ornament and glory of the house to which it is joined, and by which it is supported, forms the finest imaginable emblem of a fair, virtuous, and faithful wife. The olive-trees, planted by the inhabitants of the eastern countries around their tables, or banqueting places in their gardens, to cheer the eye by their verdure, and to refresh the body by their cooling shade, do no less aptly and significantly set forth the pleasure which parents feel, at the sight of a numerous and flourishing offspring. Bp. Horne.

[d] 5. Lo, thus shall the man be blessed: &c.] Are temporal blessings, then, the reward of piety? They are not its only, nor chief reward, but are often "added" even under the new dispensation, to those who "first seek the kingdom of God, and his righteousness." When they are withholden, or withdrawn, it is for the security or increase of those more valuable blessings which are spiritual. There are times, when father, mother, brethren, sisters, wife, children, and lands, must be given up for Christ's and the Gospel's sake. But ample amends are promised to be made to all who thus part with earthly relations and possessions. They find in the church other fathers, mothers, brethren, sisters, children, &c., and at the resurrection they will "inherit all things," Rev. xxi. 7; and brighter coronets of glory shall sparkle from their heads. The Scriptures shew us the servants of God in every state and condition: we view them rich and poor, honoured and despised, sick and in health, married and single, childless and otherwise, in prosperity and in adversity; to teach us, that all things work together for good to them who love God: so that the believer hath comfort always. If temporal blessings be granted him, he accepteth them as shadows of those which are eternal; if they are denied, he remembereth that they are only shadows, and are therefore denied, that he may fix his thoughts and affections more firmly on the substance. Bp. Horne.

[e] 6. The Lord from out of Sion shall so bless thee: &c.] Every true Israelite rejoiceth in the prosperity of Sion; a blessing upon the church diffuseth itself to all the members thereof; and the good of Jerusalem, with peace upon Israel, is all the good we can desire to see upon earth. Hereafter we shall see greater things than these. Jehovah from the heavenly Sion will bless us with the vision of his immortal glory; we shall see the good of the new Jerusalem, the wealth, beauty, and majesty of that holy city; we shall see the generations of the faithful walking in the light of it; with that everlasting peace and rest, which remain for the Israel of God. Bp. Horne.

[f] Psalm cxxix.] In the former part of this Psalm, 1—4, the church declareth herself to have been often assailed and persecuted by her enemies, but as often rescued and preserved by Jehovah; in the latter part of it, 5—8, she predicteth the miserable end of all those who hate Zion. Bp. Horne.

It seems to have been composed by Ezra, or some one of that time, at the return from the captivity. Dr. Hammond.

[g] 1. Many a time have they fought against me &c.] Affliction is nothing new to the people of God. Many a time have the righteous been under persecution, from the hour when Cain rose up against his brother Abel, to this day. Like the bush which Moses beheld in the desert, the church hath "burned with fire," but is not yet "consumed:" and for the same reason, because God is in the midst of her. He, who took our nature upon Him, was also "afflicted from his youth," but his enemies "prevailed not finally against him." Bp. Horne.

[h] 3, 4. The plowers plowed upon my back: &c.] The so much as, The Lord prosper you: we wish you good luck in the Name of the Lord.

PSALM cxxx.[k] De profundis.

Ash-Wednesday, second Psalm Even. Serv.

OUT of the deep[l] have I called unto thee, O Lord: Lord, hear my voice.

be attentive to. Bib. Trans.

2 O let thine ears consider well: the voice of my complaint.

3 If thou, Lord, wilt be extreme[m] to mark what is done amiss: O Lord, who may abide it?

4 For there is mercy with thee[n]: therefore shalt thou be feared.

forgiveness. Bib. Trans. served and reverenced. Travell.

5 I look for the Lord; my soul doth wait for him: in his word is my trust.

6 My soul fleeth unto the Lord: before the morning watch[o], I say, before the morning watch.

7 O Israel, trust in the Lord[p], for with the Lord there is mercy: and with him is plenteous redemption.

8 And he shall redeem Israel: from all his sins.

---

former of these two verses expresseth a state of great affliction, the latter, a deliverance from that state. Bp. Horne.

[l] 6. Let them be even as the grass growing upon the house-tops: &c.] The transient prosperity of mortal man is often in sacred writ compared to grass, the history of which is contained in these few words, "It cometh up, and is cut down." But here the comparison is carried still farther. Not the common grass in the field, but "grass growing on the house-tops," is selected to convey the idea of bad men; grass, which, having no depth of earth, into which it may strike its roots, doth not wait the hand of the gatherer, but "withereth" even "before it is plucked up." And then, so thin, so wretched, and so unprofitable, is the crop, that none are employed to collect and carry it in; none to whom passengers might address those acclamations and salutations, customary at such times, as "The Lord be with you, bless you," &c. Ruth ii. 4. Thus, while the felicity of Sion's children is rooted and grounded in Christ, that of her enemies hath no foundation at all. While the church subsisteth from generation to generation, the kingdoms and empires, that have persecuted her, fade and wither away of themselves. And at the general harvest of the world, when the righteous shall be carried by angels, with joyful acclamations, into the mansions prepared for them above, the wicked, unregarded by the heavenly reapers, and unblessed by all, shall become fuel for a fire that goeth not out; resembling, in this their sad end likewise, that worthless grass, "which to-day is, and to-morrow is cast into the oven." Bp. Horne.

[k] Psalm cxxx.] This is the sixth of those which are styled "penitential Psalms." It is calculated for the use of the church, or any member thereof; and containeth, 1, 2, a complaint of great distress; 3, a confession of man's sinfulness; 4—8, an act of faith in the divine mercy, and the promised redemption. Bp. Horne.

Some attribute this Psalm to David: it was more probably composed in the captivity by some pious persons there. Dr. Nicholls.

[l] 1. Out of the deep &c.] From the depths of sin, and the misery occasioned by sin, the penitent, like another Jonas, entombed in the whale's belly, and surrounded by all the waves of the ocean, crieth unto God for help and salvation. Fervent prayer will find its way through every obstruction, to the ears of Him who sitteth upon his holy hill. Bp. Horne.

[m] 3. If thou, Lord, wilt be extreme &c.] A reason is here urged, why God should spare and pardon the suppliant, namely, because, was He accurately to note the offences of the best men, and to produce them in judgment against the offenders, no man could stand in that judgment, but the whole race of Adam must continue to eternity, under the dominion of sin and death; which a gracious and merciful God will not permit to be the case. It is accordingly declared, in the next verse, that measures had been taken to prevent so deplorable a catastrophe. Bp. Horne.

[n] 4. For there is mercy with thee: &c.] The fear of God in this place signifies obedience to his laws. Dr. Hammond. True repentance is founded upon the sense of our own wretchedness, and faith in the divine mercy. Without the former, we should never seek for pardon and grace; without the latter, we should despair of finding them. The Psalmist, therefore, having in the three preceding verses expressed the one, now maketh profession of the other. "There is forgiveness with thee;" thou wilt not "mark iniquities," or leave us to the rigours of strict justice, but thou hast devised means that we perish not for ever: thou hast provided an atonement, and in virtue of that atonement, the sinner may obtain pardon; he need not, therefore, reject thy service, and cast himself away in despair, but is encouraged to serve thee acceptably through faith, with godly fear: "there is forgiveness with thee, that thou mayest be feared." Or the meaning may be, Thou forgivest man, that so, being restored to thy favour, and endued with thy grace, he may thenceforth fear, or serve thee, as it becomes one who hath obtained mercy to do. Bp. Horne.

[o] 6. My soul fleeth unto the Lord: before the morning watch, &c.] In other words, the guards every morning, that hasten to their watches, are not earlier than I am in my daily addresses to God. Who these watches or guards of the morning are, the Chaldee hath best expressed: They that observe the morning watches, that they may offer their morning oblation, that is, the priests, which in their turns officiated; or rather, some officers of theirs, which were peculiarly appointed from a tower to expect the first appearance of break of day. Dr. Hammond.

[p] 7, 8. O Israel, trust in the Lord, &c.] The church of Israel was exhorted to "hope" in Jehovah, because with Him there was "mercy, and plenteous redemption." And of what nature was that redemption? A redemption from sin: "He shall redeem Israel from all his sins;" consequently from all trouble and misery, which are but the effects of sin, and will cease when their cause shall be finally taken away. Now what is this, but the Gospel itself? or where is the difference between this of the Psalmist, "He shall redeem Israel from all his sins," and that of the Evangelist, "Thou shalt call his name Jesus: for he shall save his people from their sins?" Matt. i. 21. The Israel of God, or church universal, "hoping" in the same "mercy" and the same "plenteous redemption," expecteth the full accomplishment of this gracious promise, at the second

PSALM cxxxi.[q] Domine, non est.

LORD, I am not high-minded : I have no proud looks.

2 I do not exercise myself in great matters : which are too high for me.

3 But I refrain my soul[r], and keep it low, like as a child that is weaned from his mother : yea, my soul is even as a weaned child.

4 O Israel, trust in the Lord[s] : from this time forth for evermore.

MORNING PRAYER.

Christmas-day, third Psalm Even. Serv.

PSALM cxxxii.[t] Memento, Domine.

LORD, remember David[u] : and all his trouble;

2 How he sware unto the Lord : and vowed a vow unto the Almighty God of Jacob;

3 I will not come within the tabernacle of mine house : nor climb up into my bed;

4 I will not suffer mine eyes to sleep, nor mine eye-lids to slumber : neither the temples of my head to take any rest;

5 Until I find out a place for the temple of the Lord : an habitation for the mighty God of Jacob.

6 Lo, we heard of the same at Ephrata[x] : and found it in the wood.

7 We will go into his tabernacle : and fall low on our knees before his footstool.

of it. Bib. Trans. namely, of the place or habitation for the Lord, last mentioned. Poole.

---

advent of her Saviour, when the penalty of sin shall be taken off, and death be swallowed up in victory. Bp. Horne.

[q] PSALM cxxxi.] This Psalm containeth, 1—3, a description of true humility, and resignation to the will of God, with, 4, an exhortation to the practice thereof. It is most probably a Psalm of David, and is eminently applicable to Messiah, in his state of humiliation on earth. Happy would it be for the world, if all his disciples could imbibe the spirit of this short but lovely Psalm, and copy after the example which it setteth before them. Bp. Horne.

[r] 3. But I refrain my soul, &c.] A child newly weaned mourneth because of the favourite aliment which is withdrawn from him; but, depending absolutely on the mother for every thing, learneth to acquiesce in her treatment of him, and quietly to accept what it shall please her to give. Such was the humble resignation of the Lamb of God to the will of his heavenly Father, under the severest dispensations, when even the divine presence, and that support which it afforded, seemed to have been withdrawn : "Father, into thy hands I commend my spirit!" Who, then, can expect to enter into the kingdom of heaven, "except he be converted, and become as a little child?" Matt. xviii. 3. Bp. Horne.

[s] 4. O Israel, trust in the Lord : &c.] After the example, therefore, of the King of Israel, who thus demeaned himself in his afflictions, lowly, contented, and resigned, casting all his care upon the Father who cared for him, and patiently waiting his time for deliverance and salvation; after this their example and pattern, let his faithful people hope and trust, not in themselves, their wisdom, or their power, but in Jehovah alone, who will not fail to exalt them, as He hath already exalted their Redeemer, if they do but follow his steps. Bp. Horne.

[t] PSALM cxxxii.] This is one of the Proper Psalms, which the Church hath appointed to be used on Christmas-day. It containeth, 1—5, a petition that Jehovah would be mindful of the zeal shewn by his servant David, in preparing a place for his habitation; 6, the exultation of the faithful upon hearing the glad tidings, that God would dwell among them; and, 7, their resolution to worship at the place which He had chosen for that purpose; 8—10, an address to Jehovah, used by Solomon at the dedication of the temple, whence some have thought him to have been the author of the Psalm; 11—19, the substance of God's promises made to David and to his seed. The whole Psalm is perfectly well adapted to the festival of the incarnation. Bp. Horne.

[u] 1—5. Lord, remember David : &c.] In all circumstances and situations, David was solicitous for the tabernacle and service of God. Of the oath and vow here mentioned, we have, indeed, no account in the sacred history; but we read, 2 Sam. vii. 2, of the uneasiness which he expressed to Nathan the prophet, at the thought of his dwelling in a palace of cedar, while the ark of God dwelt only within the curtains of a tent. Nay, we find, by 1 Chron. xvi. 43, that that he did not bless, and consequently did not inhabit, his own house, until he had brought the ark to Sion, where the temple was afterwards erected. He could take neither pleasure nor rest, until a place was prepared for the residence of Jehovah in the midst of his people; and from thenceforth he gave himself, with unwearied diligence, to lay in a plentiful store of the most costly materials, silver, gold, and precious stones, which were employed by his son and successor Solomon, in constructing the magnificent and mystick edifice. Bp. Horne.

[x] 6. Lo, we heard of the same at Ephrata : &c.] In other words, as Bishop Patrick hath paraphrased this verse, "And now, behold, the Lord himself, to our great joy, hath told us the very place where he will fix his habitation, 1 Chron. xxi. 18—26; in the territory of Bethlehem Ephrata, Gen. xxxv. 13—19; in the fields of that forest, where the angel stood and directed David to build an altar to the Lord," 1 Chron. xxi. 18; xxii. 1. Bethlehem Ephratah was the city of David; it was likewise the city wherein the Son of David was born, as the prophet Micah hath foretold : "And thou Bethlehem, in the land of Judah : art not the least among the cities of Judah : for out of thee shall come a Governor, that shall rule my people Israel," Micah v. 2, cited by the chief priests and scribes to Herod, Matt. ii. 6. Christians, as well as Jews, may therefore say, and upon the festival of Christ's nativity, using this Psalm, they do say, "Lo, we heard of it at Ephratah;" for there the angel first proclaimed the news of the incarnation to the shepherds : "Behold, I bring you good tidings of great joy, which shall be to all people; for unto you is born this day, in the city of David, a Saviour, which is Christ the Lord," Luke ii. 10. There was "found" the true tabernacle and temple, "not made with hands, the place for Jehovah, the habitation for the mighty God of Jacob." Bp. Horne.

8 Arise, O Lord, into thy resting-place[y] : thou, and the ark of thy strength.

all thy pious worshippers. Bp. Patrick. thy chosen people. Dr. Nicholls.

9 Let thy priests be clothed with righteousness : and let thy saints sing with joyfulness.

10 For thy servant David's sake[z] : turn not away the presence of thine Anointed.

the face. Bib. Trans.

11 The Lord hath made a faithful oath unto David[a] : and he shall not shrink from it;

12 Of the fruit of thy body : shall throne. Bib. Trans. I set upon thy seat.

13 If thy children will keep my covenant[b], and my testimonies that teach. Bib. Trans. I shall learn them : their children throne. Bib. Trans. also shall sit upon thy seat for evermore.

14 For the Lord hath chosen Sion to be an habitation for himself: he hath longed for her.

15 This shall be my rest for ever : here will I dwell, for I have a delight therein.

16 I will bless her victuals with increase : and will satisfy her poor with bread.

17 I will deck her priests with health : and her saints shall rejoice and sing.

18 There shall I make the horn of David to flourish[c] : I have ordained a lantern for mine Anointed.

bud. Bib. Trans. lamp. Bib. Trans.

19 As for his enemies[d], I shall clothe them with shame : but upon himself shall his crown flourish.

PSALM cxxxiii.[e] Ecce, quam bonum !

BEHOLD, how good and joyful[f] a thing it is : brethren, to dwell together in unity!

pleasant. Bib. Trans.

2 It is like the precious ointment

---

[y] 8. Arise, O Lord, into thy resting-place: &c.] When the ark marched before the children of Israel, to find out a resting-place, it is recorded, Numb. x. 35, 36, that Moses said, "Rise up, Jehovah, and let thine enemies be scattered, and let them that hate thee flee before thee;" and when it rested, he said, "Return, or bring back, the many thousands of Israel." The verse before us was used, with the two succeeding verses, by Solomon, as the conclusion of his prayer at the dedication of the temple, 2 Chron. vi. 41. The purport of the petition therefore was, that the presence of Jehovah might rest upon Sion, and dwell in the house prepared for it, as the same presence hath since dwelt in Christ, and is to be with the Christian church to the end of the world. Bp. Horne.

[z] 10. For thy servant David's sake: &c.] Solomon beseecheth God, for the sake of his favourite servant David, and the promises made to him and his seed, that He would not deny the request of David's son, now "anointed" to be king over Israel, and, by so doing, confound, put him to shame, or "turn away his face," according to the Hebrew in 1 Kings ii. 16. A Christian asketh nothing but in the name, and for the sake of the Son of David, Jesus Christ our Lord, in whom all the promises are Yea and Amen, and in whom whomsoever believeth shall never be confounded, or denied that which it is really good and profitable for him to receive. Bp. Horne.

[a] 11. The Lord hath made a faithful oath unto David: &c.] That this is a prophecy of Messiah, we have the authority of St. Peter to say, Acts ii. 30, "David, being a prophet, and knowing that God had sworn with an oath to him, that of the fruit of his loins, according to the flesh, he would raise up Christ, to sit on his throne," &c. This promise to David occurs, 2 Sam. vii. 12, and hath a twofold sense, relating to Solomon in type and shadow, to Christ in truth and substance. See more on Ps. lxxxix. 3, 4. Bp. Horne.

[b] 13. If thy children will keep my covenant, &c.] The promises of God to Christ are absolute: but to his "children," as well as those of David, they are conditional; so that our interest in them dependeth on our faith, our obedience, our perseverance. "Behold," saith, St. Paul, "the goodness and severity of God: on them which fell, severity; but towards thee, goodness, if thou continue in that goodness; otherwise, thou also shalt be cut off," Rom. xi. 22. Bp. Horne.

[c] 18. There shall I make the horn of David to flourish: &c.] Or, "to bud." A horn, as before observed, is an emblem of strength and power: possibly its being made to "bud" or sprout may allude to the successive renewal of the horns of some animals, such as deer. Travell. Bishop Patrick hath well paraphrased this verse: "There, namely, in Jerusalem, will I make the regal power and majesty of David to put forth itself afresh in his royal successors: no sooner shall one be extinguished, but another shall shine in such splendour, as shall give a lustre to the name of that anointed servant of mine, till the great Prince, the Messiah, appear:" then will the horn of salvation be raised up in the house of David, to subdue the empires of the world, and to vanquish all opposition; then shall the branch of Jehovah bud into beauty and glory upon the earth; then shall the lamp of Israel become a sun of righteousness, burning and shining with lustre inextinguishable, to all eternity. That this verse doth mystically refer to Christ, the Jews confess, as Dr. Hammond hath observed. So saith R. Saadiah, "The Lamp is the King, which illuminates the nations;" and Kimchi, "The Horn of David, is the Messias." Bp. Horne.

[d] 19. As for his enemies, &c.] It is here predicted, that God would blast and bring to nothing every design formed to destroy the house of David, until King Messiah should arise out of it to sit upon the throne of his Father. In Him all the promises centre, and the kingdom is established for ever: "His enemies," who will not have Him to reign over them, shall, at the last day, be "clothed with shame," and everlasting confusion: "but upon himself shall his crown flourish," filling heaven and earth with the brightness of his glory. Bp. Horne.

[e] PSALM CXXXIII.] This short but pleasing Psalm was composed either to recommend unity among the tribes of Israel, or to celebrate it when it had taken place. Bishop Patrick justly observes, that it was as fitly used by the first Christians, to express their joy for the blessed union of Jews and Gentiles; and may now upon the head[g], that ran down unto the beard : even unto Aaron's beard, and went down to the skirts of his clothing.

3 Like as the dew of Hermon : which fell upon the hill of Sion.

and as the dew that descended on the mountains of Zion. Bib. Trans. either, where brethren live in peace and unity; or rather in Sion, last mentioned. Poole.

4 For there the Lord promised his blessing : and life for evermore.

PSALM cxxxiv.[h] Ecce nunc.

BEHOLD now, praise the Lord : all ye servants of the Lord;

2 Ye that by night stand in the house of the Lord : even in the courts of the house of our God.

3 Lift up your hands in the sanctuary : and praise the Lord.

4 The Lord that made heaven[i] and earth : give thee blessing out of Sion.

PSALM cxxxv.[k] Laudate Nomen.

O Praise the Lord[l], laud ye the Name of the Lord : praise it, O ye servants of the Lord;

2 Ye that stand in the house of the Lord : in the courts of the house of our God.

3 O praise the Lord, for the Lord is gracious : O sing praises unto his Name, for it is lovely.

4 For why? the Lord hath chosen Jacob[m] unto himself : and Israel for his own possession.

5 For I know that the Lord is

---

serve the uses of all Christian societies, whose happiness lies in holy peace and concord." It containeth, 1, a rapturous exclamation on the comforts and advantages of union, which, 2—4, are illustrated by the two exquisite similitudes of the holy anointing oil and of dew. Bp. Horne.

[f] 1. Behold, how good and joyful &c.] Or "pleasant." Many things are good, which are not pleasant; and many pleasant, which are not good. But unity among brethren, whether civil or religious, is productive both of profit and pleasure. Of profit, because therein consisteth the welfare and security of every society; of pleasure, because mutual love is the source of delight, and the happiness of one becomes, in that case, the happiness of all. It is unity alone, which gives beauty, as well as strength, to the state; which renders the church, at the same time, "fair as the moon, and terrible as an army with banners," Cant. vi. 10. Bp. Horne.

[g] 2. It is like the precious ointment upon the head, &c.] Aptly may it be compared to that costly and odoriferous ointment, which, at the consecration of the high priest, was poured upon him in such profusion, that it spread over his face, and reached the cellar of his garment, diffusing its fragrant odours all around. Or it may be compared to the refreshing dews, which descend upon the mountainous tract of Hermon, or upon the hill of Sion, that sacred spot, to which God has been pleased to promise his blessing and protection. Travell.

The spirit of heavenly love was that oil of gladness which Jehovah poured without measure on Him who is the high-priest and head of his church. Insinuating and healing, comforting and exhilarating, it is diffused from Him over his body mystical, even down to the least and lowest members: "Of his fulness have we all received." Nor did the dew of heaven, in time of drought, ever prove more refreshing and beneficial to the mountains of Judah, than are the influences of grace, when descending in soft silence from above upon the church; in the union and communion of which, God hath "commanded the blessing, even life for evermore." O come the day, when division shall cease, and enmity be done away; when the tribes of the spiritual Israel shall be united in a bond of eternal charity, under the true David, in the Jerusalem which is above; and saints and angels shall sing this lovely Psalm together! Bp. Horne.

[h] Psalm cxxxiv.] It is uncertain by whom this Psalm was composed. But it seems to have been sung by some of the Levites, at the shutting up of the gates of the temple, to excite the rest, whose turn it was to watch that night, 1 Chron. ix. 33, to be diligent in their office of singing psalms, and making devout prayers for the people. Bp. Patrick. The three first verses were sung by the priests without, who are going away for the night, upon the steps of the great gate: the last verse by the priests remaining within. Bp. Horsley.

With this Psalm, Christians in the church, like the Levites of old in the temple, 1—3, call upon each other to bless God, and, 4, upon God to bless them all. Bp. Horne.

[i] 4. The Lord hath made heaven &c.] The preceding verses seem directed to the priests in the temple: this is therefore returned as from them. And thus it is, that prayer and praise, which by grace are caused to ascend from our hearts to God, will certainly return in the benedictions of heaven upon our souls and bodies, our persons and our families, our church and our country. Bp. Horne.

[k] Psalm cxxxv.] This Psalm seems to be one adapted for common use in the temple, and to be a general form of thanksgiving for God's great mercies to the nation of the Jews. Dr. Nicholls.

In this Psalm, 1, 2, the servants of Jehovah are exhorted to praise Him, 3, on account of his goodness; of the pleasure to be found in the employment; 4, of his peculiar mercies shewn to Israel; 5, of his infinite superiority over the gods of the nations, manifested, 6, 7, in the works of creation, 8—14, in his dealings with the church and with her adversaries. 15—18, The folly of idolatry, and of those who practise it, is described; and, 19—21, Israel is again stirred up to praise Jehovah. Bp. Horne.

[l] 1. O praise the Lord, &c.] All the servants of God, they, more especially, who minister in the temple, are repeatedly, as in the foregoing Psalm, excited to praise their blessed Master. Two reasons are assigned why they should do this. First, the goodness of that Master; and secondly, the pleasantness of the employment. Bp. Horne.

[m] 4, 5. For why? the Lord hath chosen Jacob &c.] A third reason why the children of Israel should praise the name of Jehovah, was the circumstance of their having been selected from among the nations to be his church, to receive the law and the promises, to have his presence residing in the midst of them, and to be the guardians of the true faith and worship. And a fourth reason was the superiority of Jehovah their God over the great : and that our Lord is above all gods.

6 Whatsoever the Lord pleased, that did he in heaven, and in earth : and in the sea, and in all deep places.

7 He bringeth forth the clouds[n] from the ends of the world : and sendeth forth lightnings with the rain, bringing the winds out of his treasures.

from the ocean which encompasses the habitable world. Dr. Nicholls.

8 He smote the first-born of Egypt[o] : both of man and beast.

wonderful demonstrations of his power. Bp. Patrick.

9 He hath sent tokens and wonders into the midst of thee, O thou land of Egypt : upon Pharaoh, and all his servants.

10 He smote divers nations[p] : and slew mighty kings ;

11 Sehon king of the Amorites, and Og the king of Basan : and all the kingdoms of Canaan ;

12 And gave their land to be an heritage : even an heritage unto Israel his people.

13 Thy Name, O Lord, endureth for ever : so doth thy memorial, O Lord, from one generation to another.

the monuments of thy fame. Dr. Nicholls.

14 For the Lord will avenge his people : and be gracious unto his servants.

15 As for the images of the heathen[q], they are but silver and gold : the work of men's hands.

Idols. Bib. Trans.

16 They have mouths, and speak not : eyes have they, but they see not.

17 They have ears, and yet they hear not : neither is there any breath in their mouths.

18 They that make them are like unto them : and so are all they that put their trust in them.

19 Praise the Lord, ye house of Israel[r] : praise the Lord, ye house of Aaron.

20 Praise the Lord, ye house of Levi : ye that fear the Lord, praise the Lord.

21 Praised be the Lord out of Sion : who dwelleth at Jerusalem.

---

gods of the heathen, and consequently over those who worshipped them ; from whence followed this comfortable inference, that He was able to protect and to defend his people against every enemy that had evil will at Sion. Shall not we Christians, then, praise the same gracious Lord, who hath chosen us out of the world, who hath given unto us his Gospel, who dwelleth in us by his Spirit, and who, by that Spirit, maketh us more than conquerors over our spiritual adversaries ? Bp. Horne.

[n] 7. He bringeth forth the clouds &c.] They, who in old times paid their devotions to the elements, imagined those elements to be capable of giving or withholding rain at pleasure. Therefore we find the prophet Jeremiah reclaiming that power to Jehovah, as the God who made and governed the world : "Are there any among the vanities of the Gentiles that can cause rain ? or can the heavens give showers ? Art thou not he, O Jehovah our God ? Therefore we will wait upon thee : for thou hast made all these things," Jer. xiv. 22. Among the Greeks and Romans we meet with a Jupiter possessed of the thunder and the lightning, and an Æolus ruling over the winds. The Psalmist teacheth us to restore the celestial artillery to its rightful owner. Jehovah, the God of Israel, and the Creator of the universe, contrived the wonderful machinery of light and air, by which vapours are raised from the earth, compacted into clouds, and distilled in rain. At his commands the winds are suddenly in motion, and as suddenly at rest again ; we hear the sound, but cannot tell whence they come, or whither they go : as if they were taken from secret storehouses of the Almighty, and then laid up till their service was required again. The same idea God Himself is pleased to give us in the book of Job, xxxviii. 22. Bp. Horne.

[o] 8, 9. He smote the first-born of Egypt : &c.] Egypt was the theatre of the grand contest between the God of Israel and the gods of the heathen. The superiority of the former over the latter was shewn in every possible way by the miracles of Moses, which demonstrated all the powers of nature to be under the dominion of Jehovah, and to act at his command ; so that, instead of being able to protect, they were made to torment and destroy their deluded votaries. See more on Psalm lxxviii. 44, &c. The objects of a man's sin frequently become, in the end, the instruments of his punishment. Bp. Horne.

[p] 10—12. He smote divers nations : &c.] The victories gained by Israel over Sihon and Og, in their passage to Canaan, and afterwards over the idolatrous kings of that country, are more proofs of the same point. For Israel therefore conquered, because Jehovah fought for them, and put them in possession of that good land, when the iniquity of its old inhabitants was full, and cried to heaven for vengeance. The enemies we have to encounter in our way to the promised inheritance, will also, if vigorously opposed, fall before us. "The kingdom of heaven suffereth violence, and the violent take it by force." But it is God who fighteth for us, and with us, who giveth us the victory, and putteth us in possession, through our Lord Jesus Christ. Bp. Horne.

[q] 15—18. As for the images of the heathen, &c.] In these verses is set forth the difference between the God of Israel, and the idols of the nations, as also between the worshippers of each ; all tending to confirm the truth of what was asserted, ver. 5, "I know that the Lord is great, and that our Lord is above all gods." As the same words occur, Psalm cxv. 4, &c. the reader is referred thither for the explication of them. Bp. Horne.

[r] 19—21. Praise the Lord, ye house of Israel : &c.] He, who proved Himself superior to the objects of ancient idolatry, is no less superior to every object on which deluded man can place his affections. The Lord gave, and the Lord will take them away. Let "the house of Israel," therefore, and "the sons of Aaron," the church and the ministers thereof, let all who "fear

EVENING PRAYER.

PSALM cxxxvi.[s] Confitemini.

O Give thanks unto the Lord [t], for he is gracious : and his mercy endureth for ever.

good. Bib. Trans.

2 O give thanks unto the God of all gods : for his mercy endureth for ever.

infinitely above all the heathen deities. Dr. Hammond.

3 O thank the Lord of all lords : for his mercy endureth for ever.

and above the greatest potentates on earth. Dr. Hammond.

4 Who only doeth great wonders [u] : for his mercy endureth for ever.

5 Who by his excellent wisdom made the heavens : for his mercy endureth for ever.

made it stand out above the waters, and let the dry ground appear. Dr. Nicholls.

6 Who laid out the earth above the waters : for his mercy endureth for ever.

7 Who hath made great lights : for his mercy endureth for ever;

8 The sun to rule the day : for his mercy endureth for ever;

9 The moon and the stars to govern the night : for his mercy endureth for ever.

10 Who smote Egypt [x] with their first-born : for his mercy endureth for ever;

11 And brought out Israel from among them : for his mercy endureth for ever;

12 With a mighty hand, and stretched out arm : for his mercy endureth for ever.

13 Who divided the Red sea in two parts : for his mercy endureth for ever;

14 And made Israel to go through the midst of it : for his mercy endureth for ever.

15 But as for Pharaoh and his host, he overthrew them in the Red sea : for his mercy endureth for ever.

16 Who led his people through the wilderness : for his mercy endureth for ever.

17 Who smote great kings : for his mercy endureth for ever;

18 Yea, and slew mighty kings : for his mercy endureth for ever.

19 Sehon king of the Amorites : for his mercy endureth for ever;

20 And Og the king of Basan : for his mercy endureth for ever;

21 And gave away their land for an heritage : for his mercy endureth for ever;

22 Even for an heritage unto Israel his servant : for his mercy endureth for ever.

23 Who remembered us when we were in trouble : for his mercy endureth for ever; the Lord," bless and praise his holy name in the temple here below, until they shall be admitted to do it for evermore, in that which is above. Bp. Horne.

---

[s] PSALM cxxxvi.] This is a delightful hymn of praise and thanksgiving to Jehovah, 1—3, God of gods and Lord of lords, for the wonders, 4—9, of creation, 10—27, of providence and grace; which were probably celebrated in due order by one-half of the choir, while the other half, or perhaps the whole in full chorus, took up the burden of each verse, "For his mercy endureth for ever!" a form of acknowledgment, as Bishop Patrick observes, prescribed by David, 1 Chron. xvi. 41, to be used continually in the divine service; a form highly proper for creatures, and sinful creatures, to use, whose great employment it is now, and will be for ever, to magnify the mercy and loving-kindness of their God. Bp. Horne.

[t] 1—3. O give thanks unto the Lord, &c.] We are called upon to praise Jehovah, first, for his own essential attributes; then, for the exertion of those attributes in his works. The attributes here mentioned are those of "goodness" and "power;" the one renders Him willing, the other able, to save; and what can we desire more, but that He should continue to be so? Of this likewise we are assured, by contemplating the unchangeableness of his nature. His disposition altereth not, and his kingdom none can take from Him: "his mercy endureth for ever." Bp. Horne.

[u] 4—9. Who only doeth great wonders: &c.] All the works of God are "wonderful," and speak Him "alone" to have been their author. The established course of the world is, in reality, no less admirable, than are those extraordinary interpositions of Omnipotence, whereby it hath been sometimes interrupted and suspended; though the latter, on account of their novelty, are apt to effect us more than the former doth, which is ever before our eyes, and therefore less regarded by us. How many of those, for whom the wonders of creation, providence, and redemption have been wrought, think none of them worthy their attention; angels admire and adore, where man will not deign to cast an eye, or employ a thought. Bp. Horne.

[x] 10—24. Who smote Egypt &c.] From the works of creation, the Psalmist proceeds to those of providence and grace. He celebrates that mercy which rescued Israel from oppression, brought them out of the house of bondage, divided the sea to make a way for them, supported and conducted them through a waste howling wilderness, crushed the might and power of those who opposed them, and at length settled them in the inheritance promised to their fathers. Eternal mercy hath in Christ Jesus realized all these figures, and accomplished the great redemption, thus foreshadowed of old. The Israel of God hath been rescued from the oppression of Satan, and brought out of the house of spiritual bondage. In the waters of baptism the old man of sin is buried, and we arise triumphant, to sing the praises of God our Saviour, who from thenceforth supports and conducts us in our passage through the world, strengthening us in the day of battle against every enemy that opposeth us, until we enter the heavenly Canaan, promised to the fathers of our faith, and dwell for ever in the possession of peace. When we consider how God has thus "remembered us in our low estate," and thus "redeemed

24 And hath delivered us from our enemies : for his mercy endureth for ever.

25 Who giveth food to all flesh[y] : for his mercy endureth for ever.

26 O give thanks unto the God of heaven : for his mercy endureth for ever.

27 O give thanks unto the Lord of lords : for his mercy endureth for ever.

PSALM cxxxvii.[z] Super flumina.

BY the waters of Babylon[a] we sat down and wept : when we remembered thee, O Sion.

2 As for our harps, we hanged them up[b] : upon the trees that are therein.

3 For they that led us away captive[c] required of us then a song, and melody, in our heaviness : Sing us one of the songs of Sion.

4 How shall we sing the Lord's song : in a strange land?

5 If I forget thee, O Jerusalem[d] : let my right hand forget her cunning. its skill in touching the harp. Bp. Patrick.

6 If I do not remember thee, let my tongue cleave to the roof of my mouth : yea, if I prefer not Jerusalem in my mirth. let me never be able to sing again. Dr. Nicholls. above my chief joy. Bib. Trans.

7 Remember the children of Edom, O Lord[e], in the day of Jerusalem : how they said, Down with it, down with it, even to the ground. that is, of its desolation. Bp. Patrick.

8 O daughter of Babylon[f], wasted with misery : yea, happy shall he be who art to be destroyed. Bib. Trans. or, the destroyer. Dr. Hammond. that delightest in destruction. Bp. Horsley.

---

us from our enemies," can we be weary of repeating, "For his mercy endureth for ever?" Bp. Horne.

[y] 25—27. Who giveth food to all flesh: &c.] The same bounty, which, in the natural world, provideth proper nutriment for every creature, hath also provided for the spirits of all flesh the bread of eternal life. In either sense, Jehovah "openeth his hand, and filleth all things living with plenteousness." Be, therefore, his praise as universal and lasting as his mercy! Bp. Horne.

[z] PSALM cxxxvii.] The Israelites captive in Babylon, 1, 2, describe their woful estate; and, 3, 4, the insults of their masters. 5, 6. They declare their inviolable affection for Jerusalem; 7, pray that God would remember the behaviour of Edom; and, 8, 9, predict the destruction of Babylon. Bp. Horne.

It seems to have been composed soon after the return from the captivity, or when they saw the taking and wasting of Babylon approach. Dr. Hammond.

[a] 1. By the waters of Babylon &c.] What an inexpressible pathos is there in these few words! How do they at once transport us to Babylon, and place before our eyes the mournful situation of the Israelitish captives! Driven from their native country, stripped of every comfort and convenience, in a strange land, among idolaters, wearied and broken-hearted, they sit in silence by those hostile waters. Then the pleasant banks of Jordan present themselves to their imaginations; the towers of Salem rise to view; and the sad remembrance of much-loved Sion causes tears to run down their cheeks: "By the waters of Babylon we sat down, yea, we wept, when we remembered Sion!" Bp. Horne.

[b] 2. As for our harps, we hanged them up: &c.] The additional circumstance, which the divine painter hath here thrown into his piece, is, to the last degree, just and striking. It was not enough to represent the Hebrew captives weeping, on the banks of the Euphrates, at the remembrance of Sion, but, upon looking up, we behold their harps unstrung, and pendent on the willows that grew there. Bp. Horne.

[c] 3, 4. For they that led us away captive &c.] The Babylonians are introduced as insulting over the Israelites, and scoffing at their faith and worship, not without a taeit reflection on their God, who could not protect his favoured people against their enemies. "Now sing us one of your songs of Sion; now let us hear you sound the praises of that God, of whom ye boasted, that He dwelt among you in the temple which we have laid waste, and burnt with fire." Thus the faithful have been, and thus they will be, insulted by infidels in the day of their calamity. And "how," indeed, "can they sing the Lord's song in a strange land?" How can they tune their voices to festive and eucharistick strains, when God, by punishing them for their sins, calleth to mourning and weeping? But then, Israel in Babylon foresaw a day of redemption: and so doth the church in the world; a day when she shall triumph, and her enemies shall lick the dust. No circumstances, therefore, should make us forget her, and the promises concerning her. Bp. Horne.

[d] 5, 6. If I forget thee, O Jerusalem: &c.] The whole nation may be supposed in these words to declare, as one man, that neither the afflictions nor the allurements of Babylon should efface from their minds the remembrance of Jerusalem, or prevent their looking forward to her future glorious restoration. If any temptation should induce them to employ their tongues and their hands in the service of Babel, rather than in that of Sion, they wish to lose the use of the former and the skill of the latter. Bp. Horne.

[e] 7. Remember the children of Edom, O Lord, &c.] The people of God beseech Him to take their cause in hand, and to avenge them on their adversaries, particularly on the Edomites, who, though their brethren according to the flesh, being descended from Esau, the brother of Jacob, yet in the day of Jerusalem's affliction, when the Chaldeans came against it, were aiding and encouraging those pagans to destroy it utterly. Edom is charged with this unnatural behaviour, and threatened for it, by God Himself, in the prophecy of Obadiah, ver. 10, &c. It may be observed, that the Jews afterwards acted the same part towards the Christian church, which the Edomites had acted towards them, encouraging and stirring up the Gentiles to persecute and destroy it from off the face of the earth. And God "remembered" them for the Christians' sakes, as they prayed Him to "remember Edom" for their sakes. Learn we hence, what a crime it is for Christians to assist the common enemy, or call in the common enemy to assist them, against their brethren. Bp. Horne.

[f] 8, 9. O daughter of Babylon, &c.] The subject of these two verses is the same with that of many chapters that rewardeth thee, as thou hast served us.

9 Blessed shall he be that taketh thy children : and throweth them against the stones.

PSALM cxxxviii.[g] Confitebor tibi.

I Will give thanks unto thee[h], O Lord, with my whole heart : even before the gods will I sing praise unto thee.

2 I will worship toward thy holy temple, and praise thy Name, because of thy loving-kindness and truth : for thou hast magnified thy Name, and thy Word, above all things.

3 When I called upon thee, thou heardest me[i] : and enduedst my soul with much strength.

when they hear. Bib. Trans. or, for they shall hear. Dr. Hammond. the Gospel preached. Dr. Hammond.

4 All the kings of the earth shall praise thee, O Lord : for they have heard the words of thy month.

5 Yea, they shall sing in the ways of the Lord : that great is the glory of the Lord.

6 For though the Lord be high[k], yet hath he respect unto the lowly : as for the proud, he beholdeth them afar off.

looketh upon them with scorn and contempt. Poole.

7 Though I walk in the midst of trouble[l], yet shalt thou refresh me : thou shalt stretch forth thy hand upon the furiousness of mine enemies, and thy right hand shall save me.

against the wrath. Bib. Trans.

8 The Lord shall make good his loving-kindness[m] toward me : yea, thy mercy, O Lord, endureth for ever ; despise not then the works of thine own hands.

forsake not. Bib. Trans.

MORNING PRAYER.

PSALM cxxxix.[n] Domine, probasti.

O Lord, thou hast searched me out[o], and known me : thou knowest my down-sitting, and mine in Isaiah and Jeremiah, namely, the vengeance of heaven executed upon Babylon by Cyrus, raised up to be king of the Medes and Persians, united under him for that purpose. The meaning of the words, "happy shall he be," is, He shall go on and prosper, for the Lord of hosts shall go with him, and fight his battles against the enemy and oppressor of his people, empowering him to recompense upon the Chaldeans the works of their hands, and to reward them as they served Israel. The slaughter of the very infants, mentioned in the last verse, is expressly predicted by Isaiah, chap. xiii. 16, "Their children also shall be dashed to pieces before their eyes; their houses shall be spoiled, and their wives ravished." The destruction was to be universal, sparing neither sex nor age. Terrible, but just, are thy judgments, O Lord! Bp. Horne.

---

[g] PSALM cxxxviii.] This Psalm containeth, 1—3, a resolution to praise God for a deliverance vouchsafed; 4, 5, a prophecy that the kings of the earth should glorify Jehovah for his mercy, shewn, 6, in exalting the humble, and abasing the proud; 7, 8, an act of faith and confidence in God. Bp. Horne.

Having been first composed by David, it is said by the Seventy to have been made use of by Haggai and Zechariah at the rebuilding of the temple. Dr. Hammond.

[h] 1, 2. I will give thanks unto thee, &c.] In these verses we evidently hear the voice of one whom God had delivered from a state of great affliction and danger, and who therefore determines to make the due acknowledgments in publick; to give thanks "before the gods," that is, before "kings" and "rulers" in the great congregation; to "worship in the temple," and there to set forth the "loving-kindness" and "truth" of Jehovah, in having accomplished the promised salvation, and thereby "magnified" his holy "name" and his faithful "word" over every thing that opposeth itself against it. The Christian church cannot find stronger and more emphatical terms, in which to express her sense of the greatest of all mercies, the redemption of the world, by the resurrection of Jesus from the dead, and his exaltation "above every name that is named in heaven and earth." Bp. Horne.

[i] 3—5. When I called upon thee, thou heardest me: &c.] From this part of the Psalm it appears to be a prophetical one. The deliverance which it celebrates is of such a nature that, when the glad tidings of it should be published to the world, we are told, it should induce the nations, with their princes, to adore Jehovah, to walk in his ways, and to chant forth his praises. The call of the Gentiles to the Gospel is here foretold in words which cannot be mistaken; and the redemption of the church in Christ her head, is spoken of as the subject of thanksgiving among the kings of the earth. "In the day when I cried thou answeredst me, and strengthenedst me with strength in my soul." For this reason, "All the kings of the earth shall praise thee, O Lord," &c. Bp. Horne.

This is a prophecy of the calling of the Gentiles. Poole.

[k] 6. For though the Lord be high, &c.] Humility is the way to salvation and glory. It is said of our blessed Lord, that "because he humbled himself, therefore God highly exalted him:" and the great potentates of the world must tread in his steps, if they would be exalted with Him. As to the proud, God "knoweth" and He detesteth them; He beholdeth and keepeth them at a "distance." Bp. Horne.

[l] 7. Though I walk in the midst of trouble, &c.] Who doth not "walk in the midst of trouble," while his pilgrimage is prolonged upon the earth? Who hath not "enemies" encompassing him on every side? O how comfortable, then, the reflection that He is with us, who can "revive" the dead; that we are under the protection of an "arm" which is almighty! Bp. Horne.

[m] 8. The Lord shall make good his loving-kindness &c.] In troublous times, and the days of affliction, we must look back on that which God hath already done for us, and from thence draw an argument, that He will "perfect" that which remains, and not leave up-rising; thou understandest my thoughts long before.

before my deeds discover them. Dr. Hammond.

2 Thou art about my path, and about my bed: and spiest out all my ways.

art acquainted with. Bib. Trans.

3 For lo, there is not a word in my tongue: but thou, O Lord, knowest it altogether.

beset. Bib. Trans.

4 Thou hast fashioned me behind and before: and laid thine hand upon me.

5 Such knowledge is too wonderful and excellent for me: I cannot attain unto it.

6 Whither shall I go then from thy Spirit[p]: or whither shall I go then from thy presence?

7 If I climb up into heaven, thou art there: if I go down to hell, thou art there also.

the state of the dead. Dr. Hammond the lowest depth of the earth. Bp. Patrick.

8 If I take the wings of the morning: and remain in the uttermost parts of the sea;

9 Even there also shall thy hand lead me: and thy right hand shall hold me.

10 If I say, Peradventure the darkness shall cover me: then shall my night be turned to day.

11 Yea, the darkness is no darkness with thee, but the night is as clear as the day: the darkness and light to thee are both alike.

thou hast possessed my reins. Bib. Trans.

12 For my reins are thine[q]: thou hast covered me in my mother's womb.

---

his work unfinished: we must remember, that his mercies fail not after a time, but "endure for ever" the same; and when we call to mind that we are "the work of his own hands," how can we think He will "forsake us" unless we utterly and finally forsake Him? Bp. Horne.

[n] Psalm cxxxix.] It seems evident, from the latter part of this noble and instructive Psalm, that the author penned it at a time when he was persecuted and calumniated, as an appeal to the all-seeing Judge between him and his adversaries. He takes the opportunity of expatiating, in the sublimest manner, 1—11, on the omnipresence and omniscience of Him, who, 12—16, formeth man in the womb by his power, and, 17, 18, preserveth him through life by his providence. He then, 19, 20, expresseth his confidence that God, as knowing all things, would deliver him from his enemies; 21, 22, he declareth his zeal and fidelity in the service of his divine Master, by whom, 23, 24, he petitioneth to be proved, purified, and perfected in the way of holiness. Bp. Horne.

The Psalm was composed by David, but it appears not on what particular occasion. Dr. Hammond. The composition, for the purity and justness of religious sentiment, and for the force and beauty of the images, is certainly in the very first and best style. Bp. Horsley.

[o] 1—5. O Lord, thou hast searched me out, &c.] The Psalmist employeth a beautiful variety of expressions to denote his faith in the omnipresence and omniscience of Jehovah, to whom, in the latter part of the Psalm, he appealeth, as the proper judge between him and his implacable enemies. He describeth his God as having that complete knowledge of him and his affairs, which, among men, the most accurate "search" and the strictest scrutiny could not obtain; as being thoroughly "acquainted with all his ways" or proceedings, nay, with his very "thoughts," while yet existing only in embryo, in his own mind; as watching and observing him at all seasons during the actions of the day, and his repose at night; and, in short, as having so "beset" him on all sides, and "laid his hand upon him," that he could not move without his knowledge and consent. When we reflect that "all things are thus naked and open to him with whom we have to do;" that although He dwelleth in the highest heavens, He surveyeth not only the outward acts, but the very hearts and imaginations, of men upon earth; must we not each of us cry out, "Such knowledge is too wonderful for me; it is high, I cannot attain unto it;" I cannot admire it enough, for I cannot conceive of it aright! Bp. Horne.

[p] 6—11. Whither shall I go then from thy Spirit: &c.] We can never sin with security but in a place where the eye of God cannot behold us. And where is that place? Had we a mind to escape his inspection, "whither should we go?" Heaven is the seat of his glory, creation the scene of his providence, and the grave itself will be the theatre of his power; so that our efforts will be equally vain, whether we ascend, or descend, or fly abroad upon the wings of the morning light, which diffuseth itself with such velocity over the globe from east to west. The arm of the Almighty will still at pleasure prevent, and be ready to arrest, the fugitives in their progress. Darkness may, indeed, conceal us and our deeds from the sight of men; but the divine presence, like that of the sun, turns night into day, and makes all things manifest before God. The same consideration, which should restrain us from sin, should also encourage us to work righteousness, and comfort us under all our sorrows; namely, the thought, that we are never out of the sight and protection of our Maker. The piety and the charity which are practised in cottages; the labour and the pain which are patiently endured in the field, and on the bed of sickness; the misery and torment inflicted by persecution in the mines, the galleys, and the dungeons; all are under the inspection of Jehovah, and are noted down by Him against the day of recompense. He sees, and He will reward, all we do, and all we suffer, as becometh Christians. Bp. Horne.

[q] 12, 13. For my reins are thine: &c.] That God seeth in darkness, and that from Him nothing is hidden, his knowledge of, and power over, our most inward parts, do plainly shew. He "formed," and He therefore "possesseth," as his own property, our "reins," and is consequently privy to all those affections and desires which flow from thence. It was He who "covered" us in the womb, or, as it is elsewhere expressed, Job x. 11, who "clothed us with skin and flesh, and fenced us with bones and sinews;" a work so astonishing, that before the Psalmist proceeds in his description of it, he cannot help breaking forth in rapture at the thought; "I will praise thee, for I am fearfully and wonderfully made!" Bp. Horne.

13 I will give thanks unto thee, for I am fearfully and wonderfully made : marvellous are thy works, and that my soul knoweth right well.

My substance was not. Bib. Trans.

14 My bones are not hid from thee[r] : though I be made secretly, and fashioned beneath in the earth.

when I was made in secret, and curiously wrought in the lowest parts of the earth. Bib. Trans.

15 Thine eyes did see my substance, yet being imperfect : and in thy book were all my members written ; embroidered. Dr. Hammond.

16 Which day by day were fashioned : when as yet there was none of them.

rude unformed mass. Dr. Hammond.

17 How dear are thy counsels unto me[s], O God : O how great is the sum of them !

in continuance. Bib. Trans.

18 If I tell them, they are more in number than the sand : when I wake up I am present with thee.

How precious also are thy thoughts. Bib. Trans.

19 Wilt thou not slay the wicked[t], O God : depart from me, ye bloodthirsty men.

designs or intentions. See Vocab.

Surely thou wilt slay. Bib. Trans.

20 For they speak unrighteously against thee : and thine enemies take thy Name in vain.

21 Do not I hate them, O Lord, that hate thee : and am not I grieved with those that rise up against thee?

22 Yea, I hate them right sore : even as though they were mine enemies.

23 Try me, O God[u], and seek the ground of my heart : prove me, and examine my thoughts.

24 Look well if there be any way of wickedness in me : and lead me in the way everlasting.

PSALM cxl.[x] Eripe me, Domine.

DELIVER me, O Lord, from the evil man[y] : and preserve me from the wicked man.

violent. Bib. Trans.

2 Who imagine mischief in their hearts : and stir up strife all the day long.

contrive. See Vocab.

3 They have sharpened their

---

[r] 14—16. My bones are not hid from thee: &c.] By the "lower parts of the earth" is undoubtedly to be understood the "womb," where the fetus is gradually formed and matured for the birth, like plants and flowers under ground. The process is compared to that in a piece of work wrought with a needle, or fashioned in a loom ; which, with all its beautiful variety of colour, and proportion of figure, ariseth by degrees to perfection under the hand of the artist, framed according to a pattern lying before him, from a rude mass of silk, or other materials. Thus, by the wisdom and power of God, and after a plan delineated in his book, is a shapeless mass wrought up into the most curious texture of nerves, veins, arteries, bones, muscles, membranes, and skin, most skilfully interwoven and connected with each other, until it becometh a body, harmoniously diversified with all the limbs and lineaments of a man, not one of which at first appeared, any more than the figures were to be seen in the ball of silk. But then, (which is the chief thing here insisted on by the Psalmist,) whereas the human artificer must have the clearest light whereby to accomplish his task, the divine Work-master seeth in secret, and effecteth all his wonders within the dark and narrow confines of the womb. Bp. Horne.

[s] 17, 18, How dear are thy counsels unto me, &c.] From the wonders of God's forming hand, the Psalmist proceeds to those of his all-directing providence, which afford additional proofs of the divine omniscience and omnipresence. The "thoughts" and counsels of Jehovah concerning David, his appointment to the throne, his troubles and his preservation in the midst of them, were "precious" and delightful subjects of meditation and praise, never to be exhausted of the rich matter they contained. With these in his mind he lay down at night to rest, and "when he awoke" in the morning, his thoughts naturally recurred to the pleasing theme ; he began where he had left off, and found himself, in heart and soul, "still present with God," still ruminating on Him and his works. The mercies of heaven in the redemption of the church, by the sufferings and exaltation of the true David, according to the divine decree concerning Him—how precious are they to believers ! How great is the sum, how far exceeding all human arithmetick to number them ! Let them be to us the constant subjects of contemplation, admiration, and thanksgiving, day and night ; and let death, that last sleep, find us engaged in an employment, which, when we awake and arise from the grave, we shall resume, and prosecute to eternity in the presence of God. Bp. Horne.

[t] 19. Wilt thou not slay the wicked, &c.] As if he had said, Since then thou art every where present, and knowest even the thoughts of men, surely, O God, thou wilt take vengeance upon the ungodly. Travell. David now draws the intended conclusion from the premises, so largely expatiated upon in the former part of the Psalm. Bp. Horne.

[u] 23. Try me, O God, &c.] In the first verse of the Psalm, David declared, that Jehovah had "searched him out, and known him ;" he concludes with a petition, that his proceedings, and even his thoughts, might be still scrutinized by his Maker, in order to their perfect purification from any evil which might be in them, or adhere to them. Should the hottest furnace of adversity be found necessary to purge the dross from the silver, he refuseth not to be dissolved in it, and newformed, so that he might only become a vessel of honour, fitted for the Master's use here below, and vouchsafed a place afterwards in his temple above. "See if there be any wicked way in me, and lead me in the way everlasting !" Bp. Horne.

[x] PSALM cxl.] This Psalm containeth, 1—8, a prayer for deliverance from persecutors and calumniators, their violence and their wiles ; 9—11, a prophecy of their final destruction, and, 12, 13, the salvation of the afflicted righteous. It was composed by David in his troubles, and is applicable to Christ and to the Church, respectively in theirs. Bp. Horne.

[y] 1. Deliver me, O Lord, from the evil man: &c.] "Evil and violent men" exist in all ages to harass and oppress the servants of God ; their thoughts are employed in "imagining mischief" against such, and their tongues like a serpent[z] : adder's poison is under their lips.

4 Keep me, O Lord, from the hands of the ungodly : preserve me from the wicked men, who are purposed to overthrow my goings.

5 The proud have laid a snare for me[a], and spread a net abroad with cords : yea, and set traps in my way.

6 I said unto the Lord, Thou art my God[b] : hear the voice of my prayers, O Lord.

7 O Lord God, thou strength of my health : thou hast covered my head in the day of battle.

salvation. Bib. Trans. See Vocab.

8 Let not the ungodly have his desire, O Lord : let not his mischievous imagination prosper, lest they be too proud.

plot or design. See Vocab. exalt themselves. Bib. Trans.

9 Let the mischief of their own lips[c] fall upon the head of them : that compass me about.

10 Let hot burning coals fall upon them : let them be cast into the fire, and into the pit, that they never rise up again.

11 A man full of words shall not prosper upon the earth : evil shall hunt the wicked person to overthrow him.

An evil speaker. Bib. Trans.

12 Sure I am that the Lord will avenge the poor[d] : and maintain the cause of the helpless.

13 The righteous also shall give thanks unto thy Name : and the just shall continue in thy sight.

dwell in thy presence. Bib. Trans.

PSALM cxli.[e] Domine, clamavi.

LORD, I call upon thee[f], haste thee unto me : and consider my voice when I cry unto thee.

give ear unto. Bib. Trans.

---

hands are ready at all times for the "war." Had we no enemies without, there are those within, who are ever fighting and troubling us. Bp. Horne.

[z] 3. They have sharpened their tongues like a serpent: &c.] Slander and calumny must always precede and accompany persecution, because malice itself cannot excite people against a good man, as such; to do this, he must first be represented as a bad man. What can be said of those who are busied in this manner, but that they are a "generation of vipers," the brood of the old "serpent," that grand accuser and calumniator of the brethren, having under their tongues a bag of "poison," conveying instant death to the reputation on which they fasten? Thus David was hunted as a rebel, Christ was crucified as a blasphemer, and the primitive Christians were tortured as guilty of incest and murder. Bp. Horne.

[a] 5. The proud have laid a snare for me, &c.] David here describeth the subtilty and industry employed by his enemies to effect his destruction, by lying in wait for him, as a skilful fowler doth for his game, so that they thought it impossible he should escape their hands. Such was the conduct of the Jews, with regard to the Son of David. And, O how refined the policy, how unwearied the application, of our spiritual adversaries! Bp. Horne.

[b] 6—8. I said unto the Lord, Thou art my God: &c.] Jehovah, the God of David, is also our God, and He is always ready to hear our supplications. He is our strength, and hath often covered our head with the helmet of salvation, in the day of battle and open war with our spiritual enemies. Nor will He, for the glory of his name, grant their desires, or permit their more secret "devices" and machinations to work the destruction of his people; lest they exalt themselves as having frustrated his counsels for the redemption of his servants. Bp. Horne.

[c] 9—11. Let the mischief of their own lips &c.] The prophet, in these three verses, predicteth those just judgments which heaven will inflict on the slanderers and persecutors of the righteous. Their lips, which uttered mischief against others, shall be the means of covering themselves with confusion, when out of their own mouths they shall be judged. Those tongues, which have contributed to set the world on fire, shall be tormented with the hot burning coals of eternal vengeance: and they, who, with so much eagerness and diligence, have prepared pits for the destruction of their brethren, shall be cast into a deep and bottomless pit, out of which they will not rise up again any more for ever. Evil speakers and false accusers shall gain no lasting establishment, but punishment shall hunt sin through all its doubles, and seize it at last as its legal prey. Let these great truths be firmly rooted in our hearts, and they will keep us steady in the worst of times. Bp. Horne.

[d] 12, 13. Sure I am that the Lord will avenge the poor: &c.] That unjust and oppressive men shall, in the end, suffer proportionably to their deserts, we are assured from this consideration, namely, that the Almighty is the patron of the injured and oppressed. He will plead the cause of the meek and lowly, who are used by the world as their blessed Master was used before them. A day will come, when, delivered out of all their troubles, they shall "give thanks unto thy name," O Lord, and "dwell in thy presence" for evermore. Bp. Horne.

[e] PSALM cxli.] David seems to have composed this Psalm just before his flight to Achish king of Gath; when he had a second time spared Saul's life, but could trust him no longer: see 1 Sam. xxvi, and xxvii. 1, 2. He prayeth earnestly for help, and entreateth to be heard, as when able to attend the service of the tabernacle; 3—8, he beseeches God that He would assist him in his distress, and enable him to bear with patience the persecutions of his enemies, and the reproofs of his friends; 9, 10, he professeth his faith in Jehovah, and redoubleth his prayer to Him; 11, he predicteth the destruction of his enemies, and his own deliverance. Bp. Horne, Travell.

[f] 1, 2. Lord, I call upon thee, &c.] The earnest and repeated supplication for help, in the first of these two verses, sufficiently declares the Psalmist to have been, at the time, in a situation of the utmost distress. And the second verse as plainly sheweth that he was then at a distance from the tabernacle, where all the solemn prayers of the Israelites, together with their daily sacrifices, were offered up. And, therefore, with his face probably directed thither, like Daniel in Babylon, praying towards Jerusalem, he begs that God would accept of all which it was in his power to perform, namely, the devotion of his heart, and the elevation of his hands in

2 Let my prayer be set forth in thy sight as the incense : and let the lifting up of my hands be an evening sacrifice.

3 Set a watch, O Lord[g], before my mouth : and keep the door of my lips.

4 O let not mine heart be inclined to any evil thing : let me not be occupied in ungodly works with the men that work wickedness, lest I eat of such things as please them.

See Prov. iv. 17.

5 Let the righteous rather smite me friendly[h] : and reprove me.

6 But let not their precious balms break my head : yea, I will pray yet against their wickedness.

namely, the calumnies and mischievous attempts of his enemies. Dr Hammond.

7 Let their judges be overthrown[i] in stony places : that they may hear my words, for they are sweet.

8 Our bones lie scattered before the pit[k] : like as when one breaketh and heweth wood upon the earth.

9 But mine eyes look unto thee, O Lord God : in thee is my trust, O cast not out my soul.

10 Keep me from the snare that they have laid for me : and from the traps of the wicked doers.

11 Let the ungodly fall into their own nets[l] together : and let me ever escape them.

EVENING PRAYER.

PSALM cxlii.[m] Voce mea ad Dominum.

I Cried unto the Lord[n] with my voice : yea, even unto the Lord did I make my supplication.

2 I poured out my complaints before him : and shewed him of my trouble.

3 When my spirit was in heaviness[o] thou knewest my path : in the way wherein I walked have they privily laid a snare for me.

overwhelmed within me. Bib. Trans.

---

prayer; that the one might ascend to heaven, fragrant and well pleasing, as the cloud of "incense" mounting from the holy altar; and the other, in conjunction with it, prevail instead of the "evening oblation," for the deliverance of himself and his companions. Bp. Horne.

[g] 3, 4. Set a watch, O Lord, &c.] As if he had said, Grant me, O Lord, thy guidance both for my words and actions: for my words, that, whatever the dealings of my enemies towards me are, I may not be provoked to any speech of rashness or impatience or disloyalty towards Saul; and for my actions, that I may not be tempted to any unlawful practice, that I may not, for any appearance of advantage to myself thereby, give ear to any evil counsel. My resolutions are firm to the contrary: and, how inviting soever the temptations are, I hope I shall never taste of the sweets of them. Dr. Hammond.

[h] 5, 6. Let the righteous rather smite me friendly: &c.] Instead of following the example of my wicked enemies, let me rather enjoy the conversation of good men and true friends, who will rebuke me for any miscarriages and failures they may observe in me. For these fraternal corrections shall not break my head, but shall be like a precious unguent poured upon it, which will rather heal a wound that was there before: and, as for the wicked designs of my adversaries, all the opposition, which I shall make against them, shall be my prayers. Dr. Nicholls.

[i] 7. Let their judges be overthrown &c.] These men, when they shall see the judgments of God executed upon their rulers and commanders, who set them to work, shall then find favour, in the day of affliction, in my words, and shall acknowledge the fidelity and good purpose thereof. Bp. Hall. The sense seems to be, that certain great men whose course of life the Psalmist reproves, when they find themselves involved in the evil consequences of their own folly, will then listen to his advice, and be sensible of the propriety of it. Bp. Horsley.

[k] 8. Our bones lie scattered before the pit: &c.] This probably alludes to the bloody massacre of Ahimelech and the priests that were in Nob, who to the number of eighty-five persons, all of a sacred character, and all innocent, were inhumanly slaughtered together by Doeg the Edomite. Such havock as this might well be compared to the cutting and cleaving of wood, like the fragments of which the bones of the sufferers lay scattered here and there upon the ground, as many of the bodies might be devoured, before pits were prepared, near the field of slaughter, for their interment. Bp. Horne.

[l] 11. Let the ungodly fall into their own nets &c.] From the sequel of the history we find that the hope and assurance here expressed by the Psalmist were not vain. He escaped all the snares that were laid for him on every side; he lived to see the death of Saul, who fell in a battle with the Philistines, and those Philistines subdued by himself and his subjects. So will the devices of all our enemies be in the end turned against themselves: they shall fall and perish, but we shall triumph, with our Redeemer, to eternity. Bp. Horne.

[m] Psalm cxlii.] The title of this Psalm informs us, that it was a prayer of David, when he was in the cave, that is, most probably, the cave of Adullam, whither he fled when in danger both from Saul and from the Philistines, 1 Sam. xxii. 1. It containeth, 1, 2, a supplication; 3—6, an act of confidence in God at that season of danger and destitution; 7, 8, a tender complaint of his sufferings; and, 9, a petition for deliverance. Bp. Horne.

[n] 1. I cried unto the Lord &c.] The state of David in the cave of Adullam, was a state of utter destitution. Persecuted by his own countrymen, dismissed by Achish, and not yet joined by his own relations, or any other attendants, he took refuge in the cave, and was there alone. But in that disconsolate, and seemingly desperate situation, he desponded not. He had a friend in heaven, into whose bosom he "poured forth his complaint," and told Him the sad story of his trouble and distress. When danger besetteth us around, and fear is on every side, let us follow the example of David, and that of a greater than David, who, when Jews and Gentiles conspired against Him, and He was left all alone, in the garden, and on the cross, gave Himself unto prayer. Bp. Horne.

[o] 3. When my spirit was in heaviness &c.] The mean-

4 I looked also upon my right hand[p]: and saw there was no man that would know me.

defend or patronize me. Dr. Hammond.

5 I had no place to flee unto: and no man cared for my soul.

my life. Dr. Hammond.

6 I cried unto thee, O Lord, and said: Thou art my hope, and my portion in the land of the living.

the only inheritance left me in this world. Dr. Hammond.

7 Consider my complaint[q]: for I am brought very low.

Attend unto my cry. Bib. Trans.

8 O deliver me from my persecutors: for they are too strong for me.

9 Bring my soul out of prison, that I may give thanks unto thy Name: which thing if thou wilt grant me, then shall the righteous resort unto my company.

Ash-Wednesday, third Psalm Even. Serv.

PSALM cxliii.[r] Domine, exaudi.

HEAR my prayer, O Lord, and consider my desire: hearken unto me for thy truth and righteousness' sake.

2 And enter not into judgement[s] with thy servant: for in thy sight shall no man living be justified.

3 For the enemy hath persecuted my soul[t]; he hath smitten my life down to the ground: he hath laid me in the darkness, as the men that have been long dead.

4 Therefore is my spirit vexed within me: and my heart within me is desolate.

overwhelmed. Bib. Trans.

5 Yet do I remember the time past[u]; I muse upon all thy works: yea, I exercise myself in the works of thy hands.

the days of old. Bib. Trans. meditate. Bib. Trans. muse on the work. Bib. Trans.

6 I stretch forth my hands unto thee[x]: my soul gaspeth unto thee as a thirsty land.

thirsteth after. Bib. Trans.

7 Hear me, O Lord, and that soon[y], for my spirit waxeth faint:

---

ing is, Though my thoughts are so broken and confused, that I am not able to counsel and direct myself in these straits, yet thou knowest the path wherein I walk, thou art with me, and wilt preserve me from those who watch all my steps, and lie in ambush for me. Such should be at all times the confidence of believers in the wisdom, the power, and the goodness of God, even when human prudence has done its utmost, and is at its wit's end. Bp. Horne.

[p] 4. I looked also upon my right hand: &c.] The advocate used to stand at the right hand of his client: and to this phrase seems to refer. Dr. Hammond.

[q] 7. Consider my complaint: &c.] This prayer of David was heard and answered; he was delivered from his persecutors, enlarged from his distress, exalted to the throne, and joined by all the tribes of Israel. The true David was delivered from his stronger persecutors, brought from the sepulchre, exalted to his heavenly throne, owned and submitted to by the converted nations, who became the Israel and people of God. Nor let us fear, though we be brought very low, and our persecutors, the world, the flesh, and the devil, be at any time too strong for us. God will deliver us from the bondage of sin, and redeem us from the prison of the grave, to join the great assembly before the throne, and there to praise his name for ever. Bp. Horne.

[r] PSALM cxliii.] This is the seventh and the last of the penitential Psalms; and as we are not informed of any particular temporal calamities, which gave occasion to its being composed, we shall explain it according to the general use now made of it in the church for which, indeed, it seems to have been originally and entirely designed. After the example of David, the penitent, 1, maketh his prayer to God for pardon; 2, acknowledgeth the impossibility of any man being saved but by grace; 3, 4, deploreth the lamentable effects of sin; 5, comforteth himself with a retrospect of God's mercies of old; and, 6—12, prayeth, in a variety of expressions, for remission of sin, sanctification, and redemption. Bp. Horne.

[s] 2. And enter not into judgement &c.] In the first verse the suppliant appealed to the promises of God, and his fidelity in performing them. Here he urgeth the fallen, sinful, wretched state of human nature, which hath rendered it absolutely impossible that any son of Adam can be saved, should God "enter into judgment with him," and exact the punishment due to his offences according to the law, instead of pardoning them by an act of grace. Bp. Horne.

[t] 3, 4. For the enemy hath persecuted my soul; &c.] We have an "enemy" who "persecutes" us with unrelenting malice; he "smites our life down to the ground," as often as we yield to temptation, and fall from our state of holiness, to grovel in base and earthly desires; he "makes us to dwell in darkness," when he has thus withdrawn us from the light of heaven, which before illuminated us, while we walked in it; the spiritual life, for a time, is extinguished, and we become, for all the purposes of faith and charity, "like those that have been long dead. Therefore," at the consideration of this our sad estate, when God has enabled us to see and know it, our "spirit is overwhelmed within us," with remorse, anxiety, and despondency: and "our heart within us," deprived of the comforts of conscience, the joys of the Spirit, and the presence of the Beloved, "is desolate," forlorn, miserable. To rescue the sinner from this disconsolate and lost condition, our blessed Saviour was forsaken on the cross; "his spirit was overwhelmed within him, and his heart within him was desolate; the enemy" was suffered to "smite his" precious "life down to the ground," and He "dwelt for three days, in darkness, as the men that have been long dead." Bp. Horne.

[u] 5. Yet do I remember the time past; &c.] When sin has thus laid us low, and, as it were, slain and entombed us, we begin to revive and to arise from the dead, through hope of forgiveness and restoration to the divine favour, by "remembering the days of old, and meditating on all the works" of love and mercy, which Jehovah then wrought towards those who were sinners like ourselves. While we "muse" on such instances of his goodness, the reflection is obvious, Is He not still the same gracious God? Will He not do as much for us upon our repentance, as He hath formerly done for others, upon theirs? "Let us arise, and go to our Father!" Bp. Horne.

[x] 6. I stretch forth my hands unto thee: &c.] Prayer hide not thy face from me, lest I be like unto them that go down into the pit.

timely and speedily. Dr. Hammond.

8 O let me hear thy loving-kindness betimes in the morning, for in thee is my trust: shew thou me the way that I should walk in, for I lift up my soul unto thee.

9 Deliver me, O Lord, from mine enemies: for I flee unto thee to hide me.

10 Teach me to do the thing that pleaseth thee, for thou art my God: let thy loving Spirit lead me forth into the land of righteousness.

Thou shalt. Dr. Hammond.

11 Quicken me, O Lord[z], for thy Name's sake: and for thy righteousness' sake bring my soul out of trouble.

cut off. Bib. Trans.

12 And of thy goodness slay mine enemies: and destroy all them that vex my soul; for I am thy servant.

MORNING PRAYER.

PSALM cxliv.[a] Benedictus Dominus.

BLESSED be the Lord my strength[b]: who teacheth my hands to war, and my fingers to fight;

2 My hope and my fortress, my castle and deliverer, my defender in whom I trust: who subdueth my people that is under me.

3 Lord, what is man[c], that thou hast such respect unto him: or the son of man, that thou so regardest him?

4 Man is like a thing of nought: his time passeth away like a shadow.

5 Bow thy heavens, O Lord[d], and is the voice of faith. The sinner, who views his situation, and believes, on having considered God's works of old, that he shall be delivered out of it, will soon "stretch forth his hands," in supplication to heaven. His soul will gasp and pant after that grace and mercy, which descend from above, like the rain in its season, to bestow refreshment, beauty, and fertility, on a parched and "thirsty land." Bp. Horne.

---

[y] 7. Hear me, O Lord, and that soon, &c.] These words would come with propriety from the mouth of one in danger of temporal death. They are no less proper in the mouth of him who is in danger of death eternal. Rather they receive an additional force and energy when used in this latter sense. Bp. Horne.

[z] 11, 12. Quicken me, O Lord, &c.] The verbs in these two last verses, as Dr. Hammond hath noted, should be rendered in the future; "Thou shalt quicken," &c.; and then the Psalm will end, as usual, with an act of faith and assurance, that all those mercies which have been asked shall be obtained; that God, for the sake of his "name," and his "righteousness," of his glory, and his faithfulness in the performance of his promises, will not fail to be favourable and gracious to his servants, "quickening" them, even when dead in trespasses and sins, and bringing them, by degrees, "out of all their troubles;" going forth with them to the battle against their spiritual "enemies," and enabling them to vanquish the authors of their "affliction" and misery, to mortify the flesh, and to overcome the world; that so they may triumph with their Redeemer, in the day when He shall likewise quicken their mortal bodies, and put all enemies under their feet. Bp. Horne.

[a] Psalm cxliv.] It appears from verse 2, and verse 10, of this Psalm, that it was composed after David's accession to the throne. And it is evident, from verse 5, &c. that he had more enemies still to conquer, such as the Philistines, &c. He, therefore, 1, 2, blesseth Jehovah; and, 3, 4, expresseth his astonishment at the divine goodness shewn to such a creature as man; 5—8, he beseecheth God to perfect his work, and subdue the remaining adversaries by the might of his power. 9, 10, He breaks forth again into a strain of thanksgiving, and, 11—15, again returns to his prayers for the complete redemption and the prosperity of Israel. Bp. Horne.

[b] 1. Blessed be the Lord my strength: &c.] What David here acknowledgeth, with regard to his victories, and that skill or might by which they were obtained, should be likewise acknowledged by all earthly kings and generals, in the day of battle and conquest. Bp. Horne.

[c] 3, 4. Lord, what is man, &c.] After a thanksgiving for the works which Jehovah had wrought, followeth a reflection on the creature "man," for whom they were wrought. Such a reflection introduced in the same manner, and almost in the same words, we meet with in Ps. viii. 4; which passage, being cited by the apostle, Heb. ii. 6, and applied to Christ, affords an argument, as Dr. Hammond hath justly observed, for a like application of the verses now before us, in their more eminent, prophetick, mystical sense. For, certainly, if David, upon the remembrance of what God had done for him, could break forth into this reflection, much more may we do so, for whom the Redeemer hath been manifested in the form of a servant, and in that form hath humbled Himself to the death of the cross, to gain us the victory over principalities and powers, to put all things under our feet, and to make us partakers of his everlasting kingdom. Bp. Horne.

[d] 5. Bow thy heavens, O Lord, &c.] David, having celebrated his victories over some of his enemies, and extolled the mercy and goodness of God, to whom he ascribeth the achievement of them, now proceedeth to request a farther manifestation of the omnipotent arm in his favour against other hostile forces, which still threatened his country, upon his accession to the throne; such as the Philistines, Moabites, Ammonites, &c.; see 2 Sam. v. and viii. These are called, metaphorically, "great waters," threatening to overwhelm and destroy every thing; and, in plainer terms, "strange children," or aliens from the covenant of Jehovah, and the commonwealth of Israel; children who "speak lies, and work wickedness;" or, as Dr. Hammond interpreteth the 8th verse, "whose mouth speaketh, or maketh profession of, vanity, that is, idolatry; and their right hand," that on which they depend for support, the object of their confidence, "is a right hand of come down : touch the mountains, and they shall smoke.

6 Cast forth thy lightning, and tear them : shoot out thine arrows, and consume them.

that is, our enemies. Dr. Hammond.

7 Send down thine hand from above : deliver me, and take me out of the great waters, from the hand of strange children ; speaketh. Bib. Trans.

8 Whose mouth talketh of vanity : and their right hand is a right hand of wickedness.

falsehood. Bib. Trans.

9 I will sing a new song unto thee, O God : and sing praises unto thee upon a ten-stringed lute.

10 Thou hast given victory unto kings : and hast delivered David thy servant from the peril of the sword.

11 Save me, and deliver me[e] from the hand of strange children : whose mouth talketh of vanity, and their right hand is a right hand of iniquity.

12 That our sons may grow up as the young plants : and that our daughters may be as the polished corners of the temple.

13 That our garners may be full and plenteous with all manner of store : that our sheep may bring forth thousands and ten thousands in our streets.

folds or pastures. Dr. Hammond.

14 That our oxen may be strong to labour, that there be no decay : no leading into captivity, and no complaining in our streets.

15 Happy are the people that are in such a case : yea, blessed are the people who have the Lord for their God.

PSALM cxlv.[f] Exaltabo te, Deus.

Whit-Sunday, second Psalm Even. Serv.

I Will magnify thee, O God, my King[g] : and I will praise thy Name for ever and ever.

2 Every day will I give thanks falsehood," and one that will fail all who rely upon it for help. Jehovah, the God of Israel, is therefore entreated once more to appear in the cause of his anointed; to go forth, as of old, to the battle against the enemies of his people, with all the tokens of displeasure and vengeance, dismaying and putting to flight these "armies of aliens." Bp. Horne.

[e] 11—15. Save me, and deliver me &c.] After thanksgiving in the two preceding verses for mercies already vouchsafed to the son of Jesse, prayer is here again made for the continuance of God's favour, and a complete victory over every enemy ; the happy consequences of which, in the establishment of Israel, and the prosperity of Jerusalem, are particularly described. Victory is productive of peace, and peace is the mother of all earthly blessings to communities, and the families that compose them ; whose happiness consists in a numerous and hopeful progeny of sons and daughters ; the former healthy and well nurtured, growing up, like young plants in a kindly soil, until they attain their full strength and stature; the latter fair and virtuous, like so many tall, well-proportioned, highly polished, and richly ornamented columns, gracing the house to which they belong. When to these we have added plenty of corn, and all other provisions, in the granaries and storehouses; flocks and herds, ever thriving and increasing ; freedom from hostile invasions and domestick complaints, so that there be "no breaking in, nor going out," no irruption of aliens into the commonwealth, nor emigration of inhabitants to foreign countries, by captivity, or otherwise; we shall find ourselves possessed of most of the ingredients, which enter into the composition of temporal felicity. Such felicity God promised to his people Israel, and bestowed on them, while they kept his statutes, and observed his laws. The good things of this world may fall to the lot of the righteous, who are distinguished from the wicked by the use which they make of them, when given ; and by their meek resignation of them, when taken away. Whatever be the will of God concerning our having or wanting these outward comforts, we know that we have, as the faithful servants of God in every age had before us, greater and more precious promises, a better and an enduring substance, pleasures that fade not, and riches that fly not away, reserved for us in a heavenly country, and a city which hath foundations. Bp. Horne.

[f] Psalm cxlv.] Hitherto, in this divine book, we have been presented with chequered scenes of danger and deliverance, distress and mercy. The voice of complaint hath sometimes been succeeded by that of thanksgiving; and praise, at other times, hath terminated in prayer. But now, as if the days of mourning in Sion were ended, we hear no more of Messiah, as a man of sorrows; or of the Church, as despised and afflicted, after the same example in the world. Henceforth we seem not to be upon earth, but in heaven, mingling with celestial spirits around the throne, and singing, as in the following Psalm, 1, 2, the praises of our God and King ; extolling, 3, his greatness, 4, his might, 5, his glory, 6, 7, his justice, 8, 9, his mercy ; 10—13, the majesty of his kingdom, and, 14—21, all his adorable perfections and wondrous works. Bishop Patrick mentions a saying of the ancient Hebrews, that "He could not fail to be a child of the world to come, who would say this Psalm three times every day." Bp. Horne.

The general subject of the Psalm makes it suitable to the service of Whit-Sunday, when we celebrate that great blessing, the descent of the Spirit. Travell.

[g] 1, 2. I will magnify thee, O God, my King: &c.] The same divine person, who was, in a peculiar manner, the "God" and "King" of Israel, now standeth in those relations to the Gentile Christian church, and by her is "extolled" in the words of this Psalm, originally composed and used for this purpose among the Israelites. Christ is our "God," who hath saved us according to his covenant and promise; He is our "King," who hath set up the universal and everlasting kingdom, foretold by Daniel and the other prophets; who hath "all power in heaven and earth;" and who "must reign till he hath put all enemies under his feet, and swallowed up death in victory." In the mean time it is the daily employment of us, his redeemed subjects unto thee : and praise thy Name for ever and ever.

3 Great is the Lord[h], and marvellous, worthy to be praised : there is no end of his greatness.

4 One generation shall praise thy works unto another : and declare thy power.

5 As for me, I will be talking of thy worship[i] : thy glory, thy praise, and wondrous works; majesty, honour. See Vocab.

6 So that men shall speak of the might of thy marvellous acts : and I will also tell of thy greatness.

terrible. Bib. Trans.

7 The memorial of thine abundant kindness shall be shewed : and men shall sing of thy righteousness.

8 The Lord is gracious, and merciful : long-suffering, and of great goodness.

9 The Lord is loving unto every man : and his mercy is over all his works.

10 All thy works praise thee, O Lord[k] : and thy saints give thanks unto thee.

11 They shew the glory of thy kingdom : and talk of thy power;

12 That thy power, thy glory, and mightiness of thy kingdom : might be known unto men.

13 Thy kingdom is an everlasting kingdom : and thy dominion endureth throughout all ages.

14 The Lord upholdeth all such as fall[l] : and lifteth up all those that are down.

15 The eyes of all wait upon thee, O Lord[m] : and thou givest them their meat in due season.

16 Thou openest thine hand : and fillest all things living with plenteousness.

satisfiest the desire of every living thing. Bib. Trans.

17 The Lord is righteous in all his ways : and holy in all his works.

all his dispensations and dealings. Dr. Hammond.

18 The Lord is nigh unto all them that call upon him : yea, all such as call upon him faithfully.

in truth. Bib. Trans.

19 He will fulfil the desire of them that fear him : he also will hear their cry, and will help them.

20 The Lord preserveth all them and servants, to chant forth the praises of his saving and glorious "name," with which the church, on earth, and in heaven, will resound, "for ever and ever." Bp. Horne.

---

[h] 3. Great is the Lord, &c.] The "greatness" of Jehovah, whether we consider it as relating to his essence, or his works, is never to be fully comprehended by his saints, whose delight it is to contemplate "the breadth, and length, and depth, and height," Eph. iii. 18, the extent and duration of his being and his kingdom, the profundity of his counsels, and the sublimity of his power and glory. These are the inexhaustible subjects of divine meditation, transmitted from age to age. And as the greatness of God our Saviour hath no bounds, so his praises should have no end, nor should the voice of thanksgiving ever cease in the church. As "one generation" drops it, "another" should take it up, and prolong the delightful strain, till the sun and the moon shall withdraw their light, and the stars fall extinguished from their orbs. Bp. Horne.

[i] 5—7. As for me, I will be talking of thy worship: &c.] Those works of God, which demand to be celebrated by the tongues of men, are here divided into three kinds. First, such as declare his glory, and excite our admiration whenever we behold them. Of this sort are the shining frame of the heavens, and all the bodies which move therein; the earth, with its furniture without, and its contents within; the magnificent and stupendous ocean, which flows around it; the different tribes of animals inhabiting both the one and the other; and, above all, the construction of man, the lord of this lower world. Under the second class of God's works are ranged all those which the Psalmist styleth his "terrible acts," or the exertions of his power against his enemies; such as, the destruction of the old world by water; of Sodom and Gomorrah by fire; of Pharaoh and his host in the Red sea; of the Canaanitish nations by the sword; and the victory gained over sin and death by the resurrection of Christ. In the third rank stand those works which have proceeded from the "goodness" of God, and his "righteousness" in the performance of his promises. And among these we may reckon all the different species of provision, which have been made by Providence for the bodies of men in the world, and by grace for their souls in the church. On any of these subjects meditation cannot be long employed, without breaking forth into wonder, gratitude, and praise. Bp. Horne.

[k] 10—13. All thy works praise thee, O Lord: &c.] As "all the works" of God, in their several ways, make a due return for the mercy vouchsafed unto them, and set forth his glory; so more especially ought this to be done by man, who is the principal party concerned in the fall and redemption. The "saints" are the subjects of Messiah's kingdom; and of that kingdom it is their duty to publish to the world the blessings and the glories, to the end that, when these are made known, the nations may be thereby induced to submit their hearts to so gracious a sceptre, and the dominion of Christ may become as universal in its extent, as it is everlasting in its duration. Bp. Horne.

[l] 14. The Lord upholdeth all such as fall: &c.] After having proclaimed the glory and eternity of the kingdom, the prophet draws a character of the King, who, in the execution of his regal and pastoral office, is ever mindful of the necessities of his subjects. Bp. Horne.

[m] 15. The eyes of all wait upon thee, O Lord: &c.] What a just and beautiful picture is here presented to view! We see the whole animal world assembled before us, with their eyes fixed on the great King and Father of all things, like those of a flock on their shepherd, when he enters the field, in time of dearth, with provender for them. From the same divine person, as the Saviour of men, as the King, Father, and Pastor of the church, do believers, with earnest expectation, wait for the food of eternal life. And neither one nor the will destroy. Bib. Trans.

that love him[n]: but scattereth abroad all the ungodly.

21 My mouth shall speak the praise of the Lord[o]: and let all flesh give thanks unto his holy Name for ever and ever.

PSALM cxlvi.[p] Lauda, anima mea.

PRAISE the Lord, O my soul; while I live will I praise the Lord: yea, as long as I have any being, I will sing praises unto my God.

2 O put not your trust in princes[q], nor in any child of man: for there is no help in them.

3 For when the breath of man goeth forth he shall turn again to his earth: and then all his thoughts perish.

4 Blessed is he that hath the God of Jacob for his help: and whose hope is in the Lord his God;

5 Who made heaven and earth, the sea, and all that therein is: who keepeth his promise for ever; other look and wait in vain. To both He giveth their meat in due season: "He openeth his hand, and satisfieth the desire of every living thing." Bp. Horne.

6 Who helpeth them to right[r] executeth judgement for the oppressed. Bib. Trans.

[n] 20. The Lord preserveth all them that love him: &c.] To protect his subjects and destroy their enemies, is the finishing part of the regal character, as here drawn from its great original in "the King of saints." By his grace He now preserveth us from innumerable dangers and temptations, and gradually destroyeth sin in us, and by his power He will hereafter execute, in the fullest and most extensive sense, this part of his office, "when the wicked shall be consumed with the spirit of his mouth, and destroyed with the brightness of his coming." Then the bodies of the righteous, preserved to a joyful resurrection, shall be reunited to their souls, and both together, perfected and glorified, shall reign and shine with Him for ever. Thus the Lord Jesus Christ "preserveth all that love him," and maketh good his promise, "There shall not an hair of your head perish," Luke xxi. 18. Bp. Horne.

[o] 21. My mouth shall speak the praise of the Lord: &c.] The Psalmist having now given the reasons why he had resolved to "extol his God and King, and to bless his name for ever and ever," concludes with repeating his resolution, and exhorts all the world to follow his example, in time and eternity. Bp. Horne.

[p] PSALM cxlvi.] In this Psalm the church is taught, 1, to prolong the praises of Jehovah, as her God and King; 2—5, to beware of trusting in the powers of the world, and to rely on the world's Creator and Redeemer, whose miracles of love and mercy, wrought for the children of men, 6—9, are enumerated, and the eternity of whose kingdom, 10, is proclaimed. Bp. Horne.

The Psalm was probably composed by David. The seventh verse was most exactly and literally fulfilled in our Lord Christ, when He came to give salvation to us. Bp. Patrick. The Psalm from this verse to the end hath a most visible, remarkable aspect unto the Messiah, the eternal Son of God, in his incarnation; as is acknowledged by the Jews themselves. Dr. Hammond.

[q] 2—5. O put not your trust in princes, &c.] From Him, who is "the Prince of the kings of the earth," Sion looks for deliverance, and by Him her true sons expect to be exalted. He "keepeth truth for ever," He is able and willing to perform his promises, and never disappoints those who rely on Him. The faithful servant of his Master is by that Master infallibly approved and rewarded. Earthly princes, if they have the will, often want the power, even to protect their friends. And should they want neither will nor power to advance them, yet still all depends upon the breath in their nostrils, which, perhaps, at the very critical moment, "goeth forth: they return to their earth; their thoughts," and all the thoughts of those who had hoped to rise by their means, fall into the same grave, and are buried with them for ever. "Cease ye from man, whose breath is in his nostrils; for wherein is he to be accounted of? But trust ye in the Lord for ever; for in the Lord Jehovah is everlasting strength," Isa. ii. 22; xxvi. 4. Bp. Horne.

[r] 6—9. Who helpeth them to right &c.] That the Lord, of whom all these things are spoken, is the Messiah, or Jehovah incarnate, appears, as Dr. Hammond hath justly observed, from what is said of Him in verse 7, "The Lord openeth the eyes of the blind;" the miracle of restoring sight to men born blind being one reserved for the Son of God to work, at his coming in the flesh. "Since the world began," saith the man to whom sight had been thus restored, "was it not heard, that any man opened the eyes of one that was born blind," John ix. 32. This therefore was the first of those tokens given by Jesus to the disciples of John, whereby it might be known, that He was the expected Christ: "Go and tell John the things which ye have heard and seen; the blind receive their sight," &c. But how did this evince Him to be the Messiah? Plainly, because it had been foretold by the prophets, (as in Isaiah xxxv. 5; xxix. 18; xlii. 18; so in this passage of our Psalm, which is exactly similar to those texts.) that Messiah, when He came, should give sight to the blind. Now, if one part of the Psalmist's description belong to Christ, the other members of it must do so likewise, it being evident that the whole is spoken of the same person. He, therefore, is "the God of Jacob, who made heaven and earth, the sea and all that therein is;" and, upon his appearing among men in the body of our flesh, He shewed Himself possessed of power to relieve all the wants, corporal and spiritual, of poor lost mankind. When He rescued men from the bondage of Satan, He "executed judgment for the oppressed:" when He fed thousands by a miracle, or when He preached the word to such as desired to hear and receive it, He "gave food to the hungry;" when, by pardon and grace, He released those who were bound with the chains of their sins, He "loosed the prisoners:" when He poured light into the sightless eye-ball, or illuminated with saving knowledge the understanding of the ignorant, He "opened the eyes of the blind:" when He made the crooked woman straight, or rectified the obliquity of a depraved will, He "raised those that were bowed down:" while He protecteth, and guideth to the city of their eternal habitation, the sons of Adam, who are exiles, pilgrims, and sojourners upon earth, He "preserveth the strangers:" when He became a husband to the church, and a parent to her destitute chil-that suffer wrong: who feedeth the hungry.

7 The Lord looseth men out of prison: the Lord giveth sight to the blind.

8 The Lord helpeth them that are fallen: the Lord careth for the righteous.

9 The Lord careth for the strangers; he defendeth the fatherless and widow: as for the way of the ungodly, he turneth it upside down.

10 The Lord thy God, O Sion, shall be King for evermore: and throughout all generations.

EVENING PRAYER.

PSALM cxlvii.[s] Laudate Dominum.

O Praise the Lord, for it is a good thing to sing praises unto our God: yea, a joyful and pleasant thing it is to be thankful.

2 The Lord doth build up Jerusalem[t]: and gather together the out-casts of Israel.

3 He healeth those that are broken in heart[u]: and giveth medicine to heal their sickness. bindeth up their wounds. Bib. Trans.

4 He telleth the number of the stars[x]: and calleth them all by their names.

5 Great is our Lord, and great is his power: yea, and his wisdom is infinite.

6 The Lord setteth up the meek[y]: and bringeth the ungodly down to the ground.

7 O sing unto the Lord with thanksgiving[z]: sing praises upon the harp unto our God;

8 Who covereth the heaven with clouds, and prepareth rain for the earth: and maketh the grass to grow upon the mountains, and herb for the use of men;

9 Who giveth fodder unto the cattle: and feedeth the young ravens that call upon him.

---

dren, He "relieved the fatherless and widow:" and when He shall come in his glorious majesty, to reward his servants, and to confound their enemies, it will be seen how "he loveth the righteous, and turneth the way of the wicked upside down." Happy the people of such a God! happy the subjects of such a King! Rejoice, and sing, and shout aloud; for lo, "the Lord shall reign for ever, even thy God, O Sion, unto all generations. Praise ye the Lord!" Bp. Horne.

[s] Psalm cxlvii.] It hath been conjectured from ver. 2, that this Psalm was written to celebrate the return of Israel from Babylon, when Jerusalem and the temple were rebuilt. 1—3, The people of God are exhorted to praise Him for the mercies vouchsafed to them; 4—6, for his wisdom, power, and goodness; 7—9, for his providential care, and, 10, 11, the wonderful salvation wrought by his arm; 12—14, for the security, increase, and prosperity of the church; 15—18, for the happy change of her condition, like that produced in nature, when spring succeeds to winter; 19, 20, and for the glorious privilege of the divine word, revealed and committed to her. Bp. Horne.

[t] 2. The Lord doth build up Jerusalem: &c.] If this Psalm were written on occasion of the return from Babylon, and the rebuilding of the earthly city, the ideas are to be transferred, as in other Psalms of the same kind, to a more important restoration from a much worse captivity, and to the building up of the church under the Gospel, when Christ "gathered together in one the children of God that were scattered abroad," John xi. 52; that is, in the words of our Psalm, He "gathered together the outcasts of Israel!" So shall He again at the resurrection "gather together his elect from the four winds," Matt. xxiv. 31, and "build up a Jerusalem, in which they shall serve and praise Him for ever. Bp. Horne.

[u] 3. He healeth those that are broken in heart: &c.] The "broken hearts and wounded spirits" of the Israelites were "healed and made whole," when they returned to their own land, when they beheld Jerusalem rising again in beauteous majesty, and sang the songs of Sion in the courts of the temple. Thus Christ came "to preach deliverance to the captives, and to bind up the broken-hearted," Isa lxi. 1; Luke iv. 18; to speak pardon and peace to the wounded and contrite spirit, and to put a new song of thanksgiving in the mouth of the penitent, which he might sing, when restored to the holy city, and the house of his heavenly Father. The hour is coming, when God shall heal the breaches which death has made in the bodies of his people, and translate them likewise from Babylon to Jerusalem. Bp. Horne.

[x] 4. He telleth the numbers of the stars: &c.] And He who does this cannot be ignorant of the situation and circumstances of his elect. He knoweth each individual, and numbereth all the atoms which go to the composition of his frame. He can call his saints from the depths of earth and sea, "by their names," as when once "he cried with a loud voice, Lazarus, come forth." Bp. Horne.

[y] 6. The Lord setteth up the meek: &c.] To exalt and reward the humble, penitent, believing, and obedient; to depress and punish the proud, impenitent, unbelieving, and disobedient; these are the measures and ends of all the divine dispensations. And as a man ranks himself in one or other of these two divisions, he may expect from heaven storm or sunshine, mercy or judgment. Bp. Horne.

[z] 7—9. O sing unto the Lord with thanksgiving: &c.] The faithful praise God for his goodness to the animal world, both on account of that goodness in itself, and also because they behold therein an emblem and assurance of his mercy to themselves. The watchful care of Providence over all creatures speaks the same language to us, which Jehovah made use of to Joshua, and which the apostle hath applied to Christians: "I will never leave thee, nor forsake thee," Joshua i. 5; Heb. xiii. 5. Our Lord pressed this argument on his disciples; Luke xii. 24, "Consider the ravens;" Matt. vi. 26, "Behold the fowls of the air; for they sow not,

10 He hath no pleasure in the strength of an horse[a]: neither delighteth he in any man's legs.

11 But the Lord's delight is in them that fear him: and put their trust in his mercy.

12 Praise the Lord, O Jerusalem: praise thy God, O Sion.

13 For he hath made fast the bars of thy gates: and hath blessed thy children within thee.

14 He maketh peace in thy borders: and filleth thee with the flour of wheat.

15 He sendeth forth his commandment upon earth[b]: and his word runneth very swiftly.

16 He giveth snow like wool: and scattereth the hoar-frost like ashes.

17 He casteth forth his ice like morsels: who is able to abide his frost?

18 He sendeth out his word, and melteth them: he bloweth with his wind, and the waters flow.

19 He sheweth his word unto Jacob[c]: his statutes and ordinances unto Israel.

20 He hath not dealt so with any nation: neither have the heathen knowledge of his laws.

PSALM cxlviii.[d] Laudate Dominum.

O Praise the Lord of heaven[e]: praise him in the height.

the heights.. Bib. Trans. those high and heavenly places. Poole.

2 Praise him, all ye angels of his: praise him, all his host.

3 Praise him, sun and moon[f]: praise him, all ye stars and light.

4 Praise him, all ye heavens: and ye waters that are above the heavens.

5 Let them praise the Name of the Lord: for he spake the word, and neither do they reap, nor gather into barns; yet your heavenly Father feedeth them. Are ye not much better than they?" Bp. Horne.

---

[a] 10. He hath no pleasure in the strength of an horse: &c.] If, therefore, the inference deduced above be a just one, namely, that God, who takes care of the wild beasts, and the birds of the air, will support and defend his church; then, however weak she may be, and however strong her adversaries may be, yet she may rest secure, as having him on her side, to whom it is equal to save by many, or by few; who giveth not the victory to the pomp and pride of carnal strength, to thousands or ten thousands, but to "those who fear him, and hope in his mercy." The history of Israel is one continual exemplification of this truth; and in our spiritual warfare, "this is the victory which overcometh the world, even our faith," 1 John v. 4. Bp. Horne.

[b] 15. He sendeth forth his commandment upon earth: &c.] The wonders of nature represent to us the miracles of grace; and the change of seasons produceth not greater alterations in the world, than those which take place in the church, when her God hideth from her, or restoreth to her, the light of his countenance, which, like its emblem, the bright ruler in the heavens, at its departure leaves winter behind it; and brings the spring with it at its return. Bp. Horne.

[c] 19. He sheweth his word unto Jacob: &c.] That "word," the effects of which upon the spiritual system are similar to those experienced by nature in the vernal season, that "word was shewed unto Jacob," and became the property of "Israel," while Israel continued to be the church of God. It hath since been made over, with all its types realized and its prophecies accomplished in Jesus, to the church Christian; it is that peculiar blessing, which distinguishes her from the rest of the world, and for which her children are bound, at all times, to "praise the Lord." Bp. Horne.

[d] Psalm cxlviii.] All the creatures in the invisible and visible world are called upon by the Psalmist to unite in a grand chorus of praise and thanksgiving. The various parts are to be performed by, 1, 2, the angelick hosts; 3—6, the material heavens, and the luminaries placed in them; 7, the ocean with its inhabitants; 8, the meteors of the air; 9, 10, the earth, as divided into hills and valleys, with the vegetables that grow out of it, and the animals that move upon or about it; 11, 12, the human race, of every degree, of each sex, and of every age; 13, more especially the Israel, or church of God. Bp. Horne.

It doth not appear who was the author of this hymn, nor upon what occasion it was composed. But the last verse shews it to have been written, when the nation was in a very flourishing condition; probably therefore by David, when God had given him rest from all his enemies. Bp. Patrick.

[e] 1, 2. O praise the Lord of heaven: &c.] When St. John saw in vision the King of glory seated on his throne, he tells us that he heard all the angels which stood around the throne, with the elders, and every creature in heaven, earth, and sea, lifting up their voices, and singing together a hymn of thanksgiving in honour of Him. Such a choir we find here summoned by the inspired Psalmist, and exhorted to join and assist him in praising the same divine Person, whom the elders, in the Revelation, declare "worthy to receive glory, and honour, and power," because He "created all things, and for his pleasure they are and were created," Rev. v. 13; iv. 11. From the heavens and those unutterable heights, where hosts of immortal spirits, admitted to a sight of their King, enjoy unfading pleasures, the song is to begin. And when the strain is thus set by the celestial part of the choir, it is to be taken up, and echoed back, by the creatures of this lower world, animate and inanimate, which have all their several parts assigned them, in the great work of glorifying their Creator. Bp. Horne.

[f] 3—6. Praise him, sun and moon: &c.] The material heavens, through all their various regions, with the luminaries placed in them, and the waters sustained by them, though they have neither speech nor language, and want the tongue of men, yet, by their splendour and magnificence, their motions and their influences, all regulated and exerted according to the ordinance of their Maker, do, in a very intelligible and striking manner, declare the glory of God: they call upon us to translate their actions into our language, and copy their they were made; he commanded, and they were created.

6 He hath made them fast for ever and ever: he hath given them a law which shall not be broken.

namely, the rules and laws of their nature. Dr. Nicholls.

7 Praise the Lord upon earth[g]: ye dragons, and all deeps;

this inferior globe of the earth and sea. Bp. Hall.

8 Fire and hail[h], snow and vapours: wind and storm, fulfilling his word; or whales. Dr. Hammond.

9 Mountains and all hills[i]: fruitful trees and all cedars; creeping things. Bib. Trans.

10 Beasts and all cattle: worms and feathered fowls;

11 Kings of the earth[k] and all people: princes and all judges of the world;

12 Young men and maidens, old men and children, praise the Name of the Lord: for his Name only is excellent, and his praise above heaven and earth.

13 He shall exalt the horn of his people[l]; all his saints shall praise him: even the children of Israel, even the people that serveth him.

PSALM cxlix.[m] Cantate Domino.

O Sing unto the Lord a new song[n]: let the congregations of saints praise him.

2 Let Israel rejoice in him that made him: and let the children of Sion be joyful in their King.

3 Let them praise his Name in the dance: let them sing praises unto him with tabret and harp.

4 For the Lord hath pleasure in his people: and helpeth the meek-hearted.

5 Let the saints be joyful with glory: let them rejoice in their beds.

with triumph. Bp. Patrick.

6 Let the praises of God be in their mouth[o]: and a two-edged sword in their hands; in the security and peace bestowed on them. Bp. Patrick.

---

obedience in our lives; that so we may, both by word and deed, glorify, with them, the Creator and Redeemer of the universe. Bp. Horne.

[g] 7. Praise the Lord upon earth: &c.] From heaven above, the Psalmist descendeth to the deep beneath, which, while it proclaims the power, observes the laws and decrees, of Him, who made it, and poured it abroad. And the same may be said of its enormous inhabitants, which are under the command of Jehovah, and of none but Him. Bp. Horne.

[h] 8. Fire and hail, &c.] These are so many messengers, always ready to go forth, at the command of the Most High, for the purposes of mercy, or judgment. They praise and glorify God after their manner, while they "fulfil his word" upon the earth. Bp. Horne.

[i] 9. Mountains and all hills: &c.] Who shall ever understand and comprehend all the wisdom of God displayed in the vegetable world, from the cedar to the hyssop; in the animal, from the elephant to the pismire, from the eagle to the sparrow? The more we study them, the more we shall find Him glorified in them; and the more, on that account, will He be glorified by us, Bp. Horne.

[k] 11, 12. Kings of the earth &c.] After the whole creation hath been called upon to praise Jehovah; man, for whom the whole was made; man, the last and most perfect work of God; man, that hath been since redeemed by the blood of the Son of God incarnate, is exhorted to join and fill up the universal chorus of heaven and earth, as being connected with both worlds, that which now is, and that which is to come. Persons of every degree, of each sex, and of every age; "kings," whose power God hath made an image of his own, and who are the suns of their respective systems; "judges," and magistrates of all kinds, who derive their power, as the moon and planets do their light, from its original source; "young men and maidens," in the flower of health, strength, and beauty; "old men," who have accomplished their warfare, and are going out of life; "children," who are just come into it, and see every thing new before them: all these have their several reasons for "praising the Lord, whose name is excellent, and his glory above heaven and earth." Bp. Horne.

[l] 13. He shall exalt the horn of his people; &c.] As men, above all other creatures, so, above other men, the "Israel" of God, the "people" that are admitted to draw "near unto him," in his house, by faith and charity, by prayer and participation of the sacraments, are bound to praise Him, who now "exalteth" them from sin to righteousness, and will hereafter exalt them from dust to glory. Bp. Horne.

[m] Psalm cxlix.] This Psalm was a solemn form of thanksgiving for God's people for a signal victory afforded them by Him: and it mystically contains the eminent honour of God to his church, and the conquest of the Christian faith over the heathen potentates. Dr. Hammond.

The children of Sion are excited, 1—3, to rejoice, and sing the praises of their King, on account, 4, of the salvation which He has already wrought for them, and which will hereafter be completed in them, when, 5, they shall enter his rest, and, 6—9, triumph with Him over the persecuting powers of the world, and all the opposers of Christ, on whom will then be executed the judgment written. Bp. Horne.

[n] 1—3. O sing unto the Lord a new song: &c.] Christians are now the people, to whom belong the names and characters of "saints, Israel, and children of Sion." They "sing" this holy "song," as the Psalmist hath enjoined them to do. They sing it "new" in its evangelical sense, as new men, celebrating new victories, new and greater mercies, a spiritual salvation, an eternal redemption. They "rejoice," with hearts, voices, instruments, and every other token of joy, "in him who hath made," or created them again, in righteousness and true holiness; they are "joyful in their King," who hath Himself overcome, and is now leading them on to final conquest and triumph, to honour and immortality. Bp. Horne.

[o] 6—9. Let the praises of God be in their mouth: &c.] Let that sword of the Spirit, even that two-edged sword, which divideth the hearts and reins, the word of truth, be in the mouths and hands of his holy ones:

7 To be avenged of the heathen : and to rebuke the people;

8 To bind their kings in chains : and their nobles with links of iron.

To execute upon them the judgement written. Bib. Trans.

9 That they may be avenged of them, as it is written : Such honour have all his saints.

PSALM cl.[p] Laudate Dominum.

sanctuary. Bib. Trans.

O Praise God in his holiness[q] : praise him in the firmament of his power.

for his mighty acts. Bib. Trans.

2 Praise him in his noble acts[r] : praise him according to his excellent greatness.

3 Praise him in the sound of the trumpet[s] : praise him upon the lute and harp. with. Bib. Trans.

4 Praise him in the cymbals and dances : praise him upon the strings and pipe. with. Bib. Trans.

5 Praise him upon the well-tuned cymbals : praise him upon the loud cymbals.

6 Let every thing that hath breath[t] : praise the Lord.

---

which powerful word of his, in the mouths of his faithful messengers, shall be able to confound and restrain the most furious tyrants of the earth, and bring the great potentates of the world in humble subjection to the Gospel of peace; and, upon their perverseness and obstinate continuance in their sins, to denounce against them those judgments, which are written in the book of God. Behold, then, what honour God hath put upon his saints, to be so powerful agents both in mercy and judgments. Bp. Hall.

Thus hath the faith of Christ been assisted by God, and prospered and propagated wonderfully, till it subdued the greatest princes and empires of the world to the sceptre of Christ. Dr. Hammond. But the scene, of which we have here a prophetical exhibition, will more completely take place after the resurrection, when the saints shall be called to sit on thrones, as assessors, 1 Cor. vi. 2, 3, at the condemnation of their once insulting persecutors, who will be cut asunder, with the "two-edged sword," and bound with indissoluble chains. Thus will be executed upon them the eternal "judgment written" and announced against the enemies of Messiah, in the Scriptures of truth. "This honour will all his saints then have." Bp. Horne.

[p] PSALM cl.] The Psalmist exhorteth men to praise Jehovah, 1, for his holiness, and the firmament of his power, 2, for the wonders of his might, and for his excellent greatness, 3—5, with all kinds of musick. 6, He concludeth his divine book of praises, by calling upon every thing that hath breath, to employ that breath in declaring the glory of Him who gave it. Bp. Horne.

[q] 1. O praise God in his holiness : &c.] If our translation be retained, the meaning is, that God should be praised in the "sanctuary," or temple, below, and likewise in "heaven" above : the former being planned and constructed as a resemblance of the latter. But the context rather, perhaps, requires us to suppose the Psalmist giving the reasons why God should be praised; namely, on account of "his holiness," and of his "power;" which power is more especially displayed in the formation of the "firmament," or "expansion," of the material heavens, and their incessant operations, by means of the light and the air of which they are composed, upon the earth and all things therein. Bp. Horne.

[r] 2. Praise him in his noble acts : &c.] "Noble and mighty" were the "acts" which God wrought for Israel, and "great" was the Holy One in the midst of his ancient people; but far mightier acts did He perform in Christ Jesus, for the redemption of the world; and more "excellent greatness" hath He manifested in the conversion of the nations, the overthrow of paganism, and the erection and preservation of the Christian church. O that her gratitude bore some proportion to his goodness! Bp. Horne.

[s] 3—5. Praise him in the sound of the trumpet : &c.] It is impossible for us to distinguish and describe the several sorts of musical instruments here mentioned, as the Hebrews themselves acknowledge their ignorance in this particular. Thus much is clear, that the people of God are enjoined to use all the various kinds of them, in the performance of their divine services. And why should they not be so used under the Gospel? We read of sacred musick before the Law, in the instance of "Miriam, the prophetess, the sister of Aaron," who, to celebrate the deliverance from Pharaoh and the Egyptians, "took a timbrel in her hand, and the women went out after her, with timbrels and dances," Exod. xv. 20. The custom, therefore, was not introduced by the Law, nor abolished with it. Well-regulated musick, if ever it had the power of calming the passions, if ever it enlivened and exalted the affections of men in the worship of God, (purposes for which it was formerly employed,) doubtless hath still the same power, and can still afford the same aids to devotion. When the beloved disciple was, in spirit, admitted into the celestial choir, he not only heard them "singing" hymns of praise, but he heard likewise "the voice of harpers harping upon their harps," Rev. xiv. 2. And why that, which saints are represented as doing in heaven, should not be done, according to their skill and ability, by saints upon earth; or why instrumental musick should be abolished as a legal ceremony, and vocal musick, which was as much so, should be retained, no good reason can be assigned. Sacred musick, under proper regulations, removes the hindrances of our devotion, cures the distraction of our thoughts, and banishes weariness from our minds. It adds solemnity to the publick service, raises all the devout passions in the soul, and causes our duty to become our delight. "Of the pleasures of heaven," says the eloquent and elegant Bishop Atterbury, "nothing further is revealed to us, than that they consist in the practice of holy musick, and holy love; the joint enjoyment of which, we are told, is to be the happy lot of all pious souls to endless ages." Bp. Horne.

[t] 6. Let every thing that hath breath : &c.] The breath of natural life, which God hath breathed into our nostrils, and the breath of that new and eternal life, which He hath given us through Christ Jesus our Lord, should be returned in hallelujahs. And then the church, composed of many and different members, all actuated, like the pipes of a well-tuned organ, by the same spirit, and conspiring together in perfect harmony, would become one great instrument sounding forth the praises of God most high. Bp. Horne.

FORMS OF PRAYER

TO BE USED AT SEA[a].

¶ The Morning and Evening Service to be used daily at Sea shall be the same which is appointed in the Book of Common Prayer.

¶ These two following Prayers are to be also used in her Majesty's Navy every day.

Job ix. 8. Ps. lxxxix. 9. Job xxvi. 10. OEternal Lord God, who alone spreadest out the heavens, and rulest the raging of the sea; who hast compassed the waters with bounds until day and night come to an end; Be pleased to receive into thy Almighty and most gracious protection the persons of us thy servants, and the Fleet in which we serve. Ps. lxv. 7; xviii. 48. Preserve us from the dangers of the sea, and from the violence of the enemy; that we may be a safeguard unto our most gracious Sovereign Lady Queen VICTORIA, and her Dominions, and a security for such as pass on the seas upon their lawful occasions; that the inhabitants of 1 Tim. ii. 2. our Island may in peace and quietness serve thee our God; and that Deut. xxxiii. 13; xxviii. 8. Ps. cxxviii. 2. Isa. iii. 10. we may return in safety to enjoy the blessings of the land, with the fruits of our labours, and with a Ps. xxx. 4; xcvii 12. Ps. lxxxvi. 9. 12. thankful remembrance of thy mercies to praise and glorify thy holy Name; through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

The Collect.

PREVENT us, O Lord, in all our doings, with thy most gracious favour, and further us with thy continual help; that in all our works begun, continued, and ended in thee, we may glorify thy holy Name, and finally by thy mercy obtain everlasting life; through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

¶ Prayers to be used in Storms at Sea.

OMost powerful and glorious Lord God, at whose command the winds blow, and lift up the waves of the sea, and who stillest the rage thereof; We thy creatures, but miserable sinners, do in this our great distress cry unto thee for help: Save, Lord, or else we perish. We confess, when we have been safe, and seen all things quiet about us, we have forgot thee our God, and refused to hearken to the still voice of thy word, and to obey thy commandments: But now we see, how terrible thou art in all thy works of wonder; the great God to be feared above all: And therefore we adore thy Divine Majesty, acknowledging thy power, and imploring thy goodness. Help, Lord, and save us for thy mercy's sake in Jesus Christ thy Son, our Lord. Amen.

Ps. cxlvii. 15. 18; xciii. 3; lxxxix. 9. Ps. cxli. 1; lxi. 2; xviii. 6; cix. 26; xx 9. Matt. xiv. 30; viii. 25. Deut. vi. 10—12; viii. 10, 11. 14. Ps. l. 22; xliv. 17. Jer. xiii. 10. Zech vii. 11. 1 Kings xix. 12. Ps lxvi. 3; cxlv. 5, 6; xcv. 3; xcvi. 4; lxxvi. 11. Ps. cxlv. 5—7. 10, 11. Ps. cix. 26; cxv. 1.

Or this.

OMost glorious and gracious Lord God, who dwellest in heaven, but beholdest all things below; Look down, we beseech Exod. xv. 11. Ps. lxxxvi. 15. Ps. xxxiii. 13, 14; xi. 4; xiv. 2.

[a] Forms of Prayer to be used at Sea.] These were first added at the last review, but not designed for a complete office, nor comprised in any regular method: but are, all of them, except the two first which are "to be used daily in her Majesty's Navy," occasional forms, to be used as the circumstances of their affairs require; and are so well adapted to their several occasions, that any one who observes them will see their suitableness without any illustration. Wheatly.

thee, and hear us, calling out of the depth of misery, and out of the jaws of this death, which is ready now to swallow us up: Save, Lord, or else we perish. The living, the living, shall praise thee. O send thy word of command to rebuke the raging winds, and the roaring sea; that we, being delivered from this distress, may live to serve thee, and to glorify thy Name all the days of our life. Hear, Lord, and save us, for the infinite merits of our blessed Saviour, thy Son, our Lord Jesus Christ. Amen.

Ps. cxxx. 1. Jonah ii. 2, 3. Ps. cxvi. 3, 4. Matt. viii 25. Isa. xxxviii. 19. Ps. cxlvii. 15. 18. Matt. viii. 25, 26. Ps. lxxxvi. 9. 12. Ps. xxx. 10.

¶ The Prayer to be said before a Fight at Sea against any Enemy.

O Most powerful and glorious Lord God, the Lord of hosts, that rulest and commandest all things; Thou sittest in the throne judging right, and therefore we make our address to thy Divine Majesty in this our necessity, that thou wouldest take the cause into thine own hand, and judge between us and our enemies. Stir up thy strength, O Lord, and come and help us; for thou givest not alway the battle to the strong, but canst save by many or by few. O let not our sins now cry against us for vengeance; but hear us thy poor servants begging mercy, and imploring thy help, and that thou wouldest be a defence unto us against the face of the enemy. Make it appear that thou art our Saviour and mighty Deliverer, through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

Ps. ix. 4. Ps. x. 16. C. P. T. 1 Sam. xxiv. 12. 15. Ps. lxxx. 2. 1 Sam. xvii. 47. Eccles. ix. 11. 1 Sam. xiv. 6. Gen. iv. 10. Ps. lxi. 3; xxi. 12; xxxi. 2. Isa. xlix. 26. Ps. xl. 17; cxliv. 2.

¶ Short Prayers for single persons, that cannot meet to join in Prayer with others, by reason of the Fight or Storm.

General Prayers.

LORD, be merciful to us sinners, and save us for thy mercy's sake.

Thou art the great God that hast made and rulest all things: O deliver us for thy Name's sake.

Thou art the great God, to be feared above all: O save us, that we may praise thee.

Ps. xli. 4; cxv. 1. Prov. xvi. 4. Neh. ix. 6. Acts xvii. 24. 2 Chron. xx. 6. Ps. lxxix. 9. Ps. cxix. 175.

Special Prayers with respect to the Enemy.

THOU, O Lord, art just and powerful: O defend our cause against the face of the enemy.

Ps. xxxv. 1; xliii. 1.

O God, thou art a strong tower of defence to all that flee unto thee: O save us from the violence of the enemy.

Ps. xviii. 2, 3; lxii. 6, 7.

O Lord of hosts, fight for us, that we may glorify thee.

O suffer us not to sink under the weight of our sins, or the violence of the enemy.

O Lord, arise, help us, and deliver us for thy Name's sake.

Short Prayers in respect of a Storm.

THOU, O Lord, that stillest the raging of the sea, hear, hear us, and save us, that we perish not.

O blessed Saviour, that didst save thy disciples ready to perish in a storm, hear us, and save us, we beseech thee.

Matt. viii. 24. Mark iv. 37. Luke viii. 23.

Lord, have mercy upon us.
Christ, have mercy upon us.
Lord, have mercy upon us.
O Lord, hear us.
O Christ, hear us.

God the Father, God the Son, God the Holy Ghost, have mercy upon us, save us now and evermore. Amen.

OUR Father, which art in heaven, Hallowed be thy Name. Thy kingdom come. Thy will be done in earth, As it is in heaven. Give us this day our daily bread. And forgive us our trespasses, As we forgive them that trespass against us. And lead us not into temptation; But deliver us from evil: For thine is the kingdom, The power, and the glory, For ever and ever. Amen.

¶ When there shall be imminent danger, as many as can be spared from necessary service in the Ship shall be called together, and make an humble Confession of their sin to God: In which every one ought seriously to reflect upon those particular sins of which his conscience shall accuse him; saying as followeth,

The Confession.

ALMIGHTY God, Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, Maker of all things, Judge of all men; We acknowledge and bewail our manifold sins and wickedness, Which we, from time to time, most grievously have committed, By thought, word, and deed, against thy Divine Majesty, Provoking most justly thy wrath and indignation against us. We do earnestly repent, And are heartily sorry for these our misdoings; The remembrance of them is grievous unto us; The burden of them is intolerable. Have mercy upon us, Have mercy upon us, most merciful Father; For thy Son our Lord Jesus Christ's sake, Forgive us all that is past; And grant that we may ever hereafter Serve and please thee In newness of life, To the honour and glory of thy Name; Through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

¶ Then shall the Priest, if there be any in the Ship, pronounce this Absolution.

ALMIGHTY God, our heavenly Father, who of his great mercy hath promised forgiveness of sins to all them that with hearty repentance and true faith turn unto him; Have mercy upon you; pardon and deliver you from all your sins; confirm and strengthen you in all goodness, and bring you to everlasting life; through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

Thanksgiving after a Storm.

Jubilate Deo. Psalm lxvi.

O Be joyful in God, all ye lands: sing praises unto the honour of his Name, make his praise to be glorious.

Say unto God, O how wonderful art thou in thy works: through the greatness of thy power shall thine enemies be found liars unto thee.

For all the world shall worship thee: sing of thee, and praise thy Name.

O come hither, and behold the works of God: how wonderful he is in his doing toward the children of men.

He turned the sea into dry land: so that they went through the water on foot; there did we rejoice thereof.

He ruleth with his power for ever; his eyes behold the people: and such as will not believe shall not be able to exalt themselves.

O praise our God, ye people: and make the voice of his praise to be heard;

Who holdeth our soul in life: and suffereth not our feet to slip.

For thou, O God, hast proved us: thou also hast tried us, like as silver is tried.

Thou broughtest us into the snare: and laidest trouble upon our loins.

Thou sufferedst men to ride over our heads: we went through fire and water, and thou broughtest us out into a wealthy place.

I will go into thine house with burnt-offerings: and will pay thee my vows, which I promised with my lips, and spake with my mouth, when I was in trouble.

I will offer unto thee fat burnt-sacrifices, with the incense of rams: I will offer bullocks and goats.

O come hither, and hearken, all ye that fear God: and I will tell you what he hath done for my soul.

I called unto him with my mouth: and gave him praises with my tongue.

If I incline unto wickedness with mine heart: the Lord will not hear me.

But God hath heard me: and considered the voice of my prayer.

Praised be God who hath not cast out my prayer: nor turned his mercy from me.

Glory be to the Father, and to the Son: and to the Holy Ghost;

As it was in the beginning, is now, and ever shall be: world without end. Amen.

Confitemini Domino. Psalm cvii.

O Give thanks unto the Lord, for he is gracious: and his mercy endureth for ever.

Let them give thanks whom the Lord hath redeemed: and delivered from the hand of the enemy;

And gathered them out of the lands, from the east, and from the west: from the north, and from the south.

They went astray in the wilderness out of the way: and found no city to dwell in;

Hungry and thirsty: their soul fainted in them.

So they cried unto the Lord in their trouble: and he delivered them from their distress.

He led them forth by the right way: that they might go to the city where they dwelt.

O that men would therefore praise the Lord for his goodness : and declare the wonders that he doeth for the children of men !

For he satisfieth the empty soul : and filleth the hungry soul with goodness.

Such as sit in darkness, and in the shadow of death : being fast bound in misery and iron ;

Because they rebelled against the words of the Lord : and lightly regarded the counsel of the Most Highest ;

He also brought down their heart through heaviness : they fell down, and there was none to help them.

So when they cried unto the Lord in their trouble : he delivered them out of their distress.

For he brought them out of darkness, and out of the shadow of death : and brake their bonds in sunder.

O that men would therefore praise the Lord for his goodness : and declare the wonders that he doeth for the children of men !

For he hath broken the gates of brass : and smitten the bars of iron in sunder.

Foolish men are plagued for their offence : and because of their wickedness.

Their soul abhorred all manner of meat : and they were even hard at death's door.

So when they cried unto the Lord in their trouble : he delivered them out of their distress.

He sent his word, and healed them : and they were saved from their destruction.

O that men would therefore praise the Lord for his goodness : and declare the wonders that he doeth for the children of men !

That they would offer unto him the sacrifice of thanksgiving : and tell out his works with gladness !

They that go down to the sea in ships : and occupy their business in great waters ;

These men see the works of the Lord : and his wonders in the deep.

For at his word the stormy wind ariseth : which lifteth up the waves thereof.

They are carried up to the heaven, and down again to the deep : their soul melteth away because of the trouble.

They reel to and fro, and stagger like a drunken man : and are at their wit's end.

So when they cry unto the Lord in their trouble : he delivereth them out of their distress.

For he maketh the storm to cease : so that the waves thereof are still.

Then are they glad, because they are at rest : and so he bringeth them unto the haven where they would be.

O that men would therefore praise the Lord for his goodness : and declare the wonders that he doeth for the children of men !

That they would exalt him also in the congregation of the people : and praise him in the seat of the elders !

Who turneth the floods into a wilderness : and drieth up the water-springs.

A fruitful land maketh he barren : for the wickedness of them that dwell therein.

Again, he maketh the wilderness a standing water : and water-springs of a dry ground.

And there he setteth the hungry : that they may build them a city to dwell in ;

That they may sow their land, and plant vineyards : to yield them fruits of increase.

He blesseth them, so that they multiply exceedingly : and suffereth not their cattle to decrease.

And again, when they are minished, and brought low : through oppression, through any plague, or trouble ;

Though he suffer them to be evil intreated through tyrants : and let them wander out of the way in the wilderness ;

Yet helpeth he the poor out of misery : and maketh him households like a flock of sheep.

The righteous will consider this, and rejoice : and the mouth of all wickedness shall be stopped.

Whoso is wise will ponder these things : and they shall understand the loving-kindness of the Lord.

Glory be to the Father, and to the Son: and to the Holy Ghost;

As it was in the beginning, is now, and ever shall be: world without end. Amen.

Collects of Thanksgiving.

O Most blessed and glorious Lord God, who art of infinite goodness and mercy; We thy poor creatures, whom thou hast made and preserved, holding our souls in life, and now rescuing us out of the jaws of death, humbly present ourselves again before thy Divine Majesty, to offer a sacrifice of praise and thanksgiving, for that thou heardest us when we called in our trouble, and didst not cast out our prayer, which we made before thee in our great distress: Even when we gave all for lost, our ship, our goods, our lives, then didst thou mercifully look upon us, and wonderfully command a deliverance; for which we, now being in safety, do give all praise and glory to thy holy Name; through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

Ps. xxiii. 6.
Ps. lxvi. 9; xxxv. 17.
Ps. cvii. 22; cxvi. 17.
Ps. cvii. 6. 13. 19. 28.
Ps. xliv. 4.

Or this,

O Most mighty and gracious good God, thy mercy is over all thy works, but in special manner hath been extended toward us, whom thou hast so powerfully and wonderfully defended. Thou hast shewed us terrible things, and wonders in the deep, that we might see how powerful and gracious a God thou art; how able and ready to help them that trust in thee. Thou hast shewed us how both winds and seas obey thy command; that we may learn, even from them, hereafter to obey thy voice, and to do thy will. We therefore bless and glorify thy Name, for this thy mercy in saving us, when we were ready to perish. And, we beseech thee, make us as truly sensible now of thy mercy, as we were then of the danger: and give us hearts always ready to express our thankfulness, not only by words, but also by our lives, in being more obedient to thy holy commandments. Continue, we beseech thee, this thy goodness to us; that we, whom thou hast saved, may serve thee in holiness and righteousness all the days of our life; through Jesus Christ our Lord and Saviour. Amen.

Ps. cxlv. 9.
Ps. cxlv. 6; cvii. 24.
Ps. cvii. 31.
Ps. xxxi. 19.
Ps. cvii. 25; cxlvii. 18; cxlviii. 8.

An Hymn of Praise and Thanksgiving after a dangerous Tempest.

O Come, let us give thanks unto the Lord, for he is gracious: and his mercy endureth for ever. Ps. cvii. 1.

Great is the Lord, and greatly to be praised; let the redeemed of the Lord say so: whom he hath delivered from the merciless rage of the sea. Ps. cvii. 2.

The Lord is gracious and full of compassion: slow to anger, and of great mercy. Joel ii. 13.

He hath not dealt with us according to our sins: neither rewarded us according to our iniquities. Ps. ciii. 10.

But as the heaven is high above the earth: so great hath been his mercy towards us. Ps. ciii. 11.

We found trouble and heaviness: we were even at death's door. Ps. cxvi. 3. Ps. cvii. 18.

The waters of the sea had well-nigh covered us: the proud waters had well-nigh gone over our soul. Ps. cxxiv. 4.

The sea roared: and the stormy wind lifted up the waves thereof. Ps. cvii. 25.

We were carried up as it were to heaven, and then down again into the deep: our soul melted within us, because of trouble; Ps. cvii. 26.

Then cried we unto thee, O Lord: and thou didst deliver us out of our distress. Ps. cvii. 28.

Blessed be thy Name, who didst not despise the prayer of thy servants: but didst hear our cry, and hast saved us. Ps. cii. 17. Ps. xxxiv. 6.

Thou didst send forth thy commandment: and the windy storm ceased, and was turned into a calm. Ps. cxlvii. 15. Ps. cvii. 29.

O let us therefore praise the Lord for his goodness: and declare the wonders that he hath done, and still doeth for the children of men. Ps. cvii. 8.

Praised be the Lord daily: even the Lord that helpeth us, and poureth his benefits upon us. Ps. lxviii. 19.

He is our God, even the God of whom cometh salvation: God is the Lord by whom we have escaped death. Ps. xviii. 29.

Thou, Lord, hast made us glad through the operation of thy hands : and we will triumph in thy praise. Ps. xcii. 4.

Blessed be the Lord God : even the Lord God, who only doeth wondrous things ;

And blessed be the Name of his Majesty for ever : and let every one of us say, Amen, Amen. Ps. lxxii. 18, 19.

Glory be to the Father, and to the Son : and to the Holy Ghost;

As it was in the beginning, is now, and ever shall be : world without end. Amen.

2 Cor. xiii.

THE grace of our Lord Jesus Christ, and the love of God, and the fellowship of the Holy Ghost, be with us all evermore. Amen.

After Victory or Deliverance from an Enemy.

A Psalm or Hymn of Praise and Thanksgiving after Victory.

IF the Lord had not been on our side, now may we say : if the Lord himself had not been on our side, when men rose up against us; Ps. cxxiv. 1, 2. 4, 5.

They had swallowed us up quick : when they were so wrathfully displeased at us.

Yea, the waters had drowned us, and the stream had gone over our soul : the deep waters of the proud had gone over our soul.

But praised be the Lord : who hath not given us over as a prey unto them.

The Lord hath wrought : a mighty salvation for us. 1 Sam. xi. 13. Luke i. 69.

We gat not this by our own sword, neither was it our own arm that saved us : but thy right hand, and thine arm, and the light of thy countenance, because thou hadst a favour unto us. Ps. xliv. 3.

The Lord hath appeared for us : the Lord hath covered our heads, and made us to stand in the day of battle. Ps. cxl. 7.

The Lord hath appeared for us : the Lord hath overthrown our enemies, and dashed in pieces those that rose up against us. Ps. ii. 9; iii. 1.

Therefore not unto us, O Lord, not unto us : but unto thy Name be given the glory. Ps. cxv. 1.

The Lord hath done great things for us : the Lord hath done great things for us, for which we rejoice. Ps. cxxvi. 3.

Our help standeth in the Name of the Lord : who hath made heaven and earth. Ps. cxxi. 2.

Blessed be the Name of the Lord : from this time forth for evermore. Ps. cxiii. 1.

Glory be to the Father, and to the Son : and to the Holy Ghost;

As it was in the beginning, is now, and ever shall be : world without end. Amen.

¶ After this Hymn may be sung the Te Deum.

¶ Then this Collect.

O Almighty God, the Sovereign Commander of all the world, in whose hand is power and might which none is able to withstand; We bless and magnify thy great and glorious Name for this happy Victory, the whole glory whereof we do ascribe to thee, who art the only giver of Victory. And, we beseech thee, give us grace to improve this great mercy to thy glory, the advancement of thy Gospel, the honour of our Sovereign, and, as much as in us lieth, to the good of all mankind. And, we beseech thee, give us such a sense of this great mercy, as may engage us to a true thankfulness, such as may appear in our lives by an humble, holy, and obedient walking before thee all our days, through Jesus Christ our Lord; to whom with thee and the Holy Spirit, as for all thy mercies, so in particular for this Victory and Deliverance, be all glory and honour, world without end. Amen. 2 Chron. xx. 6. Ps. lxix. 30; cxv. 1. Ps. lxii. 1, 2; l. 15. 1 Chron. xxix. 11. 2 Kings v. 1. Marg. Trans. Gal. vi. 10. Ps. xviii. 50; cxliv. 10.

2 Cor. xiii.

THE grace of our Lord Jesus Christ, and the love of God, and the fellowship of the Holy Ghost, be with us all evermore. Amen.

At the Burial of their Dead at Sea.

¶ The office in the Common Prayer Book may be used; only instead of these words [We therefore commit his body to the ground, earth to earth, &c.] say,

WE therefore commit his body to the deep, to be turned

Dan. x. 8. Jonah ii. 6. 1 Cor. xv. 42. Rev. xx. 13.

into corruption, looking for the resurrection of the body, (when the Sea shall give up her dead,) and the life of the world to come, through our Lord Jesus Christ; who at his coming shall change our vile body, that it may be like his glorious body, according to the mighty working, whereby he is able to subdue all things to himself.

THE FORM AND MANNER

OF

MAKING, ORDAINING, AND CONSECRATING

OF

BISHOPS, PRIESTS, AND DEACONS

ACCORDING TO THE ORDER OF THE UNITED CHURCH OF ENGLAND AND IRELAND.

THE PREFACE.

IT is evident unto all men diligently reading the holy Scripture and ancient Authors, that from the Apostles' time there have been these Orders of Ministers in Christ's Church[a]; Bishops[b], Priests, and Deacons[c].

[a] —there have been these Orders of Ministers in Christ's Church;] Being about to prescribe the several forms for ordaining deacons, priests, and bishops, we studiously avoid the odious charge of innovation, and therefore appeal to Scripture and antiquity as our evidence, that these three orders have been in the church from the apostles' time: whereby we make a distinction, between these three truly sacred orders, which were instituted by Christ and his apostles, and are alone retained by our reformers, as necessary for all ages; and those inferior orders of subdeacons, acolyths, exorcists, readers, &c., invented by men in later times, and therefore laid aside in this reformed church. Dean Comber.

It became the received doctrine of the church of Rome at the time of the Reformation, that there were seven distinct orders of the ministry, all of them laying claim to apostolical institution. But still this doctrine of the seven orders was only a theological opinion, and not settled as a point of faith, until the Council of Trent, fifteen years after the composing of this rubrick: when, this being established for matter of faith, the opposers of it were anathematized. But the five sorts of ecclesiastical officers, enumerated by the Council, namely, subdeacons, acolyths, exorcists, readers, and ostiaries, are not distinct orders of the clergy; and, as they are not of very great antiquity, so, when they came to be used in the church, they were esteemed only as officers belonging to the church, erected for convenience sake, as our clerks, sextons, and pew-keepers are; and not as initiatory orders, and those of divine institution, which every clergyman, who would be advanced to any of the higher orders, must first pass through. Dr. Nicholls.

Of these five orders in the church of Rome, 1, the subdeacon is he, who delivereth the vessels to the deacon, and assisteth him in the administration of the sacrament of the Lord's Supper. 2. The acolyth is he, who bears the lighted candle, whilst the Gospel is in reading, or whilst the priest consecrateth the host. 3. The exorcist is he, who abjureth evil spirits in the name of Almighty God, to go out of persons troubled therewith. 4. The reader is he, who readeth in the church of God, being also ordained to this, that he may preach the word of God to the people. 5. The ostiary is he, who keepeth the doors of the church, and tolleth the bell. These, though some of them ancient, were human institutions, and such as come not under the limitation, which immediately precedes, "from the apostles' times:" for which reason, and because they were evidently instituted for convenience only, and were not immediately concerned in the sacred offices of the church, they were laid aside by our first Reformers. Dr. Burn.

As to these three orders our preface modestly dates their use from the apostles' time, for it might have been carried much higher: since it is also evident that in the Jewish economy, the first church settled by a written divine law, about three thousand years ago, three orders were appointed, the high priest, the priests, and Levites, answering to our bishops, presbyters, and deacons, and being the very pattern to the apostles in the institutions of those three Christian orders, as divers of the fathers have observed. Dean Comber.

[b] Bishops,] Our Church here doth assert, that the order of bishops was "from the apostles' time:" referring us to those texts of Scripture, occurring in the history of the Acts, and the apostolical Epistles, which are usually urged for the proof of the episcopal order. And of a great many which might be alleged these are some. In the short history, which we have of the apostles, we find them exercising all the peculiar offices of the episcopal order. They ordain church ministers: "And when they had prayed they laid their hands on them," Acts vi. 6. They confirm baptized persons: "Who, when they were come down, prayed for them that they might receive the Holy Ghost," viii. 15. They excommunicate notorious offenders, as the incestuous person, 1 Cor. v. 5. The like episcopal powers we find in Scripture committed to others, whom from the tenour of Scripture, and the testimony of antiquity, we judge to have been advanced to that order. Not only a power of ordination, but a particular charge in conferring it, is given to Timothy; namely, that he "lay hands suddenly on no man," 1 Tim. v. 22. That he caution the presbyters under him "that they teach no other doctrine," i. 3. Rules are given him how he should animadvert on an offending presbyter; "Against an elder receive not an accusation, but before two or three witnesses," v. 19: and to what conduct he should oblige the deacons, iii. 8. The same episcopal powers are committed to Titus, to "ordain elders in every city," Tit. i. 5: and to excommunicate hereticks after the first or second admonition, iii. 10. Now these are very good proofs to all reasonable men, that diligently read the holy Scriptures, that the order of bishops was inclusively "from," that is, in "the apostles' time."

But to all diligent and impartial readers of ancient writers the case is yet more out of doubt. The earliest ecclesiastical writer extant is Clemens Romanus, who wrote his first epistle to the Corinthians within forty years after our Saviour's ascension. And he speaks, not only of presbyters and deacons, but of bishops likewise, as an order in use in his time: clearly distinguishing also between the two orders of bishops and presbyters. In the epistles of Ignatius, who was Bishop of Antioch seventy years after Christ, in which

Which Offices were evermore had in such reverend Estimation[d], that no man might presume to execute any of them[e], except he were first called, he continued forty years, being martyred in the year of our Lord 108, just seven years after St. John's death, all the three orders are clearly and exactly distinguished. Of lower authorities the instances are innumerable. Clement of Alexandria wrote in the latter end of the second century; and he mentions the three orders as the established use of the church in his time. Origen, who lived at the same time, uses corresponding language. Tertullian likewise mentions these three orders, as established ranks of the hierarchy. And so infinite other authors make these three orders perfectly distinct. Dr. Nicholls.

Of the distinction among the governours of the church there was never in ancient times made any question; nor did it seem disputable in the church, except to one malecontent, Arrius, who did indeed get a name in story, but never made much noise, or obtained any vogue in the world. Very few followers he found in his heterodoxy. No great body even of hereticks could find cause to dissent from the church in this point. But all Arians, Macedonians, Novatians, Donatists, &c., maintained the distinction of orders among themselves, and acknowledged the duty of the inferior clergy to their bishops. And no wonder: seeing it standeth upon so very firm and clear grounds; upon the reason of the case, upon the testimony of holy Scripture, upon general tradition, and unquestionable monuments of antiquity, upon the common judgment and practice of the greatest saints, persons most renowned for wisdom and piety in the church.

Reason doth plainly require such subordinations. This all experience attesteth: this even the chief impugners of episcopal presidency do by their practice confess: who for prevention of disorders have been fain of their own heads to devise ecclesiastical subordination of classes, provinces, and nations; and to appoint moderators, or temporary bishops, in their assemblies. So that reason hath forced the dissenters from the Church to imitate it.

The holy Scripture doth also plainly enough countenance this distinction. For therein we have represented one "Angel" presiding over principal churches, which contained several presbyters, Rev. ii. 1, &c.: therein we find episcopal ordination and jurisdiction exercised: we have one bishop constituting presbyters in divers cities of his diocese, Tit. i. 5; 1 Tim. v. 1, 17, 19, 20, 22, &c.; ordering all things therein concerning ecclesiastical discipline; judging presbyters; rebuking "with all authority," or imperiousness, as it were, Tit. ii. 15; and reconciling offenders, secluding hereticks and scandalous persons.

In the Jewish church there were an high priest, chief priest, a sanhedrim, or senate, or synod.

The government of congregations among God's ancient people, which it is probable was the pattern that the apostles, no affecters of needless innovation, did follow in establishing ecclesiastical discipline among Christians doth hereto agree: for in their synagogues, answering to our Christian churches, they had, as their elders and doctors, so over them an ἀρχισυνάγωγος, the head of the eldership, and president of the synagogue.

The primitive general use of Christians most effectually doth back the Scripture, and interpret it in favour of this distinction, scarce less than demonstrating it constituted by the apostles. For how otherwise is it imaginable, that all the churches founded by the apostles in several most distant and disjointed places, at Jerusalem, at Antioch, at Alexandria, at Ephesus, at Corinth, at Rome, should presently conspire in acknowledgment and use of it? How could it without apparent confederacy be formed, how could it creep in without notable clatter, how could it be admitted without considerable opposition, if it were not in the foundation of those churches laid by the apostles? How is it likely, that in those times of grievous persecution, falling chiefly upon the bishops, when to be eminent among Christians yielded slender reward, and exposed to extreme hazard, when to seek pre-eminence was in effect to court danger and trouble, torture and ruin, an ambition of irregularly advancing themselves above their brethren should so generally prevail among the ablest and best Christians? How could those famous martyrs for the Christian truth be, some of them so unconscionable as to affect, others so irresolute as to yield to, such injurious encroachments? And how could all the holy fathers, persons of so renowned, so approved wisdom and integrity, be so blind as not to discern such a corruption, or so bad as to abet it? How indeed could all God's church be so weak, as to consent in judgment, so base as to comply in practice with it? In fine, how can we conceive, that all the best monuments of antiquity down from the beginning, the Acts, the Epistles, the Histories, the Commentaries, the writings of all sorts, coming from the blessed martyrs and most holy confessors of our faith, should conspire to abuse us; the which do speak nothing but bishops; long catalogues and rows of bishops succeeding in this and that city; bishops contesting for the faith against Pagan idolaters, and heretical corrupters of Christian doctrine; bishops here teaching, and planting our religion by their labours, there suffering, and watering it with their blood? Dr. Isaac Barrow.

It was so well known that a bishop was of a superior order to a presbyter, that it was deemed sacrilege by the fourth general Council to thrust a bishop down from the first to the second degree. So that however persecution and dire necessity may perhaps excuse some late churches, for being forced to mix the two first orders, and to have only priests and deacons; yet we, who have a prescription of above 1600 (1700) years for us even from the apostles' time, have the right of our side, and must never depart therefrom. Dean Comber.

[c] — Bishops, Priests, and Deacons.] The word "bishop" is from the Saxon "biscop," and that from the Greek ἐπίσκοπος, an overseer or superintendent; so called from that watchfulness, care, charge, and faithfulness, which by his place and dignity he hath and oweth to the church. The word "priest" is nearly the same in all Christian languages: the Saxon is "preost," the German "prister," the Belgick "priester," the Swedish "prest," the Gallick "prestre," the Italian "prete," the Spanish "preote;" all evidently enough taken from the Greek πρεσβύτερος. In the like manner the word "deacon" with little variation runneth through all the same languages, deduced from the Greek διάκονος. Dr. Burn.

[d] Which Offices were evermore had in such reverend Estimation,] A reverend regard to the several offices of those, who minister about holy things, has been thought fit to be enjoined by all nations and religions. And, when Christianity has commanded the same to the ministers of that institution, it has not so much laid down a new precept, as enforced a natural law, which all mankind before were agreed to be reasonable. For hardly any nation has been so barbarous, or any reli-tried, examined, and known to have such qualities as are requisite for the same; and also by publick Prayer, with Imposition of Hands, were approved and admitted thereunto by lawful Authority[f]. And therefore, gion so foolish, but, if they have thought fit to establish a religion, they have always kept up the credit of the ministers of it, by respectful honours allowed them, and penalties denounced against those who affront or injure them, or who boldly intrude upon the exercise of their office without a lawful and regular admission into it. Dr. Nicholls.

The honour and dignity of the priesthood is only mentioned here as a reason, why so solemn an admission to it and so extraordinary qualifications in the candidates are required. Yet it deserves our particular consideration, because we live in an age wherein not only religion, with all holy times, places, and things, but with them the persons also that are consecrated to God's service, and have been honoured in all nations and ages of the world, are despised by separatists and enthusiasts, as well as by the atheistical and profane. Dean Comber.

[e] — that no man might presume to execute any of them, &c.] Since the dignity is so great, and the office so honourable, it is fit the entrance should be well guarded, lest they should be profaned by arbitrary or promiscuous intrusions: St. Paul hath told us, "that no man taketh this honour to himself, except he be called of God as was Aaron," Heb. v. 4. He, being the great Master of his house, the church, must appoint his own officers. It was the sin of Jeroboam, and the ruin of his house, to admit every one that would, to be one of his priests, 1 Kings xiii. 33, 34. And the false prophets are called in the Hebrew, Ezek. xiii. 2, the self-made prophets: a name very well agreeing to the teachers of our modern sectaries, who without any proof of a divine call, or any previous trial and examination, presume to execute some of these offices, to the danger of their own and their hearers' souls. But in our, and all regular churches, there is, and ought to be, a solemn scrutiny into the qualifications of the candidates before admission.

Such an inquiry was made before the admitting of a Jewish priest, Lev. xxi. 17; yea, the heathens were very nice in receiving men into their ridiculous orders. And numerous instances might be brought to shew, that all mankind agreed to use great caution in the choosing and initiation of the ministers about holy things: but our previous care relies on a better foundation than this, for we have command of God in Scripture and the laws and practice of the primitive church for it. Dean Comber.

Christianity was no sooner settled, but great care was taken to admit none to the priesthood, or any other office of the ministry, but only such as were sufficiently qualified, and that by the way and method which our religion prescribed. There was a commission given by our Saviour to his twelve apostles for their preaching, even before his crucifixion. "These twelve Jesus sent forth, and commanded them saying, Preach &c.; freely ye have received, freely give," Matt. x. 5. 7, 8. And so after his resurrection, "As my Father hath sent me, even so send I you," John xx. 21. "Go ye and teach all nations," Matt. xxviii. 18. Paul and Barnabas are said to be "sent forth by the Holy Ghost," Acts xiii. 4. St. Paul styles himself "called an apostle," and "ordained a preacher," 1 Tim. ii. 7. And looking upon it as an absurdity to preach without a mission, asks the question, "How shall they preach except they be sent?" Rom. x. 15. Paul and Barnabas "ordained elders in every church," Acts xiv. 23. And Titus is ordered to "ordain elders in every city," Tit. i. 5. The Apostolical Canons, which, though not what their name imports, yet are certainly ancient, injoin that "a presbyter be ordained by one bishop." By the Council of Laodicea one lately baptized was not allowed to be ordained a priest. The Council of Nice disallows the confessions of those, who are admitted to the order of presbyter without due examination. And it is thus enjoined by the Council of Sardis, "Every degree of holy orders requires a considerable length of time, wherein the faith of the ordained person, his morals, his steadiness, and his moderation, may be known. For it is by no means convenient, neither is it agreeable to the search after the person's knowledge and conversation, that any one, hand over head and lightly, be ordained either a bishop, a priest, or a deacon." Dr. Nicholls.

[f] — and also—admitted thereunto by lawful Authority.] It would make intolerable confusion in all professions, if every man, who judged himself qualified for an eminent station, might thrust himself into it, instead of being solemnly admitted by lawful authority. It is therefore required, first, that the clergy be solemnly admitted by prayer and imposition of hands: which is not only appointed in conformity to the divine directions under the law, concerning the admission of Aaron and his sons to officiate; but is agreeable also to the Christian rites of ordination, as always used on these occasions. For our Lord directed his disciples to pray immediately before He created them apostles, Matt. ix. 38; x. 1: and both deacons and others were ordained by fasting, prayer, and imposition of hands, Acts vi. 6; xiii. 2, 3; 1 Tim. iv. 14: which holy custom was kept up in all ages of the church. Secondly, it is required, that men be admitted into holy orders by lawful authority, which we affirm to be only that of bishops. And I shall not content myself to prove this by the statute law of this land, "that no man can be a lawful priest or deacon, unless he be ordained by a bishop," Stat. 13 Eliz. and Act of Uniformity 14 Car. II.: but farther shew, that this law is grounded upon holy Scripture, and the canons and practice of the universal church. First, our Lord, as supreme Ruler of his church, called and ordained his apostles, Matt. x. 1, 2; xxviii. 19, 20; John xx. 21—23; and they ordained deacons, presbyters, and bishops, Acts vi. 6; xiv. 23; 2 Tim. i. 6: but they gave the power of admitting all others only to the bishops, to whom also they only gave rules to choose candidates by, 1 Tim. iii. 1, &c.; Tit. i. 6; ii. 2. Secondly, nothing can be clearer than the sole right of the bishops to ordain, if we consult the canons or usage of the church in all former ages.

But some object, this will deprive divers foreign churches, where they have no bishops, of a lawful ministry, because their ministers have no ordination but by presbyters. To which I shall only say, that the first presbyter, who presumed to ordain, had no such power given to him, and so could not rightly convey that which he never received; there is no precedent in mere presbyters ordaining alone, and such ordinations would have been declared null in the primitive ages; yea, for 1500 years together no such were allowed. Their surest plea is that some of these churches were forced by dire necessity to this irregularity by the obstinate refusal of the Popish bishops to ordain any that were for reformation, so that they must either have such a clergy as they could have, or have none to officiate in the Protestant way; to which I reply, that to the intent[g] that these Orders may be continued, and reverently used and esteemed, in the United Church of England and Ireland; no man shall be accounted or taken to be a lawful Bishop, Priest, or Deacon in the United Church of England and Ireland, or suffered to execute any of the said Functions, except he be called, tried, examined, and admitted thereunto, according to the Form hereafter following, or hath had formerly Episcopal Consecration, or Ordination.

And none shall be admitted a Deacon, except[h] he be Twenty-three years of age, unless he have a Faculty[i]. And every man which is to be admitted a Priest shall be full Four-and-twenty years old. And every man which is to be ordained or consecrated Bishop shall be full Thirty years of age.

And the Bishop, knowing either by himself, or by sufficient testimony[k], where this necessity was real, and while it was so, as perhaps it might be in some places at first, it will go far to excuse them. And as for those, who highly value the episcopal order, wish for bishops, but are by persecution and violence kept from that happiness; we pity them, and pray for them, and hope God will excuse this defect, till they can remedy it; but we are thankful to that Providence which allows us to keep up the primitive orders in a due subordination, and to have a right and true canonical ministry, in this well-constituted church, the exact transcript of the primitive, and the glory of the whole Reformation. Dean Comber.

---

[g]—And therefore, to the intent &c.] In this passage our Church censures not the new way, nor condemns those that are foreign, but secures the old way, and takes care to oblige her own members, declaring that none shall be accounted a lawful bishop, priest, or deacon in this Church of England, nor exercise any of these functions here, unless according to the primitive discipline he be first called, tried, and examined, and then ordained according to this form; except he hath elsewhere had episcopal, that is, lawful ordination: which last clause seems designed to allow of Romish converted priests, who were ordained by bishops before, whom we receive without re-ordination, if they renounce their errors; because that church preserves the order of bishops, and the substance of the primitive forms in her ordinations, though corrupted with many modern superstitious rites, as we shall shew more particularly afterwards. And in this also we follow the primitive sense; for re-ordinations are forbid, when the orders had been once rightly conferred: and how those of Rome, who allow the Greek ordinations, can justify rejecting our orders, where they can make no objection to our form, nor prove us heretical in any article of faith, I cannot conceive. It is pride and uncharitableness, not arguments or examples of antiquity, that guides them in this most unjust proceeding. As to these forms of ordination prescribed to be alone used here, they are exactly conformable to the directions given in holy Scripture, and more agreeable to the practice of the primitive church than any offices of this kind in the world, being neither so naked as the way of Geneva, nor so luxuriant in ceremony as that of the Roman church; for we have added to the general rules of Scripture all and only the primitive rites, agreeing with the reformed in that which we have taken from Scripture, and with the Roman forms in all that accord with genuine antiquity. And upon the whole it is so instructing, so pious, and so very proper to the occasion, that I do recommend it, first, to all that are to enter into holy orders, to read that form over which belongs to the order he is about to receive, that he may prepare himself for it, by understanding his duty and considering his vows before he make them. Secondly, because we must perform our vows, and practise our duty all our lives long; it is convenient, if not necessary, for every clergyman once a year at least seriously to read the same office over to keep him mindful of his engagements. Dean Comber.

[h] And none shall be admitted a Deacon, except &c.] All the orders of the ministry have duties of so concerning an import charged upon them, that they are not to be intrusted but to persons of a supposed steadiness and resolution, which are hardly attainable in general before the ages here specified. By ancient canons something more than these ages was required for the several offices of the ministry. Dr. Nicholls. Because the Scripture hath not determined the exact time, when men shall enter into these several orders, every church hath fixed the ages by the rules of prudence as they saw most fit: but all churches have agreed not to admit men very young into these weighty offices. If any should object, that we admit men something younger than was done of old, I think two sufficient reasons may be assigned for that practice: first, that the methods of learning are now more compendious than in former ages; secondly, our clergy are not now obliged to vow celibacy, and that is a reason given in some later Councils, why they bound them to stay to so confirmed an age, that they might upon trial of their inclinations better know, whether they were able to keep such a vow or not. Dean Comber.

[i]—unless he have a Faculty.] So that a faculty or dispensation is allowed for persons of extraordinary abilities to be admitted deacons sooner. Which faculty, as it seemeth, must be obtained from the Archbishop of Canterbury. But for the admission of a priest under the age of four-and-twenty years there is no dispensation. Dr. Burn.

In case of great and early merit, or an extraordinary occasion, the limitation with respect to deacons may be dispensed with. No doubt there are some persons of early parts, and extraordinary learning and wisdom, though they be very young; and in such cases they are to be regarded rather according to their discretion and knowledge than their ages. Such was the famously learned Bishop Usher, ordained before he was twenty-one; and the pious and eloquent Bishop Jeremy Taylor, who entered into orders younger than he; wherefore it is fit there should be a power of dispensing, being necessary in some cases and commendable in others. Dean Comber.

[k] And the Bishop, knowing either by himself, or by sufficient testimony, &c.] The apostle having laid it down as a standing canon in the church, that "a bishop must be blameless, and have a good report of them that are without," 1 Tim. iii. 2. 7; thence the church of God has in all ages taken especial care to require a sufficient any Person to be a man of virtuous conversation[l], and without crime; and, after examination and trial, finding him learned in the Latin Tongue[m], and sufficiently instructed in holy Scripture, may at the times appointed in the Canon[n], or else, on urgent occasion, upon some other Sunday or Holy-day, satisfaction, that all persons who are to be admitted into that or any other inferior order of the clergy, have such a good report for a pious and virtuous conversation. This Tertullian mentions as a very singular honour of the Christian priesthood. In pursuance of which practice of the ancient church, our Church of England has forbidden the bishop to admit any person into sacred orders, "except he shall then exhibit letters testimonial of his good life and conversation under the seal of some College in Cambridge or Oxford, where before he remained, or of three or four grave ministers, together with the subscription and testimony of other credible persons, who have known his life and behaviour by the space of three years next before," Can. 33. The same is further provided for by our statute law: "None shall be made minister, unless he first bring to the bishop of that diocese, from men known to the bishop to be of sound religion, a testimonial both of his honest life, and of his professing the doctrine expressed in the said Articles," 13 Eliz. chap. xii. Dr. Nicholls.

Such as sign these testimonials have it put into their power to discover evil men, and commend only those that are worthy: wherefore, since so great a trust is reposed in them, they ought never to sign any testimonial which they know to be false; yea, which they do not know to be true: lest they become guilty of bearing false witness, and mislead the bishop, who cannot see all things with his own eyes, nor hear all with his own ears, and so must rely on others to direct his choice. And let him be ever so desirous to keep out wicked pastors, an hypocrite commended by eminent hands may deceive him; and then the dishonour of God and mischief to souls, which are the sad consequence of such misinformation, are to be charged only upon those, who for fear, favour, or negligence, signed the false certificate: who deserve a severe punishment in this world, if our law did allow it; however they shall certainly answer for it in the next world. And I heard a most reverend and worthy prelate (Abp. Dolben) charge his clergy, "not to impose upon him by signing testimonials, which they did not know to be true, as they would answer it to him at the dreadful day of judgment." Which being duly considered will, I hope, prevent that evil custom of giving men's hands, out of custom or compliment to mere strangers, or to oblige a friend that we know doth not deserve it. Dean Comber.

A sham testimonial of life and manners doth not only deceive the bishop in a point of the nicest concernment, both with regard to his office and his reputation; but does an injury to the church itself, and affects the interests and credit of the ministry at large. And therefore to attest worthy characters of unworthy persons, in order to bring them into a situation where they may expose themselves and their functions, do publick mischief, and give open scandal, is destitute of any justifiable pretence; and I wish I could add it were equally destitute of any precedent.

I must acknowledge that human respects, and solicitations of acquaintance, and other mere social regards, are great temptations with people of kind dispositions, to too easy a compliance in granting this favour; and such persons may be sometimes drawn into the signing of testimonials, when their judgment doth not concur with their good nature. I am loth to blame any friendly or neighbourly qualities, yet sometimes they do deserve blame, as in this case in particular; where they are the occasions of a mischief, which much better qualities cannot repair, or make sufficient amends for. Archdeacon Sharp.

[l] — a man of virtuous conversation,] The first inquiry is into their lives, for that is over and over repeated by St. Paul, that they "must be blameless," 1 Tim. iii. 2; Tit. i. 6, 7: and, if they be ever so learned or ingenious, and be not virtuous, their example will do more harm than their preaching can do good: they discourage the pious, and harden sinners; dishonour our Lord Jesus, disgrace his church, and not only destroy their own but others' souls also. So that if men be vicious and criminal, no other qualifications ought to recommend them: they must by all means be kept from holy orders. Dean Comber.

[m] — and, after examination and trial, finding him learned in the Latin Tongue, &c.] The next care of the bishop is to examine and try the understandings of such as come to offer themselves to be ordained, of which he and his chaplains are competent judges. So that if he ordain any illiterate person, that fault must lie upon the ordainer only; since virtue may, but learning cannot, be counterfeited before a learned and diligent examiner. It is St. Paul's injunction, and so indispensable, that he "be apt," or, as the word imports, able "to teach," 1 Tim. iii. 2: nor can any man be fit to teach others, who hath not himself been well instructed, first, in secular learning, and secondly, in holy Scripture. The apostles, wanting time and opportunity to get learning in an ordinary way, were miraculously inspired both with the knowledge of all tongues, and all divine truths, to shew that Christ Himself judged these were necessary qualifications for his ministers. But, as the manna ceased, when God's people came to a land, where corn would grow by industry, so Heaven hath now withdrawn this immediate inspiration, and left us to acquire knowledge by study and other proper means. Dean Comber.

Under the Jewish dispensation the priests were obliged to be learned in the law, which then obtained. Upon which account the prophet Malachi says, that "the priests should preserve knowledge, because the people were to inquire the law at their mouth," Mal. ii. 7. And St. Paul lays it down as an indispensable qualification of a Christian clergyman, that he be "apt to teach," 1 Tim. iii. 2. And because the most considerable books of Christian literature are written in the Latin tongue, our Church has wisely injoined that every candidate for holy orders should be skilled in that tongue. The ancient Greek and Latin churches, having the most considerable works of the first Christian authors written in their tongue, especially the Greek church, did not require the study of any language but their own from a clergyman. And, though they forbade the reading of the heathen authors out of wantonness, yet they commended the study of them, in order to the better understanding of Scripture, the explaining and inforcing of Christian doctrines, and the confuting of hereticks. But without a tolerable competency in learning they were not to be admitted into holy orders. Above all, the study of the holy Scriptures was injoined them as their principal task. Dr. Nicholls.

in the face of the Church, admit him a Deacon, in such manner and form as hereafter followeth.

---

[n] — at the times appointed in the Canon,] Namely, the 31st Canon: that is, on the Sundays after the four ember weeks, which were the ancient seasons for this office. But, however, it ought to be on some Sunday or Holy-day, as was used even from the primitive times: and as the time, so the place also, should be known and publick: namely, "in the face of the church." Dean Comber.

THE FORM AND MANNER

OF

MAKING OF DEACONS[o].

¶ When the day appointed by the Bishop is come, after Morning Prayer is ended, there shall be a Sermon[p] or Exhortation, declaring the Duty and Office of such as come to be admitted Deacons, how necessary that Order is in the Church of Christ, and also, how the people ought to esteem them in their Office.

¶ First the Archdeacon[q], or his Deputy, shall present unto the Bishop (sitting in his chair[r] near to the holy Table[s]) such as desire to be ordained Deacons, (each of

[o] The Form and Manner of Making of Deacons.] The Greek word, whence comes our English word "deacon," is sometimes of larger signification in Scripture than barely to denote that particular ecclesiastical order, for which it is now generally used. See Rom. xv. 8; iii. 5; Acts xx. 24; Rom. xi. 13; 2 Tim. iv. 5. But this name is more especially used in Scripture to denote the order of deacons, the first institution of which is related in the sixth chapter of the Acts. For, some discontents arising about the distribution of the charitable collections, the apostles found that they had not leisure to determine these differences, and to collect and dispose of the alms to the poor according to their several exigences; therefore they erected a new ecclesiastical order to be assistants to them, particularly in managing the affair of the charities. This charge was exercised by them, after their province was enlarged, and they had several other duties laid upon them: such as assisting the bishop and the priest in the communion; instructing the catechumens, and grounding them in the principles of religion; reading the Gospel in the communion service; reading the litanies: making proclamation, before the communion service began, for all catechumens, excommunicates, unbelievers, &c. to depart. Several other matters the deacons were wont to look after: besides baptizing by the leave of the bishop, and in the absence of a presbyter. Dr. Nicholls. In the earliest monuments of antiquity we find that deacons constantly attended on the bishop in all his sacred ministrations, and assisted him. But their special duty was to distribute the bread and cup to the people after the bishop had consecrated it: they also bore a part in the liturgy with the priest or bishop: and, when churches were built in the country, deacons alone sometimes performed the whole office there, and not only read the prayers, but the Gospel, and by licence preached or made an homily upon it. Bp. Beveridge, Dean Comber.

[p] — after Morning Prayer is ended, there shall be a Sermon] The place of our sermons ordinarily is after the Nicene Creed: but on these days, lest the office should he broken, the preaching is fixed after the end of our Morning Prayer, strictly so called; the Litany being removed into the Communion Service, as very proper to this occasion, otherwise the Litany would be to be said twice in one morning, and so too much lengthen the offices. And since the ordination is to be performed at the altar, and always joined with a communion, this rubrick orders, that all the rest shall be finished in the body of the church, before the bishop and candidates go up to the holy table.

Secondly, as to the subject of the sermon, it is required that it relate to this occasion. For nothing is more comely, nor more profitable, "than a word spoken in due season," Prov. xxv. 11. It is very fit to instruct at this time, first, the candidates in the several parts of their duty, and the nature of their office; that they may weigh and consider well the great charge they are about to undertake, and be encouraged cheerfully to promise, and sincerely to resolve, that they will perform it by God's help. It is also equally proper now to teach the congregation, what reverent esteem they ought to have of such as are set to watch for their souls, to offer up their prayers to God, and to make known to them God's word and will. And thus all may be edified by such a pertinent discourse. And truly the usefulness of such a sermon at this time is sufficient to justify our own and other reformed churches in requiring it, if we had no precedents for it in antiquity. Dean Comber.

[q] — the Archdeacon,] In great churches where the bishop had many deacons the eldest had the title of archdeacon, and was a sort of governour over all the rest: afterwards they were chosen first by the deacons, and then by the bishops, not for age alone, but for other good qualities. Among their various duties one was, to examine and approve of candidates for holy them being decently habited[t],) saying these words,

REVEREND Father in God[u], I present unto you these persons[x] present to be admitted Deacons.

The Bishop.

1 Tim. iii. 10. TAKE heed that the persons, whom ye present unto us[y], be apt and meet, for their learning and godly conversation, to exercise their Ministry duly, to the honour of God, and the edifying of his Church.

¶ The Archdeacon shall answer,

I Have enquired of them, and also examined them, and think them so to be.

¶ Then the Bishop shall say unto the people[z]:

---

orders: indeed the bishops employed them in so many affairs, that they were called "the eyes of the bishop;" but still they were only of the order of deacons. In time, though they kept the old title of archdeacons, they were often presbyters: and their powers were then much enlarged, for they were employed by the bishops to visit their dioceses for them. In the Roman Ordinal they are called "the bishops' vicars." Deon Comber.

[r] — unto the Bishop (sitting in his chair &c.] This usage, for the bishop to sit in a chair or seat prepared for this purpose, and placed near the altar at the time of ordination, is very ancient in the church. This seat was not the great seat of the bishop, where he sate during the lessons and sermons, and which was called his "throne," whence he was said to be "inthroned," because of his being solemnly placed therein at his inauguration or admission into his bishoprick. For that was a large seat built in the church on a high basis or eminence, and not removable as this lesser seat was. This seat the Roman Ordinals call "faldistorium:" which seems to be derived from the German "falden," to fold: it being a chair or stool made so that it might be folded together, for the better conveniency of removing it from place to place. Dr. Nicholls.

[s] — near to the holy Table)] Ordinations in all churches being accompanied with the Communion, have constantly been celebrated near the altar. Dean Comber.

[t] — (each of them being decently habited,)] Almighty God Himself prescribed the garments for the high priest, the priest, and Levites under the Law; and they were such as might procure honour and glory even to the lowest order, Exod. xxviii. 2. 40. And in all nations in the world their priests wore garments differing from other men. Our own canons injoin that ministers shall at all times wear grave, distinct, and decent habits, Can. 74: wherein our law agrees with the orders of other ancient churches, which forbid the clergy to imitate the laymen's fashion, in any sort of clothes, and to use any but a very grave habit, even when they do not officiate.

The foreign reformed churches, as well as the ancients, agree with us in this matter. So that if the clergy oppose these orders, and affect to be gay and modish, or cast off the garments which mark their order, they act contrary to the reason of mankind and the custom and laws of all nations, as well as of our Church, which injoins them always to go decently in peculiar habits. Dean Comber.

The canons of the Church, as well as the rubrick, and indeed the homilies, give a decided opinion on the subject of dress. Dress is not indifferent. Though not an essential quality of character, it is certainly a sign of decorum. Modesty of apparel bespeaks modesty of demeanour, and a well-ordered mind. St. Paul does not withhold his admonitions on such outward decorations, even in common life: how much more in those who are expected to be grave in office, as well as in character? Probably in this place is more particularly intended the habit of the order, or the academical dress of the student.

Variety of habit will accommodate itself to times and seasons: but decency and propriety of apparel will be well understood in every age. All that we have to attend to is, that the raiment be suited to the character. Brewster.

[u] Reverend Father in God,] The "sons" of the prophets called them by the honourable and endearing name of "fathers," 2 Kings ii. 12; and kings gave them the same title in those days also, 2 Kings xiii. 14. The apostles called clergymen their sons, 1 Tim. i. 1; 2 Tim. i. 2; Tit. i. 4: and claimed to be "fathers" to them and to all the faithful, 1 Cor. iv. 15; by which name Christian bishops, who succeeded them in their office, were generally called. But, to distinguish them from natural parents, they saluted them "Fathers in God," or "in Christ:" and they are so particularly in this solemn act to those whom they ordain, wherein they put them into a new and nearer relation to God and Christ Jesus; and adopt them into, not only the service, but the family of their heavenly Father. Dean Comber.

[x] — I present unto you these persons, &c.] These words were something altered at our Reformation: for in the old Roman forms the archdeacon said, "Our holy mother the Catholick church requires you would ordain," &c. But in regard that the archdeacon hath no commission to appear for the whole Catholick church, our Reformers did judge it better for him to speak in his own name: and, since the duty of examining lay on him, he was thought fittest to pass for them; and this he must do explicitly, by saying, He thinks them to be duly qualified; and not with that unseasonable salvo, which the Roman Ordinal puts into his mouth, "as far as human frailty suffers me to know:" which the forms of Edward the Sixth caused to be left out, lest any neglect might shelter itself under such an excuse. But however, lest any unworthy person should impose upon the archdeacon or his deputies, divers of our best and greatest bishops have used, after all, to examine the candidates themselves; and though they did not lay aside the use of their delegate, nor of this form, yet they resolved to be certain of their own knowledge, that the archdeacon did both answer truly and judge aright. Dean Comber.

[y] Take heed that the persons, whom ye present unto us, &c.] This admonition of the bishop applies with great force to the archdeacon or his deputy, with respect to the due discharge of his important office: "Take heed." There is no dissembling with God on so solemn an occasion. The bishop demands an explicit answer: and, blessed be God! we have reason to be satisfied, that, since the days of the Reformation of religion, this duty has been discharged in the Church

Acts vi. 2. 1 Tim. iii. 2. 10. Tit. i. 7.

BRETHREN, if there be any of you who knoweth any Impediment, or notable Crime, in any of these persons presented to be ordered Deacons, for the which he ought not to be admitted to that Office, let him come forth in the Name of God, and shew what the Crime or Impediment is.

¶ And if any great Crime or Impediment be objected[a], the Bishop shall surcease from ordering that person until such time as the party accused shall be found clear of that Crime. 2 Chron. vi. 41.

¶ Then the Bishop (commending such as shall be found meet to be Ordered to the Prayers of the Congregation[b]) shall, with the Clergy and people present, sing or say the Litany[c], with the Prayers as followeth. Ps. cxxxii. 8. Eph. vi. 18, 19. 1 Thess. v. 25.

England with a conscientious regard to "the honour of God, and edifying of his church." Though it may happen, as all human institutions, even the most sacred, are liable to the intrusion of the designing, that some instances will occur of those who enter not by the door into the sheepfold, but climb up some other way; yet the ministers of our Church have never been insidiously introduced within her pale, to answer any purpose inconsistent with her avowed principles; but, as far as the general imperfection of human nature admits, they have shewn themselves well qualified for the exercise of their ministry, both as to their "learning and godly conversation." Brewster.

[z] Then the Bishop shall say unto the people: &c.] This inquiry of the people concerning the worthiness of the person to be ordained, or whether they know any ill concerning him, is agreeable to the earliest practice of antiquity, and the word of God itself. For the Apostle injoins, that none exercise the office of a deacon, who is not found "blameless," 1 Tim. iii. 10. And in the first institution of the deacon's order, the brethren were to vouch for the good character of the persons, who were to undertake that office: "Brethren, look out among you seven men of honest report," Acts vi. 3. And afterwards it continued a practice in the church, that when any deacon, or especially any one of the superior orders of priest or bishop, were nominated and notified to the people, they in testimony of his abilities and good behaviour were used to cry out, "He is worthy." From this usage the Greek and Latin churches have inserted into their liturgies forms for the people to declare the worthiness of the person to be ordained. Dr. Nicholls.

The people are not called upon to take any part in the ordination of ministers. That sacred duty, from the days of the apostles, and by the original constitution of the church of Christ, in a succession of ages, has been intrusted to other hands. Popular elections of ministers were never the practice of the primitive times, nor have they ever been admitted into the constitution of any church established on the primitive model. But the people are not considered as silent observers of the appropriation of persons to the ministry. A due deference is paid to their testimony in setting apart proper persons for so holy an office. So strict indeed is the scrutiny, that in the parish church of the place, where the candidate resides, notice of his intention is required to be publickly given during the time of divine service: and every man, who knows any specifick offence, with which he may be charged, or any moral impediment, which would disgrace his office, or render his instructions void, is required to declare them. This notification, as we see here, is again made on the day and at the time of ordination; so that if one opportunity of preventing an unworthy person from having any lot or portion in this ministry should have been omitted, another occurs at the awful moment of completing the appropriation. Brewster.

If any of the people know any impediment or notable crime in any of the persons to be ordained, for which he ought not to be received into the ministry, it is their fault if he be ordained, for they may hinder it if they will: nay, they are bound to do it, by discovering what objections they have against it. Whence it may be observed by the way, that whatsoever disorderly or unworthy persons are admitted to holy orders, the people must not blame the bishop, but themselves, or those that know them, for it. For it cannot be supposed that he should have the personal knowledge of every one that comes to him for orders: all that he can do, is to inquire of them, and consider what credit is to be given to the letters testimonial which they bring to him, wherein it may be possible for him to be imposed upon. But they, who do not only personally know them, but know them to be of so wicked and loose a conversation, that they ought not to be received into the ministry, and yet do not acquaint the bishop with it, either before, or when he requires them to do it in the face of the congregation, ought to bear all the blame now, and must answer for it another day. Bp. Beveridge.

[a] And if any great Crime or Impediment be objected, &c.] If it should so happen, that the bishop, for some alleged cause, should surcease from ordering any particular person, let it be observed that he still acts under the impression of Christian forbearance. Though under such a circumstance it would be indiscreet and improper to proceed to the ordination of a person charged with offence, it is charitably supposed that he may be innocent of the accusation: and therefore the ceremony is suspended, "until such time as the party accused shall be found clear of that crime." Brewster.

[b] Then the Bishop (commending—to the Prayers of the Congregation) &c.] If there be no objection, the office proceeds. And first the bishop commends those, who are found fit, to the prayers of the people: and, if any priests are ordained, that being the more weighty office, a space is allowed for the congregation's private devotions: for some of them may be friends or relations to the candidates, or be such as are to be under their charge; and then they will desire time to put up particular requests for them, for which this vacant time gives them an opportunity. But even they, who have no such special ties, are obliged, as Christians and members of that Church wherein these men are to officiate, to pray heartily, that its clergy may be rightly chosen and replenished with grace, since that is a common blessing to all good Christians in every part of the nation. The ancient Western offices, referring to the people's crying "Worthy, worthy," do immediately order them all to join in their prayers to God, as they have done in their testimony of these men; saying, Let your common prayer follow your common consent. And, as now the whole congregation hath at least by their silence consented to their admission; so they are concerned for the general good earnestly to pray for them. Dean Comber.

[c] — the Litany,] This having been treated of before, it is here only requisite to note, that it is a most comprehensive deprecation of all evil, and intercession for the whole church and all degrees of men therein; and

The Litany and Suffrages.

O God the Father, of heaven: have mercy upon us miserable sins.

O God the Father, of heaven: have mercy upon us miserable sinners.

O God the Son, Redeemer of the world: have mercy upon us miserable sinners.

O God the Son, Redeemer of the world: have mercy upon us miserable sinners.

O God the Holy Ghost, proceeding from the Father and the Son: have mercy upon us miserable sinners.

O God the Holy Ghost, proceeding from the Father and the Son: have mercy upon us miserable sinners.

O holy, blessed, and glorious Trinity, three Persons and one God: have mercy upon us miserable sinners.

O holy, blessed, and glorious Trinity, three Persons and one God: have mercy upon us miserable sinners.

Remember not, Lord, our offences, nor the offences of our forefathers; neither take thou vengeance of our sins: spare us, good Lord, spare thy people, whom thou hast redeemed with thy most precious blood, and be not angry with us for ever.

Spare us, good Lord.

From all evil and mischief; from sin, from the crafts and assaults of the devil; from thy wrath, and from everlasting damnation,

Good Lord, deliver us.

From all blindness of heart; from pride, vain-glory, and hypocrisy; from envy, hatred, and malice, and all uncharitableness,

Good Lord, deliver us.

From fornication, and all other deadly sin; and from all the deceits of the world, the flesh, and the devil,

Good Lord, deliver us.

From lightning and tempest; from plague, pestilence, and famine; from battle and murder, and from sudden death,

Good Lord, deliver us.

From all sedition, privy conspiracy, and rebellion; from all false doctrine, heresy, and schism; from hardness of heart, and contempt of thy Word and Commandment,

Good Lord, deliver us.

By the mystery of thy holy Incarnation; by thy holy Nativity and Circumcision; by thy Baptism, Fasting, and Temptation,

Good Lord, deliver us.

By thine Agony and bloody Sweat; by thy Cross and Passion; by thy precious Death and Burial; by thy glorious Resurrection and Ascension; so must be very proper on this occasion, which is a publick and universal concern to all sorts of people who wish well to religion: upon which ground all other churches use it at ordinations, and, as we do, add a peculiar petition for the persons now to be ordained. The Greek church, according to their custom, have two or three short Litanies in this office, and say therein, "For the servant of God, N., now to be promoted a deacon, a priest, or a bishop, and his salvation, Let us intreat the Lord." But this is too short. The Latin Ordinals have this in the end of their Litany: "That thou wouldest vouchsafe to bless these elected," Ans. "We beseech thee," &c.; and then in two other petitions, "To bless and sanctify," &c.; "To bless, sanctify, and consecrate these elected." Which, as a vain repetition, was rejected by our Reformers in the book of Edward the Sixth; but, instead thereof, this excellent request is put in, "That it may please thee to bless these thy servants, now to be admitted to the order of deacons, or priests; and to pour thy grace upon them, that they may duly execute their office, to the edifying of thy church, and the glory of thy holy name." Which are as full, and as much to the purpose, as can be expressed in so few words.

---

For, first, In general we beg God's blessing on them: and then as to their office we intimate, 1, What is the means; and, 2, the manner of executing it well. To "execute the priest's office" is a Scripture phrase, and comprehends their whole duty, and the "making full proof of their ministry," Luke i. 8; 2 Tim. iv. 5: or using the office of a deacon or priest well, in St. Paul's way of speaking, 1 Tim. iii. 13. Now this cannot be done, unless they have abundance of grace, a double portion of the Spirit, 2 Kings ii. 9. Other men are only to take care of their own salvation; and ordinary measures may serve them for the duties of common life. But these are to "save themselves and those that hear them," 1 Tim. iv. 16. Besides, the manner and end of their performing all their duty is, first, to edification: a common metaphor in holy writ, where the church is compared to "the house of God," Eph. ii. 19; 1 Tim. iii. 15; ministers to builders, 1 Cor. iii. 10; every convert they make, and every sinner they reform, by their prayers, sermons, and private admonitions, are living stones added to this building, Eph. ii. 21, 22; and their improvement in wisdom and virtue is their "edification," Eph. iv. 12. So that a minister especially is to mind that great rule, to "do all things to edification," 1 Cor. xiv. 26. He must not seek his own interest, but the benefit of his people. Nor, secondly, aim at his own praise, but at the honour and glory of God, 1 Cor. x. 31. It is not enough that they commend his parts or learning, but that they can justly bless God for their growth in all goodness. And this is the sum of this proper petition. Dean Comber.

and by the coming of the Holy Ghost,

Good Lord, deliver us.

In all time of our tribulation; in all time of our wealth; in the hour of death, and in the day of judgement,

Good Lord, deliver us.

We sinners do beseech thee to hear us, O Lord God; and that it may please thee to rule and govern thy holy Church universal in the right way;

We beseech thee to hear us, good Lord.

That it may please thee to keep and strengthen in the true worshipping of thee, in righteousness and holiness of life, thy Servant VICTORIA, our most gracious Queen and Governour;

We beseech thee to hear us, good Lord.

That it may please thee to rule her heart in thy faith, fear, and love, and that she may evermore have affiance in thee, and ever seek thy honour and glory;

We beseech thee to hear us, good Lord.

That it may please thee to be her defender and keeper, giving her the victory over all her enemies;

We beseech thee to hear us, good Lord.

That it may please thee to bless and preserve the Prince Albert, Albert Prince of Wales, and all the Royal Family;

We beseech thee to hear us, good Lord.

That it may please thee to illuminate all Bishops, Priests, and Deacons, with true knowledge and understanding of thy Word; and that both by their preaching and living they may set it forth, and shew it accordingly;

We beseech thee to hear us, good Lord.

That it may please thee to bless these thy servants, now to be admitted to the Order of Deacons, [or Priests,] and to pour thy grace upon them; that they may duly execute their Office, to the edifying of thy Church, and the glory of thy holy Name;

Luke i. 8. 1 Tim. iii. 13. 2 Tim. iv. 5. Eph. ii. 19. 21, 22; iv. 12. 1 Cor. iii. 10; xiv. 26. 1 Cor. x. 31.

We beseech thee to hear us, good Lord.

That it may please thee to endue the Lords of the Council, and all the Nobility, with grace, wisdom, and understanding;

We beseech thee to hear us, good Lord.

That it may please thee to bless and keep the Magistrates, giving them grace to execute justice, and to maintain truth;

We beseech thee to hear us, good Lord.

That it may please thee to bless and keep all thy people;

We beseech thee to hear us, good Lord.

That it may please thee to give to all nations unity, peace, and concord;

We beseech thee to hear us, good Lord.

That it may please thee to give us an heart to love and dread thee, and diligently to live after thy commandments;

We beseech thee to hear us, good Lord.

That it may please thee to give to all thy people increase of grace to hear meekly thy Word, and to receive it with pure affection, and to bring forth the fruits of the Spirit;

We beseech thee to hear us, good Lord.

That it may please thee to bring into the way of truth all such as have erred, and are deceived;

We beseech thee to hear us, good Lord.

That it may please thee to strengthen such as do stand; and to comfort and help the weak-hearted; and to raise up them that fall; and finally to beat down Satan under our feet;

We beseech thee to hear us, good Lord.

That it may please thee to succour, help, and comfort, all that are in danger, necessity, and tribulation;

We beseech thee to hear us, good Lord.

That it may please thee to preserve all that travel by land or by water, all women labouring of child, all sick persons, and young children; and to shew thy pity upon all prisoners and captives;

We beseech thee to hear us, good Lord.

That it may please thee to defend, and provide for, the fatherless children, and widows, and all that are desolate and oppressed;

We beseech thee to hear us, good Lord.

That it may please thee to have mercy upon all men;

We beseech thee to hear us, good Lord.

That it may please thee to forgive our enemies, persecutors, and slanderers, and to turn their hearts;

We beseech thee to hear us, good Lord.

That it may please thee to give and preserve to our use the kindly fruits of the earth, so as in due time we may enjoy them;

We beseech thee to hear us, good Lord.

That it may please thee to give us true repentance; to forgive us all our sins, negligences, and ignorances; and to endue us with the grace of thy Holy Spirit to amend our lives according to thy holy Word;

We beseech thee to hear us, good Lord.

Son of God: we beseech thee to hear us.

Son of God: we beseech thee to hear us.

O Lamb of God: that takest away the sins of the world;

Grant us thy peace.

O Lamb of God: that takest away the sins of the world;

Have mercy upon us.

O Christ, hear us.

O Christ, hear us.

Lord, have mercy upon us.

Lord, have mercy upon us.

Christ, have mercy upon us.

Christ, have mercy upon us.

Lord, have mercy upon us.

Lord, have mercy upon us.

¶ Then shall the Priest, and the people with him, say the Lord's Prayer.

OUR Father, which art in heaven, Hallowed be thy Name. Thy kingdom come. Thy will be done in earth, As it is in heaven. Give us this day our daily bread. And forgive us our trespasses, As we forgive them that trespass against us. And lead us not into temptation; But deliver us from evil. Amen.

Priest. O Lord, deal not with us after our sins.

Answer. Neither reward us after our iniquities.

Let us pray.

O God, merciful Father, that despisest not the sighing of a contrite heart, nor the desire of such as be sorrowful; Mercifully assist our prayers that we make before thee in all our troubles and adversities, whensoever they oppress us; and graciously hear us, that those evils, which the craft and subtilty of the devil or man worketh against us, be brought to nought; and by the providence of thy goodness they may be dispersed; that we thy servants, being hurt by no persecutions, may evermore give thanks unto thee in thy holy Church; through Jesus Christ our Lord.

O Lord, arise, help us, and deliver us for thy Name's sake.

O God, we have heard with our ears, and our fathers have declared unto us, the noble works that thou didst in their days, and in the old time before them.

O Lord, arise, help us, and deliver us for thine honour.

Glory be to the Father, and to the Son: and to the Holy Ghost;

Answer. As it was in the beginning, is now, and ever shall be: world without end. Amen.

From our enemies defend us, O Christ.

Graciously look upon our afflictions.

Pitifully behold the sorrows of our hearts.

Mercifully forgive the sins of thy people.

Favourably with mercy hear our prayers.

O Son of David, have mercy upon us.

Both now and ever vouchsafe to hear us, O Christ.

Graciously hear us, O Christ; graciously hear us, O Lord Christ.

Priest. O Lord, let thy mercy be shewed upon us;

Answer. As we do put our trust in thee.

Let us pray.

WE humbly beseech thee, O Father, mercifully to look upon our infirmities: and for the glory of thy Name turn from us all those evils that we most righteously have deserved; and grant, that in all our troubles we may put our whole trust and confidence in thy mercy, and evermore serve thee in holiness and pureness of living, to thy honour and glory; through our only Mediator and Advocate, Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

¶ Then shall be sung or said the Service for the Communion[d], with the Collect, Epistle, and Gospel, as followeth.

The Collect[e].

ALMIGHTY God, who by thy Divine Providence hast ap- Eph. iv. 8. 11, 12.

pointed[f] divers Orders of Ministers in thy Church, and didst inspire thine Apostles to choose into the Order of Deacons the first Martyr Saint Stephen, with others; Mercifully behold these thy servants[g] now called to the like Office and Administration; replenish them so[h] with the truth of thy Doctrine, and adorn them with innocency of life, that both by word and good example, they may faithfully serve thee in this Office, to the glory of thy Name, and the edification of thy Church; through the merits of our Saviour Jesus Christ, who liveth and reigneth with thee and the Holy Ghost, now and for ever. Amen.

Acts vi. 5, 6.
2 Cor. ii. 16; iii. 5.
Acts vi. 3. Luke ii. 40. 2 Tim. iii. 17. Tit. ii. 7; ii. 10. Matt. xxv. 21. 1 Cor. iv. 2.

The Epistle[i]. 1 Tim. iii. 8.

LIKEWISE must the Deacons be grave, not doubletongued,

[d] Then shall be sung or said the service for the Communion,] The Communion service succeeds the Litany, not only in this, but all other churches: and that with great propriety. For since the candidates are to draw near to God, and therefore must be more than ordinarily sanctified, Lev. x. 3; the confession of sin after each commandment, with the collect for purity of heart which precedes it, are extremely proper at this time for those, who ought now to purify themselves by fervent devotion and hearty repentance, before they enter on so solemn an admission to this sacred employment. Dean Comber.

[e] The Collect.] Prayer hath always been used at ordination; and Scripture, as well as reason, shews that they must never be put asunder. When our Lord was about to appoint his twelve apostles, He directs his disciples in the very verse before, which we have ill divided, and put it into another chapter, to "pray to the Lord of the harvest to send forth labourers into his harvest," Matt. ix. 38; x. 1; so that He, who knew all men's hearts, would not ordain without prayer. So when the eleven were to elect a colleague, "they prayed first," Acts i. 24. And though the Holy Ghost had named Barnabas and Saul, yet the church of Antioch fasted and prayed before their designation, Acts xiii. 2, 3. And reason teaches us, that application ought to be made to God in this case, as well because these persons are to be appointed his immediate servants, as because He only can fit them for this great work. Wherefore all regular churches have set forms on this occasion. Dean Comber.

[f] Almighty God, who by thy Divine Providence hast appointed, &c.] It is a just encouragement of our prayers, when we know that we desire God's blessing upon his own institution, and not our invention. Wherefore our business being to beg his favour upon us in this ordination in general, and these deacons in particular, the preface properly sets out, first, That the variety of orders among ministers in his church, and secondly, that this order of deacons, had their original by divine appointment. The same was observed in the old offices. And herein also we imitate the Eastern and Western offices both, that we make especial mention of "the first martyr St. Stephen," the captain and leader of the seven deacons, as well as of the noble army of martyrs, the lasting glory of this order, and the most accomplished pattern that can be proposed to all that enter upon this office for their imitation: whose gifts were so great, that he was able to convince or confound all gainsayers; yet his humility was so signal, that he submitted to the meanest office of taking care of the poor and needy; being equally to be admired for the holiness of his life, and his patience under a cruel death, for his mighty charity to his bloody foes, and his vigorous faith in his glorified Redeemer. Now all this was the effect of God's grace, which is sufficient also to make them, that are now to succeed him in the same order, to be like him at least in some measure in these heavenly qualities: wherefore they ought to look at the lovely copy here set them, and resolve heartily they will imitate him as far as they can, praying heartily they may do so in the next words. Dean Comber.

[g] — Mercifully behold these thy servants &c.] It is natural for men to look kindly on the works of their own hands: but God's are always very good, wherefore He always delights in them; where his providence appoints an office, his favour follows it of course. That which He directed his apostles to do in ordaining deacons, his people are now about: and, as He was gracious to those first elected, we hope He will be so to those who are called to an administration like theirs; namely, to officiate under the governours of the church in sacred mysteries and in dispensing charity; so that we pray, according to ancient forms, that God would "mercifully look upon these his servants." Dean Comber.

[h] — replenish them so &c.] Having prayed in general for God's mercy and favour, we further beg, that when his mercy hath preceded, his grace may follow; and that, in those great effects of it, so necessary for the tribe of Levi, illumination in true doctrine, and innocency or perfection in manners: the former to replenish their understandings with the knowledge of all truth, the latter to adorn their conversation with all sorts of virtue: these two are Moses's prayer for the sacred tribe, and the meaning of Urim and Thummim, Deut. xxxiii. 8, and will make our "man of God perfect, and throughly furnished to every good work," 2 Tim. iii. 17. And indeed both are absolutely necessary for a clergyman. He must, as the first deacons were, be "replenished with wisdom," Acts vi. 3; see also Luke ii. 40. The fountain, which is to water many, had need to be very full, yea, to overflow, and then he may serve God by his words. And he must also be adorned with innocency of life, that he may serve God by his good example: and thus both by word and deed they may glorify his name, and edify the church. Hence the ancient offices mention both these: nor may the two be separated; for, if a minister be innocent, but ignorant, his innocence only profits himself, but he is not qualified to instruct others; and, if he be learned, but vicious, his evil example hinders the effect of his exhortations, and makes his knowledge become unprofitable. Wherefore St. Hilary notes a good clergyman must have both: and we pray for both together, that his head may be full stored with the knowledge of all orthodox principles, and his life adorned with all sorts of virtuous practices. Dean Comber.

[i] The Epistle.] Since the office of a deacon is by divine appointment, the directions for it must be found in God's word. Upon this occasion therefore it hath been an ancient, and is a rational custom, to select some of the most proper places of holy writ, suitable to this and the other orders, and to read them in the ordinot given to much wine, not greedy of filthy lucre, holding the mystery of the faith in a pure conscience. And let these also first be proved; then let them use the Office of a Deacon, being found blameless. Even so must their wives be grave, not slanderers, sober, faithful in all things. Let the Deacons be the husbands of one wife, ruling their children and their own houses well. For they that have used the Office of a Deacon well purchase to themselves a good degree, and great boldness in the faith which is in Christ Jesus.

Or else this[k], out of the Sixth of the Acts of the Apostles.

Acts vi. 2.

THEN the twelve called the multitude of the disciples unto them, and said, It is not reason that we should leave the Word of God, and serve tables. Wherefore, brethren, look ye out among you seven men of honest report, full of the Holy Ghost and wisdom, whom we may appoint over this business. But we will give ourselves continually to prayer, and to the ministry of the Word. And the saying pleased the whole multitude. And they chose Stephen, a man full of faith, and of the Holy Ghost, and Philip, and Prochorus, and Nicanor, and Timon, and Parmenas, and Nicholas a proselyte of Antioch; whom they set before the Apostles; and, when they had prayed, they laid their hands on them. And the Word of God increased, and the number of the disciples multiplied in Jerusalem greatly, and a great company of the Priests were obedient to the faith.

¶ And before the Gospel, the Bishop, sitting in his chair, shall cause the Oath of the Queen's Sovereignty, and against the power and authority of all foreign Potentates, to be ministered unto every one of them that are to be Ordered.

The Oath of the Queen's Sovereignty[l].

I A. B. do swear, that I do from my heart abhor, detest, and abjure, as impious and heretical, that nation. As to the particular places chosen for the Epistles, none is fitter than this, which contains St. Paul's directions to Timothy about the qualifications of a deacon. Wherefore almost all churches order this to be the Epistle at their ordination, because it fully sets forth what manner of persons they ought to be, who are admitted into this order. So that the candidates should hear this with great attention and reverence, trying themselves secretly all the while by this divine touchstone: that, if they have these qualities, they may proceed with joy; if they want any of them, they may labour to supply the defect. Dean Comber.

---

[k] Or else this, &c.] This other portion of Scripture, which is the sacred history of the divine institution of this order, is appointed sometimes to be read, to put the candidates in mind of the excellent original and prime design of their office: which, though it be so very proper, is not prescribed in many churches besides ours. Dean Comber.

[l] The Oath of the Queen's Sovereignty.] The papal encroachments upon the King's sovereignty in causes and over persons ecclesiastical, yea, even in matters civil, under that loose pretence of "in ordine ad spiritualia," had obtained a great strength and long continuance in this realm, notwithstanding the security the crown had by the oaths of fealty and allegiance: so that there was a necessity to unrivet those usurpations, by substituting by authority of parliament a recognition by oath of the King's supremacy, as well in causes ecclesiastical as civil: whereupon the oath of supremacy was framed; which oath as finally established by the 1 W. chap. 8, is as above. Dr. Burn.

Whatever were the immediate motives of King Henry VIII. in rejecting the power of the Pope in the supremacy of the church, no doubt can remain in the rational and reflecting breast, that he was right in point of principle, as well as of law. Notwithstanding his arbitrary notions and despotick rule, in a conciliating moment he declared to the convocation at York, "the sense of the supreme head of the Church, though offensive," he adds, "in the sound to ignorant ears, but claiming nothing more thereby than what Christian princes in the primitive times assumed to themselves in their own dominions." Brewster.

The usurped jurisdiction of the Pope being abolished, and there being no longer any danger to the liberties of the Church or State from that quarter: and divers of the princes of this realm having entertained more exalted notions of the supremacy, both ecclesiastical and civil, than were deemed consistent with the regal establishment and constitution: it was thought fit at the Revolution to declare and express, how far the regal power, in matters spiritual as well as temporal, doth extend. For this purpose the following became part of the coronation oath. "Archbishop, or Bishop: Will you to the utmost of your power maintain the laws of God, the true profession of the Gospel, and protestant reformed religion established by law? And will you preserve to the bishops and clergy of this realm, and to the churches committed to their charge, all such rights and privileges, as by law do, or shall, appertain unto them or any of them? The King or Queen shall answer, All this I promise to do." 1 W. chap. 6. And by the Act of Union, 5 Anne, chap. 8, it was enacted, that "the Sovereign at his coronation shall take and subscribe an oath, to maintain and preserve inviolably the settlement of the Church of England, and the doctrine, worship, discipline, and government thereof, as by law established."

The king having given this assurance of his government both in Church and State, it is reasonable that the security of an oath should be required of those, who damnable Doctrine and Position[m], That Princes excommunicated or deprived by the Pope, or any Authority of the See of Rome, may be deposed or murdered by their Subjects, or any other whatsoever. And I do declare, that no foreign Prince, Person, Prelate, State, or Potentate, hath, or ought to have, any Jurisdiction, Power, Superiority, Pre-eminence, or Authority, Ecclesiastical or Spiritual, within this Realm. So help me God.

¶ Then shall the Bishop examine every one of them[n] that are to be Ordered, in the presence of the people, after this manner following.

DO you trust that you are inwardly moved by the Holy Ghost[o] to take upon you this Office James i. 17. Phil. ii. 13.

---

hold any office, civil or ecclesiastical, under his jurisdiction. Dr. Burn, Brewster.

The first thing which candidates, both for deacons' and priests' orders, after they are presented, are required to do, as distinct from the rest of the congregation, is to take the oaths of allegiance and supremacy. For, as they are to be ministers of the Church established by law in this nation, it is evidently reasonable that the civil government, established by law, should be assured of the fidelity and affection of the persons, to whom it gives and secures privileges and profits; and who are entrusted with the care, amongst other matters, of making men good subjects. Now these oaths bind every person, who takes them, to "honour the king," 1 Pet. ii. 17; and, by consequence, all that are put in authority under him, both in word and in deed; and to "lead," in subjection to them, "quiet and peaceable lives," 1 Tim. ii. 2. That these things may with a good conscience be promised and performed, there is no just cause of doubt. But, if any one thinks there is, he ought to apply for satisfaction: and, till he receives it, he ought to abstain from taking the oaths: for "whatever is not of faith is sin," Rom. xiv. 23; and in this case it would be no less than perjury. Nothing is a plea sufficient for committing any sin, much less one so heinous: not even all the force that can be used. But here is no shadow of force. The persons are come voluntarily to offer themselves, well knowing that the oaths must be tendered to them: that is, they have made it their choice to take them. Abp. Secker.

Though the original form of the oath of supremacy in our nation be no older than the dawning of our Reformation under King Henry VIII.; yet the thing is as old as Scripture history; for the right of kings, which this oath declares, is set forth in God's word, where David and Solomon, Hezekiah and Jehoshaphat, 1 Chron. xxviii. 21; 1 Kings ii. 27; 2 Chron. viii. 14, 15; xx. 21, as supreme in the ecclesiastical as well as in civil affairs, made laws in matters of religion, and the priests as well as the people, were subject to them. And the New Testament declares, that the clergy are subjected to kings and princes as well as laymen. St. Chrysostom notes, that St. Paul says, "Every soul, though he be a priest or an apostle, must be subject to the higher powers," Rom. xiii. 1. And St. Bernard tells a great bishop, "If every soul must be subject, then yours: he, that attempts to except you out of that universal command, endeavours to deceive you." Dean Comber.

It is necessary however to remark, that, although the king of this country is justly and lawfully considered as the supreme head of the Church of England, it is not with any reference to his possessing in his own person, or conferring upon others, the office of the priesthood. Queens may enjoy this prerogative, when possessing in their own right the supreme power; but on them the priesthood never could be conferred. But the regulation of church government, which must reside somewhere on earth, for Christ is truly the spiritual head of his own church, cannot be reposed in better hands than in his to whom is intrusted the supreme power of regulation in the state. The Church of England considers herself as an integral part of the constitution of England; as such, their interests are interwoven: and as, in the course of national events, they have fallen and risen together, may the unity and concord, which subsists between them, contribute to the prosperity of both, and be indissoluble! Brewster.

[m] — that damnable Doctrine and Position, &c.] This position in the former part of the oath has been denied by some modern Roman Catholick universities, and probably several of that communion may be of the same opinion: but if the acknowledged doctrine of that church be unalterable, as we are assured that it is, by the highest authority which they possess, the clause must continue to be considered as a security of the rights of the Church of England and this protestant country; and fully sufficient to vindicate and confirm the second part of the oath for the exclusion of every foreign power in the jurisdiction of this realm. While "the sentence declaratory of Pope Pius the Fifth against Queen Elizabeth and the hereticks adhering to her" remains unrepealed or disavowed, this oath of supremacy will be considered as indispensably necessary. Brewster.

[n] Then shall the Bishop examine every one of them &c.] That all possible care may be taken to make or find those, who enter into holy orders, worthy; our Church hath here rightly placed these questions: not deferring and confining them to the consecration of a Bishop, as the Roman Ordinal doth, because the greatest security to religion is the careful guarding of the first entrance into its ministrations. And therefore we put these interrogatories to deacons and priests; for he that is faithful in a less, will be so in a greater trust, Luke xvi. 10. It is a calling that men can never forsake, and so it ought not to be rashly undertaken, Luke ix. 62. So that, though these questions be now first proposed to the candidates, yet it is absolutely necessary they should have read them over seriously before in private, and duly weighed them all, before they presume to answer them in the presence of God, and of his holy angels, as well as of the Bishop his representative. If they answer falsely or rashly before so great an assembly, and just before they are to receive the holy sacrament, it is an inexcusable as well as a presumptuous sin. Deon Comber.

[o] Do you trust that you are inwardly moved by the Holy Ghost &c.] It is not said, "Do you feel;" have you an immediate perception of such an impulse from the Holy Ghost, as you can distinguish from all other inward movements by its manner of impressing you? but, "Do you trust," are you on good grounds persuaded? So that the thing to be considered is what are the proper grounds of such persuasion. Abp.

and Ministration, to serve God for the promoting of his glory, and the edifying of his people?

Answer. I trust so.

The Bishop.

DO you think that you are truly called[p], according to the will Secker. There are two sorts of motions or calls to the ministry. First, the outward; whereby those, who have a right of recommending a person to the execution of any ecclesiastical office, do fix upon him as one in their judgment qualified for it; and the bishop, approving their judgment, does admit him into such office in due manner, as the laws of God and the rites of the Church do require. But the inward call is something preceding this, and is required by our Church as a qualification for the latter. Now it has been some matter of doubt, what is meant here by being "inwardly moved by the Holy Ghost." But I think no one can judge, that the compilers of this office did ever entertain such enthusiastical notions, as to imagine that no persons were to be admitted into any degree of the ecclesiastical orders, without having a special revelation from the Holy Spirit, that God had particularly commissioned them to take upon them that office, as St. Paul says of himself, that he was "an apostle called of God," Rom. i. 1; 1 Cor. i. 1. For such calls as these were miraculous and extraordinary, and remained not much longer than the apostolical times. It remains therefore, that this motion or call must be something in a more ordinary and common way.

Now we know that the Scripture teaches, that the common and ordinary graces, and all good dispositions and resolutions, are attributed to the Holy Spirit of God. "Every good and perfect gift cometh from above," James i. 17. "It is God that worketh in you, both to will and to do, of his good pleasure," Phil. ii. 13. The apostle calls the ordinary graces of love, joy, peace, long-suffering, gentleness, goodness, meekness, temperance, "the fruits of the Spirit," Gal. v. 24. Thus the belief of the Gospel is called "the spirit of faith," 2 Cor. iv. 13. And it is said expressly, that "no one saith that Jesus is the Lord, but by the Holy Ghost," 1 Cor. xii. 3. Now I conceive, all that is here meant by "inward motion of the Holy Ghost," is his ordinary motion, by which Christians are stirred up to every good resolution which they make, or good action which they do. And whereas a resolution to take upon one the office of the ministry, without any bad design mixing with it, is a good resolution; so he, that takes it up, may be properly said to be moved by the Holy Ghost to do it. For it must be undoubtedly owned, that such a resolution is a good and pious one, since the apostle says plainly, laying it down as an undoubted truth, "This is a true saying, If a man desireth the office of a bishop, he desireth a good work," 1 Tim. iii. 1. And, to be sure, in those times it seldom happened, that this or any other ecclesiastical office was desired, but only from a pure view of doing good. For these were exposed the foremost to the rage of the persecutors, and men must be actuated by a noble zeal for the Gospel, to lay themselves under the necessity of being exposed to the most grievous sufferings, or laying down their lives for the sake of it. And in these times likewise, men may, and frequently, I doubt not, do, take upon them the ecclesiastical employs upon very good aims. Therefore the meaning of this question is, whether, after an impartial examination of their hearts, they find, that they do not take this sacred employ upon them, barely for a maintenance in the world, or that thereby they may acquire those superior dignities and profits, which in these peaceable ages of Christianity some of the clergy do partake of; but only, that they think they may be serviceable in God's vineyard, and are willing to contribute the best of their labours therein, "for the promoting of God's glory and the edifying of his people." I do not think the question intends, that all, who are to be ordained, should profess, that they would be desirous of this office, though there were no temporal advantages attending it, and though it exposed men, not only to starving, but to apparent persecution and death; for then most, even the best persons, as times go now, might justly scruple the answering to such a question: but I take it to mean no more, than that, since they are to take upon them some employ or other for their own subsistence and the benefit of the community, they choose to take upon them the office of the ministry, wherein they think they can act more for God's glory, and the benefit of their Christian brethren, than by exercising any temporal calling: and that they verily believe, that it was not without the assistance of God's good Spirit, that they formed this judgment and resolution. Dr. Nicholls.

This is a great question indeed, and that which no man can give a true and positive answer to, without having searched narrowly into his own heart, and seriously considered the bent and inclinations of his soul. But it is a question very necessary to be propounded: for the Holy Ghost now supplies the place and room of our blessed Saviour in his church militant here on earth. And therefore, as it was by Him that the several offices themselves were at first constituted; so it is by Him that men are called to the execution of them; and it is by Him alone that all ecclesiastical ministrations performed by such officers, are made effectual to the purposes for which they are appointed: and therefore the Church is bound to take care, that none be admitted into her ministry, but such as she believes and hopes to be called to it by the Holy Ghost. But she can have no ground to believe this, but only from the persons themselves, none but themselves being acquainted with the motions of God's Spirit upon their own hearts. And therefore the Bishop requires them to deal plainly and faithfully with him and the Church; and to tell him, whether they really trust that they are moved by the Holy Ghost, to take this office upon them? To which every one is bound to answer, "I trust so:" not that he knows it, or is certain of it, for it is possible that his heart may deceive him in it; but that he trusts or hopes it is so.

But what ground can any one have to trust, that he is moved by the Holy Ghost to take the ministry upon him? To that I answer in short, that if a man finds that upon due examination the bishop of the diocese, where he is to serve, is satisfied of his abilities and qualifications for the ministry; and that his great end and design in undertaking it is to serve God, for the promoting of his glory and the edifying of his people; he hath good grounds to trust, that he is moved to it by the Holy Ghost, it being only by Him that any man can be duly qualified for it, and moved to take it upon him, out of so good and pious a design as that is. But, if either of these things be wanting; as, if a man be not fitted for the office, he may conclude he is not called to it by the Holy Ghost, for He neither calls nor useth any but fit instruments in what He doth; or, if a man be moved to it out of a design, not to do good, but to get applause or preferment in the world, he may thence of our Lord Jesus Christ, and the due order of this Realm, to the Ministry of the Church?

Answer. I think so.

The Bishop.

DO you unfeignedly believe[q] all the Canonical Scriptures of the Old and New Testament? 2 Tim. iii. 16.

infer that he is not moved to it by the Spirit of God, but by the spirit of pride and covetousness, and then can have no ground to expect, that the Holy Ghost should ever bless and assist him in the execution of his office. According to these rules therefore, they, who are to be ordained, may discern whether they can truly give the answer required to this great question that will be propounded to them. As for their qualifications for it, the bishop hath already approved of them: but, as to their main end and design in undertaking the ministry, that must be left to God and their own consciences, who alone know it, and so can best judge whether they can truly say, that they "trust they are moved to it by the Holy Ghost." Bp. Beveridge.

The following is Calvin's definition of the inward call, in his book of Institutes, which being published about ten years before the Ordinal of Edward the Sixth, might probably be a guide to our Reformers in framing this question: "that it is the good testimony of our own heart, that we have taken this office, neither for ambition, covetousness, nor any evil design, but out of a true fear of God, and a desire to edify the church." Now this we may know by duly considering, whether it were the external honours and revenues, that are annexed to this profession, or any other worldly end, that first or chiefly did incline us to the ministry. If so, we were moved by carnal objects, and led on by our own corrupt will and affections. But if our principal motives were spiritual, that is, a zeal for God's glory, and a desire to promote the salvation of souls, then we were "moved by the Spirit, and inwardly called by God." I grant we cannot but know, there are honours and rewards, piously and justly annexed to this holy function: and, as men, we cannot but hope for a competency of them; yea, this may be a subordinate motive. But I may say of the priesthood, as Christ of the kingdom of heaven, it must be sought in the first place for itself, and the other only as additional consequences thereof, Matt. vi. 33. We must love the duties of this calling; reading, study, praying, preaching, &c., more than the rewards. Yea, if persecution should ever strip the Church of these provisions, as it hath often done, we must not cast off our holy ministrations, 1 Cor. ix. 16.

This inward call thus explained is the first and one of the principal qualifications for him, that is to be employed about heavenly things. And therefore it is inserted, not only into ours, but other reformed offices for ordination; where it is inquired, "if they believe that God by the Church calls them to this ministry, and if they did not seek for worldly riches or glory," as in the Liturgy of the Belgick church. Our candidates know this question will be asked: wherefore let them examine their hearts strictly, and answer it in the sincerity of their souls; not doubting but that good Spirit, who excited them to this work, will assist and bless all their performances. Dean Comber.

[p] Do you think that you are truly called &c.] That is, Are you conscious, neither of any defect in body or mind, nor of any other impediment, which may, for the present, if not for ever, be, according to the laws of God or man, a just obstacle in your way. Abp. Secker. This question relates to the outward call, or regular way of admission to holy orders: and seems to be put to the persons to be ordained, that they may make an open profession of their owning the validity of the orders then conferred upon them. For by answering to this question they hereby own, that the office and manner whereby they are admitted into orders, are agreeable to the will of our Saviour, that the several ceremonies, used in the Roman church in their Ordinal, and in ours omitted, are not essential to the conferring of holy orders; and that the person, who confers these orders, that is, the bishop, has a just commission so to do from our blessed Lord. And lastly, they declare, that they do think, not only that what the legislative power of this nation has established, namely, the renouncing of the Papal supremacy, &c., is just and reasonable; but that they do not know in themselves any uncanonical or unstatutable impediment, which may hinder them from being admitted into the same. Dr. Nicholls.

Nothing is so easy to counterfeit, as a message from the gods, saith the slave in Plautus: and experience tells us, nothing is more readily believed among the vulgar than such a pretence managed by a bold undertaker: so that the inward call hath been in all ages pretended to by all the impostors in religion. Among the Jews there were false prophets, who gave out that "God called them;" but He declared "they ran before they were sent, and prophesied out of their own heart," or, as the original imports, "made themselves prophets," Jer. xxiii. 21; Ezek. xiii. 3. In Christian times this set up Montanus, and many other enthusiastical hereticks. And though Mahomet had no power of miracles, no gift of prophecy, no learning nor good life to prove his mission, yet he boldly said, "God was his witness that he sent him." In the ignorant and superstitious ages the Roman Church gave very great encouragement to men and women that were illiterate, to preach upon pretended commissions from Christ, or visions and dreams which they boasted of. And it is the weak credulity of most of our sectaries, which exposes them to admit bold pretenders to the Spirit to be their teachers, without any preceding trial.

To prevent this common but dangerous cheat, the primitive church punished those, who presumed to exercise any ecclesiastical office, while they were laymen, with excommunication. And there were, from the first settling of churches, every where publick forms drawn up for examining such as desired to be ordained, and then solemnly to admit them: which, no doubt, was agreeable "to the will of our Lord Jesus Christ, who inspired his apostles to give rules to their successors the bishops, for trying all that were to be promoted to holy orders." Whence we may infer, that our Saviour and his apostles did not think that any man's word was to be taken as to his "inward call," till his claim had been inquired into and approved by the governours of his church, and till they also gave him an external call. Therefore to fix an order in every church for the solemn trial and admission of ministers, is "according to the will of Christ," in general. And since "the order duly settled in this realm" is so agreeable to primitive practice and to God's word, we may safely say, that such as are admitted according to this "due order," are admitted according to "the will of Jesus Christ." Dean Comber.

[q] Do you unfeignedly believe &c.] This question is put to the candidates, because unless they do unfeignedly believe the holy Scriptures, they are not fit to be ministers of the word and sacraments contained and prescribed in them. Bp. Beveridge. For an ordinary Answer. I do believe them.

The Bishop.

2 Kings xxii. 8. Neh. viii. 3. Acts xiii. 14, 15. 27. Luke iv. 16. Col. iv. 16.

WILL you diligently read the same[r] unto the people assembled in the Church where you shall be appointed to serve[s]?

Answer. I will.

The Bishop.

IT appertaineth to the Office of a Deacon[t], in the Church where he shall be appointed to serve, to assist the Priest in Divine Service[u],

---

Christian, the Creed, which is taken out of the Scripture, is a sufficient confession of faith. But a minister ought to declare himself more comprehensively, and publickly own, "that all Scripture is given by inspiration of God," 2 Tim. iii. 16. And whereas the Roman and Lutheran churches only ask them if they believe the Creed, we and some other of the reformed churches more justly inquire, if they believe all that God hath revealed in the divinely inspired books. Now in order to answer this question with judgment and sincerity, the candidate must know, which are and which are not canonical books. There are some books of Scripture, of which no doubt ever was; and the ancient church made a rule or canon, that these, and no other, should be received for divinely inspired books; and thence they have the name of "Canonical." Now these are declared by our Church, exactly as they were of old. As to other books, we do with the ancients call them "Apocryphal," because their being writ by inspiration doth not appear. Wherefore, though we read them sometimes for instruction in morality, we do not prove our faith by them, nor take them into the Canon: yea, we censure it as a bold innovation in the late Council of Trent, contrary to all antiquity, to declare those apocryphal books to be of equal authority with the canonical books, which were always received in the church. These therefore, and only these, our candidate is required to believe, because the writers were inspired by the Holy Ghost, and all therein contained was revealed by the God of truth. Hence ministers are to take arguments, to confirm their fate and convince gainsayers: hence they gather rules to direct their own and their people's manners: for this is a complete repository for both faith and good life. These are to be believed and received in the first place; and then there is no need to prove any thing to be true or good, but only to shew it is asserted or commanded in holy Scripture. Dean Comber.

[r] Will you diligently read the same &c.] "Diligently," that is, articulately, solemnly, piously, so that your hearers may be edified. Brewster. The former questions are concerning things necessary to be known; and so the answers to them are only assertory. These contain divers things necessary to be done; the answers to which are promissory, and bind the soul of the party answering, to perform that which he so solemnly engages. First, "diligently to read the Scripture to the people" in publick, for this was always a principal part of divine service. The Jews of old constantly had the Law and the Prophets read in their synagogues, 2 Kings xxii. 8; Neh. viii. 3; Acts xiii. 14, 15. 27: and our Saviour Himself did this office, Luke iv. 16. When the primitive Christians met, especially on Sundays, we are assured by the most ancient fathers, that the reading of the divine writings of the Old and New Testament was never omitted; and a considerable part of the time spent in their assemblies was employed in this exercise. It appears also that they collected tables of proper lessons for the whole year out of the most practical parts of Scripture, which were set down in Lectionaries, some of which are still extant, being attributed to St. Jerome, and to other ancient authors, from whence our Epistles and Gospels are derived. But in later ages the church of Rome had brought in so many false, fabulous, and foolish legends for their numerous saints' days, that the reading of the holy Scripture was almost totally excluded: wherefore our wise Reformers rejected all such legendary stuff, and restored the primitive usage; that is, they commanded, "that nothing should be read in the church but the canonical Scripture, except some few practical parts of the Apocrypha." See the Preface to our Common Prayer, Concerning the service of the Church. Dean Comber.

[s] — in the Church where you shall be appointed to serve?] This is explained by the 33rd Canon, which injoins that every minister should have a church, and that that church should be the great scene of his duties. This injunction was intended to exclude teachers ordained to no charge; or those, who, under the pretence of preaching the Gospel, preached themselves. The appointment of stationary ministers is a valuable part of our Church establishment. Brewster.

Not only our own canons, but those of the ancient church, expressly forbid the ordaining of any clergyman, without a title to some cathedral or parochial church, wherein he is to celebrate divine offices. Dean Comber.

[t] It appertaineth to the Office of a Deacon, &c.] This comprehensive question doth briefly, but fully, set out all the other duties peculiar to "the office of a deacon:" first, with intent to instruct the candidate in all parts of that weighty office he undertakes; and then to require his solemn promise that he will perform them by God's help. It is not fit he should take a place in God's house, till he know what are the duties thereof; nor can he wisely or honestly engage to do all these particulars, till he know them: wherefore the bishop lays them plainly before him, that he may not afterwards pretend to excuse himself by ignorance. Dean Comber.

This question, reciting the duties of deacons, may seem to have some difficulty in it; as it assigns to them occupations, which the Acts of the Apostles do not in the history of their appointment; and as they are but little employed now in the single business there allotted to them, Acts vi. But that passage of Scripture plainly was intended to set forth, only the immediate and urgent reason of ordaining them, not the whole of what was then, or soon after, given them in charge. For we find in the same book, that Philip the deacon both preached and baptized, Acts viii. 5—13. 26—40. And the qualifications, required in deacons by St. Paul, 1 Tim. iii. 8—13, intimate very clearly, that more things must, even then, have been incumbent upon them, than administering to the relief of the poor. Accordingly from the primitive ages downwards, they are described, as performing occasionally most of the same offices, which they do now, and being, what their name denotes, assistant and subservient to priests in all proper employments. And the less they are engaged in their chief original one, the more opportunity, and the more need they have, to shew diligence in the other good works, belonging or suited peculiarly to their station. Abp. Secker.

[u] — to assist the Priest in Divine Service,] A deacon, and specially when he ministereth the Holy Communion[v], and to help him in the distribution thereof, and to read holy Scriptures and Homilies[x] in the Church; and to instruct the youth in the Catechism[y]; in the absence of the Priest to baptize Infants[z], and to preach if he be admitted thereto by the Bishop[a]. And furthermore, it is his Office[b], where provision is so made, to search for the sick, poor, and impotent people of the parish, to intimate their estates, names, and places where they dwell, unto the Curate[c], that by his exhortation they may as his very name imports, is to "minister" to a bishop or a priest in the celebration of divine offices, and to serve those of the higher orders: which of old was generally practised; especially in the Greek church, where the deacon repeats the short Litany, and some brief Collects, and pronounces some sentences, such as, "Let us attend," "Let us hear the holy Gospel," and the like. And in our cathedrals they often read the Litany, the Epistle, and the Confession at the altar; and the priests perform all the rest of the service. Before the modern invention of lay parish-clerks, there was generally a priest and a deacon in every church, the latter of which repeated the Confession, Lord's Prayer, and the Creed, after the priest, and made all the responses as our clerks now do: but of late deacons are usually fixed as curates under some eminent priest, in whose absence the whole divine service is left to them; and they read all the prayers except the Absolution, which it is the privilege of a priest alone to repeat. Dean Comber.

[v] — and specially when he ministereth the Holy Communion, &c.] The deacon's office as to the Holy Communion remains the same that it was in the primitive church when they were never allowed to consecrate the sacred elements: for none but a bishop, or a priest at least, was permitted to do that; and the penalty upon a deacon, if he presumed to consecrate, was to be deposed. His office is, when the sacrament is consecrated, to assist the bishop or priest in distributing the same to the congregation; which was their part in this mystery as anciently as Justin Martyr's time: but especially they use to distribute the cup, of which then the people, not the priest alone, used to drink; and it appears that the custom in the Roman church also was, till of late time, for all the people to receive the cup; or else this could not have been the deacon's office there, who need not assist the bishop or priest in giving the cup, if he alone had drunk of it. Dean Comber.

[x] — to read holy Scriptures and Homilies] It is the office of the deacon to "read the holy Scripture to the people," as was shewed before: but it is farther remarked here, that "he is also to read homilies in the church;" which is no new injunction; for an ancient council orders, that, "when the priest is infirm and cannot preach, the deacon shall read the homilies of the fathers." Dean Comber. See page 294, note l.

[y] — and to instruct the youth in the Catechism;] For deacons to catechize the youth, is a duty injoined not only by our Church here, and in the fifty-ninth Canon, but was so likewise by the ancient church. Indeed in some churches the catechist was a distinct officer, not determined to any one particular order. But where there was no particular officer assigned to this duty, neither was it taken up by the bishop or presbyter, it fell to the deacons on course. Dr. Nicholls.

[z] — in the absence of the Priest to baptize Infants.] A fifth duty of the deacons is to baptize infants, which we may gather from St. Philip the deacon's baptizing the Samaritans, whom the apostles were sent to confirm afterwards, Acts viii. 12—15, &c. We see in Scripture baptism was reckoned one of the lowest kinds of ministries; so that our Saviour did not baptize, but his disciples, John iv. 2. St. Peter commanded others, probably some of the deacons, to baptize Cornelius and his household, Acts x. 48; and St. Paul saith, "he had baptized but few," 1 Cor. i. 15—17. The Roman pontifical reckons it among the ordinary works of a deacon, to wait at the altar and baptize. But, out of respect to the higher order of priesthood, our Church seems to allow this to be done by a deacon, only "in the absence of a priest;" because baptism, being a sacrament, should be administered by the principal minister that is present: though there is no doubt but a deacon's baptizing is as valid as that of a priest. Dean Comber.

[a] — and to preach if he be admitted thereto by the Bishop.] It does not appear by any marks in antiquity, that the deacons had ever any right to preach in the church by virtue of their order. And our Church, following the primitive practice, has not allowed the deacons to preach by virtue of their orders, but only by the permission of the bishop; who, if he shall find them upon examination to be of competent abilities, may afford them a licence to exercise their talents in this way. Dr. Nicholls.

Forasmuch as a deacon is hereby permitted to baptize, to catechize, to preach, to assist in the administration of the Lord's Supper; so also by parity of reason he hath used to solemnize matrimony, and to bury the dead. And in general it seemeth, that he may perform all the other offices in the liturgy, which a priest can do, except only consecrating the sacrament of the Lord's Supper, and except also the pronouncing of the Absolution. Moreover until a person is admitted to the order of priesthood, he is not capable of any benefice or ecclesiastical promotion. Dr. Burn.

[b] — And furthermore, it is his Office, &c.] The part of the deacon's office out of the church is that, which was the original cause of the institution of the order, namely, to take care of the poor. From early writers of the church it appears to have been the practice, for deacons to look out fit objects of charity, in order to their being relieved by the oblations of the faithful, under the direction of the bishop. This was agreeable to what our Church here injoins. Dean Comber, Dr. Nicholls. This was the most ancient duty of a deacon, and the immediate cause of the institution of the order. This rule was made in England, while the poor subsisted chiefly by voluntary charities, and before the settlement of rates, or other fixed and certain provisions: pursuant to which provision, our laws have devolved that care upon the churchwardens and overseers of the poor; which last office was created on purpose for that end. Dr. Burn.

[c] — unto the Curate,] That is, to the rector or vicar, who hath the "cure" of souls. And here it is obvious to remark the ambiguity of the word "curate," as is the case also with the word "minister." Sometimes it expresseth the person, whether priest or deacon, who officiateth under the rector or vicar, employed by him as his assistant, or to supply the place in his absence: sometimes it denoteth the person officiating in general, whether he be rector, vicar, or assistant curate, or who-be relieved with the alms of the Parishioners, or others. Will you do this gladly and willingly?

Answer. I will so do, by the help of God.

The Bishop.

1 Tim. iv. 16. WILL you apply all your diligence[d] to frame and fashion your own lives, and the lives of your families[e], according to the Doctrine of Christ; and to make both yourselves and them, as much as in you lieth, wholesome examples of the flock of Christ. 1 Pet. v. 3. Tit. ii. 7.

1 Tim. iii. 11, 12.

Answer. I will so do, the Lord being my helper.

The Bishop.

WILL you reverently obey your Ordinary[f], and other chief Ministers of the Church, and soever performeth the service for that time: sometimes it denoteth exclusively, as in this place, the rector, vicar, or person beneficed, who hath "curam animarum." Dr. Burn.

---

[d] Will you apply all your diligence &c.] After the duties specially relating to their office and the publick, the bishop proceeds to demand of them security concerning their personal duties and private conversation, requiring a promise from each of them, that they will order their own lives, and, as much as in them lies, the lives of their families, according to the rules of the Gospel; and that so exactly, that he and they may be, not only innocent, but exemplary to other Christians. Dean Comber. The question extends, to avoiding in their own behaviour, and restraining in that of their families, follies, levities, mean and disreputable actions, as well as crimes and vices. The apostle injoins "deacons and their wives to be grave," 1 Tim. iii. 8. 11; much more then ought priests. He injoins every Christian to "abstain from all appearance of evil," 1 Thess. v. 22. And our blessed Lord injoins all his disciples to be "wise" as well as "harmless," Matt. x. 16. Let the clergy govern themselves and theirs by these rules: and consider frequently, whether they observe them well. For without it they will neither gain esteem, nor do good. Abp. Secker.

The clergy are obliged, not only to perform the duties of Christianity, and to avoid all broad transgressions of the laws of our blessed Saviour, but they also stand engaged to discharge them in a very remarkable and eminent manner, living up to the height of the Christian precepts as far as the frailty of human nature will allow; that the laity may take pattern from their example, and that they may instruct them by their lives as well as by their preaching. For actions have a greater influence upon men than words; shewing that the thing recommended may be done, and that the exhortations are made, not out of form, but in very good earnest, when the preacher follows his own advice, and persuades others to do nothing but what he does himself. This is what is commanded by the holy Scripture. For St. Paul commands Titus, to shew himself "a pattern of good works; in doctrine shewing uncorruptness, gravity, sincerity, sound speech which cannot be condemned; that he that is of the contrary part may be ashamed, having no evil thing to say of him," Tit. ii. 7, 8. He likewise exhorts Timothy, to "take heed unto himself and to the doctrine; for in so doing he should save himself, and those that hear him," 1 Tim. iv. 16. St. Peter orders, that the pastors or elders be "an example to the flock," 1 Pet. v. 3. The primitive writers of the church are full of excellent rules upon this head. Dr. Nicholls.

[e] — and the lives of your families,] This is the injunction of the apostle, "Let the deacons be husbands of one wife, ruling their children and their own houses well," 1 Tim. iii. 12. And the same command was inforced by the ancient laws of the Church, which were much stricter concerning clergymen's wives, children, and servants than those of the laity. The houses of ministers should be the schools of virtue, little emblems of a church, and patterns for all their parishioners, of peace and good order, sobriety and devotion. Dr. Nicholls, Dean Comber.

It is natural to observe, that St. Paul by these rules, and our Church by this part of her question, supposes clergymen of all orders may have wives and children, and ought to be at liberty to marry, or live single, as they judge to be most expedient. Yea, we affirm that the practice of the Roman church inforcing the married to renounce their wives, and single persons to vow celibacy, before their ordination, is contrary to Scripture and primitive usage. It is unreasonable in itself; a snare to the parties who make, and a scandal to that church which requires, this vow. It is evident from Scripture, that St. Peter had a wife, Matt. viii. 14; and that St. Paul asserts his right to marry, if he had pleased, 1 Cor. ix. 5. One of the ancients, Ignatius, affirms that he had a wife, as well as St. Peter and others of the apostles: and another, St. Ambrose, affirms, that all the apostles had wives, except St. John and St. Paul. Philip, the deacon and evangelist, had a wife and children, Acts xxi. 8, 9. So had Aquila, an apostolical preacher, Acts xviii. 26. And the rules given by St. Paul to Timothy are a demonstration, that he allowed bishops and deacons to be married men; nor is there any thing in all Scripture that forbids them this liberty. Dean Comber.

[f] Will you reverently obey your Ordinary, &c.] See page 61, note h. No regular society can subsist without a due subordination of the inferiors to their superiors. So it is in houses and cities, kingdoms and armies. So in the Church, now it is settled, the bishops are subjected to their metropolitan, and take an oath of canonical obedience to him, and to reverence him. The like oath deans and archdeacons take to the bishops: and the inferior priests and deacons are required to promise at their ordination obedience, not only to their bishop, but to "other chief ministers" who are set over them, and have the care of them; that is, deans in cathedrals, and archdeacons as to the rural clergy; which is necessary to preserve peace and prevent disorder. The superior must give orders, and inferiors obey them; otherwise all things would soon run into confusion: and we may gather that God is the original of this subjection "in all churches of the saints, because he is not the author of confusion, but of peace," 1 Cor. xiv. 33.

It may be noted also, that the candidates promise "gladly to obey:" that is, readily and willingly without murmuring, or too nice disputing, unless the thing injoined be notoriously evil; for to be very scrupulous proceeds from the pride of inferiors, and tends to overthrow the superior's authority. And the law decrees in favour of the inferior, if he were commanded, and obeyed, in a doubtful case; because in things only them to whom the charge and government over you is committed, following with a glad mind and will their godly admonitions?

2 Tim. iv. 2. Tit. ii. 15.

Answer. I will endeavour myself[g], the Lord being my helper.

¶ Then the Bishop laying his Hands[h] severally upon the Head of every one of them, humbly kneeling before him[i], shall say, Acts vi 6.

TAKE thou Authority to execute the office of a Deacon[k] in the Church of God committed unto doubtful it is safer to obey than dispute. Yet this does not give superiors any unlimited power to command any thing that is evil: for they only promise to obey their "godly admonitions." So that such as govern in the church must take heed, that they do not injoin any thing, but that which is either good in itself, or apparently tends to promote piety and virtue, and is not evil: for the oath of canonical obedience also hath this limitation, that they shall be obeyed "in all," yet only in "lawful and honest things." Dean Comber.

The duty of obedience, which is owing from the clergy to their bishops, has been strictly required by the church in all ages. This is pressed so frequently in St. Ignatius's epistles, that this holy and ancient author seems to have had this object principally in view, when he wrote them. The same doctrine is taught by other of the primitive writers, as particularly St. Cyprian, who makes disobedience to the bishop to be a falling away from the catholick church. The same father attributes the rise of all heresies and schisms to a disobedience to the bishop. It were infinite to insist on all the exhortations, which are found in the writings of the later fathers to this purpose. Dr. Nicholls.

The inferior clergy would be bound to the obedience here required, though they were not to promise it: for both reason and Scripture demand it. Still more firmly are they bound, when they have promised it, though it were of small importance. But it is of very great, not only to the dignity and ease of their superiors, but to their own interest, and the benefit of the whole church. Our Saviour both commands, and prayed for, unity amongst his followers in the most expressive terms, John xiii. 34, 35; xvii. 11, 12. 21—23. Without union there cannot be a sufficient degree either of strength or beauty: and without subordination there cannot long be union. Therefore "obey," as the apostle directs, "them that have the rule over you," Heb. xiii. 17. Abp. Secker.

[g] Answer. I will endeavour myself, &c.] The first questions proposed to the candidates were concerning only their present opinion and faith. Those, which have followed, concern their future behaviour, and diligence, and faithfulness in discharging the office committed to them: and therefore their answers are all so many solemn promises made to God and his church, to act accordingly: obliging themselves in the presence of God, that they will diligently read the holy Scriptures, and gladly execute the whole office of a deacon, there declared to them; that they will apply all their diligence to frame and fashion their own lives and the lives of their families according to the doctrine of Christ; and that they will reverently obey their ordinary. For, being asked by the bishop, whether they will do these things or no? every one answers, "I will;" or, "I will do so, by the help of God;" or, "I will endeavour myself, the Lord being my helper." Which promises, being so solemnly made before God and his church, are certainly as binding as if they were made upon oath, and ought to be as religiously observed. Insomuch that as all Christians, as such, should always remember and keep the vows and promises they made, when they were baptized; so all ministers, as such, should always remember and keep those vows and promises which they made, when they were ordained. For which purposes it is very convenient, if not necessary, for us often to read over the office of ordination, or at least that part of it which contains the answers and promises which we made to God and his church, when we were received into the ministry of the Gospel. Bp. Beveridge.

[h] Then the Bishop laying his Hands &c.] This ceremony has been always esteemed so essential a part of ordination, that any other way of conferring orders without it has been judged invalid. This imposition of hands undoubtedly took its rise from the practice of the Jewish church, in initiating persons for performing any sacred office, or conferring any employ of dignity or power. Thus Joshua was inaugurated to his high office, Numb. xxvii. 23. Hence the Jews derived their custom of ordaining their rabbies by imposition of hands. The same ceremony we find used by the apostles, as often as they admitted any new members into the ministry of the church. For when they ordained the first deacons, it is recorded, that, after praying, "they laid hands on them," Acts vi. 6. At the ordination of Barnabas and Paul it is said, that they "fasted and prayed and laid their hands on them," Acts xiii. 3. When St. Paul bids Timothy have regard to the graces conferred in his ordination, he observes that these were conferred by imposition of hands: "Neglect not the gift that is in thee, which was given thee by prophecy, with the laying on of the hands of the presbytery," 1 Tim. iv. 14. And in his other epistle he exhorts him to "stir up the gift of God which was in him by the putting on of his hands," 2 Tim. i. 6. The primitive Christians, following exactly after this copy, never admitted any into orders but with this ceremony: so that the ancient councils seldom use any other word for ordination than "imposition of hands;" and the ancient writers of the church signify, that the clerical character, and the gifts of the Spirit, were conferred by this action.

It must be observed here, that the imposition of the bishop's hand alone is required in the ordination of a deacon, in conformity to the usage of the ancient church. Dr. Nicholls.

This was always a distinction between the three superior and five forementioned inferior orders, (see page 671, note a,) that the first were given by imposition of hands, and the second were not. Dr. Burn.

[i] — humbly kneeling before him,] When a commission of so high a nature is granted from heaven, the person, to whom it is granted, cannot receive it in too humble a posture: and therefore our Church, agreeably to ancient practice, has injoined the ordained person to receive the imposition of the bishop's hands in the posture of kneeling. Dr. Nicholls.

Though the bishop pronounces the words, yet Christ gives the grace, and confers the gifts; which therefore the candidate must receive with the profoundest humility: and no posture so fit as that of prayer. For he must all the time humbly beg of Jesus, to confirm the words of his servant the bishop; and that he would give him all those good qualities, which are requisite for a just and conscientious discharge of this office. Dean Comber.

thee; In the Name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost. Amen.

¶ Then shall the Bishop deliver to every one of them the New Testament, saying[l], TAKE thou Authority to read the Gospel in the Church of God, and to preach the same, if thou be thereto licensed by the Bishop himself.

¶ Then one of them, appointed by the Bishop[m], shall read the Gospel.

St. Luke xii. 35.

LET your loins be girded about, and your lights burning; and ye yourselves like unto men that wait for their Lord, when he will return from the wedding; that, when he cometh and knocketh, they may open unto him immediately. Blessed are those servants, whom the Lord when he cometh shall find watching. Verily I say unto you, that he shall gird himself, and make them to sit down to meat, and will come forth and serve them. And if he shall come in the second watch, or come in the third watch, and find them so, blessed are those servants.

¶ Then shall the Bishop proceed in the Communion[n], and all that are Ordered shall

---

[k] Take thou Authority to execute the office of a Deacon &c.] There are generally certain forms used in the admissions to all offices civil and military, and so it ought to be in these that are ecclesiastical. But because there are no forms prescribed in Scripture, every church hath taken the liberty to compose its own formularies. As to our form, it is owing to our Reformation; and is, as it ought to be, a clear explication of the ceremony of laying on of hands; which signifies, as was noted, collation of power and delegating authority: and therefore the bishop says, "Take thou authority &c." Hereby the bishop, in whom the supreme power is lodged, grants authority to the candidate to execute the office of a deacon; which is his commission and rightful call, giving him a right to perform all the duties annexed to that order. Yet, according to the example of the Eastern church, the bishop declares he doth not this purely of himself, but by a power granted him by God: and therefore he adds "In the Name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost;" to intimate that the holy and ever-blessed Trinity doth confer this order on him. For to do a thing in the name of God is to do it as his representative, and by his authority: and so the person is promoted to be a deacon, ministerially by the bishop, but originally and principally by God Himself, from whom he receives this honour, humbly kneeling on his knees; and he should remember that to Him he must one day give an account, how he hath performed his duty, which cannot but strike his mind with reverence and holy fear, while these solemn words are repeated. Dean Comber.

[l] Then shall the Bishop deliver to every one of them the New Testament, saying, &c.] This is the second significant rite used in our ordination; concerning which it may be observed, that the deacons in the Christian church are made after the pattern of those ministers among the Jews, whose office was to keep the book of the law, and, upon occasion, to read it publickly in their synagogues; in whose stead our Saviour Himself did once minister, Luke iv. 20. So that the place was honourable, though inferior to that of the ruler of the synagogue. In like manner the deacon's proper office was to read the holy Scripture in the Christian assemblies, as divers of the ancients have particularly noted. Dean Comber.

This usage of delivering the New Testament was formerly appropriated to the ordination of a reader. But, whereas our Church has set aside that order, as being only of ecclesiastical institution, and laid this duty of reading the lessons upon the deacon, as it was exercised by him in the more primitive times, she has thought fit to retain the custom of delivering the New Testament into his hands, which was used in the ordination of a reader. Dr. Nicholls.

[m] Then one of them, appointed by the Bishop, &c.] In our usual service the Epistle and Gospel stand together; but in this office they are separated, and the ordination itself intervenes, as it did of old. The reason of setting the Gospel immediately after the ordination was, that the new ordained person might immediately exercise his authority, and give proof of his fitness for this part of his office, in solemnly reading the Gospel. The portions chosen for this occasion have been divers. This, which was appointed by our Reformers under King Edward the Sixth, is extremely appropriate; for the very name of a deacon signifies a servant: and here they have the directions of their great Master Christ Jesus, how they are to prepare themselves for his second coming, by doing their duty well in that station which He hath given them in his household; and his promise of a reward, if they be found in well-doing. Dean Comber.

[n] Then shall the Bishop proceed in the Communion, &c.] It hath been the practice of all churches to celebrate this sacrament when holy orders are given: the old canons obliging the bishop who ordains to consecrate, and the ordained all to receive. And it is upon several accounts very proper on that occasion. First, as it gives them an opportunity to examine themselves, and to repent of their sins: for this will purify their souls before they enter upon a sacred office. Secondly, the worthy receiving of this holy sacrament will stir up in them a fervent love to their dear Redeemer, and an hearty charity for those whom He hath bought with his most precious blood: which two great principles will inspire them with a great zeal for the glory of Christ, and the good of his people's souls. Thirdly, this sacrament was instituted, to convey to such, as are duly prepared for it, large measures of his grace; and they need a more than ordinary share of it, to fit them for so spiritual an office. Fourthly, the Lord's Supper is a federal feast, wherein, as our Lord ratifies his covenant of mercy and grace to us, so do we seal our vows and promises of duty and obedience to Him: and those newly ordained have those engagements yet warm upon their lips, which they have just now made to Jesus by his embassadour; all which solemn promises of services, to be done in the office they have undertaken in Christ's family, they ratify and confirm by receiving this sacrament. Dean Comber.

tarry, and receive the Holy Communion the same day with the Bishop.

¶ The Communion ended, after the last Collect, and immediately before the Benediction, shall be said these Collects following[o].

Ps. ciii. 5; cxlv. 16. Luke i. 53. James i. 17.

ALMIGHTY God, giver of all good things, who of thy great goodness hast vouchsafed to accept and take these thy Servants unto the Office of Deacons in thy Church; Make them, we beseech thee, O Lord, to be modest, humble, and constant in their Ministration, to have a ready will to observe all spiritual Discipline; that they having always the testimony of a good conscience, and continuing ever stable and strong in thy Son Christ, may so well behave themselves in this inferior Office, that they may be found worthy to be called unto the higher Ministries in thy Church; through the same thy Son our Saviour Jesus Christ, to whom be glory and honour world without end. Amen.

1 Tim. iii. 6. 1 Pet. v. 5. James iv. 6.

2 Cor. i. 12. 1 Tim. iii. 9 1 John iii. 20, 21. Heb. x. 22.

1 Tim. iii. 15. Luke xvi. 10.

Matt. xxv. 29.

PREVENT us, O Lord, in all our doings with thy most gracious favour, and further us with thy continual help; that in all our works begun, continued, and ended in thee, we may glorify thy holy Name, and finally by thy mercy obtain everlasting life; through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

THE peace of God, which passeth all understanding, keep your hearts and minds in the knowledge and love of God, and of his Son Jesus Christ our Lord: And the Blessing of God Almighty, the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghost, be amongst you, and remain with you always. Amen.

¶ And here it must be declared unto the Deacon, that he must continue in that Office of a Deacon the space of a whole year[p] (except for reasonable causes it shall otherwise seem good unto the Bishop) to the intent he may be perfect, and well expert in the things appertaining to the Ecclesiastical Administration. In executing whereof, if he be found faithful and diligent, he may be admitted by his Diocesan to the Order of Priesthood, at the times appointed in the Canon; or else, on urgent occasion, upon some other Sunday, or Holy-day, in the face of the Church, in such manner and form as hereafter followeth.

---

[o] — shall be said these Collects following.] In all the ancient Western offices there is a prayer in the post-communion, which is called "The Benediction:" and, in the Eastern form, "the bishop is to bless every one of them after he hath ordained them." To which this Collect of ours, and the like in other reformed churches, do exactly agree: for they are all in precatory style. Since God alone can properly and originally bless; and therefore bishops, ministers, and parents bless, by praying to God for those whom they would have to be blessed. Meanwhile the newly ordained should consider these petitions, so as to excite him to endeavour vigorously to be such as they pray he may be: humble and modest in his carriage and temper; constant and diligent in his ministrations; regular and strictly canonical in his life: for here are all sorts of motives laid before him to encourage his resolutions and endeavours herein. The spiritual motives are, the peace of his own conscience; the confirming of his hope and faith in Christ; and the securing of his perseverance as well as his eternal reward: the temporal motives are, his being an ornament to the church; an honour to his order, while he remains of it; and his deserving justly to be promoted in time to the highest office in Christ's church: and St. Paul hath taught us, if we desire the office of a bishop, only as a greater opportunity to do more good, it is very lawful. To rise by these means is commendable: and it is an innocent, yea, a laudable ambition, to act well in this inferior station, that we may be called to a higher. Dean Comber.

[p] — must continue in that Office of a Deacon the space of a whole year] The reason of this is so evident, that all churches have founded such a like order upon it: for the custom hath ever been, to keep the deacons for some time in that office, that they may be perfect and expert in ecclesiastical administrations, before they go higher. Hence the canons, here and elsewhere, strictly forbid the ordaining of any one both priest and deacon in one day. In several ages of the Church the time between these orders hath been various. Of old it was much longer. Later councils agree with us, and fix the time to one year. But so that both they and we leave it to the bishop's prudence, who upon reasonable causes, that is, the extraordinary merit of the person, the evident profit of the Church, or some urgent necessity, may ordain some men sooner. Though ordinarily it is much better to make them stay the year of probation in this first order: besides this keeps up that apostolical and primitive distinction of the three orders, which by no means ought to be broken or confounded. Dean Comber.

THE FORM AND MANNER

OF

ORDERING OF PRIESTS[q].

¶ When the day appointed by the Bishop is come[r], after Morning Prayer is ended, there shall be a Sermon or Exhortation, declaring the Duty and Office of such as come to be admitted Priests; how necessary that Order is in the Church of Christ, and also how the people ought to esteem them in their Office.

¶ First, the Archdeacon, or, in his absence, one appointed in his stead, shall present unto the Bishop (sitting in his chair near to the holy Table) all them that shall receive the Order of Priesthood that day (each of them being decently habited) and say,

REVEREND Father in God, I present unto you these persons present, to be admitted to the Order of Priesthood.

The Bishop.

TAKE heed that the persons, whom ye present unto us, be apt and meet, for their learning and godly conversation, to exercise their Ministry duly, to the honour of God, and the edifying of his Church.

¶ The Archdeacon shall answer,

I Have enquired of them, and also examined them, and think them so to be.

¶ Then the Bishop shall say unto the people;

GOOD people, these are they whom we purpose, God willing, to receive this day unto the holy Office of Priesthood: For after [q] The Form and Manner of Ordering of Priests.] Our English word "priest" comes immediately from the French word "prestre" or "prêtre;" which is but a contraction of "presbyter," or πρεσβύτερος, and in its proper signification does denote no more than an elder. But there seems to be an abuse of the word crept into our language, and that of considerable standing: namely, to use the word only for a sacrificer. For, according to our common way of speaking, whenever the word "priest" is named, people have presently a notion of sacrifice, which was never intended by the first imposition of the word. The compilers of the Scotch Liturgy, taking notice of the common interpretation which was put upon this word, and the inconveniences which attended it, chose to use the original word "presbyter," instead of "priest," throughout that whole Common Prayer Book. The title, which is given in Scripture to this order, is Πρεσβύτερος, Acts xiv. 23; xv. 2; 1 Tim. v. 1; and Διάκονος Εὐαγγελίου, Eph. iii. 7; Θεοῦ, 2 Cor. vi. 4; Χριστοῦ, Col. i. 7; but they are never called ἱερεῖς, which is the proper word to signify sacrificators, or such priests who offered sacrifice. The "holy priesthood," 1 Pet. ii. 5, and the "royal priesthood," 1 Pet. ii. 9, are spoken of the laity as well as clergy. Nor does it appear that the name of ἱερεῖς was ever given, as a proper title, to the Christian clergy, by any of the most ancient Christian writers. They are called "presbyters" by Clement and Ignatius.

This order has always had the honour to be styled "brethren to the bishops." This way of expression was begun by St. Peter, whom the bishops in all times have copied after: "The elders which are among you I exhort, who am also an elder," 1 Pet. v. 1. They were also counsellors to the bishops upon the most important affairs, in which they were engaged. The bishops consulted them about the qualifications of persons who were to be ordained. Their advice was likewise taken in animadverting upon the faults of the clergy, in suspending or deposing them. And they generally gave their votes in councils. Dr. Nicholls.

[r] When the day appointed by the Bishop is come, &c.] Where matters, common to this and the former office, occur, the reader is referred to the notes on that office.

due examination we find not to the contrary, but that they be lawfully called to their Function and Ministry, and that they be persons meet for the same. But yet if there be any of you, who knoweth any Impediment, or notable Crime, in any of them, for the which he ought not to be received into this holy Ministry, let him come forth in the Name of God, and shew what the Crime or Impediment is.

¶ And if any great Crime or Impediment be objected, the Bishop shall surcease from Ordering that person, until such time as the party accused shall be found cleor of that Crime.

¶ Then the Bishop (commending such as shall be found meet to be Ordered to the Prayers of the Congregation) shall, with the Clergy and people present, sing or say the Litany, with the Prayers, as is before appointed in the Form of Ordering Deacons; save only, that, in the proper Suffrage there added, the word [Deacons] shall be omitted, and the word [Priests] inserted instead of it.

¶ Then shall be sung or said the Service for the Communion, with the Collect, Epistle, and Gospel, as followeth.

The Collect.

ALMIGHTY God, giver of all good things, who by thy Holy Spirit hast appointed divers Orders of Ministers in the Church; Mercifully behold these thy servants now called to the Office of Priesthood; and replenish them so with the truth of thy doctrine, and adorn them with innocency of life, that, both by word and good example they may faithfully serve thee in this Office, to the glory of thy Name, and the edification of thy Church; through the merits of our Saviour Jesus Christ, who liveth and reigneth with thee and the Holy Ghost, world without end. Amen.

The Epistle[s]. Ephes. iv. 7.

UNTO every one of us is given grace, according to the measure of the gift of Christ. Wherefore he saith, When he ascended up on high, he led captivity captive, and gave gifts unto men. (Now that he ascended, what is it but that he also descended first into the lower parts of the earth? He that descended, is the same also that ascended up far above all heavens, that he might fill all things.) And he gave some Apostles, and some Prophets, and some Evangelists, and some Pastors and Teachers; for the perfecting of the Saints, for the work of the Ministry, for the edifying of the Body of Christ; till we all come in the unity of the faith, and of the knowledge of the Son of God, unto a perfect man, unto the measure of the stature of the fulness of Christ.

¶ After this shall be read for the Gospel[t] part of the ninth Chapter of Saint Matthew, as followeth.

[s] The Epistle.] The proper portions of Scripture appointed for the Epistle and Gospel at the ordination of a priest have been various in divers churches. That, which our Reformers chose from Eph. iv. 7—13, is very proper for the occasion; because the apostle here treats of the diversity of gifts and offices in the church, and particularly of their Author, variety, and use. Dean Comber.

[t] After this shall be read for the Gospel &c.] There are two Gospels chosen for this occasion. As to the first, in the Ordinal of Edward the Sixth the Gospel was Matt. xxviii. 18, &c.; but that being properly the mission of the twelve as apostles, it was thought more proper to remove it to the office for bishops, and to read the apparatus to their first solemn mission as preachers, related chap. x. 1, &c.; to which this Gospel is the preface, and should not be separated from it, as it was by the division of chapters in our Bibles. For variety there is another portion of St. John's Gospel; being our Saviour's own description of the duty of a good Shepherd, and the faults of a bad one. It was anciently appointed to be read at the consecration of a bishop. But it is also equally proper for the ordination of a presbyter, and therefore our Reformers placed it here. Dean Comber.

To prevent any misconception or misapplication of the word "hireling" in this Gospel, it is necessary to remark, that it does not mean one who performs the office or duty of a minister for hire or reward: for the apostle, or rather our blessed Lord Himself, says, "The labourer is worthy of his hire," or "reward," 1 Tim. v. 18; Luke x. 7. In an established country, and indeed in any country, where the teacher must be supported by the taught, whether the emolument be of a public or a private nature, the man, who is duly appointed and performs his duty to his flock, is a true pastor and no hireling. "Even so hath the Lord ordained that they which preach the Gospel should live of the Gospel," 1 Cor. ix. 14. But he is an hireling, in the debased sense of the expression, who endeavours to make a gain of godliness, a mercenary, who teaches for doctrines the commandments of men; one who will flee when the wolf cometh, who will not stand in the gap, who neither possesses faith to fulfil the duties of his office, nor a desire to protect his sheep. Teachers of false doctrines, self-appointed and self-approved preachers, fanatical declaimers, those who intrude themselves into the chair of instruction under hypocritical or false pretences; all these unquestionably are hirelings. See 2 Pet. ii. 1, 2. Another order of hire-

St. Matth. ix. 36.

WHEN Jesus saw the multitudes, he was moved with compassion on them, because they fainted, and were scattered abroad as sheep having no shepherd. Then saith he unto his disciples, The harvest truly is plenteous, but the labourers are few. Pray ye therefore the Lord of the harvest, that he will send forth labourers into his harvest.

¶ Or else this that followeth, out of the tenth Chapter of Saint John.

St. John x. 1.

VERILY, verily I say unto you, He that entereth not by the door into the sheep-fold, but climbeth up some other way, the same is a thief and a robber. But he that entereth in by the door is the Shepherd of the sheep. To him the porter openeth, and the sheep hear his voice; and he calleth his own sheep by name, and leadeth them out. And when he putteth forth his own sheep he goeth before them, and the sheep follow him; for they know his voice. And a stranger will they not follow, but will flee from him, for they know not the voice of strangers. This parable spake Jesus unto them, but they understood not what things they were which he spake unto them. Then said Jesus unto them again, Verily, verily I say unto you, I am the door of the sheep. All that ever came before me are thieves and robbers; but the sheep did not hear them. I am the door; by me if any man enter in, he shall be saved, and shall go in and out, and find pasture. The thief cometh not but for to steal, and to kill, and to destroy: I am come that they might have life, and that they might have it more abundantly. I am the good Shepherd: the good Shepherd giveth his life for the sheep. But he that is an hireling, and not the Shepherd, whose own the sheep are not, seeth the wolf coming, and leaveth the sheep, and fleeth; and the wolf catcheth them, and scattereth the sheep. The hireling fleeth, because he is an hireling, and careth not for the sheep. I am the good Shepherd, and know my sheep, and am known of mine. As the Father knoweth me, even so know I the Father; and I lay down my life for the sheep. And other sheep I have, which are not of this fold: them also I must bring, and they shall hear my voice; and there shall be one fold, and one Shepherd.

¶ Then the Bishop, sitting in his choir, shall minister unto every one of them the Oath concerning the Queen's Supremacy, as it is before set forth in the Form for the Ordering of Deacons.

¶ And that done, he shall say unto them as hereafter followeth[u].

YOU have heard, Brethren, as well in your private examination, as in the exhortation which was now made to you, and in the holy Lessons taken out of the Gospel, and the writings of the Apostles, of what dignity, and of how great im-lings are those, who are ignorant of their profession, whether in learning or in faith, and are totally unqualified to perform its duties; "desiring to be teachers of the law, understanding neither what they say, nor whereof they affirm," 1 Tim. i. 7; "intruding themselves into those things which they have not seen, vainly puffed up by their fleshly mind," Col. ii. 18. Nor shall we less call those hirelings, whose moral conduct is as defective as their religious belief. Brewster.

[u] And that done, he shall say unto them as hereafter followeth.] The next observable difference between the former office and the present is the peculiar admonition which the bishop gives to all that enter into priests' orders: that, before they take this weighty charge upon them, they may be made duly sensible, both of the dignity and the duties of their office, which are so necessary to be considered just now, that other churches have such a discourse, though in some it be less properly deferred till after the ordination. Comber.

This excellent exhortation contains, first, an admonition to the persons to be ordained, that they consider the great weight and importance of their employ, which is to make provision for Christ's family, and to seek for his lost sheep; and also the danger of neglecting their duty, since all miscarriages, which shall happen through their negligence, shall be severely required at their hands. Secondly, that they use the utmost of their diligence in the discharge of their function; that they may discharge their consciences by performing the duty required of them; that they may make a thankful return to their gracious Master, who has advanced them to so honourable an office; and that they may avoid giving occasion to other persons of transgressing their duty after their example. And, lastly, it suggests to them the means they should make use of, to enable them to discharge their duty aright; which are to pray for the assistance of God's Holy Spirit, diligently to study the holy Scriptures, to lead a life of exemplary piety, and to avoid, as much as may be, all secular business and study. Dr. Nicholls.

portance this Office is, whereunto ye are called. And now again we exhort you, in the Name of our Lord Jesus Christ, that you have in remembrance, into how high a Dignity, and to how weighty an Office and Charge ye are called: that is to say, to be Messengers, Watchmen, and Stewards of the Lord; to teach, and to premonish, to feed and provide for the Lord's family; to seek for Christ's sheep that are dispersed abroad, and for his children who are in the midst of this naughty world, that they may be saved through Christ for ever.

Isa. xliv. 26. Hag. i. 13. Mal. ii. 7. Mark i. 2. Phil. ii. 25. 2 Cor. viii. 23; v. 20. Ezek. iii. 17; xxxiii. 2, 3. Heb. xiii. 17. 1 Cor. iv. 1. Tit. i. 7. Luke xii. 42. Ezek. xxxiv. 2.

Have always therefore printed in your remembrance, how great a treasure is committed to your charge. For they are the sheep of Christ, which he bought with his death, and for whom he shed his blood. The Church and Congregation whom you must serve, is his Spouse, and his Body. And if it shall happen the same Church, or any Member thereof, to take any hurt or hindrance by reason of your negligence, ye know the greatness of the fault, and also the horrible punishment that will ensue. Wherefore consider with yourselves the end of your Ministry towards the children of God, towards the Spouse and Body of Christ; and see that you never cease your labour, your care and diligence, until you have done all that lieth in you, according to your bounden duty, to bring all such as are or shall be committed to your charge, unto that agreement in the faith and knowledge of God, and to that ripeness and perfectness of age in Christ, that there be no place left among you, either for error in religion, or for viciousness in life.

1 Pet. i. 18, 19. Eph. v. 25, 26, &c. Ezek. iii. 18, &c.; xxxiii. 8. Acts xx. 31. 2 Tim. iv. 1, 2. Eph. iv. 12, 13.

Forasmuch then as your Office is both of so great excellency, and of so great difficulty, ye see with how great care and study ye ought to apply yourselves, as well that ye may shew yourselves dutiful and thankful unto that Lord, who hath placed you in so high a Dignity; as also to beware, that neither you yourselves offend, nor be occasion that others offend. Howbeit, ye cannot have a mind and will thereto of yourselves; for that will and ability is given of God alone: therefore ye ought, and have need, to pray earnestly for his holy Spirit. And seeing that you cannot by any other means compass the doing of so weighty a work, pertaining to the salvation of man, but with doctrine and exhortation taken out of the holy Scriptures, and with a life agreeable to the same; consider how studious ye ought to be in reading and learning the Scriptures, and in framing the manners both of yourselves, and of them that specially pertain unto you, according to the rule of the same Scriptures: and for this self-same cause, how ye ought to forsake and set aside (as much as you may) all worldly cares and studies.

1 Cor. iii. 5. 1 Cor. xiv. 15. Rom. viii. 26, 27. 1 Tim. iv. 13, 14. 2 Tim. i. 6. 2 Tim. ii. 4.

We have good hope that you have well weighed and pondered these things with yourselves long before this time; and that you have clearly determined, by God's grace, to give yourselves wholly to this Office, whereunto it hath pleased God to call you; so that, as much as lieth in you, you will apply yourselves wholly to this one thing, and draw all your cares and studies this way; and that you will continually pray to God the Father, by the Mediation of our only Saviour Jesus Christ, for the heavenly assistance of the Holy Ghost; that, by daily reading and weighing of the Scriptures, ye may wax riper and stronger in your Ministry; and that ye may so endeavour yourselves, from time to time, to sanctify the lives of you and yours, and to fashion them after the Rule and Doctrine of Christ, that ye may be wholesome and godly examples and patterns for the people to follow.

1 Tim. iv. 15. 2 Tim. iii. 16, 17.

And now, that this present Congregation of Christ here assembled may also understand your minds and wills in these things, and that this your promise may the more move you to do your duties, ye shall answer plainly to these things[x], which we, in the Name of God, and

1 Tim. vi. 12.

1 Cor. iv. 1, 2. 1 Thess. v. 22. Rom. xiv. 21. 1 Cor. viii. 13.

[x] And now—ye shall answer plainly to these things, &c.] All the things stated in the foregoing exhortation are the priest's duty: and, as the bishop's charity moves him to hope concerning every one of them that of his Church, shall demand of you[y] touching the same.

DO you think in your heart, that you be truly called[z], according to the will of our Lord Jesus Christ, and the order of this United Church of England and Ireland, to the Order and Ministry of Priesthood?

Answer. I think it.

The Bishop.

ARE you persuaded that the holy Scriptures[a] contain sufficiently all Doctrine required of ne- 2 Tim. iii. 15. John xx. 30, 31. James i. 21.

---

he will do all this; so his office binds him to require them, as St. Paul did Timothy at his ordination, "to make this good profession before many witnesses," 1 Tim. vi. 12. That is, he now proceeds to oblige them, by a solemn promise, to engage that they will most faithfully perform every particular branch of these duties. And, since the bishop stands in God's stead, and every one of the congregation is witness to what is said, this declaration is as sacred as an oath: such a promise binds as strongly as any vow: if they do not now intend what they engage, they lie not to men, but to God: and if they be negligent to keep their words afterwards, it is equal to perjury. Both God, and as many as are spectators at this ordination, may "condemn them out of their own mouths:" their words will be witnesses against them, if they do not make them good, in this world to their shame, and in the next to their condemnation. Therefore it is highly necessary for every candidate to consider these things very well, before he promise them; and to endeavour to perform them all the days of his life. Dean Comber.

At the same time it may be remarked, that every care is taken not to draw the candidate for holy orders into an unwary promise. His awful obligations are stated by frequent appeals to the preparation of his own heart. His intellect is at maturity, and his actions free. The charter of his profession is declared, and every publick and private consideration set before him. No vow of poverty is exacted from him; he is neither to be clothed in sackcloth, nor to dig his own grave. He continues a member of society under its best pretensions. His feelings are those of a man, but of a man improved by grace: of a man, not dead to the world in the extreme sense of the expression, but dead to the vicious practices of the world: of a man, "crucified indeed with Christ" as to the law, "nevertheless he may still say, I live; yet not I, but Christ liveth in me; and the life, which I now live in the flesh, I live by the faith of the Son of God, who loved me and gave himself for me," Gal. ii. 20. Such are the obligations of a Christian minister's promise: which, as he was in the early part of the service presented to the congregation, he now confirms in the presence of that church, whose spiritual interests his best judgment indues him to support. Brewster.

[y] — which we, in the Name of God, and of his Church, shall demand of you &c.] We may here observe, that the first question put to those, who are to be ordained priests, concerning their being moved by the Holy Ghost to take that office upon them, is now omitted. For, these having been ordained deacons before, it is supposed that they were then moved by the Spirit of Christ to take the ministry of his Gospel upon them, and there is no need of any further call from Him. For being once called by Him, though it was but to the lowest office of his own institution, the Church takes it for granted that it is his pleasure they should be promoted to any higher office, if there be sufficient reason and occasion for it. Bp. Beveridge.

[z] Do you think in your heart, that you be truly called, &c.] This is the same question, a little varied in expression, which is put to deacons at their admission into the ministry, and is intended to prevent that insincerity and prevarication, which might induce persons, not well affected to the Established Church of this nation, to press themselves into her service. Unity of heart is more necessary than unity of profession, in promoting the real interests of society: but unless both meet in erecting Christ's church on earth, she will remain exposed to those continual dangers, which arise from discordant principles. Brewster.

[a] Are you persuaded that the holy Scriptures &c.] This question materially differs from that put in the former office. For a deacon's principal duty being only to read the Scriptures, it was enough for him to declare before God and the congregation, "that he believed all the canonical books were divinely inspired." But a priest must further, first, declare his faith, "that the holy Scripture contains all doctrines that are necessary to be believed, and is sufficient, through faith, for our eternal salvation. Secondly, he must publish his resolution to take all his doctrines from thence, and promise never to teach any thing, as of necessity to salvation, that cannot be proved thereby. For his office is to preach all saving truths, and teach his people all those duties, that are requisite for bringing them to eternal life.

Nor is there any need for the candidate to hesitate at, or doubt of, the declaration or the promise. For, first, the thing declared is certainly true: the infallible word of God doth assure him, that "holy Scripture is able," without the help of tradition or new revelations, "to make us wise unto salvation through faith which is in Christ Jesus," 2 Tim. iii. 15; that there is enough in it to make us capable of eternal life, through believing, John xx. 30, 31; and that being "received with meekness," and a due submission to its doctrines and precepts, "it is able to save our souls," James i. 21; finally, that it is so perfect a rule, that "nothing can be added to it, or taken from it," Deut. iv. 2; Rev. xxii. 18. Wherefore unless we can be so impious as to imagine, that the God of truth designed to deceive us, we must give credit to his character of holy Scripture, and believe that it contains all necessary truths.

And this was the constant opinion of the catholick church in all ages. Yea, this of old was the doctrine of the Roman church; but it was before they had brought in so many new doctrines and practices, grounded on tradition only, that they were forced to decree at Trent, "that traditions were to be received with the same pious affection and veneration, that they received the Scriptures." But in the primitive ages nothing but the word of God was allowed to decide controversies of faith; and therefore the holy Bible alone was placed on a throne in Christian councils, as the only judge in all such cases.

Wherefore it is very necessary that every priest should declare his belief of the perfection of Scripture.

cessity for eternal salvation through faith in Jesus Christ? and are you determined, out of the said Scriptures to instruct the people committed to your charge, and to teach nothing, as required of necessity to eternal salvation, but that which you shall be persuaded may be concluded and proved by the Scripture?

Deut. iv. 2. Rev. xxii. 18.

Answer. I am so persuaded, and have so determined[b] by God's grace.

The Bishop.

WILL you then give your faithful diligence[c] always so

And, secondly, that he should promise to teach no doctrines but what may be proved by it. For this is the greatest security of his being orthodox, which the Church can have: since no man can be an heretick, who takes his faith from the plain words of Scripture, and proves it by necessary consequences drawn from thence. And it is of such importance to the Church, that those she admits for guides to others be not in the wrong way themselves, that all the reformed churches ask the same question of their candidates. More particularly this excludes all papists and enthusiasts from holy orders; because the former pretend traditions, and the latter new revelations, for the proof of their false doctrines, both agreeing to deny the perfection of holy Scripture: which false principles would make our faith changeable and uncertain, whereas nothing fixes our fundamentals in religion, like binding all priests to a written and unalterable rule. Dean Comber.

Our Church does injoin the person to be ordained to promise this, in opposition to the doctrine of tradition, which is injoined by the church of Rome. But she does this with an admirable temperament, and with very just limitations. For she does not require of them that they shall teach nothing, but what may be proved by Scripture; but that for every thing which they press, as necessary to salvation, they have good proof of Scripture to support it. The doctrine of the church of Rome is contrary to this. The Council of Trent "receives traditions, both as to faith and manners, either delivered by Christ Himself with his own mouth, or dictated by the Holy Ghost, and preserved in the catholick church by a continual succession, with equal piety of affection as the holy Scriptures themselves." But as our Church does not condemn ecclesiastical tradition, or any other human or rational proof; so she will not have them made use of by her clergy for the sole maintaining of articles of faith, as the papists do: and denies, what that council affirms, "that the truth of the Gospel is contained partly in books that are written, and partly in unwritten traditions." Dr. Nicholls.

[b] I am so persuaded, and have so determined &c.] This answer shews, how necessary it is, that they who come to be ordained should consider these things beforehand: for otherwise how can they say, they have so determined already? Bp. Beveridge.

[c] Will you then give your faithful diligence &c.] Diligence is one of the principal parts of the pastoral office, which is injoined and earnestly pressed in the New Testament. St. Paul gives it as a prime character of St. Luke, because his "praise was in the Gospel in all churches," 2 Cor. viii. 18; and because he had "oftentimes proved him diligent in many things," ver. 22. He exhorts Timothy to "endure hardness, as a good soldier of Jesus Christ," 2 Tim. ii. 3; to "preach the word; to be instant in season and out of season; to reprove, rebuke, exhort with all long-suffering and doctrine," 2 Tim. iv. 2. This diligence, which is recommended to the ministers of the Gospel by the Scripture in general, is branched out in this interrogatory into its several parts. And they are made to promise to be diligent, first, in administering the "doctrine" of our Saviour, which consists in preaching and catechizing: secondly, in administering the "sacraments," which in the general sense of the word does take in, not only the two sacraments, properly so called, namely, of Baptism, and the Lord's Supper, but all the sacramental rites injoined by the Church, such as marrying, burying, visitation of the sick, &c.: thirdly, in administering the "discipline" of the Church, which at the compiling of this office the presbyters of the Church were designed to have a greater share of, than they are now vested with; but which, according to their present powers, they may in some part do; in declaring those excommunicates, whom proper authority has laid under that censure; in repelling from the communion notorious offenders; and in presenting those to the ecclesiastical courts, whom the parish officers, upon scandalous crimes committed by them, shall refuse or neglect to present. But all this must be done with a just limitation, and under the direction of the laws of the land and the canons of the Church, and not at the arbitrary pleasure of the minister. He must not preach any doctrine, but what is warranted by the Articles of our Church: nor administer either sacraments, or sacramentals, or any other publick or open prayer, but according to the offices prescribed in the Book of Common Prayer, "and none other or otherwise," as the Act of Uniformity speaks: nor exercise any part of the Church discipline, which by the laws or canons is not intrusted to presbyters. Dr. Nicholls.

The Scripture teaches the manner of our ministration as to the main; and our offices and canons for discipline are drawn up by those directions: the rest is supplied out of primitive antiquity, as to ceremonies and things not essential: and both are finally confirmed by our laws. Thus we have accurately prescribed forms for all our ministrations; from which if any private minister might vary, and follow his own fancy, it would breed infinite confusion and endless scandals: wherefore after the example of our pious ancestors we oblige all the clergy to minister the word and sacraments, yea, and discipline also, in one uniform manner; which our priests may safely promise to do, because this Church hath taken such exact care to come as near as possible to holy Scripture in all these particulars. So that for any minister to come short of, or go beyond, this perfect constitution argues intolerable pride and folly, and discovers such a presumption as admits of no excuse; especially after he hath so solemnly promised before God, and many witnesses, that he will administer all these things according to the rules of this Church. Dean Comber.

The rubrick, to which we here bind ourselves by express consent and promise, is upon a different footing from all other ecclesiastical laws. For without considering it as statute, and, as such, only upon the level with several other subsequent acts of parliament relating to our occasional ministrations, we are under this peculiar circumstance of obligation to observe it, that we have, by our subscriptions at both ordinations, by one of our vows at the altar for the order of priesthood, by our subscriptions and declarations of conformity to minister the Doctrine and Sacraments, and the Discipline of Christ, as the Lord hath commanded, and as this Church and Realm hath received the same, according to the Commandments of God; so that you before our ordinary, and repetition of them in the church before our congregations, and likewise by our declarations of assent and consent, as prescribed in the Act of Uniformity; I say, we have in all these several ways tied ourselves down to a regular, constant, conscientious performance of all and every thing prescribed in and by the Book of Common Prayer, according to the usage of the Church of England. And seeing it hath been the wisdom of our Church to lay us under these engagements, in order to preserve exact uniformity in the publick worship, and all the liturgick offices: nay, since it hath been judged proper to carry us through a train of these stipulations, before we can get possession of any benefice; and to make us renew them again and again, as often as we change our preferment, or obtain any new promotion: and seeing that we have entered, as we have professed, ex animo into this covenant with the Church, and have deliberately renewed it, as often as there hath been occasion: how frivolous is it for any of us to say, that the connivance, or the presumed consent of our ordinary, or the private conveniency of ourselves or families, or the obliging of any of our parishioners, or the apparent inexpediency of adhering to the letter in some few cases, will dissolve this our obligation to conformity? Surely we must know, that these and the like allegations are quite out of the case: that, however our Church governours may dispense with our breaches of the rubrick, however our people may acquiesce in them, or approve of them, yet the question is, how far we are at liberty to dispense with ourselves on account of the forementioned engagements, to which God and the Church are made witnesses in as solemn a manner, as they are to our personal stipulations at confirmation or matrimony: or whether we have not in this case precluded ourselves from all benefit of such exemption or dispensation, as might perhaps be reasonably alleged in several other merely statutable or canonical matters.

This indeed we must always take along with us, that our obligations to observe the rubrick, how indispensable soever, are subject to this proviso; namely, that the rule prescribed be a thing practicable: which perhaps cannot be said of all rubricks in all churches, or in all places of the kingdom: nay, that it be a thing which falls within the minister's power, so that he be not deprived of his liberty in acting, or restrained in it, by the previous acts of other people, whereby that, which would be practicable in itself, is rendered not practicable by him. I will not positively say, that no other proviso is to be allowed of or admitted: because this cannot be determined absolutely, or otherwise than by a particular consideration of each rule or injunction under several different circumstances. But we may affirm in general, that we are under higher obligations to observe the rubrick, than any other ecclesiastical law whatsoever: that, excepting a very few cases, or under some necessary limitations and reservations, we are bound to adhere to it literally, punctually, and perpetually: and that whosoever among the clergy either adds to it, or diminishes from it, or useth any other rule instead of it, as he is in the eye of the law so far a nonconformist, so it behoves him to consider with himself, whether in point of conscience he be not a breaker of his word and trust, and an eluder of his engagements to the Church. Archdeacon Sharp.

As to the Canons, to which we are not bound by any formal promise, but only by virtue of their own authority, I believe no one will say, that we are bound to pay obedience to them all, according to the letter of them. For the alteration of customs, change of habits, and other circumstances of time and place, and the manner of the country, have made some of them impracticable; I mean, prudentially so, if not literally. Others of them are useless and invalid on course, through defect of proper officers, and proper inquiries, to render them of force and effectual. And there are hardly any of them, but what have been upon extraordinary occasions dispensed with by our governours. And yet on the other hand that they are of very considerable authority appears from hence, that they are the standing ecclesiastical laws of the realm, the constant rules of the ordinaries' inquiries at their visitations, the grounds of presentments of delinquents and irregularities upon oath, and the foundation upon which ecclesiastical censures and judgments commonly stand.

To the question then, what measures of obedience we of the clergy owe to those canons which respect our own behaviour or function, I answer, that in my own opinion there are three sorts of dispensations which will justify us in not strictly following the letter of the canons, provided we always have an eye and regard to the general design of them.

The first sort are formal and express dispensations from sufficient authority, which are good in law and conscience too.

The second are particular tacit dispensations; that is, when the ordinary or other proper guardian or conservator of the ecclesiastical laws is known to be consenting in any special case, though he doth not signify such consent either by instrument or open declaration. And these I hold to be good in conscience, whatever they be in law.

The third are general tacit dispensations, when the ordinaries or other spiritual judges, whose business it is to inforce discipline and rule, do appear, by a general and avowed neglect of putting the canons in force, to agree and consent to their non-observance. That is to say, private clergymen do not seem to be bound to what their superiors in the Church do not seem to expect or require of them; or which at least they do forbear by mutual agreement to inforce.

These three kinds of dispensations seem to be good and justifiable, provided, as I said before, that there be a particular expediency in not adhering strictly to the letter of the canons, and the general and main design of the rules injoined in them be as well or better answered another way.

The rules of direction which follow upon these observations are these two; which indeed not only respect the canons, but several other statute laws yet in force. First, to adhere closely and strictly to the letter of them in all cases, where we cannot plead any of the three kinds of dispensations above mentioned. Secondly, in all cases, where we can plead a dispensation from the letter, to answer the true intention of them some other way; and not to depart further from them than we have satisfactory reasons as well as leave to justify and warrant us in doing. And by these two rules it will be no difficult thing to take the just measures of our obedience to every particular Canon or Statute, that relates to our function, habit, or conversation. Archdeacon Sharp.

may teach the people committed to your Cure and Charge with all diligence to keep and observe the same?

Answer. I will so do, by the help of the Lord.

The Bishop.

Acts xx. 31. 2 Tim. iv. 5. Tit. i. 9.

WILL you be ready, with all faithful diligence[d], to banish and drive away all erroneous and strange doctrines contrary to God's Word; and to use both publick and private monitions and exhortations, as well to the sick as to the whole, within your Cures, as need shall require, and occasion shall be given?

Answer. I will, the Lord being my helper.

The Bishop.

WILL you be diligent in Prayers[e], and in reading of the holy Scriptures, and in such studies as help to the knowledge of the same, laying aside the study of the world and the flesh[f]?

Answer. I will endeavour myself so to do, the Lord being my helper.

The Bishop.

WILL you be diligent to frame and fashion your own selves, and your families, according to the Doctrine of Christ; and to make

---

[d] Will you be ready, with all faithful diligence, &c.] This interrogatory was placed here in lieu of that in the Roman Pontifical, "Do you curse, or pronounce an anathema against, every heresy which advances itself against the holy Catholick church? Ans. I do." This was upon wise consideration thought fit to be changed; and the ordained person obliged only to promise "with all faithful diligence to drive away," that is, by good argument and persuasion to confute, "erroneous doctrines." Dr. Nicholls.

There is another part of the clergy's duty contained in this question, as necessary as the former: and that is, to drive away vice as well as error, by publick and private monitions and exhortations, both to the sound and sick within their cures, whenever need requires. Dean Comber.

As the parochial minister is here addressed, though an active zeal is required of him, it must be "a zeal according to knowledge," a well-ordered zeal, a zeal within the limits of his duty. This is evident from the continuation of the question, "Will you be ready to use both publick and private monitions and exhortations, as well to the sick as to the whole, within your cures, as need shall require, and occasion shall be given?" Offence is to be avoided in seeking this good end of persuasion. We are to have respect to times and circumstances: not to excite irritation, or provoke resentment. "A word spoken in due season, how good is it!" Prov. xv. 23. This does not imply that we are to become time-servers in conduct, according to the odious interpretation of the term: but in condescension to the various tempers and dispositions of those, whom we wish to convince of the danger of their error, to take such opportunities of instruction as may be most favourable for that purpose. Our advice is directed to be "private" to individuals, and applied to those within the sphere of our duty, "within our cures:" but it is also required to be of that general nature, as to comprehend all that belong to our inspection. "The sick and the whole" include all descriptions of persons. They are separated in language, to shew more distinctly the branches of our duty. To the bed-side of the sick we are brought professionally, to promote their spiritual welfare, and in the first place to give them right notions of their true situation; to set before their eyes the truth of the Gospel at that interesting moment, when they are waiting for its advantages. "The Lord God," saith the prophet, "hath given me the tongue of the learned, that I should know how to speak a word in season to him that is weary," Isa. l. 4. But we are to seek "the whole." Our congregations consist of persons of a variety of dispositions, as well as a variety of principles on which they act. It is this which renders our duty difficult. But, wherever it is expedient, we are to make the most appropriate application. "I will seek that which was lost, and bring again that which was driven away; and I will bind up that which was broken, and will strengthen that which was sick." Ezek. xxxiv. 16. Brewster.

[e] Will you be diligent in Prayers, &c.] As the priest moves in a higher sphere, so he hath a greater compass of duty than a deacon. First, he is to be more diligent, both in private prayer for the help of God's Spirit and a blessing on his studies, and in the daily repeating of the publick and common prayer twice in the church, to which our rubrick binds both priests and deacons, if they be in health, and not hindered by any urgent cause. Dean Comber. But by the preceding exhortation the question here appears to mean private prayer and reading. Abp. Secker.

Secondly, The priest must have a larger share of knowledge, both as to Scripture, and all that leads to the understanding thereof, than a deacon: wherefore he is here injoined more diligently to read the Bible, and more closely to follow his study in all those parts of learning, which are the handmaids of theology, the queen of all sciences. And thirdly, that he may be at leisure for all this, he is to promise to "lay aside the study of the world and the flesh," which are impediments to, and really inconsistent with, a contemplative life. And considering how large a field he that desires to be an accomplished scholar hath to expatiate in, and what noble objects he hath to pursue, if he be ever so young and strong, he hath employment enough for his whole life, and for all the hours he can spare from his offices and the necessary business of his family. He will have no time to squander away upon the world and the flesh, who has a generous ambition to improve himself in all these kinds of knowledge; yet he will find a satisfaction in this laborious course of study, abundantly sufficient to recompense him for all his pains. Dean Comber.

[f] — laying aside the study of the world and the flesh.] That is, not making either gross pleasures, or more refined amusements, even literary ones unconnected with your profession, or power, or profit, or advancement, or applause, your great aim in life; but labouring chiefly to qualify yourselves for doing good to the souls of men, and applying carefully to that purpose whatever qualifications you attain. Abp. Secker.

both yourselves and them, as much as in you lieth, wholesome examples and patterns to the flock of Christ?

Answer. I will apply myself thereto, the Lord being my helper.

The Bishop.

WILL you maintain and set forwards[g], as much as lieth in you, quietness, peace, and love, among all Christian people, and especially among them that are or shall be committed to your charge?

Answer. I will so do, the Lord being my helper[h].

The Bishop.

WILL you reverently obey your Ordinary and other chief Ministers, unto whom is committed the charge and government over you; following with a glad mind and will their godly admonitions, and submitting yourselves to their godly judgements?

Answer. I will so do, the Lord being my helper.

¶ Then shall the Bishop, standing up, say[i],

ALMIGHTY God, who hath given you this will to do all 2 Cor. iii. 5.

[g] Will you maintain and set forwards, &c.] When we consider, that Christ was styled "the Prince of Peace" before his incarnation, Isa. ix. 6; that He was welcomed at his birth with the angels singing "Peace on earth," Luke ii. 14; that his Gospel is "the Gospel of peace," Eph. vi. 15; and that He gives a peculiar blessing to the makers of peace, Matt. v. 9: we cannot wonder that it should be one of the duties of his ministers to promote peace and charity among all Christians, and especially among the people committed to their special care. Our Saviour intended that all the clergy should be concerned in this office of peace-making. For they wait at the altar, and are to oblige the injurious person to leave his gift there, and to be "reconciled to his brother," before the priest may accept and offer it, Matt. v. 23, 24: which no doubt gave occasion to those ancient canons, that injoin the clergy "not to receive the oblations of such as were at enmity;" and order them to "rebuke such as they perceived to live in malice; and, if they proved obstinate, to suspend them from the sacrament till they were made friends." By which we may see, that our third rubrick before the communion, which lays the same injunction upon every priest, is grounded on holy Scripture, and the canons, as well as the practice of the primitive church. Dean Comber.

By the promise, given in the answer to this question, the candidates oblige themselves, never to raise or promote personal, family, parochial, ecclesiastical, political, or any other animosities; but to discourage, and, if possible, compose and extinguish them: than which they cannot perform a more Christian part, or one more conducive to their honour and their usefulness. Abp. Secker.

[h] I will so do, the Lord being my helper.] These questions and answers are so framed, that they, who are to be ordained priests, do thereby promise and oblige themselves in the name and by the help of God, that they will give faithful diligence, always to minister the doctrine and sacraments, and the discipline of Christ, as the Lord hath commanded, and as this Church and realm hath received the same: that they will be ready, with all diligence, to banish and drive away all erroneous and strange doctrines, contrary to God's word: that they will be deligent in prayers, and in reading the holy Scriptures, and in such studies that will help to the knowledge of the same: that they will be dilligent to frame and fashion themselves, and their families, according to the doctrine of Christ: that they will maintain and set forward, as much as lieth in them, quietness, peace, and love among all Christian people; and that they will reverently obey their ordinary and other chief ministers, unto whom is committed the charge and government over them. For being asked, whether they will do these things, or no? every one answers for himself, "I will do so, by the help of God," or, "the Lord being my helper." Which shews the extraordinary care our Church takes, that all her clergy may not only be orthodox, and virtuous, and good men, but faithful also in the discharge of their duty: in that she admits none to holy orders, without laying upon them the highest obligations imaginable to be so. And they, who after all this prove otherwise, will certainly have a very dismal account to give, when our Lord shall hold his general visitation at the last day. Bp. Beveridge.

Besides pondering these answers well beforehand, it is earnestly to be desired that the persons ordained should read and think them over often afterwards; and particularly, at each return of the ember-weeks, should examine themselves, as in the presence of God, whether they have made good the engagement, into which they entered at their ordination. So far as they have, this practice will afford them the greatest possible comfort: so far as they may have failed, it will suggest to them the most useful admonition. Abp. Secker.

[i] Then shall the Bishop, standing up, say, &c.] This prayer being pronounced by the bishop, who is Christ's immediate officer, must be looked on as a benediction, and not barely petitionary: though we see the ordainer gives all the glory to God, ascribing to Him that good will which they have declared in freely undertaking these duties, without whom we are not sufficient so much as to think one good thought, much less to make so many holy resolutions, 2 Cor. iii. 5. Now upon this ground, that the pious inclination and religious purpose came from God, the bishop proceeds rightly to beg of the divine Author of their good will, to "grant them strength and power to perform all that they have promised," which is no more but "the accomplishing of that work which he hath begun." They did own in the first answer, that God's Spirit, they believed, moved them to take on them this sacred calling, and he disposed them freely to engage, that they will do all the duties thereof. Now though resolving to do well be the beginning, yet putting these resolves in execution is the finishing, of every good work: and performance is the only perfection of a promise. The bishop finds therefore that God hath begun, and he hopes that he will accomplish, this work: yea, he may say with St. Paul to his Philippians, that he "makes this request with joy, being confident of this very thing, that he who hath begun will certainly go on to perfect this good work," Phil. i. 6. Our Lord hath declared it is these things; Grant also unto you strength and power to perform the same; that he may accomplish his work which he hath begun in you; through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

Phil. i. 6. Matt. xiii. 12; xxv. 29.

¶ After this, the Congregation shall be desired [j], secretly in their Prayers to make their humble supplications to God for all these things: for the which Prayers there shall be silence kept for a space [k].

¶ After which shall be sung or said by the Bishop (the persons to be ordained Priests all kneeling) Veni, Creator Spiritus [l]; the Bishop beginning, and the Priests, and others that are present, answering by verses, as followeth.

COME, Holy Ghost, our souls inspire,
And lighten with celestial fire.
Thou the anointing Spirit art,
Who dost thy seven-fold gifts impart. Isa. xi. 2.
Thy blessed Unction from above, See p. 391, notes k, l.
Is comfort, life, and fire of love. 1 John ii. 27.
Enable with perpetual light
The dulness of our blinded sight.
Anoint and cheer our soiled face Ps. civ. 15.
With the abundance of thy grace. Matt. vi. 17.
Keep far our foes, give peace at home:
Where thou art guide, no ill can come.
Teach us to know the Father, Son,
And thee, of both, to be but One.

---

his method, to "give to him that hath already," Matt. xiii. 12; xxv. 29. He that thankfully receives, and carefully improves a good thought into a holy purpose, shall be enabled to do what he hath resolved. Dean Comber.

[j] After this, the Congregation shall be desired, &c.] It is so much the duty of all in the congregation, to desire the Church may in general be supplied with good pastors, and their interest to be under the care of such, that all of them who are present are obliged to pray for these now to be sent into God's harvest; and if any of them be a relation or a friend to some of those that are to be ordained, or be likely to live in any of their cures, then they will desire an opportunity to make some special requests to God for them particularly: a custom as ancient as it is pious. In the East it is only used at the ordination of a bishop; but in the West it is injoined when a priest is ordained; and the old Gallican form was, The bishop said to the people, "Brethren, let us all join in one prayer, that he, who is chosen for the help and furtherance of your salvation, may by God's merciful gift obtain the blessing of the priesthood, so that he may never be found unfit for his station; but that by the privilege of his office he may receive the gifts and virtues of the Holy Spirit, through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen." Which form I here transcribe, because, if any want fit words for this secret prayer, he may be assisted by this ancient composure. Dean Comber.

[k] —for the which Prayers there shall be silence kept for a space.] There is something like to this in the Greek church when the bishop, at the ordaining of a priest, prays once μυστικῶς, secretly by himself. But here every one in the congregation is desired to do it, that, upon so solemn an occasion as this, all sorts of prayer may be used, even secret as well as publick; and that every one by himself, as well as all together, may lift up their hearts to God, and humbly supplicate his divine Majesty for all these things; that is, that He would give those, who are now to be ordained, grace to do all these things which they have promised.

Wherefore, when the congregation hear the bishop desire them to pray secretly, as they would shew their dutifulness and obedience, not only to him, but to Christ too, in whose name he speaks, they must fall down immediately on their knees; and, in the most earnest and humble manner that they can, beseech Almighty God, the fountain of all wisdom, grace, and goodness, that He would be pleased for Christ Jesus' sake, to assist those, who are now to be ordained, with such influences of his Holy Spirit, whereby they may be enabled always to perform what they have now promised; and so both save themselves and those that hear them. If the congregation do this heartily and sincerely, as they ought, it will doubtless be of very great advantage, not only to the persons to be ordained, but to themselves too. For their prayers will one time or other return into their own bosom, and procure as great a blessing for themselves, as they desire for them. Bp. Beveridge.

[l] — Veni, Creator Spiritus;] The Holy Ghost is that person of the blessed Trinity, to which the distributing of the several offices in the church, and qualifying the persons for them, is generally ascribed in Scripture, Acts xiii. 2. 4; xx. 28; 1 Cor. xii. 11. And upon that ground it is fit, that a particular address be made to the Spirit before the ordination, which we do by this hymn. It is said to have been composed by St. Ambrose, and is placed among his works as an hymn for Pentecost; and on that day it is annually used in the Roman church, and was so of old. It was inserted into the office for consecrating a bishop as early as the year 1100: and with a later hand put into the ordination of a priest about 500 (620) years ago in the Roman church, and so it stands there to this day. And the Protestants have so well approved of it, that the Lutheran churches begin their office with the same hymn. And our Reformers translated it into metre in the larger way in King Edward the Sixth's first Ordinal. Since which time, (namely, in the review of the Common Prayer under King Charles the Second, Dr. Nicholls,) it hath been abbreviated, and put into fewer words but to the same case, as it stands foremost here. Dean Comber.

Though the words of these hymns have lost something from time, the prayer is too serious, too important, ever to be forgotten. We are not so enthusiastick, as to expect an extraordinary communication of the Spirit to any minister of the Gospel. Neither are we so void of spiritual feeling, as to imagine that the divine influence, which God Himself has promised and an innumerable host of Christians have displayed by their conduct, cannot touch our hearts. We do truly believe, that it is the grace of God, operating with our spirit, which enables us to fulfil our duty in so arduous a situation. We may "resist and quench the Spirit," Acts vii. 51; 1 Thess. v. 19; and we may "grow in grace," 2 Pet. iii. 18. From these expressions we are taught, to leave our hearts open in the one case, and in the other to aim at greater perfection. In both our connexion with the Spirit is made manifest: for, "if we have not the Spirit of Christ, we are none of his," Rom. viii. 9. May the Spirit of divine grace "visit

That, through the ages all along,
This may be our endless song;
Praise to thy eternal merit,
Father, Son, and Holy Spirit.

Or this:

COME, Holy Ghost, eternal God,
Proceeding from above,
Both from the Father and the Son,
The God of peace and love:
Visit our minds, into our hearts
Thy heavenly grace inspire;
That truth and godliness we may Pursue with full desire.
Thou art the very Comforter
In grief and all distress;
The heav'nly gift of God most high,
No tongue can it express;
The fountain and the living spring
Of joy celestial;
The fire so bright, the love so sweet,
The Unction spiritual.
Thou in thy gifts art manifold,
By them Christ's Church doth stand:
In faithful hearts thou writ'st thy law,
The finger of God's hand.
According to thy promise, Lord,
Thou givest speech with grace;
That thro' thy help God's praises may Resound in every place.
O Holy Ghost, into our minds
Send down thy heavenly light;
Kindle our hearts with fervent zeal,
To serve God day and night.
Our weakness strengthen and confirm,
(For, Lord, thou know'st us frail:)
That neither devil, world, nor flesh,
Against us may prevail.
Put back our enemy far from us,
And help us to obtain
Peace in our hearts with God and man,
(The best, the truest gain;)
And grant that thou being, O Lord,
Our leader and our guide,
We may escape the snares of sin,
And never from thee slide.
Such measures of thy powerful grace
Grant, Lord, to us, we pray;
That thou may'st be our Comforter
At the last dreadful day.
Of strife and of dissension
Dissolve, O Lord, the bands,
And knit the knots of peace and love
Throughout all Christian lands.
Grant us the grace that we may know
The Father of all might,
That we of his beloved Son
May gain the blissful sight;
And that we may with perfect faith
Ever acknowledge thee,
The Spirit of Father, and of Son,
One God in Persons Three.
To God the Father laud and praise,
And to his blessed Son,
And to the Holy Spirit of grace,
Co-equal Three in One.
And pray we, that our only Lord
Would please his Spirit to send
On all that shall profess his Name,
From hence to the world's end. Amen.

¶ That done, the Bishop shall pray in this wise[m], and say,

Let us pray.

ALMIGHTY God, and heavenly Father, who, of thine infinite love and goodness towards us, hast given to us thy only and most dearly beloved Son Jesus Christ, to be our Redeemer, and the Author of everlasting life: who, after he had made perfect our redemption by his death, and was ascended into heaven, sent abroad into the world his Apostles, Prophets, Evangelists, Doctors, and Pastors; by whose labour and ministry he gathered

Heb. v. 9.

John xix 30. Heb. ix. 25, 26; x. 14.

Eph. iv. 8, &c.

Rom. x. 14, 15. 18.

---

our minds," and "inspire our souls," with holy affections, that we may improve those "manifold gifts," which alone give stability to the church of Christ, and are derived from Him, "the fountain and the spring of all celestial joy." Brewster.

[m] That done, the Bishop shall pray in this wise, &c.] That prayer was a principal part of this office was shewed before. The forms are various in divers churches: there is something like this of ours in antiquity, but nothing so full and so exact as this in any church. It was made at the Reformation; and has been continued ever since without any alteration. Dean Comber.

The praises of God cannot be too loudly proclaimed on this occasion by those, who properly appreciate the establishment of a true ministry in the Church. Its origin we well know: let us join the good bishop in prayer for grace to perform its duties. Though the orders of ministers in the Christian church are designated by particular names of primitive application, the functions and obligations of the sacred offices expand into a thousand ramifications. It is probably for this reason, that, instead of using the terms of priest and deacon, the bishop refers to St. Paul's classification in his Epistle to the Ephesians, iv. 11, "apostles, prophets, evangelists, doctors, and pastors." Not that these constituted different orders in the ministry; but they displayed the several departments of instruction, which every one, jointly or severally, was called upon to sustain. One, or other, or all of these characters are still necessary in the church; and the gift is distributed, as every man has need. Brewster.

together a great flock in all the parts of the world, to set forth the eternal praise of thy holy Name: For these so great benefits of thy eternal goodness, and for that thou hast vouchsafed to call these thy servants here present to the same Office and Ministry appointed for the salvation of mankind, we render unto thee most hearty thanks, we praise and worship thee; and we humbly beseech thee, by the same thy blessed Son, to grant unto all, which either here or elsewhere call upon thy holy Name, that we may continue to shew ourselves thankful unto thee for these and all other thy
Eph. iv. 13. benefits; and that we may daily increase and go forwards in the knowledge and faith of thee and thy Son, by the Holy Spirit. So that as well by these thy Ministers, as by them over whom they shall be appointed thy Ministers, thy holy Name may be for ever glorified, and thy blessed kingdom enlarged; through the same thy Son Jesus Christ our Lord, who liveth and reigneth with thee in the unity of the same Holy Spirit, world without end. Amen.

¶ When this Prayer is done, the Bishop[n] with the Priests present shall lay their hands severally upon the head of every one that receiveth the Order of Priesthood; the Receivers humbly kneeling upon their knees, and the Bishop saying,

RECEIVE the Holy Ghost[a] for the Office and Work of a John xx. 21—23.

[n] When this Prayer is done, the Bishop &c.] Upon this rubrick, and the following form of words, there are several things worthy to be observed.

As first, that although the whole power of ordination be in the bishop alone, and the imposition of his hands for that purpose is sufficient to the making of a priest; yet the Church hath thought good to order, that the priests, which are present, shall lay on their hands too; in conformity, I suppose, to the ancient custom, that hath obtained in the Latin church: I say, the Latin, because it was never heard of in the Greek, or any of the Eastern churches, that any but bishops should lay hands upon persons to be ordained. But in the Latin there is an ancient canon for it, or decree of a council held at Carthage in the year of our Lord 398, which saith, "When a priest is ordained, the bishop blessing him and laying the hand upon his head, let all the priests also, that are present, hold their hands upon his head, by the hands of the bishop." And from hence, I suppose it was, that our rubrick was taken; in that it agrees so exactly with it in every particular. And the reason of it seems to be the same with that of the fourth canon of the council of Nice, That three bishops shall be always present at the ordination of a bishop. Not but that the ordination is valid, and was always reputed so, although performed only by one bishop: but this was done to prevent clandestine ordinations, to make the work more publick and solemn, and to signalize it by the concurrent testimony and consent of several persons joining together in it.

For in the next place we must observe, that, although the priests, if any be present, lay on their hands also, yet it is expressly ordered that the bishop shall say the words, "Receive the Holy Ghost," &c. For, if a mere priest should say them, or any one but a bishop, the ordination was always reckoned null and void. For this was a judged case in the second council of Sevil, in the year 619; which, understanding that a bishop, at the ordination of one priest and two deacons, laid his hands upon them, but being troubled with sore eyes, so that he could not read, a priest blessed them, or read the words of consecration; they judged the whole action to be void, and that the persons, who should have been ordained, did receive "not the title of consecration, but rather a monument of ignominy;" and therefore were not reputed among the clergy. So careful was the church in those days, that every thing essential to ordination should be performed by the bishop himself; and so is our Church at this time, and therefore requires that the bishop say these words.

Concerning the words themselves we may observe, that although some other expressions are inserted to determine and distinguish, and others added to explain the office which is now conferred; yet all the same words are repeated, which our Lord Himself used at the ordination of his apostles: which the Catholick church always judged necessary, not only in imitation of our blessed Saviour, but likewise because that the persons who are ordained priests in his church, are to preach the same word, administer the same sacraments, and exercise the same power in the censures of the church, as the apostles themselves did. And therefore it is necessary, that they should be endued with the same Spirit, ordained after the same manner, and intrusted with the same power of the keys, as the apostles themselves were. By which method the means of grace and salvation, administered by priests thus ordained, became as effectual to them that use them aright, as when they were administered by the apostles themselves: the Spirit which they receive by this imposition of hands, being always ready to assist at their several administrations, and to bless and sanctify them to those, who are duly prepared and disposed for them.

It should be observed further, that the bishop pronounceth these words, and so conferreth the order, not in his own name, but "in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost," whose vicegerent he is in ordaining persons to minister to his divine Majesty in this sacred office of priesthood. Bp. Beveridge.

[a] Receive the Holy Ghost &c.] This form is taken from our blessed Saviour's own words after his ascension, when He solemnly sent his disciples to preach the Gospel: for then He said, "Receive ye the Holy Ghost," &c., John xx. 21—23. And doubtless no words can be fitter than those spoken on the same occasion by our Saviour, who had been sent by his Father, after the Holy Ghost descended on Him, to preach the Gospel; which He had hitherto done by Himself, but, being now to leave the earth, He hereby delegates this work to his apostles, and sends them with the like qualifications and authority, as He was sent by his Father. Dean Comber.

Objections have been raised against this form used in Priest in the Church of God, now committed unto thee by the imposition of our hands. Whose sins thou dost forgive[o], they are forgiven; and whose sins thou dost retain, they are retained. And be thou a faithful Dispenser[p] of the Word of God, and of his holy Sacraments;

1 Cor. ix. 17. Eph. iii. 2. Col. i. 25. 1 Cor. iv. 1, 2.

our Church, as being too bold an expression: namely, for any mortal man to pretend to give the Holy Ghost, as the word "receive" seems to imply. But by the Holy Ghost we understand, not the person of the Holy Ghost, but only his gifts and graces which are conferred in ordination. For the Holy Ghost is frequently used in Scripture for his gifts. So that our Church means no more by the expression here, than St. Paul did by "the gift or grace of God," which he exhorts Timothy to recruit or "stir up," if any decays had been made in it, since the imposition of hands upon him, 2 Tim. i. 6. This form was pitched upon by the church, as seeming a very proper one, from its being used by our blessed Saviour Himself, when He vested the apostles with the priestly power of absolution, John xx. 23. Indeed, if the bishop, who pronounces these words, pretended to an original power inherent in himself by virtue of his office to confer the gifts of the Holy Ghost, it were matter of exception. But, when he claims only herein a ministerial power, which God hath authorized him to exercise, there is no reason to find fault. For in the words immediately before this form, as it stands in St. John's Gospel, it is expressly said, "As my Father sent me, even so send I you:" vesting them thereby with as ample powers of preaching the Gospel themselves, and commissioning new preachers, as He Himself had been intrusted with by God the Father. Dr. Nicholls.

These words in the bishop's mouth, when spoken over the persons ordained, properly express, in the first place, the communication of that authority, which proceeds from the Holy Ghost: see Acts xiii. 2; xx. 28. They also express, in the second place, the bishop's earnest request to the Father of mercies, that the ordained may at all times enjoy such proportions, both of the graces and gifts of the Spirit, as will be needful for them: which request if it be not their own fault, will prove effectual; because having, in the common course of his providence, appointed the bishop, though unworthy, to act in his behalf, He will assuredly be ready to own and bless the bishop's ministrations. Abp. Secker.

[o] — Whose sins thou dost forgive, &c.] These again are the words of Christ to his apostles, immediately after the former. But he did not grant to them the power, either of retaining the sins of penitent persons, or of forgiving the impenitent. Nor does the bishop pretend to grant, by uttering them, all the powers, which the apostles had in this respect. They had "the discernment of spirits," 1 Cor. xii. 10: and could say with certainty, when persons were penitent, and consequently forgiven, and when not, Acts viii. 21. 23. They were able also to inflict miraculous punishments on offenders: and to remove on their repentance the punishments, which had been inflicted. These words will convey nothing of all this to the persons now ordained. But still when the bishop uses them, they give them, first, an assurance, that according to the terms of that Gospel, which they are to preach, men shall be pardoned or condemned: secondly, a right of inflicting ecclesiastical censures for a shorter or longer time, and of taking them off; which, in regard to external communion, is retaining or forgiving offences. This power, being bestowed for the edification of the church, must be restrained, not only by general rules of order, but according to the particular exigencies of circumstances. And our Church wishes, with much reason, for circumstances more favourable to the exertion of it. Office of Commination. But how little soever exerted, the power is inherent in the office of priesthood. And though we are no more infallible in our proceedings and sentences, than temporal judges are in theirs; yet our acts, as well as theirs, are to be respected, as done by competent authority. And, if they are done on good grounds also, "whatever we shall bind or loose on earth, will be bound or loosed in heaven," Matt. xviii. 18. Nor will other proofs of repentance be sufficient in the sight of God, if submission to the discipline of the church of Christ, when it hath been offended and requires due satisfaction, be obstinately refused, either from haughtiness or negligence. Abp. Secker.

[p] — And be thou a faithful Dispenser &c.] The other part of these solemn words is a strict charge to him that is ordained, to be "a faithful dispenser of God's holy word and sacraments." It appears from St. Paul, that they are stewards of these mysteries, that is, in the French idiom, "dispensers." And hence St. Paul calls his preaching and other ministerial acts "a dispensation committed to him," 1 Cor. ix. 17; Eph. iii. 2; Col. i. 25. Now, as to the word of God, the faithful dispensing of it is to give every soul its proper portion. So our pastor must offer easy truths, plain similitudes and examples, to inform the ignorant, to prepare higher notions and stricter rules for the stronger and more knowing; he must have ready promises to comfort mourning penitents, threatenings to warn bold sinners, counsel to settle the doubtful minds, exhortation to quicken negligent loiterers, and reproofs to check forward offenders. All these are in God's word: and every one of these is proper food at some times for the souls that are under his charge. His prudence must allot every one his portion according to the temper and necessity of each; and he must act faithfully, as well as wisely; he must be impartial, and fear no man for his greatness, nor despise any for his poverty: he must not spare a friend for favour, nor expose an enemy out of evil will, because their souls are at stake, and there is a curse upon those who "do this work of the Lord deceitfully," Jer. xlviii. 10. But this relates chiefly to the pastor's private applications: besides which it is his duty to preach in publick, and this office he must be faithful in, as far as a publick place will allow. He must conceal no necessary, nor publish any unnecessary truths. He must reprove in general the most prevailing vices of his people, and exhort them especially to such duties as they most neglect. The same fidelity must be shewed also in dispensing both sacraments, by taking care that infants do not, by his neglect, die unbaptized; nor forget their vow after they have been baptized: by preparing his people for receiving the communion worthily; frequently dispensing it publicly to those in health, and privately to the sick; encouraging such as are fit for it to come often; and warning all notorious sinners, especially those in malice, to repent before they presume to come to this holy table. And they, that thus behave themselves in God's house, shall from their great Master hear that joyful eulogy, "Well done, ye good and faithful servants, enter ye into the joy of your Lord," Matt. xxv. 21. Dean Comber.

In the Name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost. Amen.

¶ Then the Bishop shall deliver to every one of them kneeling, the Bible[q] into his hand, saying,

TAKE thou Authority to preach the Word of God, and to minister the holy Sacraments in the Congregation, where thou shalt be lawfully appointed thereunto.

¶ When this is done, the Nicene Creed shall be sung or said; and the Bishop shall after that go on in the Service of the Communion, which all they that receive Orders shall take together, and remain in the same place where Hands were laid upon them, until such time as they have received the Communion.

¶ The Communion being done, after the last Collect, and immediately before the Benediction, shall be said these Collects.

MOST merciful Father[r], we beseech thee to send upon these thy servants thy heavenly blessing; that they may be clothed with righteousness, and that thy Word spoken by their mouths may have such success, that it may never be spoken in vain. Grant also, that we may have grace to hear and receive what they shall deliver out of thy most holy Word, or agreeable to the same, as the means of our salvation; that in all our words and deeds we may seek thy glory, and the increase of thy kingdom; through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

Ps. cxxxii. 9. Rev. xix. 8.

1 Sam. iii. 19. Isa. lv. 11.

Matt. xiii. 4, &c. ver. 58. 1 Thess. ii. 13. Heb. iv. 2.

Rom. x. 13—15. 1 Cor. i. 21. 23, 24. Matt. v. 16.

PREVENT us, O Lord, in all our doings, with thy most gracious favour, and further us with thy continual help; that in all our works begun, continued, and ended in thee,

---

[q] Then the Bishop shall deliver to every one of them kneeling, the Bible &c.] The Gospel is delivered to a deacon for a reason above assigned; page 695, note l: here the priest hath the whole "Bible delivered to him," with words containing a solemn grant of full power and "authority to preach out of it, and administer the sacraments according to it in the congregation, whereto he shall be appointed." And whereas of old, both in the African and Western churches, as well as in the Eastern, this rite was only used at the consecration of a bishop, in later times it was used to a priest; who, as Isidore observes, "has also the dispensation of the divine mysteries committed to him, and is colleague to the bishop in presiding over the church, in consecrating the sacrament, and preaching to the people:" but with this difference: the priest acts subordinately, and is confined ordinarily to one parish, but the bishop is supreme in ecclesiastical matters through his whole diocese. Dean Comber.

So that now they have authority, not only to read the Gospel, but to preach the whole word of God, and to minister his holy sacraments, with power and efficacy: the Holy Spirit, which they have now received, being always ready, at the execution of the several parts of their office, to make them effectual to the great ends and purposes for which they were appointed. But, although they are by this means made priests of the Catholick church, and so may effectually administer the word and sacraments in any part of the world; yet nevertheless they are not to do it any where, but in the congregation where they shall be lawfully appointed, that is, by the bishop of the place, who alone can lawfully do it. Bp. Beveridge.

[r] Most merciful Father, &c.] There is nothing remaining of a material difference between the former office and this, but one proper concluding collect, which seems peculiar to our Church. It contains two kinds of petitions: first, for the ministers, that they may enjoy God's blessing in general, and in particular that they may be holy in their lives, and successful in all their labours: secondly, for the people, that they may reverently hear the word of God, and all other acts may aim at God's honour and the enlarging of his kingdom. It is suitable extremely for the occasion. Dean Comber.

Thus has been laid before the readers the method and design of the offices, which our Church hath appointed for the ordination of priests and deacons: that so they may understand the excellency of them, and be the better prepared, not to be idle spectators, much less disturbers, of so great a work; but devoutly and heartily to join in the prayers that are made for those who are ordained. Now from all that hath been said upon this subject, I shall speak a few, and but a few words; first, with reference to those, who come to receive holy orders, and then to all those who are present at it.

As for those, who come to take upon them the office, either of deacon or priest, in the church of Christ: they have heard, and I hope considered beforehand, the greatness of the office they undertake, and the promise they must make before they are admitted into it. Let me now beseech them in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ, whose servants they are now to be, that from this day forward they look upon Him as their great Master, and lay out themselves wholly in the service to which He calls them. And whatsoever difficulties they meet with in it, let them follow the apostle's example, "faint not," nor be discouraged; but go on with chearfulness and alacrity, as remembering they serve the best Master in the world; one, who will not only stand by and assist them, but reward them at last with a crown of righteousness.

As for the rest I shall only say, that from what has been remarked they may easily see, what cause they have to thank God, that they, who minister the means of grace and salvation to them, are so regularly, so solemnly, so apostolically ordained; and how great an esteem and reverence they ought to have for all who are thus ordained, though not for their own sakes, yet for his sake whose ministers they are, and whose work they do; even our dear and ever-blessed Saviour Jesus Christ: to whom with the Father and the Holy Ghost, be all honour and glory, now and for ever. Amen. Bp. Beveridge.

we may glorify thy holy Name, and finally by thy mercy obtain everlasting life; through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

THE peace of God, which passeth all understanding, keep your hearts and minds in the knowledge and love of God, and of his Son Jesus Christ our Lord: And the blessing of God Almighty, the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghost, be amongst you, and remain with you always. Amen.

¶ And if on the same day the Order of Deacons be given to some, and the Order of Priesthood to others; the Deacons shall be first presented, and then the Priests; and it shall suffice that the Litany be once said for both. The Collects shall both be used; first, that for Deacons, then that for Priests. The Epistle shall be, Ephes. iv. 7—13, as before in this Office. Immediately after which, they that are to be made Deacons shall take the Oath of Supremacy, be examined, and Ordained, as is above prescribed. Then one of them having read the Gospel (which shall be either out of St. Matt. ix. 36—38, as before in this Office; or else St. Luke xii. 35—38, as before in the Form for the Ordering of Deacons,) they that are to be made Priests shall likewise take the Oath of Supremacy, be examined, and Ordained, as is in this Office before appointed.

THE

FORM OF ORDAINING OR CONSECRATING[s]

OF AN

ARCHBISHOP[t] OR BISHOP;

Which is always to be performed upon some SUNDAY or HOLY-DAY.

¶ When all things are duly prepared in the Church, and set in order, after Morning Prayer is ended, the Archbishop (or some other Bishop appointed) shall begin the Communion Service; in which this shall be

[s] The Form of Ordaining or Consecrating &c.] St. Cyprian, to shew the great use and necessity of a bishop, compares him to the shepherd of a flock, the pilot of a ship, and the ruler among the people: and implies, that, as a flock cannot be fed without a shepherd, a ship steered without a pilot, nor a multitude kept in order without a governour, so neither can a church be managed or preserved without a bishop: which being the highest order in the church, and those who are advanced to it being constituted supreme ecclesiastical rulers, not only over the people, but also over the inferior orders of the clergy, therefore the holy Scripture gives very strict rules for the choice of bishops, and their admission to this dignity hath been very solemn in all ages: at first, by fasting, prayer, and imposition of hands; and afterwards with more ceremony. The first general council requires, that three bishops at least shall perform the consecration, which was grounded on those apostolical canons made in the ages of persecution: and that shews the practice, which we still retain, to be very primitive. And so is their declaration of their faith, and the strict scrutiny into their manners, with the laying of the Holy Bible on their head, though no express constitution appears to injoin these things till the fourth Council of Carthage. There is no doubt but there were forms of prayer, and particular supplications for the Holy Spirit, used even from the apostles' time, and by their examples, Acts xiii. 3. But those now extant, though some of them be very ancient, yet are of later date. However there have been such forms in all churches, in the Eastern or Greek church, as also among the Syrian and Ethiopick Christians, and in all eminent churches of the West.

The Roman church hath of late added abundance of frivolous and superstitious ceremonies and benedictions, which crept in while ignorance and error prevailed in all these parts of the world. But our judicious Reformers, in compiling this office, as well as in the rest, have cast away all the Roman superfluous and corrupt innovations, about blessing vestments, anointing, delivering the ring, pastoral staff, &c.; and so have reduced the substantial part of it as nigh to the primitive form as our circumstances could bear; but have enlarged it with divers pertinent places of Scripture, and proper questions, as also with accurately composed prayers: so that now we may affirm our form of consecrating bishops is the best and most adapted to the occasion of any office extant in the world. Dean Comber.

[t] An Archbishop] The name of archbishop does hardly occur till about the fourth century: but the thing itself, or the metropolitan jurisdiction, was more ancient, and probably as old as the apostolical times. For the apostles, for the better carrying on of the Gospel, and making it sit more easily on the minds of the Jews, among whom the most early conversions were made, contrived to adapt the discipline of the church, as nigh as could be, to the Jewish constitution. Now, whereas among them the synagogues of the greater cities had a pre-eminence over those in smaller towns, and oftentimes prescribed rules of government to them, and determined differences and difficulties, which occasionally arose; the method was taken up in the plantation of Christian churches. That this method was observed in the Jewish church, is evident from the sacred history and other writers. We read in the Acts of the Apostles, that the high priest gave Saul a letter to the synagogues of Damascus, that he might bring all the Christians, which should be found there, "bound to Jerusalem," Acts ix. 2. Which plainly shews, that the church of Jerusalem, or the high priest who presided in the Sanhedrim there, had a sort of ecclesiastical jurisdiction over other synagogues, though at a remote distance. And Dr. Hammond thinks, that a remarkable passage in Philo must be taken in that sense. It is plain that the apostles preached the Gospel, first in great cities, such as Rome, Antioch, Ephesus, Corinth, &c. And when other smaller cities in their neighbourhood received the faith by preachers sent out of those large cities, they became, as it were, daughters to them, being a sort of spiritual colony drawn out from them; and had resort in all matters of importance to their mother church, or the governour thereof, the metropolitan bishop, as the foreign synagogues of the

The Collect.

1 Cor. xii. 8—10. ALMIGHTY God, who by thy Son Jesus Christ didst give to thy holy Apostles[u] many excellent gifts, and didst charge them to feed thy flock[x]; Give grace, we beseech thee, to all Bishops, the Pastors of thy Church[y], that they may diligently preach thy Word, and duly administer the godly Discipline thereof; and grant to the people, that they may obediently follow the same; that all may receive the crown of everlasting glory; through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

John xxi. 16. Acts xx. 28. 1 Pet. v. 1, 2.

Heb. xiii. 17.

¶ And another Bishop shall read the Epistle[z],

1 Tim. iii. 1.

THIS is a true saying, If a man desire the Office of a Bishop, he desireth a good work. A Bishop then must be blameless, the husband of one wife, vigilant, sober, of good behaviour, given to hospitality, apt to teach; not given to wine, no striker, not greedy of filthy lucre, but pa-

---

Jews had to Jerusalem. The metropolitical jurisdiction seems to have been established time out of mind, before the Council of Nice, because the canons of that council mention privileges which belonged to several metropoles by ancient custom. The ecclesiastical history relates of Irenæus, that he had metropolitical jurisdiction, and did "superintend over all the bishopricks in France." Dionysius, Bishop of Corinth, in his letter to the churches of Crete, calls Philippus the bishop of all those churches. The Council of Carthage was held under St. Cyprian, as archbishop of the province: and in the Council of Trullo he is called "archbishop of the country of Africa."

The writers of the Latin church, and particularly the canonists, promiscuously use the words "archbishop" and "metropolitan:" making either name to denote a bishop, who, by virtue of his see, does preside over or govern several other bishops. But the Greeks were more distinct: they allowing only the name of metropolitan to him whose see was really a metropolis; that is, a principal city, where religion having been first planted, it diffused itself to other cities, the bishops whereof had other bishops under them. Thus, in the Greek Cartophylacium, Cæsarea, Ephesus, and Heraclea, are reckoned metropoles; but Bixya, Leontopolis, and Mareonia are only archbishopricks, and not metropoles. Dr. Nicholls.

[u] Almighty God, who by thy Son Jesus Christ didst give to thy holy Apostles &c.] Nothing can be more proper to begin the consecration of a bishop than the commemoration of those gifts which Christ gave, and that charge which He laid upon his apostles, the first bishops of his church; the same charge being incumbent upon bishops now, which was given to the apostles; and, as they have their duty, they need some measure of their assistance. The apostolical office was only temporary, while the church was planting: but the bishops by their appointment were fixed to feed and rule it, after it was settled unto the end of the world. Hence they were in all antiquity counted the successors of the apostles; and the fathers call the apostles bishops; and as commonly give bishops the title and name of apostles; yea, all bishops were then styled apostolical, and their sees apostolical seats: although of later times the popes and bishops of Rome have arrogantly made a monopoly of those titles. But, this right of succession and community of names being general, doubtless it is very fit, when any are to enter into this venerable order, to commemorate, first, what gifts God through Jesus Christ gave to his apostles, since we may reasonably believe, so far as their office and duty is the same, so far his goodness and bounty will move Him to supply them also with gifts suitable to their need. He gave to his apostles many excellent gifts indeed, which St. Paul enumerates: namely, "the word of wisdom and of knowledge, the gift of faith, the power of healing and working miracles, the spirit of prophecy, the skill of discerning spirits, and of speaking as well as interpreting divers tongues," 1 Cor. xii. 8—10. Some of which were miraculous and peculiar to that age, and therefore are now ceased. But those of wisdom and knowledge, and a sound as well as a strong faith, are still necessary, and therefore permanent: so that we may justly beg these gifts for our bishops. Dean Comber.

[x] — and didst charge them to feed thy flock;] These words were spoken to St. Peter, but in him the rest were intended; yea, all the successors of the apostles are obliged by this charge as well as they, John xxi. 16; and therefore both St. Paul and St. Peter repeat this charge, Acts xx. 28; 1 Pet. v. 1, 2; and injoin the bishops, whom they had chosen, to "feed the flock of Christ:" the burden goes with the honour to every bishop, that is or shall be consecrated to the world's end. And therefore we commemorate this, as their present duty: and accordingly pray, that this and every other person, who is called to so great a charge, may have grace to perform it very well. Dean Comber.

[y] — all Bishops, the Pastors of thy Church,] We here give the bishops the title of "Pastors of Christ's Church:" and our Lord Himself first had both these names, being called the "Pastor," or "Shepherd, and Bishop of our souls," 1 Pet. ii. 25. He is the "chief Pastor," 1 Pet. v. 4; and they under Him are also pastors of their several portions of Christ's flock, where they preside in his name, and rule by his authority, and for which at last they must render Him an account. For, while He was on earth, He fed his flock Himself, by his preaching, his example, his exhortations and reproofs, and loved his sheep so intirely as to die for them; whence the Greek church desires of God, to "make this Bishop an imitator of his true Shepherd." And then only he deserves the same name with his great Master, when he follows his example in his fervent love of, and diligent care for, the souls committed to his charge. Dean Comber.

[z] — the Epistle.] Out of holy Scripture, the rule for our spiritual guides to walk by, there are several portions taken, proper for the several orders of the clergy. The first for the consecration of a bishop is out of the first Epistle to Timothy, chap. iii. 1, &c.: an Epistle so adapted to this occasion, that in all the old Lectionaries and Ordinals of the Western church, where Epistles and Gospels are only in use, this portion is always the first: and, where there are seven or eight for variety, this is never omitted; because it contains those divine directions, which the Holy Spirit by St. Paul gave to Timothy, concerning the qualifications of a bishop, and tient, not a brawler, not covetous; one that ruleth well his own house, having his children in subjection with all gravity; (For if a man know not how to rule his own house, how shall he take care of the Church of God?) Not a novice, lest being lifted up with pride he fall into the condemnation of the devil. Moreover, he must have a good report of them which are without; lest he fall into reproach, and the snare of the devil.

Or this.

For the Epistle[a]. Acts xx. 17.

FROM Miletus Paul sent to Ephesus, and called the elders of the Church. And when they were come to him, he said unto them, Ye know, from the first day that I came into Asia, after what manner I have been with you at all seasons, serving the Lord with all humility of mind, and with many tears and temptations which befel me by the lying in wait of the Jews: and how I kept back nothing that was profitable unto you, but have shewed you, and have taught you publickly, and from house to house, testifying both to the Jews, and also to the Greeks, repentance toward God, and faith toward our Lord Jesus Christ. And now behold, I go bound in the Spirit unto Jerusalem, not knowing the things that shall befal me there; save that the Holy Ghost witnesseth in every city, saying, that bonds and afflictions abide me. But none of these things move me, neither count I my life dear unto myself, so that I might finish my course with joy, and the ministry which I have received of the Lord Jesus, to testify the Gospel of the grace of God. And now behold, I know that ye all, among whom I have gone preaching the kingdom of God, shall see my face no more. Wherefore I take you to record this day, that I am pure from the blood of all men. For I have not shunned to declare unto you all the counsel of God. Take heed therefore unto yourselves, and to all the flock over the which the Holy Ghost hath made you Overseers, to feed the Church of God, which he hath purchased with his own blood. For I know this, that after my departing shall grievous wolves enter in among you, not sparing the flock. Also of your own selves shall men arise speaking perverse things, to draw away disciples after them. Therefore watch, and remember, that by the space of three years, I ceased not to warn every one night and day with tears. And now, brethren, I commend you to God, and to the word of his grace, which is able to build you up, and to give you an inheritance among all them which are sanctified. I have coveted no man's silver, or gold, or apparel; yea, ye yourselves know, that these hands have ministered unto my necessities, and to them that were with me. I have shewed you all things, how that so labouring ye ought to support the weak; and to remember the words of the Lord Jesus, how he said, It is more blessed to give than to receive.

¶ Then another Bishop shall read the Gospel[b].

St. John xxi. 15.

JESUS saith to Simon Peter, Simon, son of Jonas, lovest thou describes all the virtues, which they of that sacred order ought to be endued with, as well as the vices they must be clear from. Dean Comber.

[a] For the Epistle.] The Lutheran office for ordination hath part of this portion read on that occasion, namely, ver. 28—31. But I have not observed the use of this whole elegant oration of St. Paul any where but in our Church, which had it not in the first Ordinal of King Edward the Sixth. It was added since with great reason, and so exact propriety, that at first hearing all men must discern nothing can be more suitable at the consecration of a bishop, than this pious and pathetical address of our eloquent and divinely inspired apostle, when he took his last leave of the bishops of Lesser Asia: wherein there is so lively and lovely a character of a faithful pastor, as no pencil but his, and none but so guided, could draw. So that the candidates for this order ought, when they hear it, to suppose St. Paul himself is speaking to them; directing them by his rules and his example, both how to live, to suffer, and to preach: and exhorting, yea, charging them, by the most cogent arguments and most moving intreaties, to do their duty exactly in so great a trust. So that, if they lay it to heart and duly consider it, this portion of Scripture cannot fail to inspire them with holy resolutions, to follow such incomparable advice and so grave a precedent. Dean Comber.

[b] — the Gospel.] In the Western church of old they read no other Epistle and Gospel, but those for the day on which the consecration happened. But afterwards one proper portion of the Gospel was fixed to be read:

me more than these? He saith unto him, Yea, Lord, thou knowest that I love thee. He saith unto him, Feed my lambs. He saith to him again the second time, Simon, son of Jonas, lovest thou me? He saith unto him, Yea, Lord, thou knowest that I love thee. He saith unto him, Feed my sheep. He saith unto him the third time, Simon, son of Jonas, lovest thou me? Peter was grieved because he said unto him the third time, Lovest thou me? And he said unto him, Lord, thou knowest all things; thou knowest that I love thee. Jesus saith unto him, Feed my sheep.

Or else this. St. John xx. 19.

THE same day at evening, being the first day of the week, when the doors were shut where the disciples were assembled for fear of the Jews, came Jesus, and stood in the midst, and saith unto them, Peace be unto you. And when he had so said, he shewed unto them his hands and his side. Then were the disciples glad, when they saw the Lord. Then saith Jesus to them again, Peace be unto you: as my Father hath sent me, even so send I you. And when he had said this, he breathed on them, and saith unto them, Receive ye the Holy Ghost. Whose soever sins ye remit, they are remitted unto them; and whose soever sins ye retain, they are retained.

Or this. St. Matt. xxviii. 18.

JESUS came and spake unto them, saying, All power is given unto me in heaven and in earth. Go ye therefore and teach all nations, baptizing them In the Name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost; teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you: and lo, I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world.

¶ After the Gospel, and the Nicene Creed, and the Sermon are ended, the elected Bishop[c] (vested with his Rochet[d]) shall be to which, a little after, a second was added for variety. Those that are selected by our Church, which are peculiar to us, are more pertinent to a bishop's consecration, than any of those used abroad. The first of our Gospels being the commission and charge, which Christ gave to St. Peter, and in him, as the ancients note, to all bishops. The other two are the account of that general mission, which our Saviour gave to all his apostles, whose successors the bishops are, as they are severally related by St. John and St. Matthew: concerning which two last it may be noted, that the former respects the authority, which Christ gave them, over those already converted, namely, to "remit or retain their sins," as they found men penitent or impenitent: the latter relates to the power He gave them to bring men into the church, by first teaching, and then baptizing them. Dean Comber.

---

[c] — the elected Bishop] When cities were at first converted to Christianity, the bishops were elected by the clergy and people. But, as the number of Christians increased, this was found to be inconvenient; for tumults were raised, and sometimes murders committed, at such popular elections. To prevent the like disorders, the emperors, being then Christian, reserved the election of bishops to themselves: but in some measure conformable to the old way: that is to say, upon a bishop's death the chapter sent a ring and pastoral staff to the emperor, which he delivered to the person whom he appointed to be bishop of that place. But the pope or bishop of Rome, who in process of time got to be head of the church, was not pleased that the bishop should have dependence upon princes; and therefore brought it about, that the canons in cathedral churches should have the election of their bishops; which elections were usually confirmed at Rome. But princes had still some power in those elections. And particularly in England we read, that in the Saxon times all ecclesiastical dignities were conferred by the king in parliament. Lord Coke establisheth the right of donation in the kings of this realm, upon the principle of foundation and property: for that all the bishoprieks in England were of the king's foundation, and thereupon accrued to him the right of patronage. So also the bishopricks in Wales were founded by the Prince of Wales.

Hildebrand, who was pope in the reign of King William the Conqueror, was the first who opposed this way of making bishops here. This led to various contests, in consequence of which bishoprieks became elective by the deans and chapters, subject to the pope's confirmation. But afterwards, by the 25th of Henry the Eighth, chap. 20, they were made elective by the deans and chapters, without the pope, by the king's sole nomination, all papal jurisdiction whatsoever in this matter being intirely taken away: and upon this statute the matter still resteth. In Ireland the bishopricks are donative by letters patent. Dr. Burn.

[d] — (vested with his Rochet)] A linen habit peculiar to the bishop, and worn under what we call the chimere. The author of the acts of St. Cyprian's martyrdom says, that that father went to his execution in this pontifical habit; but whether this seems probable, I shall leave the reader to judge: however, it is certain the use of it is ancient, it being described by Bede in the seventh century. In the following ages the bishops were obliged, by the canon law, to wear their rochets whenever they appeared in publick: which practice was constantly kept up in England till the Reformation: but since that time the bishops have not used to wear them at any place out of the church, except in the parliament-house, and there always with the chimere, or upper robe, to which the lawn-sleeves are generally sewed; which before and after the Reformation, till Queen Elizabeth's time, was always of scarlet silk; but Bishop Hooper scrupling first at the robe itself, and then at presented by two Bishops unto the Archbishop of that province (or to some other Bishop appointed by lawful commission) the Archbishop sitting in his chair near the holy Table, and the Bishops that present him saying,

MOST Reverend Father in God, we present unto you this godly and well-learned man to be Ordained and Consecrated Bishop.

¶ Then shall the Archbishop demand the King's Mandate[c] for the Consecration, and cause it to be read. And the Oath touching the acknowledgment of the King's Supremacy, shall be ministered to the persons elected, as it is set down before in the Form for the Ordering of Deacons. And then shall also be ministered unto them the Oath of due obedience to the Archbishop, as followeth.

The Oath of due Obedience to the Archbishop[f].

IN the Name of God. Amen. I N. chosen Bishop of the Church and See of N. do profess and promise all due reverence and obedience to the Archbishop and to the Metropolitical Church[g] of N. and to their Successors: So help me God, through Jesus Christ.

¶ This Oath shall not be made at the Consecration of an Archbishop.

¶ Then the Archbishop shall move the Congregation present to pray, saying thus to them:

Luke vi. 12, &c. BRETHREN, it is written[h] in the Gospel of Saint Luke, That our Saviour Christ continued the whole night in prayer, before he did choose and send forth his twelve Apostles. It is written also in the Acts xiii. 2, 3. Acts of the Apostles, That the Disciples who were at Antioch did fast and pray before they laid hands on Paul and Barnabas, and sent them forth. Let us therefore, following the example of our Saviour Christ and his Apostles, first fall to prayer, before we admit, and send forth this person presented unto us, to the work whereunto we trust the Holy Ghost hath called him.

¶ And then shall be said the Litany, as before in the Form of Ordering Deacons, save only, that after this place That it may please thee to illuminate all Bishops, &c., the proper suffrage there following shall be omitted, and this inserted instead of it;

THAT it may please thee to bless this our Brother elected, and to send thy grace upon him, that he may duly execute the Office whereunto he is called, to the edifying of thy Church, and to the honour, praise, and glory of thy Name;

Answer. We beseech thee to hear us, good Lord.

¶ Then shall be said this Prayer, following.

ALMIGHTY God, giver of all good things, who by thy Holy Spirit has appointed divers Orders of Ministers in thy Church; Mercifully behold this thy servant now called to the Work and Ministry of a Bishop; and replenish him so with the truth of thy doctrine, and adorn him with innocency of life, that, both by word and deed, he may faithfully serve thee in this Office, to the glory of thy Name, and the edifying and well governing of thy Church; through the merits the colour of it, as too light and gay for the episcopal gravity, it was changed for a chimere of black satin. Wheatly.

---

[c] Then shall the Archbishop demand the King's Mandate &c.] As in times past the pope's mandate was in like manner demanded, as is required in the pontifical. Dr. Burn.

[f] The Oath of due Obedience to the Archbishop.] Archbishops and metropolitans had certainly very early a sort of jurisdiction over the bishops within their province, and were endowed with a right of being present, or consenting to the ordaining of all, that were chosen bishops within their district. But when the oath of swearing canonical obedience to the metropolitan came in, is not so certain.

This oath was first drawn up by the compilers of the English Ordinal: for in the Roman Pontifical there is only an oath to the Pope and his successors. This oath being laid aside, the oath to the archbishop was injoined: the consecrated bishop being obliged to swear to the archbishop of the province, and his successors. Dr. Nicholls.

[g] —to the Archbishop and to the Metropolitical Church] That is, either when the see is full; or else in the vacation, when the whole archiepiscopal jurisdiction is vested in the dean and chapter. Dr. Burn.

[h] Brethren, it is written &c.] The ground of this short preface to the Litany, and other prayers for the bishop elect, is laid in a sure foundation: namely, the practice first of Christ, and then of his holy apostles, whose custom of praying before they commissioned any to be pastors, and the constant rule of the church in following their example, is equal even to an express command for us to pray before all sorts of ordinations. So that, though we do believe the present person is inwardly called to this great work by the Holy Ghost; yet we must by litanies, supplications, and devout prayers, earnestly beg of Almighty God to enable him to perform it to his glory, and the salvation of his own and many others' souls. Dean Comber.

of our Saviour Jesus Christ, who liveth and reigneth with thee and the Holy Ghost, world without end. Amen.

¶ Then the Archbishop, sitting in his chair, shall say to him that is to be Consecrated,

BROTHER, forasmuch as the holy Scripture[1] and the ancient Canons command, that we should 1 Tim. v. 22. not be hasty in laying on hands, and admitting any person to Government in the Church of Christ, which he hath purchased with no less price than the effusion of his own blood; before I admit you to this Administration, I will examine you in certain Articles, to the end that the Congregation present may have a trial, and bear witness, how you be minded to behave yourself in the Church of God.

ARE you persuaded that you be truly called to this Ministration, according to the will of our Lord Jesus Christ, and the order of this Realm?

Answer. I am so persuaded.

The Archbishop.

Tit. i. 9. ARE you persuaded that the holy Scriptures contain sufficiently all Doctrine required of necessity for eternal salvation through faith in Jesus Christ? And are you determined out of the same holy Scriptures to instruct the people committed to your charge; and to teach or maintain nothing as required of necessity to eternal salvation, but that which you shall be persuaded may be concluded and proved by the same?

Answer. I am so persuaded, and determined, by God's grace.

The Archbishop.

WILL you then faithfully exercise yourself in the same holy Scriptures, and call upon God by prayer for the true understanding of the same; so as you may be able by them to teach and exhort with wholesome Doctrine, and to withstand and convince the gainsayers?

Answer. I will so do, by the help of God.

The Archbishop.

ARE you ready, with all faithful diligence, to banish and drive Tit. iii. 10.
away all erroneous and strange doctrine contrary to God's Word; and both privately and openly to call upon and encourage others to the same?

Answer. I am ready, the Lord being my helper.

The Archbishop.

WILL you deny all ungodliness and worldly lusts, and live soberly, righteously, and godly, in this present world; that you may shew yourself in all things an example of good works unto others, that the adversary may be ashamed, having nothing to say against you?

Answer. I will so do, the Lord being my helper.

The Archbishop.

WILL you maintain and set forward, as much as shall lie in you, quietness, love, and peace among all men; and such as be unquiet, disobedient, and criminous,

[1] Brother, forasmuch as the holy Scripture &c.] This introduction is to shew, that these necessary interrogatories before the admission of a bishop are grounded first upon holy Scripture, even St. Paul's charge to Timothy, concerning his not ordaining any without a previous examination, 1 Tim. v. 22. Secondly, this method of asking questions of the candidate for a bishopriek is grounded on divers ancient canons, especially on that of the fourth Council of Carthage; where it is expressly required, and where all the particulars, to be inquired of, as to his manners, his learning, and especially as to his faith, are set down at large; and, unless he could give an account in all the particulars, the metropolitan was not to consecrate him. From this canon, which also cites the place of St. Paul, our Church hath taken this preface, being like also to the most ancient forms used in the Western church. But after the papal monarchy was set up, about the year 900, two questions more were added, about "receiving and keeping the traditions of the fathers, and the decrees of the apostolical see," and about "fidelity to St. Peter and his vicar." And the modern Roman Pontifical hath made this second question still larger, putting in the pope's name, and binding them to "pay fidelity, subjection, and obedience in all things to him and his successors." But all this, being mere innovation, was justly expunged by our Reformers; and we have reduced this preface to what it was in the primitive ages, yea, to what it was in the church of Rome, while pure and uncorrupted: and in this, as well as in many other things, we have left them only in those things, wherein they had first left their own orthodox and pious predecessors, and so departed from themselves, and from the right way. Dean Comber.

Tit. i. 13; ii. 15. within your Diocese, correct and punish, according to such authority as you have by God's Word, and as to you shall be committed by the Ordinance of this Realm?

Answer. I will so do, by the help of God.

The Archbishop.

1 Tim. v. 22. WILL you be faithful in Ordaining[k], sending, or laying hands upon others?

Answer. I will so be, by the help of God.

The Archbishop.

1 Tim. iii. 2; Tit. i. 8. WILL you shew yourself gentle, and be merciful[l] for Christ's sake to poor and needy people, and to all strangers destitute of help?

Answer. I will so shew myself, by God's help

¶ Then the Archbishop standing up shall say,

ALMIGHTY God, our heavenly Father, who hath given you a good will to do all these things, Grant also unto you strength and power to perform the same; that, he accomplishing in you the good work which he hath begun, you may be found perfect and irreprehensible at the latter day; through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

¶ Then shall the Bishop elect put on the rest of the Episcopal habit; and kneeling down, Veni, Creator Spiritus, shall be sung or said over him, the Archbishop beginning, and the Bishops, with others that are present, answering by verses, as followeth.

COME, Holy Ghost, our souls inspire,
And lighten with celestial fire.
Thou the anointing Spirit art,
Who dost thy seven-fold gifts impart.
Thy blessed Unction from above,
Is comfort, life, and fire of love.
Enable with perpetual light
The dulness of our blinded sight.
Anoint and cheer our soiled face
With the abundance of thy grace.
Keep far our foes, give peace at home:
Where thou art guide no ill can come.
Teach us to know the Father, Son,
And thee, of both, to be but One.
That, through the ages all along,
This may be our endless song;
Praise to thy eternal merit,
Father, Son, and Holy Spirit.

Or this,

COME, Holy Ghost, eternal God, &c.

As before in the Form for Ordering Priests.

¶ That ended, the Archbishop shall say,

Lord, hear our prayer.

Answer. And let our cry come unto thee.

Let us pray.

ALMIGHTY God, and most merciful Father[m], who of thine infinite goodness hast given thine only and dearly beloved Son Jesus Christ, to be our Redeemer, and the Author of everlasting life; who, after that he had made perfect our Redemption by his death, and was ascended into heaven, poured down his gifts abundantly upon men, making some Apostles, some Prophets, some Evangelists, some Pastors and Doctors, to the edifying and making perfect his Church; Grant, we beseech thee, to this thy [k] Will you be faithful in Ordaining, &c.] Since the bishops have the sole right of ordaining, doubtless it is very necessary strictly to require a promise from them, at their consecration, that they will faithfully perform this great trust, of ordaining and sending out fit persons to execute the priestly and episcopal offices. For, if they promote any that are heterodox or schismatical in their opinions, weak and unripe in their judgments, or vicious and debauched in their lives, either by negligence in duly examining them before, or, which is worse, by fear or favour be imposed upon, it is the greatest sin they can possibly commit, and they are answerable for all the ill effects of admitting such persons into so holy an employment. Dean Comber.

[l] Will you shew yourself gentle, and be merciful &c.] Charity to the poor, and hospitality, are required of bishops, not only by the apostolical injunctions, 1 Tim. iii. 2; Tit. i. 8; but by the canons of the ancient church. The author of the apostolical constitutions, after having declared the method of ordaining a bishop, has an exhortation to the bishops concerning the care which they ought to have of the poor: which undoubtedly was copied from the forms of ordination that were used in the most early ages. Dr. Nicholls.

[m] Almighty God, and most merciful Father, &c.] The large preface to this prayer is the same, almost verbatim, with that which follows the Veni Creator, and precedes the ordination of a priest. That which is peculiar to this form, is only two petitions for the bishop now to be admitted: namely, that God may grant him grace, first, to "preach the Gospel willingly," and secondly, to "use his authority wisely:" and thirdly, here are the motives to the consecrators and consecrated, exciting them to make these requests: first, the benefit of God's family committed to this steward's care; and secondly, the salvation of the steward's own soul. Dean Comber.

1 Tim. iii. 2. servant such grace, that he may evermore be ready to spread abroad thy Gospel, the glad tidings of re-
2 Cor. xiii. 10. conciliation with thee; and use the authority given him, not to destruction, but to salvation; not to hurt,
Matt. xxiv. 45, 46. but to help: so that as a wise and faithful servant, giving to thy family their portion in due season, he may at last be received into everlasting joy; through Jesus Christ our Lord, who, with thee and the Holy Ghost, liveth and reigneth, one God, world without end. Amen.

¶ Then the Archbishop and Bishops present shall lay their hands upon the head of the elected Bishop kneeling before them upon his knees, the Archbishop saying,

RECEIVE the Holy Ghost[n], for the Office and Work of a Bishop in the Church of God, now committed unto thee by the Imposition of our hands; In the Name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost. Amen. And 2 Tim. i. 6, 7. remember that thou stir up the grace of God which is given thee by this Imposition of our hands: for God hath not given us the spirit of fear, but of power, and love, and soberness.

¶ Then the Archbishop shall deliver him the Bible[o], saying,

GIVE heed unto reading, exhortation, and doctrine. Think upon the things contained in this Book. Be diligent in them, that 1 Tim. iv. 15, 16.
the increase coming thereby may be manifest unto all men. Take heed unto thyself, and to doctrine, and be diligent in doing them: for by so doing thou shalt both save thyself and them that hear thee. Be to the Acts xx. 28, 29.
flock of Christ a shepherd, not a Ezek. xxxiv. 4. 16.
wolf; feed them, devour them not. Hold up the weak, heal the sick, bind up the broken, bring again the 1 Pet. v. 2. out-casts, seek the lost. Be so merciful, that you be not too remiss; so Luke iv. 18; xix. 10. 1 Pet. ii. 14.
minister discipline, that you forget not mercy: that when the chief Shepherd shall appear you may receive 1 Pet. v. 4.
the never-fading crown of glory; through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

¶ Then the Archbishop shall proceed in the Communion-Service; with whom the new Consecrated Bishop (with others) shall also communicate.

¶ And for the last Collect, immediately before the Benediction, shall be said these Prayers.

MOST merciful Father[p], we beseech thee to send down upon this thy servant thy heavenly blessing: and so endue him with thy Holy Spirit, that he, preaching thy 2 Tim. iv. 2.

---

[n] Receive the Holy Ghost, &c.] The order of priesthood is so near the episcopal, that the words at the admission to both are very much alike; only, because their duty differs in some points, therefore the one hath the Spirit communicated "for the office and work of a presbyter," the other, "for the office and work of a bishop;" and since the power of binding and loosing was given to the candidate, when he was ordained priest, that is not repeated now, since every bishop must pass through that order first. But, instead of that form, here is added that reasonable admonition of St. Paul to Timothy, to "stir up the grace of God, that is now given them by the imposition of hands;" to which the reason of the charge is annexed, namely, because "God hath not given us the spirit of fear, but of power, and love, and soberness." The consecrated bishop ought firmly to believe, that he doth now receive the gifts and graces of the Holy Spirit, so far as is necessary for his office: and we see here St. Paul takes it for granted, that imposition of hands did convey it to Timothy; for he hath said, God gave him the Spirit, and his grace, by this rite: and his successors in the dignity have the same need, and the same method is used now. But, lest this privilege should make them proud and negligent, they are first put in mind, that the gifts of the Spirit are like the celestial fire in the Jewish temple, which came from heaven, yet was to be kept alive by human industry, and continually putting on fresh fuel. Even these gifts and graces will be extinguished, if those, who have received them, do not continually endeavour to quicken them by daily and devout prayer, by diligent and constant reading and study, and by being ever employed in all sorts of good works: God doth not give them his Spirit to exempt them wholly from working, but to engage them to co-operate with Him; and therefore it is St. Paul's argument for "our working out our own salvation with fear and trembling," because "God worketh in us both to will and to do," Phil. ii. 12, 13: yea, he calls the omitting to do our parts, "receiving the grace of God in vain," 2 Cor. vi. 1. And our Saviour shews that servant was condemned, who only kept his talent safe, but did not improve it, Matt. xxv. 24, &c. Dean Comber.

[o] Then the Archbishop shall deliver him the Bible, &c.] This custom of the delivery of the Bible to the bishops (and priests) took its rise from a very ancient practice of laying the Gospels upon the heads of those who were ordained to these orders. Dr. Nicholls. And to remind him that is consecrated how essential a part of his duty the reading and expounding of it is, the ordainer gives him a strict charge with it, almost in the very words of St. Paul to Timothy, 1 Tim. iv. 13. 15; which being indited by the Spirit of God for this very occasion, must be the best for explaining this primitive rite. Dean Comber.

[p] Most merciful Father, &c.] After the Communion is over, all the ancient formularies conclude with a col-

Word, may not only be earnest to reprove, beseech, and rebuke with all patience and doctrine; but also 1 Tim. iv. 12. may be to such as believe a wholesome example, in word, in conversation, in love, in faith, in chastity, and in purity; that faithfully fulfilling
2 Tim. iv. 7, 8. his course, at the latter day he may receive the crown of righteousness laid up by the Lord the righteous Judge, who liveth and reigneth one God with the Father and the Holy Ghost, world without end. Amen.

PREVENT us, O Lord, in all our doings with thy most gracious favour, and further us with thy continual help; that in all our works begun, continued, and ended in thee, we may glorify thy holy Name, and finally by thy mercy obtain everlasting life; through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

THE peace of God, which passeth all understanding, keep your hearts and minds in the knowledge and love of God, and of his Son Jesus Christ our Lord: And the Blessing of God Almighty, the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghost, be amongst you, and remain with you always. Amen.

---

lect as we do. That of the Western church in this place is very like ours in substance: only our form is larger, and expressed in the very words of holy Scripture, and especially in the words of St. Paul, relating to his beloved and lately consecrated bishop Timothy, which cannot but be very proper on this occasion. The particulars take in all the necessities and duties of one, that is admitted to this order: the expressions are plain, and the method clear. Dean Comber.

A FORM OF

PRAYER[a] WITH THANKSGIVING,

To be used yearly upon the Fifth Day of November[b],

For the happy Deliverance of King JAMES I, and the three Estates of England, from the most traiterous and bloody-intended Massacre by Gunpowder: And also for the happy Arrival of his Majesty King William on this Day, for the Deliverance of our Church and Nation.

¶ The Minister of every Parish shall give warning to his Parishioners publickly in the Church at Morning Prayer, the Sunday before, for the due Observation of the said Day. And after Morning Prayer, or Preaching, upon the said Fifth Day of November, shall read publickly, distinctly, and plainly, the Act of Parliament, made in the third Year of King James the First, for the Observation of it.

¶ The Service shall be the same with the usual Office for Holy-days in all things; except where it is hereafter otherwise appointed.

¶ If this Day shall happen to be Sunday, only the Collect proper for that Sunday shall be added to this Office in its place.

¶ Morning Prayer shall begin with these Sentences.

THE Lord is full of compassion, and mercy: long-suffering, and of great goodness. Psalm ciii. 8.

He will not alway be chiding: neither keepeth he his anger for ever. Ver. 9.

He hath not dealt with us after our sins: nor rewarded us according to our wickedness. Ver. 10

---

[a] A Form of Prayer &c.] The occasions and reasons of the observation of this and the following days are so well known to all that have any knowledge in the affairs of this nation, that it would be needless to repeat the several histories of them here.

And the suitableness of the prayers appointed on these occasions is so apparent of itself, that I think nothing farther needful, even in relation to the offices, than to give a short account of the Hymns, and Psalms, and Lessons, and of the Epistles and Gospels, by shewing in what sense they are applicable to their days. Wheatly.

[b] To be used yearly upon the Fifth Day of November,] Instead of the ordinary sentences before the Exhortation, are three verses taken out of the hundred and third Psalm, declaring the long-suffering and goodness of God, the short continuance of his anger, and his mercy in not dealing with us according to our sins; all of them attributes we cannot help reflecting on, when we look back on the signal mercies of this day.

II. And the hymn that is appointed instead of the "Venite exultemus" is so methodically put together, that it seems, as it stands in this place, to be an entire Psalm composed on purpose for the day. It begins with an act of praise to God for his gracious nature and providence over us, ver. 1, 2; and then particularly commemorates our enemies' attempts, and how providentially they were entrapped in the works of their own hands, ver. 3—6; upon this it breaks out into an humble acknowledgment of the power, and wisdom, and justice of God, ver. 7, 8; and at last concludes with a prayer for the governour whom He hath set over us, and a promise of fidelity to God for the future. The whole was added in the second year of King William and Queen Mary, when this office was very much altered and enlarged, upon the account of the Revolution. At which time also the foregoing sentences were inserted in the room of others that had been used till then: namely, Psalm li. 9; Jer. x. 24; Luke xx. 18, 19.

III. The proper Psalms are Psalm lxiv. cxxiv, cxxv. The lxivth was a prayer which David made for deliver-

¶ Instead of Venite exultemus shall this Hymn following be used; one Verse by the Priest, and another by the Clerk and People.

O Give thanks unto the Lord, for he is gracious: and his mercy endureth for ever. Psalm cvii. 1.

Let them give thanks, whom the Lord hath redeemed: and delivered from the hand of the enemy. Ver. 2.

Many a time have they fought against me from my youth up: may Israel now say. Psalm cxxix. 1.

Yea, many a time have they vexed me from my youth up: but they have not prevailed against me. Ver. 2.

They have privily laid their net to destroy me without a cause: yea, even without a cause have they made a pit for my soul. Psalm xxxv. 7.

They have laid a net for my feet, and pressed down my soul: they have digged a pit before me, and are fallen into the midst of it themselves. Psalm lvii. 7.

Great is our Lord, and great is his power: yea, and his wisdom is infinite. Psalm cxlvii. 5.

The Lord setteth up the meek: and bringeth the ungodly down to the ground. Ver. 6.

Let thy hand be upon the man of thy right hand: and upon the son of man whom thou madest so strong for thine own self. Psalm lxxx. 17.

And so will not we go back from thee: O let us live, and we shall call upon thy Name. Ver. 18.

Glory be to the Father, and to the Son: and to the Holy Ghost;

As it was in the beginning, is now, and ever shall be: world without end. Amen.

Proper Psalms. lxiv. cxxiv, cxxv.
Proper Lessons.
The First, 2 Sam. xxii.
Te Deum.
The Second, Acts xxiii.
Jubilate.

¶ In the Suffrages after the Creed these shall be inserted and used for the Queen.

Priest. O Lord, save the Queen;

People. Who putteth her trust in thee.

Priest. Send her help from thy holy place.

People. And evermore mightily defend her.

Priest. Let her enemies have no advantage against her.

People. Let not the wicked approach to hurt her.

¶ Instead of the first Collect at Morning Prayer shall these two be used.

---

ance from his enemies, when they were secretly plotting and conspiring against him; but which he foretold should be signally disappointed through their own untoward contrivance and device.

2. The cxxivth Psalm is an acknowledgment of God's assistance, and a thankful commemoration of the deliverances wrought by him. It was occasioned, as some think, by the victory in Rephaim, 2 Sam. v. 17, &c. or, as others, by David's deliverance from Absalom: though all agree it was composed on the account of some signal deliverance from some potent enemy.

3. The cxxvth declares the safety of those who firmly adhere to God, without seeking to any irregular means for attaining it. It is appointed on this day, to remind us of the providential care of God, in frustrating the designs of the enemies of our Church, even before they were sensible of their being so much as in danger from them. Till the second year of King William and Queen Mary, the cxxixth Psalm was used instead of this, and the xxxvth was used first of all, which is now discontinued.

IV. The Proper Lessons are 2 Sam. xxii. and Acts xxiii. The first is David's Psalm of praise, Psalm xviii, composed upon his deliverance from the hands of his enemies, especially of Saul, who sought by murdering him, to cut off the succession God had entailed on his family. The words are so applicable to the present occasion, that they explain themselves to an attentive hearer.

2. The history contained in the second Lesson agrees with the treason commemorated on this day in some particulars, but falls short of it in others. There we find a crew of desperate zealots enraged at St. Paul, for persuading them to reform the corrupt traditions of their forefathers, and binding themselves in a bloody vow, to murder him as he went to the hall of judgment. Thus far the stories agree; but in what is behind they widely differ. St. Paul was only a private man, and their fellow-subject, and so they aimed at a single sacrifice to their fury and rage; whereas the conspirators concerned in the story of this day aimed at their own indulgent sovereign, and the whole nation in representative; seeming to copy after Caligula's wish, namely, that all the people of Rome might have but one neck, that so he might cut them off at a stroke. As the whole Scripture therefore affords no parallel of such cruel and blood-thirsty men, we must be content with an instance something like it, though in a far lower degree.

V. The Epistle, Rom. xiii. 1—8, is designed to remind the people of their allegiance to their sovereign: the Gospel, Luke ix. 51—57, which was appointed in the second year of King William, instead of the story of Judas betraying his Master, Matt. xxvii. 1—10, which for some good reasons, I suppose, was then thought proper to be discontinued, is intended to correct the unruly effects of mistaken zeal for our religion; shewing us that our faith, be it ever so true, cannot warrant us to persecute or destroy those of different persuasions. Wheatly.

ALMIGHTY God, who hast in all ages shewed thy Power and Mercy in the miraculous and gracious deliverances of thy Church, and in the protection of righteous and religious Kings and States, professing thy holy and eternal truth, from the wicked conspiracies, and malicious practices of all the enemies thereof: We yield thee our unfeigned thanks and praise, for the wonderful and mighty Deliverance of our gracious Sovereign King James the First, the Queen, the Prince, and all the Royal Branches, with the Nobility, Clergy, and Commons of England, then assembled in Parliament, by Popish treachery appointed as sheep to the slaughter, in a most barbarous and savage manner, beyond the examples of former ages. From this unnatural Conspiracy, not our merit, but thy mercy; not our foresight, but thy providence delivered us: And therefore not
Ps. cxv. 1. unto us, O Lord, not unto us, but unto thy Name be ascribed all honour and glory, in all Churches of the saints, from generation to generation; through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

ACCEPT also, most gracious God, of our unfeigned thanks for filling our hearts again with joy and gladness, after the time that thou hadst afflicted us, and putting
Ps. xl. 3. a new song into our mouths, by bringing his Majesty King William upon this day, for the Deliverance of our Church and Nation from Popish Tyranny and arbitrary Power. We adore the wisdom and justice of thy Providence, which so timely interposed in our extreme danger, and disappointed all the designs of our enemies. We beseech thee, give us such a lively and lasting sense of what thou didst then, and hast since that time done for us, that we may not grow secure and careless in our obedience, by presuming upon thy great and undeserved goodness; but that it may lead us to repentance, and move us to be the more diligent and zealous in all the duties of our Religion, which thou hast in a marvellous manner preserved to us. Let truth and justice, brotherly kindness and charity, devotion and piety, concord and unity, with all other virtues, so flourish among us, that they may be the stability of our times, and make this Church a praise in the earth. All which we humbly beg for the sake of our blessed Lord and Saviour. Amen.

¶ In the end of the Litany, (which shall always this Day be used) after the Collect [We humbly beseech thee, O Father, &c.] shall this be said which followeth.

ALMIGHTY God and heavenly Father, who of thy gracious Providence, and tender mercy towards us, didst prevent the malice and imaginations of our enemies, by discovering and confounding their horrible and wicked Enterprize, plotted and intended this day to have been executed against the King, and the whole State of England, for the subversion of the Government and Religion established among us; and didst likewise upon this day wonderfully conduct thy Servant King William, and bring him safely into England, to preserve us from the attempts of our enemies to bereave us of our Religion and Laws: We most humbly praise and magnify thy most glorious Name for thy unspeakable goodness towards us, expressed in both these acts of thy mercy. We confess it has been of thy mercy alone, that we are not consumed: For our sins have cried Lam. iii. 22. to heaven against us; and our iniquities justly called for vengeance upon us. But thou hast not dealt Ps. ciii. 10.
with us after our sins, nor rewarded us after our iniquities; nor given us over, as we deserved, to be a prey to our enemies; but hast in mercy delivered us from their malice, and preserved us from death and destruction. Let the consideration of this thy repeated goodness, O Lord, work in us true repentance, that Rom. ii. 4. iniquity may not be our ruin. And Ezek. xviii. 30.
increase in us more and more a Rom. ii. 5.
lively faith and love, fruitful in all holy obedience; that thou mayest 1 John v. 3.
still continue thy favour with the light of thy Gospel, to us and our posterity for evermore; and that for thy dear Son's sake, Jesus Christ our only Mediator and Advocate. Amen.

¶ Instead of the Prayer [In time of War and Tumults] shall be used this Prayer following.

O Lord, who didst this day discover the snares of death that were laid for us, and didst wonderfully deliver us from the same; Be thou still our mighty Protector, and
Ps. lxviii. 30. scatter our enemies that delight in blood: Infatuate and defeat their counsels, abate their pride, assuage their malice, and confound their devices. Strengthen the hands of our gracious Sovereign Queen VICTORIA, and all that are put in authority under her, with judgement
Rom. xiii. 4. and justice to cut off all such workers of iniquity, as turn Religion into Rebellion, and Faith into Faction; that they may never prevail against us, or triumph in the ruin of thy Church among us: but that our gracious Sovereign, and her Realms, being preserved in thy true Religion, and by thy merciful goodness protected in the same, we may all duly serve thee, and give thee thanks in thy holy congregation; through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

¶ In the Communion Service, instead of the Collect for the Day, shall this which followeth be used.

ETERNAL God, and our most mighty Protector, we thy unworthy servants do humbly present ourselves before thy Majesty, acknowledging thy power, wisdom, and goodness, in preserving the King, and the Three Estates of the Realm of England assembled in Parliament, from the destruction this day intended against them. Make us, we beseech thee, truly thankful for this, and for all other thy great mercies towards us; particularly for making this day again memorable, by a fresh instance of thy loving-kindness towards us. We bless thee for giving his late Majesty King William a safe arrival here, and for making all opposition fall before him, till he became our King and Governour. We beseech thee to protect and defend our Sovereign Queen VICTORIA, and all the Royal Family, from all treasons and conspiracies; Preserve her in thy faith, fear, and love; Prosper her Reign with long happiness here on earth; and crown her with everlasting glory hereafter; through Jesus Christ our only Saviour and Redeemer. Amen

The Epistle. Rom. xiii. 1.

LET every soul be subject unto the higher powers; for there is no power, but of God: the powers that be are ordained of God. Whosoever therefore resisteth the power resisteth the ordinance of God; and they that resist shall receive to themselves damnation. For rulers are not a terror to good works, but to the evil. Wilt thou then not be afraid of the power? do that which is good, and thou shalt have praise of the same: for he is the minister of God to thee for good. But if thou do that which is evil, be afraid; for he beareth not the sword in vain: for he is the minister of God, a revenger to execute wrath upon him that doeth evil. Wherefore ye must needs be subject, not only for wrath, but also for conscience sake. For for this cause pay ye tribute also, for they are God's ministers, attending continually upon this very thing. Render therefore to all their dues; tribute to whom tribute is due, custom to whom custom, fear to whom fear, honour to whom honour.

The Gospel. St. Luke ix. 51.

AND it came to pass, when the time was come that he should be received up, he stedfastly set his face to go to Jerusalem, and sent messengers before his face; and they went and entered into a village of the Samaritans, to make ready for him. And they did not receive him, because his face was as though he would go to Jerusalem. And when his disciples James and John saw this, they said, Lord, wilt thou that we command fire to come down from heaven, and consume them, even as Elias did? But he turned and rebuked them, and said, Ye know not what manner of spirit ye are of: For the Son of man is not come to destroy men's lives, but to save them. And they went to another village.

¶ After the Creed, if there be no Sermon, shall be read one of the six Homilies against Rebellion.

¶ This Sentence is to be read at the Offertory.

WHATSOEVER ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so to them; for this is the Law and the Prophets. St. Matth. vii. 12.

¶ After the Prayer for the Church militant this following Prayer is to be used.

Ps. viii. 1. O God, whose Name is excellent in all the earth, and thy glory above the heavens; who on this day didst miraculously preserve our Church and State from the secret contrivance and hellish malice of Popish conspirators; and on this day also didst begin to give us a mighty deliverance from the open tyranny and oppression of the same cruel and blood-thirsty enemies: We bless and adore thy glorious Majesty, as for the former, so for this thy late marvellous loving-kindness to our Church and Nation, in the preservation of our Religion and Liberties. And we humbly pray, that the devout sense of this thy repeated mercy may renew and increase in us a spirit of love and thankfulness to thee its only Author; a spirit of peaceable submission and obedience to our gracious Sovereign Lady Queen VICTORIA; and a spirit of fervent zeal for our holy Religion which thou hast so wonderfully rescued, and established, a blessing to us and our posterity. And this we beg for Jesus Christ his sake. Amen.

A FORM OF

PRAYER WITH FASTING[c],

To be used yearly on the Thirtieth of January,

Being the Day of the Martyrdom of the Blessed King CHARLES the First; to implore the mercy of God, that neither the Guilt of that sacred and innocent Blood, nor those other sins, by which God was provoked to deliver up both us and our King into the hands of cruel and unreasonable men, may at any time hereafter be visited upon us or our posterity.

¶ If this Day shall happen to be Sunday, this Form of Prayer shall be used and the Fast kept the next Day following. And upon the Lord's Day next before the Day to be kept, at Morning Prayer, immediately after the Nicene Creed, notice shall be given for the due Observation of the said Day.

¶ The Service of the Day shall be the same with the usual Office for Holy-days in all things; except where it is in this Office otherwise appointed.

THE ORDER FOR MORNING PRAYER[d].

¶ He that ministereth, shall begin with one or more of these Sentences.

TO the Lord our God belong mercies and forgivenesses, though we have rebelled against him: neither have we obeyed the voice of the Lord our God, to walk in his laws which he set before us. Daniel ix. 9, 10.

[c] A Form of Prayer with Fasting, &c.] It having never been the practice of the Catholick church, nor indeed of any part of it, except the Roman, and that which has too many marks of its parent, the Presbyterian church in Scotland, to allow of humiliation or fasting on Sundays, which are appointed for duties of a different nature; it is ordered, that "if this day shall happen to be Sunday, this form of prayer shall be used and the fast kept the next day following. And upon the Lord's day next before the day to be kept," (that is, on whatever day of the week it shall happen,) "at Morning Prayer immediately after the Nicene Creed, notice shall be given for the due observation of the said day."

I. As to "the service of this day," (like that appointed for the fifth of November,) "it is to be the same with the usual office for holy-days in all things, except where it is in this office otherwise appointed;" that is, the ordinary Morning and Evening Service, and office for the Communion, are to be said as usual, except where any thing in either of these services is to be added to, or to be used in the room of, the ordinary service for the day: as the Collects for instance, and the several prayers appointed on these occasions, are to be used either instead of, or besides, the prayers daily in use; and the Hymns, Psalms, and Lessons, the Epistle and Gospel, instead of those in ordinary course. Wheatly.

[d] The Order for Morning Prayer.] The office is introduced with some of the usual sentences at Morning Prayer. Dan. ix. 9, 10; Jer. x. 24; Psalm cxliii. 2.

II. The Hymn, instead of the xcvth Psalm, was drawn up in the reign of King James II. when a review was taken and several alterations made in this office. And whoever looks into King Charles's book, must acknowledge the old Hymn not to be near so fine as the new one, which is as solemn a composure, and as pertinent to the occasion, as can be imagined or contrived.

III. The proper Psalms appointed for the morning are Psalms ix, x, xi. The viith was originally prefixed to them all, but that was afterwards discontinued. The Correct us, O Lord, but with judgement: not in thine anger, lest thou bring us to nothing. Jer. x. 24.

Enter not into judgement with thy servants, O Lord: for in thy sight shall no man living be justified. Psalm cxliii. 2.

¶ Instead of Venite exultemus the Hymn following shall be said or sung; one Verse by the Priest, another by the Clerk and People.

RIGHTEOUS art thou, O Lord: and just are thy judgements! Psalm cxix. 137.

Thou art just, O Lord, in all that first of those that are now appointed was written upon Goliath's death, and was designed for David's victory over the Philistines: and though the chief end of this day's solemnity is to bewail our sins, which were the occasion of the late bloody and dismal times; yet when we recollect how happily we were at last delivered from them, and how remarkably God's justice was executed on the enemies of our David, we cannot forbear intermingling a thanksgiving to praise the Divine Majesty for so wonderful a work.

---

2. The xth Psalm, wanting a title, was by the Hebrews anciently, and by the Vulgar Latin is still, joined to the former: but though it be on a like subject, yet there is a plain difference between them. The ixth Psalm speaks of Pagan enemies, whose cruelty was ended some time before, and is therefore fuller of praises; whereas this Psalm speaks of domestick foes, who still acted unjustly, and so abounds more with praises and complaints proper to be used on this day.

3. The xith Psalm is a declaration of David's full confidence and trust in God, in despite of all discouragements, and is very applicable to our royal martyr under his sufferings.

IV. The first Lesson for the morning is 2 Sam. i. There is no parallel for this inhuman and barbarous murder of a good and pious king by his own subjects in all the Old Testament: and therefore the Church is content to read the history of David's justice and vengeance upon the Amalekite, that accused himself of killing King Saul, though at his own request, to ease him of his pain; and of David's own decent mourning for his sovereign, notwithstanding he had been always his mortal enemy, had apostatized from God, and was forsaken by heaven. How much more reason then had our state to punish those impious rebels, who murdered the best of kings, only for adhering to the best of religions; and also to set apart a day of humiliation for fasting and prayer, and to draw up a mournful office for the occasion, after the example of David in the Lesson!

2. As for the second Lesson, it is no other than that appointed by the Church in the ordinary course, to be read on the thirtieth of January; Matt. xxvii. to the end. For by a signal providence the bloody rebels chose that day for murdering their king, on which the history of our Saviour's sufferings was appointed to be read as a Lesson for the day. The blessed martyr had forgot that it came in the ordinary course; and therefore when Bishop Juxon (who read the morning office immediately before his martyrdom) named this chapter, the good prince asked him, if he had singled it out as fit for the occasion; and when he was informed it was the Lesson for the day, could not without a sensible complacency and joy admire how suitably it concurred with his circumstances: betrayed by some, denied by others, and despised by the rest of his seeming friends, who left him to the implacable malice of his barbarous enemies; who treated him with the same contempt and ingratitude, outrage and cruelty, with which the Jews treated their King and Saviour; while he followed the steps of his great Master in meekness and patience, piety to God, and charity to men, and at last praying for his murderers.

V. The Epistle, 1 Pet. ii. 13—23, shews the duty which Christians owe to magistrates; the Gospel, Matt. xxi. 33—42, severely and justly upbraids those unparalleled rebels, who were the villanous projectors of this day's tragedy. It calls to our mind the care and diligence of the poor good king, who, when he had omitted nothing for the quiet and safety of his kingdoms, had the misfortune to commit the administration of the government into such hands, as made use of the power he had intrusted with them, to deny him the rights and prerogatives of his crown; rejecting his commissioners, slaying his servants, seizing his crown, murdering his person, banishing his heir, and usurping his kingdom.

VI. The Psalms for the evening service are different now from what they were when the office was composed; namely, Psalm xxxviii, lxiv, and cxliii; at present they are the lxxixth, xcivth, and lxxxvth. The lxxixth Psalm contains a lively description of the miseries of Jerusalem, upon the sacking of it by the king of Babylon; and is very applicable to our sad condition during the Rebellion: only the Jews suffered by heathens, we by men whose behaviour was worse than heathenish, while they called themselves Christians.

2. The xcivth Psalm is a prayer to God, and a confident assurance in Him, that He will dissipate the attempts of wicked men, and uphold the righteous.

3. The lxxxvth Psalm is appointed with respect to that happy change at the Restoration, and is for that reason placed out of its usual order; it containing an acknowledgment of God's mercy in delivering the land from those sad calamities, and a prayer for a continuance of it in prosperity hereafter.

VII. For the first Lesson is appointed a choice of two chapters for variety: one of which, Jer. xii, is Jeremiah's complaint to God of great mischiefs done in church and state by false prophets and tyrannical rulers, with God's answer, giving the reason of his permitting it, and threatening withal, in due time, to punish the authors of these mischiefs, and to deliver the righteous.

2. The other is out of Daniel, Dan. ix. 1—12, being an excellent prayer, which that holy man used on a day that he had set apart to solemn humiliation, fasting, and repentance; wherein he so effectually bewailed the sins and sufferings of God's people, that he prevailed with God to restore them to their liberty, and to the exercise of their religion. Which justly reminds us of the prayers and penitence of devout men under those usurpers, which at last had the same effect with us.

3. The second Lesson, Heb. xi. 32, to chap. xii. 7, sets before us the faith and patience of the holy martyrs, whom St. Paul records, and is very proper as a commemoration of our royal martyr's sufferings and faith, and an exhortation to us to imitate them, whensoever it shall please God to require it of us. In the old Gallican Liturgy this was the proper Lesson for the festival of any martyr. Wheatly.

is brought upon us : for thou hast done right, but we have done wickedly. Neh. ix. 33.

Nevertheless, our feet were almost gone : our treadings had well-nigh slipped. Psalm lxxiii. 2.

For why? we were grieved at the wicked : we did also see the ungodly in such prosperity. Ver. 3.

The people stood up, and the rulers took counsel together : against the Lord, and against his Anointed. Psalm ii. 2.

They cast their heads together with one consent : and were confederate against him. Psalm lxxxiii. 5.

He heard the blasphemy of the multitude, and fear was on every side : while they conspired together against him, to take away his life. Psalm xxxi. 15.

They spoke against him with false tongues, and compassed him about with words of hatred : and fought against him without a cause. Psalm cix. 2.

Yea, his own familiar friends, whom he trusted : they that eat of his bread laid great wait for him. Psalm xli. 9.

They rewarded him evil for good : to the great discomfort of his soul. Psalm xxxv. 12.

They took their counsel together, saying, God hath forsaken him : persecute him, and take him, for there is none to deliver him. Psalm lxxi. 9.

The breath of our nostrils, the Anointed of the Lord was taken in their pits : of whom we said, Under his shadow we shall be safe. Lam. iv. 20.

The adversary and the enemy entered into the gates of Jerusalem : saying, When shall he die, and his Name perish? Ver. 12. Psalm lxi. 5.

Let the sentence of guiltiness proceed against him : and now that he lieth, let him rise up no more. Ver. 8.

False witnesses also did rise up against him : they laid to his charge things that he knew not. Psalm xxxv. 11.

For the sins of the people, and the iniquities of the priests : they shed the blood of the just in the midst of Jerusalem. Lam. iv. 13.

O my soul, come not thou into their secret; unto their assembly, mine honour, be not thou united : for in their anger they slew a man; Gen. xlix. 6.

Even the man of thy right hand : the Son of man, whom thou hadst made so strong for thine own self. Psalm lxxx. 17.

In the sight of the unwise he seemed to die : and his departure was taken for misery. Wisd. iii. 2.

They, fools, counted his life madness, and his end to be without honour : but he is in peace. Wisd. v. 4. & iii. 3.

For though he was punished in the sight of men : yet was his hope full of immortality. Wisd. iii. 4.

How is he numbered with the children of God : and his lot is among the saints! Wisd. v. 5.

But, O Lord God, to whom vengeance belongeth, thou God, to whom vengeance belongeth : be favourable and gracious unto Sion. Psalm xciv. 1. & li. 18.

Be merciful, O Lord, unto thy people whom thou hast redeemed : and lay not innocent blood to our charge. Deut. xxi. 8.

O shut not up our souls with sinners : nor our lives with the blood-thirsty. Psalm xxvi. 9.

Deliver us from blood-guiltiness, O God, thou that art the God of our salvation : and our tongues shall sing of thy righteousness. Psalm li. 14.

For thou art the God that hast no pleasure in wickedness : neither shall any evil dwell with thee. Psalm v. 4.

Thou wilt destroy them that speak leasing : the Lord abhors both the blood-thirsty and deceitful man. Ver. 6.

O how suddenly do they consume : perish, and come to a fearful end; Psalm lxxiii. 18.

Yea, even like as a dream, when one awaketh : so didst thou make their image to vanish out of the city. Ver. 19.

Great and marvellous are thy works, O Lord God Almighty : just and true are thy ways, O King of saints. Rev. xv. 3.

Righteous art thou, O Lord : and just are thy judgements. Psalm cxix. 137.

Glory be to the Father, and to the Son : and to the Holy Ghost;

As it was in the beginning, is now, and ever shall be : world without end. Amen.

Proper Psalms. ix, x, xi.

Proper Lessons.
The First, 2 Sam. i.
The Second, St. Matth. xxvii.

¶ Instead of the First Collect at Morning Prayer shall these two which next follow be used.

Ps. lxvi. 2. 4. O Most mighty God, terrible in thy judgements, and wonderful in thy doings toward the children of men; who in thy heavy displeasure John xix 11. Ps. xxxviii. 1. didst suffer the life of our gracious Sovereign King Charles the First, to Hos. xiii. 11. be (as this day) taken away by the hands of cruel and bloody men: We thy sinful creatures here assembled before thee, do, in the behalf of all the people of this land, humbly confess, that they were the crying sins Ezra ix 7. of this Nation, which brought down this heavy judgement upon us. But, Ps. ix. 12. O gracious God, when thou makest inquisition for blood, lay not the guilt of this innocent blood, (the 1 Sam. xxvi. 9. shedding whereof nothing but the Heb. xii. 24. blood of thy Son can expiate,) lay it not to the charge of the people Matt. xxiii. 35. of this land; nor let it ever be required of us, or our posterity. Be Deut. xxi. 8. merciful, O Lord, be merciful unto thy people, whom thou hast redeemed; and be not angry with us for ever: But pardon us for thy mercies' sake, through the merits of thy Son Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

Ps. cxvi. 13. BLESSED Lord, in whose sight the death of thy Saints Luke i. 46. Ps. cxv. 1. is precious; We magnify thy Name for thine abundant grace bestowed upon our martyred Sovereign; by which he was enabled so cheerfully Phil. iii. 10. 1 Pet. ii. 21. to follow the steps of his blessed Master and Saviour, in a constant meek suffering of all barbarous indignities, and at last resisting unto Heb. xii. 4. blood; and even then, according to the same pattern, praying for his murderers. Let his memory, O Lord, be ever blessed among us; that we may follow the example of his courage and constancy, his meekness and patience, and great charity. And grant, that this our land may be freed from the vengeance of his righteous blood, and thy mercy glorified in the forgiveness of our sins: and all for Jesus Christ his sake, our only Mediator and Advocate. Amen.

Luke xxiii. 34.

Prov. x. 7. Ps cxii. 6; lxxii. 17.

¶ In the end of the Litany (which shall always on this Day be used) immediately after the Collect [We humbly beseech thee, O Father, &c.] the three Collects next following are to be read.

O Lord, we beseech thee mercifully hear our prayers, and spare all those who confess their sins unto thee; that they whose consciences by sin are accused, by thy merciful pardon may be absolved; through Christ our Lord. Amen.

O Most mighty God and merciful Father, who hast compassion upon all men, and hatest nothing that thou hast made; who wouldest not the death of a sinner, but that he should rather turn from his sin, and be saved: Mercifully forgive us our trespasses; receive and comfort us, who are grieved and wearied with the burden of our sins. Thy property is always to have mercy; to thee only it appertaineth to forgive sins. Spare us therefore, good Lord, spare thy people, whom thou hast redeemed; enter not into judgement with thy servants, who are vile earth and miserable sinners: but so turn thine anger from us, who meekly acknowledge our vileness, and truly repent us of our faults; and so make haste to help us in this world, that we may ever live with thee in the world to come; through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

TURN thou us, O good Lord, and so shall we be turned. Be favourable, O Lord, be favourable to thy people, Who turn to thee in weeping, fasting, and praying. For thou art a merciful God, Full of compassion, long-suffering, and of great pity. Thou sparest when we deserve punishment, And in thy wrath thinkest upon mercy. Spare thy people, good Lord, spare them, And let not thine heritage be brought to confusion. Hear us, O Lord, for thy mercy is great, And after the multitude of thy mercies look upon us, Through the merits and mediation of thy blessed Son Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

¶ In the Communion Service, after the Prayer for the King [Almighty God whose kingdom is everlasting, &c.] instead of the Collect for the Day shall these two be used.

O most mighty God, &c. / Blessed Lord, in whose sight, &c. } As in the Morning Prayers.

The Epistle. 1 St. Peter ii. 13.

SUBMIT yourselves to every ordinance of man for the Lord's sake; whether it be to the King, as supreme; or unto governours, as unto them that are sent by him, for the punishment of evil-doers, and for the praise of them that do well. For so is the will of God, that with well-doing ye may put to silence the ignorance of foolish men: as free, and not using your liberty for a cloke of maliciousness, but as the servants of God. Honour all men. Love the brotherhood. Fear God. Honour the King. Servants, be subject to your masters with all fear, not only to the good and gentle, but also to the froward. For this is thankworthy, if a man for conscience toward God endure grief, suffering wrongfully. For what glory is it, if when ye be buffeted for your faults ye shall take it patiently? but if when ye do well, and suffer for it, ye take it patiently; this is acceptable with God. For even hereunto were ye called; because Christ also suffered for us, leaving us an example, that ye should follow his steps; who did no sin, neither was guile found in his mouth.

The Gospel. St. Matth. xxi. 33.

THERE was a certain householder which planted a vineyard, and hedged it round about, and digged a wine-press in it, and built a tower, and let it out to husbandmen, and went into a far country. And when the time of the fruit drew near, he sent his servants to the husbandmen, that they might receive the fruits of it. And the husbandmen took his servants, and beat one, and killed another, and stoned another. Again he sent other servants, more than the first: and they did unto them likewise. But last of all he sent unto them his son, saying, they will reverence my son. But when the husbandmen saw the son, they said among themselves, This is the heir, come, let us kill him, and let us seize on his inheritance. And they caught him, and cast him out of the vineyard, and slew him. When the lord therefore of the vineyard cometh, what will he do unto those husbandmen? They say unto him, He will miserably destroy those wicked men, and will let out his vineyard unto other husbandmen, which shall render him the fruits in their seasons.

¶ After the Nicene Creed, shall be read, instead of the Sermon for that Day, the first and second parts of the Homily against Disobedience and wilful Rebellion, set forth by Authority; or the Minister who officiates shall preach a Sermon of his own composing upon the same argument.

¶ In the Offertory shall this Sentence be read.

WHATSOEVER ye would that men should do unto you, even so do unto them; for this is the Law and the Prophets. St. Matth. vii. 12.

¶ After the Prayer [For the whole state of Christ's Church &c.] these two Collects following shall be used.

O Lord, our heavenly Father, who didst not punish us as our sins have deserved, but hast in the midst of judgement remembered mercy; We acknowledge it thine especial favour, that though for our many and great provocations, thou didst suffer thine anointed blessed King Charles the First (as on this day) to fall into the hands of violent and blood-thirsty men, and barbarously to be murdered by them, yet thou didst not leave us for ever, as sheep without a shepherd: but by thy gracious providence didst miraculously preserve the undoubted Heir of his Crowns, our then gracious Sovereign King Charles the Second, from his bloody enemies,

Ezra ix. 13. Job xi. 6. Hab. iii. 2.

hiding him under the shadow of thy
Ps. lvii. 1. wings until their tyranny was overpast; and didst bring him back, in thy good appointed time, to sit upon the throne of his Father; and together with the Royal Family didst restore to us our ancient Government in Church and State. For these thy great and unspeakable mercies we render to thee our most humble and unfeigned thanks: beseeching thee, still to continue thy gracious protection over the whole Royal Family, and to grant to our gracious Sovereign Queen VICTORIA, a long and a happy Reign over us: So we that are thy people Ps. lxxix. 14.
will give thee thanks for ever, and will alway be shewing forth thy praise from generation to generation; through Jesus Christ our Lord and Saviour. Amen.

AND grant, O Lord, we beseech thee, that the course of this world may be so peaceably ordered by thy governance, that thy Church may joyfully serve thee in all godly quietness; through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

THE ORDER FOR EVENING PRAYER.

¶ The Hymn appointed to be used at Morning Prayer instead of Venite exultemus shall here also be used before the Proper Psalms.

Righteous art thou, O Lord, &c.

Proper Psalms. lxxix. xciv. lxxxv.

Proper Lessons.

The First, Jer. xii. or Dan. ix. to verse 22.

The Second, Hebrews xi. verse 32. and xii. to verse 7.

¶ Instead of the first Collect at Evening Prayer shall these two which next follow be used.

O Almighty Lord God, who by thy wisdom not only guidest and orderest all things most suitably to thine own justice; but also performest thy pleasure in such a manner, that we cannot but acknow-
Ps. cxlv. 17. ledge thee to be righteous in all thy ways, and holy in all thy works; We thy sinful people do here fall down before thee, confessing that thy judgements were right in permitting cruel men, sons of Belial (as on this day) to imbrue their hands in the blood of thine Anointed; we having drawn down the same upon
Dan. ix. 7. ourselves, by the great and long provocations of our sins against thee. For which we do therefore here humble ourselves before thee; beseeching thee to deliver this Nation
Numb. xxxv. 33. Ps. li. 11. from blood-guiltiness, (that of this day especially,) and to turn from us and our posterity all those judgements, which we by our sins have worthily deserved: Grant this, for the all-sufficient merits of thy Son our Saviour Jesus Christ. Amen.

BLESSED God, just and powerful, who didst permit thy dear Servant, our dread Sovereign King Charles the First, to be (as upon this day) given up to the violent outrages of wicked men, to be despitefully used and at the last murdered by them: Though we cannot reflect upon so foul an act, but with horror and astonishment; yet do we most gratefully commemorate the glories of thy grace, which then shined forth in thine Anointed; whom thou wast pleased, even at the hour of death, to endue with an eminent measure of exemplary patience, meekness, and charity, before the face of his cruel enemies. And albeit thou didst suffer them to proceed to such an height of violence, as to kill him, and to take possession of his Throne; yet didst thou in great mercy preserve his Son, whose right it was, and at length by a wonderful providence bring him back, and set him thereon, to restore thy true Religion, and to settle peace amongst us: For these thy great mercies we glorify thy Name, through Jesus Christ our blessed Saviour. Amen.

¶ Immediately after the Collect [Lighten our darkness, &c.] shall these three next following be used.

O Lord, we beseech &c.
O most mighty God, &c. } As before at Morning Prayer.
Turn thou us, &c.

¶ Immediately before the Prayer of St. Chrysostom shall this Collect which next followeth be used.

ALMIGHTY and everlasting God, whose righteousness is like the strong mountains, and thy judgements like the great deep; and who, by that barbarous murder (as on this day) committed upon the sacred Person of thine Anointed, hast taught us that neither the greatest of Kings, nor the best of men, are more secure from violence than from natural death: Teach us also hereby so to number our days, that we may apply our hearts unto wisdom. And grant, that neither the splendour of any thing that is great, nor the conceit of any thing that is good in us, may withdraw our eyes from looking upon ourselves as sinful dust and ashes; but that, according to the example of this thy blessed Martyr, we may press forward to the prize of the high calling that is before us, in faith and patience, humility and meekness, mortification and self-denial, charity and constant perseverance unto the end: And all this for thy Son our Lord Jesus Christ his sake; to whom with thee and the Holy Ghost be all honour and glory, world without end. Amen.

Ps. xxxvi. 6.
Ps. xc. 12.
Ps. xxx. 6.
Prov. iii. 7.
Gen. iii. 19.
Phil. iii. 11.

A FORM OF

PRAYER WITH THANKSGIVING

TO ALMIGHTY GOD,

For having put an end to the Great Rebellion, by the Restitution of the King and Royal Family, and the Restoration of the Government after many years interruption; which unspeakable Mercies were wonderfully completed upon the Twenty-ninth of May, in the Year 1660. And in Memory thereof that Day in every Year is by Act of Parliament appointed to be for ever kept holy.

¶ The Act of Parliament made in the Twelfth, and confirmed in the Thirteenth Year of King Charles the Second, for the Observation of the Twenty-ninth Day of May yearly, as a Day of Publick Thanksgiving, is to be read publickly in all Churches at Morning Prayer, immediately after the Nicene Creed, on the Lord's Day next before every such Twenty-ninth of May, and notice to be given for the due observation of the said Day.

¶ The Service shall be the same with the usual office for Holy-days; except where it is in this Office otherwise appointed.

¶ If this Day shall happen to be Ascension-day[e], or Whit-Sunday, the Collects of this Office are to be added to the Offices of those Festivals in their proper places: If it be Monday, or Tuesday in Whitsun-week, or Trinity Sunday,

---

[e] If this Day shall happen to be Ascension-day, &c.] The second rubrick has already been spoken to under the foregoing form: but, because this festival falls in such a time of the year, as that it often happens to concur with some other great holy-day, which has a proper service appointed for itself; therefore here is a third rubrick of directions in this case, that whenever such concurrence shall happen, the preference shall be given to that other holy-day, and so much of this office as interferes with the service proper for that day shall be omitted. Thus, for instance, it is said in the rubrick, "If this day shall happen to be Ascension-day, or Whit-Sunday, the Collects of this office" (that is, all the prayers of it, for all prayers are called Collects both in the rubricks of this, and all other offices) "are to be added to the office of those festivals in their proper places;—and the rest of this office shall be omitted;" that is, the Psalms, Lessons, Epistle, and Gospel, because both those days have Proper Psalms, Lessons, Epistles, and Gospels of their own. And that only the portions of Scripture appointed for this day are to be omitted upon this occasion, is plain, because if this day happens to be Monday or Tuesday in Whitsun-week, or Trinity Sunday, (which have no Proper Psalms,) then "the Proper Psalms here appointed for this day, instead of those of ordinary course, shall be also used." And because none of the days mentioned in the rubrick have any peculiar hymn instead of the "Venite exultemus," therefore the rubrick orders, that "what festival soever shall happen to fall upon this solemn day of thanksgiving, the following hymn appointed instead of Venite exultemus shall be constantly used." The only question then remaining is, whether the Litany ought to be used if this day happens to be Ascension-day, or Monday or Tuesday in Whitsun-week (for upon Whit-Sunday and Trinity Sunday it is used of course). And to this, I think, the answer is plain, namely, That the Litany does not interfere with any part of the service appointed for any of those days; and therefore it should be read (as it is enjoined by this office) for the greater solemnity of this day. Besides, whatever festival happens to fall upon this day, "the Collects of this office are to be added to the office of such festival in their proper places:" now one of the Collects or prayers of this office is to be said "in the end of the Litany, after the Collect, We humbly beseech thee, O Father, &c." Unless therefore the Litany be read, and that Collect used, one of the Collects of this office cannot be added "in its proper place." But one would think there should be no room for any doubt in this matter, when it is said so expressly in the rubrick, that "the Litany shall always this day be used;" to imply, undoubtedly, that though it happen upon a day, on which otherwise the Litany is not to be used, yet it shall be added on purpose on this occasion. Wheatly.

the Proper Psalms appointed for this Day, instead of those of ordinary Course, shall be also used, and the Collects added as before; and in all these cases the rest of this Office shall be omitted: But if it shall happen to be any other Sunday, this whole Office shall be used, as it followeth, entirely. And what Festival soever shall happen to fall upon this solemn Day of Thanksgiving, the following Hymn appointed instead of Venite exultemus, shall be constantly used.

¶ Morning Prayer shall begin with these Sentences[f].

TO the Lord our God belong mercies and forgivenesses, though we have rebelled against him: neither have we obeyed the voice of the Lord our God, to walk in his laws which he set before us. Daniel ix. 9, 10.

It is of the Lord's mercies that we were not consumed: because his compassions fail not. Lam. iii. 22.

¶ Instead of Venite exultemus shall be sung or said this Hymn following; one Verse by the Priest, and another by the Clerk and People.

MY song shall be alway of the loving-kindness of the Lord: with my mouth will I ever be shewing forth his truth from one generation to another. Psalm lxxxix. 1.

The merciful and gracious Lord hath so done his marvellous works: that they ought to be had in remembrance. Psalm cxi. 4.

Who can express the noble acts of the Lord: or shew forth all his praise? Psalm cvi. 2.

The works of the Lord are great:

[f] Morning Prayer shall begin with these Sentences.] For the sentences are appointed one of the ordinary sentences at morning service, (being Daniel's confession of his people's transgression, and of God's mercy, notwithstanding, Dan. ix. 9, 10,) and an additional one out of the book of Lamentations, iii. 22, ascribing our preservation wholly to the mercy and compassion of God.

II. The following hymn, which was new-drawn up in King James the Second's reign, in the room of another that had been used before, is sufficiently plain and applicable to the day, without any comment.

III. The Proper Psalms, till King James's reign, were the xxth, xxist, lxxxvth, and cxviiith. But now they are cxxivth, cxxvith, cxxixth, and cxviiith. The first of these hath been already spoken to in the office for the "Fifth of November." It may very properly be repeated here; since the papists and sectaries, like Samson's foxes, though they look contrary ways, do yet both join in carrying fire to destroy us: their end is the same, though the method be different.

2. The cxxvith Psalm celebrates the deliverance of the Israelites out of their captivity, which was so sudden and unexpected, that they who saw it thought themselves in a dream, and could scarce be persuaded that the thing was real; which may exactly be applied to the strange and miraculous turn of affairs at the happy Restoration; which was so surprising, that those who saw it were in such an ecstasy of joy and wonder, that they were almost afraid that their senses deceived them.

3. The cxxixth Psalm is a reflection upon the endeavours of our enemies to destroy us, and an acknowledgment of God's continual help in delivering us; and concludes with a curse denounced upon the enemies of the Church.

4. The cxviiith Psalm was composed originally for David's coronation after God had brought him from his exile through many troubles, and settled him safely on his throne in peace. It is set last because it peculiarly relates to the last scene of the Restoration, the crowning of King Charles II.

IV. The first Lesson, 2 Sam. xix. 9, is almost an exact parallel to our own case, describing how, after Absalom's death, (whereby the Rebellion was happily ended,) the people unanimously resolved to bring back their lawful king David, and sent an honourable message to him in his exile, to invite him home; and how also upon this he returned, not only without any opposition, but by the general consent and to the great satisfaction of all his subjects; his people contending which part of them should shew themselves most forward and joyful upon so happy an occasion.

2. But if any new practices make it necessary to reflect upon that faction and sedition which began the Rebellion, Numbers xvi. was added by King James, to be used instead of the former, where the example of Korah, Dathan, and Abiram, sets out the greatness of their sin, and the severity of their punishment, who delight in opposing their lawful governours.

3. The second Lesson, which is now the Epistle of St. Jude, (but which was Romans xiii. till King James's reign,) foretels the coming of false teachers in the last days, and describes their hypocrisy in pretending to sanctity, while their lives are notoriously evil; remarking particularly their railing at those in authority, and prophesying falsely for a reward, and containing at the same time a prophecy of their fall: and as the character of these was exactly answered by some in those sad times; so also was their prophecy soon after fulfilled to their ruin and destruction, to warn others to beware of such pretenders.

VI. The Epistle, 1 Peter ii. 11—18, (except the two first verses,) is the same with that for January 30, commanding us to be "subject to the King as supreme," which is farther confirmed by the Gospel. Wheatly.

sought out of all them that have pleasure therein. Psalm cxi. 2.

The Lord setteth up the meek: and bringeth the ungodly down to the ground. Psalm cxlvii. 6.

The Lord executeth righteousness and judgement: for all them that are oppressed with wrong. Psalm ciii. 6.

For he will not alway be chiding: neither keepeth he his anger for ever. Ver. 9.

He hath not dealt with us after our sins: nor rewarded us according to our wickedness. Ver. 10.

For look how high the heaven is in comparison of the earth: so great is his mercy toward them that fear him. Ver. 11.

Yea, like as a father pitieth his own children: even so is the Lord merciful unto them that fear him. Ver. 13.

Thou, O God, hast proved us: thou also hast tried us, even as silver is tried. Psalm lxvi. 9.

Thou sufferedst men to ride over our heads, we went through fire and water: but thou hast brought us out into a wealthy place. Ver. 11.

O how great troubles and adversities hast thou shewed us! and yet didst thou turn and refresh us: yea, and broughtest us from the deep of the earth again. Psalm lxxi. 18.

Thou didst remember us in our low estate, and redeem us from our enemies: for thy mercy endureth for ever. Psalm cxxxvi. 23, 24.

Lord, thou art become gracious unto thy land: thou hast turned away the captivity of Jacob. Psalm lxxxv. 1.

God hath shewed us his goodness plenteously: and God hath let us see our desire upon our enemies. Psalm lix. 10.

They are brought down and fallen: but we are risen and stand upright. Psalm xx. 8.

There are they fallen, all that work wickedness: they are cast down, and shall not be able to stand. Psalm xxxvi. 12.

The Lord hath been mindful of us, and he shall bless us: even he shall bless the house of Israel, he shall bless the house of Aaron. Psalm cxv. 12.

He shall bless them that fear the Lord: both small and great. Ver. 13.

O that men would therefore praise the Lord for his goodness: and declare the wonders that he doeth for the children of men! Psalm cvii. 21.

That they would offer unto him the sacrifice of thanksgiving: and tell out his works with gladness! Ver. 22.

And not hide them from the children of the generations to come: but shew the honour of the Lord, his mighty and wonderful works that he hath done! Psalm lxxviii. 4.

That our posterity may also know them, and the children that are yet unborn: and not be as their forefathers, a faithless and stubborn generation. Ver. 6. 9.

Give thanks, O Israel, unto God the Lord in the congregations: from the ground of the heart. Psalm lxviii. 26.

Praised be the Lord daily: even the God who helpeth us, and poureth his benefits upon us. Ver. 19.

O let the wickedness of the wicked come to an end: but establish thou the righteous. Psalm vii. 9.

Let all those that seek thee be joyful and glad in thee: and let all such as love thy salvation say alway, The Lord be praised. Psalm xl. 19.

Glory be to the Father, and to the Son: and to the Holy Ghost;

As it was in the beginning, is now, and ever shall be: world without end. Amen.

Proper Psalms. cxxiv, cxxvi, cxxix, cxviii.

Proper Lessons.

The first, 2 Sam. xix. verse 9. or Numb. xvi.

Te Deum.

The second, The Epistle of St. Jude.

Jubilate Deo.

¶ The Suffrages next after the Creed shall stand thus.

Priest. O Lord, shew thy mercy upon us.

Answer. And grant us thy salvation.

Priest. O Lord, save the Queen;

Answer. Who putteth her trust in thee.

Priest. Send her help from thy holy place.

Answer. And evermore mightily defend her.

Priest. Let her enemies have no advantage against her.

Answer. Let not the wicked approach to hurt her.

Priest. Endue thy Ministers with righteousness.

Answer. And make thy chosen people joyful.

Priest. Give peace in our time, O Lord.

Answer. Because there is none other that fighteth for us, but only thou, O God.

Priest. Be unto us, O Lord, a strong tower.

Answer. From the face of our enemies.

Priest. O Lord, hear our prayer.

Answer. And let our cry come unto thee.

¶ Instead of the first Collect at Morning Prayer shall these two which follow be used.

O Almighty God, who art a strong tower of defence unto thy servants against the face of their enemies; We yield thee praise and thanksgiving for the wonderful deliverance of these Kingdoms from THE GREAT REBELLION, and all the Miseries and Oppressions consequent thereupon, under which they had so long groaned. We acknowledge it thy goodness, that we were not utterly delivered over as a prey unto them; beseeching thee still to continue such thy mercies towards us, that all the world may know that thou art our Saviour and mighty Deliverer; through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

Ps. lxi. 3.

Ps. xviii. 48, 49; cxxiv. 6.

Ps. cix. 26, 27. Isa. xlix. 26.

O Lord God of our salvation, who hast been exceedingly gracious unto this land, and by thy miraculous providence didst deliver us out of our miserable confusions; by restoring to us, and to his own just and undoubted Rights, our then most gracious Sovereign Lord, King Charles the Second, notwithstanding all the power and malice of his enemies; and, by placing him on the Throne of these Kingdoms, didst restore also unto us the publick and free profession of thy true Religion and Worship, together with our former Peace and Prosperity, to the great comfort and joy of our hearts: We are here now before thee, with all due thankfulness, to acknowledge thine unspeakable goodness herein, as upon this day shewed unto us, and to offer unto thee our sacrifice of praise for the same; humbly beseeching thee to accept this our unfeigned, though unworthy oblation of ourselves; vowing all holy obedience in thought, word, and work, unto thy Divine Majesty; and promising all loyal and dutiful Allegiance to thine Anointed Servant now set over us, and to her Heirs after her; whom we beseech thee to bless with all increase of grace, honour, and happiness, in this world, and to crown her with immortality and glory in the world to come, for Jesus Christ his sake our only Lord and Saviour. Amen.

Ps. lxv. 5; lxxix. 9; lxxxv. 1.

Rom. xii. 1.

1 Tim. ii. 1, 2.

¶ In the end of the Litany (which shall always this Day be used) after the Collect [We humbly beseech thee, O Father, &c.] shall this be said which next followeth.

ALMIGHTY God, who hast in all ages shewed forth thy power and mercy in the miraculous and gracious deliverances of thy Church, and in the protection of righteous and religious Kings and States, professing thy holy and eternal truth, from the malicious Conspiracies and wicked Practices of all their enemies; We yield unto thee our unfeigned thanks and praise, as for thy many other great and public mercies, so especially for that signal and wonderful Deliverance, by thy wise and good Providence as upon this day completed, and vouchsafed to our then most gracious Sovereign, King Charles the Second, and all the Royal Family, and in them, to this whole Church and State, and all orders and degrees of men in both, from the unnatural Rebellion, Usurpation, and Tyranny of ungodly and cruel men, and from the sad confusions and ruin thereupon ensuing. From all these, O gracious and merciful Lord God, not our merit, but thy mercy; not our foresight, but thy Providence; not our own arm, but thy right hand, and thine arm, did rescue and deliver us. And therefore, not unto us, O Lord, not unto us, but unto thy Name be ascribed all Honour, and Glory, and Praise, with most humble and hearty thanks, in all Churches of the Saints: Even so blessed be the Lord our God, who alone doeth wondrous things, and blessed be the Name of his Majesty for ever; through Jesus Christ our Lord and only Saviour. Amen.

¶ In the Communion Service, immediately before the reading of the Epistle, shall these two Collects be used, instead of the Collect for the Queen and the Collect of the Day.

O Almighty God, &c.
O Lord God of our salvation, &c. } As before at Morning Prayer.

The Epistle. 1 St. Peter ii. 11.

DEARLY beloved, I beseech you as strangers and pilgrims, abstain from fleshly lusts, which war against the soul; having your conversation honest among the Gentiles: that, whereas they speak against you as evil-doers, they may, by your good works which they shall behold, glorify God in the day of visitation. Submit yourselves to every ordinance of man for the Lord's sake; whether it be to the King, as supreme; or unto Governours, as unto them that are sent by him for the punishment of evil-doers, and for the praise of them that do well. For so is the will of God, that with well-doing ye may put to silence the ignorance of foolish men: as free, and not using your liberty for a cloke of maliciousness, but as the servants of God. Honour all men. Love the brotherhood. Fear God. Honour the King.

The Gospel. St. Matth. xxii. 16.

AND they sent out unto him their disciples, with the Herodians, saying, Master, we know that thou art true, and teachest the way of God in truth, neither carest thou for any man; for thou regardest not the person of men. Tell us therefore, what thinkest thou? Is it lawful to give tribute unto Cæsar, or not? But Jesus perceived their wickedness, and said, Why tempt ye me, ye hypocrites? Shew me the tribute-money. And they brought unto him a penny. And he saith unto them, Whose is this image and superscription? They say unto him, Cæsar's. Then saith he unto them, Render therefore unto Cæsar the things which are Cæsar's; and unto God the things that are God's. When they had heard these words, they marvelled, and left him, and went their way.

¶ In the Offertory shall this Sentence be read.

NOT every one that saith unto me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven: but he that doeth the will of my Father which is in heaven. St. Matth. vii. 21.

¶ After the Prayer [For the whole state of Christ's Church, &c.] this Collect following shall be used.

ALMIGHTY God and heavenly Father, who, of thine infinite and unspeakable goodness towards us, didst in a most extraordinary and wonderful manner disappoint and overthrow the wicked designs of those traiterous, heady, and high-minded men, who, under the pretence of Religion and thy most holy Name, had contrived, and well-nigh effected the utter destruction of this Church and Kingdom: As we do this day most heartily and devoutly adore and magnify thy glorious Name for this thine infinite goodness already vouchsafed to us; so do we most humbly beseech thee to continue thy grace and favour towards us, that no such dismal calamity may ever again fall upon us. Infatuate and defeat all the secret counsels of deceitful and wicked men against us; Abate their pride, asswage their malice, and confound their devices. Strengthen the hands of our gracious Sovereign Queen VICTORIA, and all that are put in authority under her, with judgement and justice to cut off all such workers of iniquity, as turn Religion into Rebellion, and Faith into Faction; that they may never again prevail against us, nor triumph in the ruin of the Monarchy and thy Church among us. Protect and defend our Sovereign Lady the Queen, with the whole Royal Family, from all Treasons and Conspiracies. Be

Ps. lxi. 3. unto her an helmet of salvation, and a strong tower of defence against the face of all her enemies; clothe them with shame and confusion, but upon Herself and her Posterity let the Crown for ever flourish. So we thy people, and the sheep of thy pasture, will give thee thanks for ever, and will always be shewing forth thy praise from generation to generation: through Jesus Christ our only Saviour and Redeemer, to whom, with thee, O Father, and the Holy Ghost, be glory in the Church throughout all ages, world without end. Amen.

Ps. cix. 29; cxxxii. 18.

Ps. lxxix. 14.

A FORM OF

PRAYER WITH THANKSGIVING[g]

TO ALMIGHTY GOD;

To be used in all Churches and Chapels within this Realm, every Year, upon the Twentieth Day of June; being the Day on which Her Majesty Began her happy Reign.

¶ The Service shall be the same with the usual Office for Holy-days in all things; except where it is in this Office otherwise appointed.

¶ If this Day shall happen to be Sunday, this whole Office shall be used, as it followeth entirely.

¶ Morning Prayer shall begin with these Sentences[h].

I Exhort that first of all, Supplications, Prayers, Intercessions, and giving of Thanks, be made for all men; for Kings, and for all that are in authority; that we may lead a quiet and peaceable life, in all godliness and honesty: For this

[g] A Form of Prayer with Thanksgiving &c.] "As the godly Christian emperors in ancient times, so it appears that our most religious princes since the Reformation, have always caused the days of their inaugurations to be publickly celebrated by all their subjects with prayers and thanksgivings to Almighty God." See Can. 2, 1640, in Bp. Sparrow's collection; and King James II.'s order for the service on the 6th of February. And to the end that this day might be duly celebrated, we find that "particular forms of prayer have been appointed by authority," at least ever since the reign of King Charles I. "for that day on purpose." It is true, after the death of that prince, "this pious custom received a long and doleful interruption, upon occasion of his murder, which changed the day, on which King Charles II. succeeded to the crown, into a day of sorrow and fasting." And indeed a great part of the duty of that day, and the devotions proper to it, were performed in the service for the twenty-ninth of May. However, upon King James II.'s accession, "the former laudable and religious practice was immediately revived; a form of prayer and thanksgiving having been composed by the bishops for this purpose," in many things agreeing with this we now use. But in the reign of King William the inauguration festival was again disused: and it must be owned there was so much the less occasion for it during his reign, as there were large additions made to the form of thanksgiving appointed for the "Fifth of November," to commemorate his arrival, which happened on that day. However, when our late glorious and pious Queen Anne succeeded to the throne, there was fresh occasion to revive the festival. And therefore the day was again ordered to be observed, and a form of prayer with thanksgiving drawn up, part of it being taken from King James's office, and part of it being composed entirely new; and it is, altogether, the same (except the first Lesson) with the present office, which comes now in order to be explained. Wheatly.

[h] Morning Prayer shall begin with these Sentences.] The rubricks are the same as in the foregoing offices; and so the sentences are the first that need to be considered: and of these it is sufficient to say, that the first is a proper introduction to the duties we are now going to perform, 1 Tim. ii. 1, 2; and that the other is one of the ordinary sentences at morning service, 1 John i. 8, 9, and inserted here, in order to prepare us for the following confession.

II. The Hymn is an abridgment of a much longer one that was appointed in the office drawn up for King James II. However this, as it stands, is as proper to the occasion, containing suitable petitions and praises for the King.

III. The Proper Psalms are Psalm xx, xxi. ci. The xxth is a Psalm of David, wherein the people are taught to pray for his good success.

2. The xxist was originally composed upon the same account for which we now make choice of it, namely, to be a form of publick prayer, to be used in the congregation for God's blessing on the prince.

3. The cist Psalm is a resolution that David made to be a strict observer of piety and justice both in his is good and acceptable unto God our Saviour. 1 Tim. ii. 1—3.

If we say that we have no sin, we deceive ourselves, and the truth is not in us; but, if we confess our sins, he is faithful and just to forgive us our sins, and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness. 1 St. John i. 8, 9.

¶ Instead of Venite exultemus the Hymn following shall be said or sung; one verse by the Priest, and another by the Clerk and People.

O Lord our Governour: how excellent is thy Name in all the world! Psalm viii. 1.

Lord, what is man, that thou hast such respect unto him: or the son of man, that thou so regardest him? Psalm cxliv. 3.

The merciful and gracious Lord hath so done his marvellous works: that they ought to be had in remembrance. Psalm cxi. 4.

O that men would therefore praise the Lord for his goodness: and declare the wonders that he doeth for the children of men! Psalm cvii. 21.

Behold, O God our Defender: and look upon the face of thine Anointed. Psalm lxxxiv. 9.

O hold thou up his goings in thy paths: that his footsteps slip not. Psalm xvii. 5.

Grant the King a long life: and make him glad with the joy of thy countenance. Ps. lxi. 6. & xxi. 6.

Let him dwell before thee for ever: O prepare thy loving mercy and faithfulness, that they may preserve him. Psalm lxi. 7.

In his time let the righteous flourish: and let peace be in all our borders. Psalm lxxii. 7. & cxlvii. 14.

As for his enemies, clothe them with shame: but upon himself let his crown flourish. Psalm cxxxii. 19.

Blessed be the Lord God, even the God of Israel: which only doeth wondrous things. Psalm lxxii. 18.

And blessed be the Name of his Majesty for ever: and all the earth shall be filled with his Majesty. Amen, Amen. Ver. 19.

Glory be to the Father, and to the Son: and to the Holy Ghost;

As it was in the beginning, is now, and ever shall be: world without end. Amen.

Proper Psalms, xx, xxi, ci.

Proper Lessons.

The first, Joshua i. to the end of the 9th verse.

Te Deum.

The second, Romans xiii.

Jubilate Deo.

¶ The Suffrages next after the Creed shall stand thus.

Priest. O Lord, shew thy mercy upon us.

Answer. And grant us thy salvation.

Priest. O Lord, save the Queen;

Answer. Who putteth her trust in thee.

Priest. Send her help from thy holy place.

Answer. And evermore mightily defend her.

Priest. Let her enemies have no advantage against her.

Answer. Let not the wicked approach to hurt her.

Priest. Endue thy Ministers with righteousness.

Answer. And make thy chosen people joyful.

Priest. O Lord, save thy people.

Answer. And bless thine inheritance.

Priest. Give peace in our time, O Lord.

Answer. Because there is none other that fighteth for us, but only thou, O God.

---

private and publick conduct, and is appointed here to remind us, that whoever desires God's blessing upon his person and government, must diligently attend to discountenance impiety, and to nourish true religion and virtue. In the room of this Psalm, in King James's office, were appointed the lxxxvth and the cxviiith; but they being both chosen with an eye to the exile, which that prince underwent with his royal brother, were, in the office for Queen Anne, more properly changed.

IV. The first Lesson in Queen Anne's time was Prov. viii. 13, to the end: but now the first of Joshua is again appointed, which was the Lesson for this office when it was put out by King James.

2. The second Lesson, Romans xiii, is appointed upon account of that part of it which is read for the Epistle on November 5, of which what I have there said may suffice.

V. The Epistle and Gospel are the same with those appointed on the 29th of May, and have already been spoken to in my discourse on that office. Wheatly.

Priest. Be unto us, O Lord, a strong tower;

Answer. From the face of our enemies.

Priest. O Lord, hear our prayer;

Answer. And let our cry come unto thee.

¶ Instead of the first Collect at Morning Prayer shall be used this following Collect of Thanksgiving for Her Majesty's Accession to the Throne.

2 Kings xix. 15. 2 Chron. xx. 6. Dan. iv. 25. ALMIGHTY God, who rulest over all the kingdoms of the World, and disposest of them according to thy good pleasure; We yield thee unfeigned thanks, for that thou wast pleased, as on this day, to place thy servant, our Sovereign Lady, Queen VICTORIA, upon the throne of this Realm. Let thy wisdom be her guide, and let thine arm strengthen her; let justice, truth, and holiness, let peace and love, and all those virtues that adorn the Christian Profession, flourish in her days; direct all her counsels and endeavours to thy glory, and the welfare of her people; and give us grace to obey her cheerfully and willingly for conscience sake; that neither our sinful passions, nor our private interests, may disappoint her cares for the publick good; let her always possess the hearts of her people, that they may never be wanting in honour to her Person, and dutiful submission to her Authority; let her reign be long and prosperous, and crown her with immortality in the life to come; through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

Ps. lxxxix. 21. Ps. lxxii. 7. Rom. xiii. 5.

¶ In the end of the Litany (which shall always be used upon this Day) after the Collect [We humbly beseech thee, O Father, &c.] shall the following Prayer, for the Queen and Royal Family, be used.

O Lord our God, who upholdest and governest all things in heaven and earth, receive our humble prayers, with our hearty thanksgivings, for our Sovereign Lady VICTORIA, as on this day, set over us by thy grace and providence to be our Queen; and so together with her bless the Prince Albert, Albert Prince of Wales, and all the Royal Family; that they all, ever trusting in thy goodness, protected by thy power, and crowned with thy gracious and endless favour, may continue before thee in health, peace, joy, and honour, and may live long and happy lives upon earth, and after death obtain everlasting life and glory in the kingdom of heaven, by the Merits and Mediation of Christ Jesus our Saviour, who with the Father and the Holy Spirit, liveth and reigneth ever one God, world without end. Amen.

¶ Then shall follow this Collect, for God's protection of the Queen against all her enemies.

MOST gracious God, who hast set thy servant VICTORIA our Queen upon the Throne of her Ancestors, we most humbly beseech thee to protect her on the same from all the dangers to which she may be exposed; Hide her from the gathering together of the froward, and from the insurrection of wicked doers; Do thou weaken the hands, blast the designs, and defeat the enterprizes of all her enemies, that no secret conspiracies, nor open violences, may disquiet her Reign; but that, being safely kept under the shadow of thy wing, and supported by thy power, she may triumph over all opposition; that so the world may acknowledge thee to be her defender and mighty deliverer in all difficulties and adversities; through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

Ps. lxiv. 2. Ps. xvii. 8. Isa. xlix. 26.

¶ Then the Prayer for the High Court of Parliament (if sitting).

¶ In the Communion Service, immediately before the reading of the Epistle, instead of the Collect for the Queen, and that of the Day, shall be used this Prayer for the Queen, as supreme Governour of this Church.

BLESSED Lord, who hast called Christian princes to the defence of thy Faith, and hast made it their duty to promote the spiritual welfare, together with the temporal interest of their people; We acknowledge with humble and thankful hearts thy great goodness to us, in setting thy Servant our most gracious Queen over this Church and Nation; Give her, we beseech thee, all those heavenly graces that are requisite for so high a trust; Let the work of thee her God prosper in her hands; Let her eyes behold the success of her designs for the service of thy true Religion established amongst us; and make her a blessed instrument of protecting and advancing thy Truth, wherever it is persecuted and oppressed; Let Hypocrisy and Profaneness, Superstition and Idolatry, fly before her face; Let not Heresies and false Doctrines disturb the peace of the Church, nor Schisms and causeless Divisions weaken it; but grant us to be of one heart and one mind in serving thee our God, and obeying her according to thy will: And that these blessings may be continued to after-ages, let there never be one wanting in her house to succeed her in the government of this United Kingdom, that our posterity may see her children's children, and peace upon Israel. So we that are thy people, and sheep of thy pasture, shall give thee thanks for ever, and will always be shewing forth thy praise from generation to generation. Amen.

Isa. liii. 10.

Acts iv. 32. 2 Cor. xiii. 11.

Jer. xxxiii. 17.

Ps. cxxv. 5; cxxviii. 6. Ps. lxxix. 14.

The Epistle. 1 St. Peter ii. 11.

DEARLY beloved, I beseech you as strangers and pilgrims, abstain from fleshly lusts, which war against the soul; having your conversation honest among the Gentiles: that, whereas they speak against you as evil-doers, they may, by your good works which they shall behold, glorify God in the day of visitation. Submit yourselves to every ordinance of man for the Lord's sake; whether it be to the King, as supreme; or unto Governours, as unto them that are sent by him for the punishment of evil-doers, and for the praise of them that do well. For so is the will of God, that with well-doing ye may put to silence the ignorance of foolish men: as free, and not using your liberty for a cloke of maliciousness, but as the servants of God. Honour all men. Love the brotherhood. Fear God. Honour the King.

The Gospel. St. Matth. xxii. 16.

AND they sent out unto him their disciples, with the Herodians, saying, Master, we know that thou art true, and teachest the way of God in truth, neither carest thou for any man; for thou regardest not the person of men. Tell us therefore, What thinkest thou? Is it lawful to give tribute unto Cæsar, or not? But Jesus perceived their wickedness, and said, Why tempt ye me, ye hypocrites? Shew me the tribute-money. And they brought unto him a peny. And he saith unto them, Whose is this image and superscription? They say unto him, Cæsar's. Then saith he unto them, Render therefore unto Cæsar the things which are Cæsar's; and unto God the things that are God's. When they had heard these words, they marvelled, and left him, and went their way.

¶ After the Nicene Creed shall follow the Sermon.

¶ In the Offertory shall this Sentence be read:

LET your light so shine before men, that they may see your good works, and glorify your Father which is in heaven. St. Matth. v. 16.

¶ After the Prayer [For the whole state of Christ's Church &c.] these Collects following shall be used.

A Prayer for Unity.

O God the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, our only Saviour, the Prince of Peace; Give us grace seriously to lay to heart the great dangers we are in by our unhappy divisions. Take away all hatred and prejudice, and whatsoever else may hinder us from godly Union and Concord: that, as there is but one Body, and one Spirit, and one Hope of our Calling, one Lord, one Faith, one Baptism, one God and Father of us all, so we may henceforth be all of one heart, and of one soul, united in one holy bond of Truth and Peace, of Faith and Charity, and may with one mind and one mouth glorify thee; through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

Acts iv. 32. Phil. i. 27. Eph. iv. 3.

Rom. xv. 6.

GRANT, O Lord, we beseech thee, that the course of this world may be so peaceably ordered by thy governance, that thy Church may joyfully serve thee in all godly quietness, through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

GRANT, we beseech thee, Almighty God, that the words, which we have heard this day with our outward ears, may through thy grace be so grafted inwardly in our hearts, that they may bring forth in us the fruit of good living, to the honour and praise of thy Name; through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

ALMIGHTY God, the fountain of all wisdom, who knowest our necessities before we ask, and our ignorance in asking; We beseech thee to have compassion upon our infirmities; and those things which for our unworthiness we dare not, and for our blindness we cannot ask, vouchsafe to give us for the worthiness of thy Son Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

THE peace of God, which passeth all understanding, keep your hearts and minds in the knowledge and love of God, and of his Son Jesus Christ our Lord: And the blessing of God Almighty, the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghost, be amongst you, and remain with you always. Amen.

"VICTORIA R.

"OUR Will and Pleasure is[1], That these four Forms of Prayer and "Service, made for the Fifth of November, the Thirtieth of January, "the Twenty-ninth of May, and the Twentieth of June, be forthwith "printed and published, and annexed to the Book of Common Prayer "and Liturgy of the United Church of England and Ireland; to be used "yearly on the said Days, in all Cathedral and Collegiate Churches and "Chapels, in all Chapels of Colleges and Halls within our Universities "of Oxford, Cambridge, and Dublin, and of our Colleges of Eton "and Winchester, and in all Parish Churches and Chapels within those "parts of our United Kingdom of Great Britain called England and "Ireland.

"Given at our Court at Kensington the twenty-first day of "June, 1837, in the first Year of our Reign.

"By Her Majesty's Command,

"J. RUSSELL."

---

[1] Our Will and Pleasure is, &c.] Although the due observation of the fifth of November, the thirtieth of January, and the twety-ninth of May is injoined by Act of Parliament; yet the particular forms, to be used on those days, are not previously directed, nor subsequently confirmed, by any Act of Parliament: but they are specially authorized, as is also that of the Queen's inauguration, by this order of her Majesty. The inauguration day, or the day when the king or queen, for the time being, began their respective reigns, is not injoined by Act of Parliament, as are the other solemn days, for which particular services are appointed.

Some have questioned, by what authority of law this solemnity, as also the other occasional thanksgivings and fasts appointed by the king, are kept. Upon which Mr. Johnson observeth, in his Clergyman's Vade Mecum, that it is sufficient in this case, as he thinketh, that the two Houses of Parliament have and do own this power to be lodged in the crown, as they do by submitting to these royal commands in observing such days, and sometimes petitioning him to order these religious solemnities. Dr. Burn.

APPENDIX.

A FORM OF PRAYER

FOR THE

VISITATION OF PRISONERS[k],

Treated upon by the Archbishops and Bishops, and the rest of the Clergy of Ireland, and agreed upon by Her Majesty's Licence in their Synod, holden at Dublin, in the year 1711.

¶ When Morning or Evening Prayers shall be read in any Prison, instead of the Venite exultemus, or the Magnificat, shall be read the 130*th Psalm* De profundis, and the Minister shall insert, after the Collect for the Day, the Collect in the following Service, [O God, who sparest, &c.] and at such times as the Litany is not read, he shall add the Prayer, O God, merciful Father, that despisest not, &c.

¶ And when notice is given to the Minister that a Prisoner is confined for some great or capital Crime, he shall visit him, and when he cometh into the Place where the Prisoner is, he shall say, kneeling down,

REMEMBER not, Lord, our iniquities, nor the iniquities of our forefathers, neither take thou vengeance of our sins; Spare us, good Lord, spare thy people, whom thou hast redeemed with thy most precious blood, and be not angry with us for ever.

Answer. Spare us, good Lord.

Let us pray.

Lord, have mercy upon us.

Christ, have mercy upon us.

Lord, have mercy upon us.

OUR Father, which art in heaven, Hallowed be thy Name. Thy kingdom come. Thy will be done in earth, As it is in heaven. Give us this day our daily bread. And forgive us our trespasses, As we forgive them that trespass against us. And lead us not into temptation; But deliver us from evil. Amen.

Minister. O Lord, shew thy mercy upon us.

Answer. And grant us thy salvation.

Minister. Turn thy face from our sins.

Answer. And blot out all our iniquities.

Minister. Send us help from thy holy place.

Answer. For thine indignation lieth hard upon us.

Minister. O Lord, hear our prayer.

Answer. And let the sighing of the Prisoners come before thee.

The Collect.

GRANT, we beseech thee, Almighty God, that we, who for our evil deeds do worthily deserve to be punished, by the comfort of thy grace may mercifully be relieved, [k] The Editor has taken the liberty of appending the following Form of Prayer to the present edition of the Liturgy, on the suggestion of a reverend correspondent, who has experienced its utility in the discharge of his important duties in a county gaol, of which he is chaplain, in this part of the United Kingdom. Recommended as it is by its own merits, as well as by the distinguished sanction specified in the Introduction to it above, it will probably be considered a valuable manual for the purpose for which it is designed, by those of the English, no less than of the Irish clergy, into whose hands this edition of the Book of Common Prayer may happen to fall.

through our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ. Amen.

O God, who sparest when we deserve punishment, and in thy wrath rememberest mercy, we humbly beseech thee of thy goodness, to comfort and succour all those who are under reproach and misery in the house of bondage; correct them not in thine anger, neither chasten them in thy sore displeasure; give them a right understanding of themselves, and of thy threats and promises, that they may neither cast away their confidence in thee, nor place it any where but in thee; relieve the Distressed, protect the Innocent, and awaken the Guilty; and forasmuch as thou alone bringest light out of darkness, and good out of evil, grant that the pains and punishments which these thy servants endure, through their bodily confinement, may tend to the setting free their souls from the chains of sin, through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

¶ Here the Minister, as he shall see convenient, may read the Prayer for All Conditions of Men, the Collect for Ash-Wednesday, and the Collect after the Offertory, beginning, Almighty God, the fountain of all wisdom, &c. or any other Prayer of the Liturgy, which he shall judge proper.

¶ Then shall the Minister exhort the Prisoner or Prisoners after this Form, or other like.

DEARLY beloved, know this, that Almighty God, whose never-failing providence governeth all things both in heaven and earth, hath so wisely and mercifully ordered the course of this world, that his judgements are often sent as fatherly corrections to us: and if with due submission and resignation to his holy will we receive the same, they will work together for our good.

It is your part and duty therefore to humble yourself under the mighty hand of God, to acknowledge the righteousness of his judgements, and to endeavour, that by his grace this present Visitation may lead you to a sincere and hearty repentance.

The way and means thereto is, to examine your life and conversation by the rule of God's commandments, and whereinsoever you shall perceive yourself to have offended either by will, word, or deed, there to bewail your own sinfulness, and to confess yourself to Almighty God, with full purpose of amendment of life: and if you shall perceive your offences to be such as are not only against God, but also against your Neighbours, then to reconcile yourself to them, being ready to make restitution and satisfaction, according to the uttermost of your power, for all injuries and wrongs done by you to any other; and being likewise ready to forgive others that have offended you, as you would have forgiveness of your offences at God's hand: and to this true repentance and change of mind you must add a lively and stedfast faith, and dependance upon the merits of the death of Christ, with an entire resignation of yourself to the will of God. Except you repent, and believe, we can give you no hope of salvation: but if you do sincerely repent and believe, God has declared, though your sins be as red as scarlet, they shall be made white as snow; though your wickednesses have gone over your head, yet shall they not be your destruction.

We exhort you therefore in the Name of God, and of his dear Son Jesus Christ our Saviour, and as you tender your own salvation, to take good heed of these things in time, while the day of salvation lasteth, for the night cometh when no man can work. While you have the light, believe in the light, and walk as children of the light, that you be not cast into outer darkness; that you may not knock when the door shall be shut, and cry too late for mercy, when it is the time of justice. Now you are the object of God's mercy, if by repentance and true faith you turn unto him; but if you neglect these things, you will be the object of his justice and vengeance. Now you may claim the merits of Christ; but if you die in your sins, his sufferings will tend to your greater condemnation. O beloved, consider in this your day, how fearful a thing it will be to fall into the hands of the living God, when you can neither fly to his mercy to protect you, nor to the merits of Christ to cover you in that terrible day.

¶ Here the Minister shall examine him concerning his Faith, and rehearse the Articles of the Creed, [Dost thou believe in God, &c.] And the Prisoner shall answer,

All this I stedfastly believe.

¶ Then shall the Minister examine whether he repent him truly of his sins, and be in charity with all the world, and further admonish him particularly concerning the crimes wherewith he is charged; and exhort him, if he has any scruples, that he would declare the same, and prepare himself for the holy Communion, against the time that it may be proper to administer it to him.

¶ Then all kneeling, the Minister shall say the 51*st Psalm,* [Have mercy upon me, O God, &c.]

Let us pray.

O Lord, we beseech thee, mercifully hear our prayers, and spare all those who confess their sins unto thee; that they, whose consciences by sin are accused, by thy merciful pardon may be absolved, through Christ our Lord. Amen.

¶ Then the Minister shall say,

O God, whose mercy is everlasting, and power infinite, look down with pity and compassion upon the suffering of these thy servants; and whether thou visitest for trial of their patience, or punishment of their offences, enable them by thy grace cheerfully to submit themselves to thy holy will and pleasure.

Go not far from those, O Lord, whom thou hast laid in a place of darkness, and in the deep; and forasmuch as thou hast not cut them off suddenly, but chastenest them as a Father, grant that they, duly considering thy great mercies, may be unfeignedly thankful, and turn unto thee with true repentance, and sincerity of heart, through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

PRAYERS FOR PERSONS UNDER SENTENCE, &c.

¶ When a Criminal is under Sentence of Death, the Minister shall proceed immediately after the Collect [O God, who sparest, &c.] to exhort him after this Form, or other like.

DEARLY beloved, it hath pleased Almighty God, in his justice, to bring you under the sentence and condemnation of the Law; you are shortly to suffer death in such a manner, that others warned by your example may be the more afraid to offend; and we pray God, that you may make such use of your punishments in this world, that your soul may be saved in the world to come.

Wherefore we come to you in the bowels of compassion; and, being desirous that you should avoid presumption on the one hand, and despair on the other, shall plainly lay before you the wretchedness of your condition, and declare how far you ought to depend on the mercies of God, and the merits of our Saviour. Consider then seriously with yourself, in all appearance the time of your dissolution draweth near, your sins have laid fast hold upon you, you are soon to be removed from among men, by a violent death, and you shall fade away suddenly like the grass, which in the morning is green and groweth up, but in the evening is cut down, dried up and withered. After you have thus finished the course of a sinful and miserable life, you shall appear before the Judge of all flesh; who, as he pronounces blessings on the righteous, shall likewise say, with the terrible voice of the most just judgement to the wicked, Go ye accursed into the fire everlasting, prepared for the devil and his angels.

Your sins have brought you too near this dreadful sentence; it is therefore your part and duty, my brother, humbly to confess and bewail your great and manifold offences, and to repent you truly of your sins, as you tender the eternal salvation of your soul.

Be not deceived with a vain and presumptuous expectation of God's favour, nor say within yourself, Peace, Peace, where there is no peace; for there is no peace, says my God, to the wicked; God is not mocked, he is of purer eyes than to behold iniquity, and without holiness no man shall see the Lord: On the other hand, despair not of God's mercy, though trouble is on every side: for God shutteth not up his mercies for ever in displeasure; but if we confess our sins, he is faithful and just to forgive us our sins, and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness. Do not either way abuse the goodness of God, who calleth us mercifully to amendment, and of his endless pity promiseth us forgiveness of that which is past, if with a perfect and true heart we return unto him.

Since therefore you are soon to pass into an endless and unchangeable state, and your future happiness or misery depends upon the few moments which are left you; I require you strictly to examine yourself and your estate, both towards God and towards man; and let no worldly consideration hinder you from making a true and full confession of your sins, and giving all the satisfaction which is in your power to every one whom you have wronged or injured, that you may find mercy at your heavenly Father's hand for Christ's sake, and not be condemned in the dreadful day of judgement.

Lastly, beloved, submit yourself with Christian resignation to the just judgement of God, which your own crimes have brought upon you, and be in charity with all men; being ready sincerely to forgive all such as have offended you, not excepting those who have prosecuted you even unto death; and though this may seem a hard saying, yet know assuredly, that without it your charity is not yet perfect. And fail not earnestly to endeavour and pray for this blessed temper and composure of mind; so may you cast yourself with an entire dependence upon the mercies of God, through the merits of your Saviour and Redeemer Jesus Christ.

¶ Here the Minister shall examine him concerning his Faith, and rehearse the Articles of the Creed, [Dost thou believe in God, &c.] and the Criminal shall answer,

All this I stedfastly believe.

¶ Then shall the Minister examine, whether he repent him truly of his sins, exhorting him to a particular Confession of the sin for which he is condemned; and upon Confession he shall instruct him what satisfaction ought to be made to those whom he has offended thereby; and if he knoweth any combination in wickedness, or any evil practices designed against others, let him be admonished to the utmost of his power to discover and prevent them.

¶ After his confession the Priest shall absolve him (if he humbly and heartily desire it) either in the Form which is appointed in the Office of Visitation of the Sick, or in that used in the Communion Service.

¶ After absolution, shall be said the Collect following.

O Holy Jesus, who of thine infinite goodness didst accept the conversion of a sinner on the cross, open thine eye of mercy upon this thy servant, who desireth pardon and forgiveness, though in his latest hour he turneth unto thee. Renew in him whatsoever hath been decayed by the fraud and malice of the devil, or by his own carnal will and frailness; consider his contrition, accept his repentance, and forasmuch as he putteth his full trust only in thy mercy, impute not unto him his former sins, but strengthen him with thy blessed Spirit; and when thou art pleased to take him hence, take him unto thy favour; this we beg through thy merits, O Lord, our Saviour and our Redeemer. Amen.

¶ Then the Minister shall say,

O Father of mercies, and God of all comfort, we fly unto thee for succour in behalf of this thy servant, who is now under the sentence of condemnation. The day of his calamity is at hand, and he is accounted as one of them that go down into the pit. Blessed Lord, remember thy mercies, look upon his infirmities, hear the voice of his complaint, give him, we beseech thee, patience in this his time of adversity, and support under the terrors which encompass him; set before his eyes the things he hath done in the body, which have justly provoked thee to anger; and forasmuch as his continuance appeareth to be short amongst us, quicken him so much the more by thy grace and Holy Spirit, that he, being converted and reconciled unto thee, before thy judgements have cut him off from the earth, may at the hour of his death depart in peace, and be received into thine everlasting kingdom, through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

¶ Adding this,

O Saviour of the world, who by thy cross and precious blood hast redeemed us, save us, and help us, we humbly beseech thee, O Lord.

¶ Then the Minister standing shall say,

IN the midst of life we are in death: of whom may we seek for succour, but of thee, O Lord, who for our sins art justly displeased?

Yet, O Lord God, most holy, O Lord, most mighty, O holy and most merciful Saviour, deliver us not into the bitter pains of eternal death.

Thou knowest, Lord, the secrets of our hearts; shut not thy merciful ears to our prayers; but spare us, Lord most holy, O God most mighty, O holy and merciful Saviour, thou most worthy Judge eternal, suffer us not, at our last hour, for any pains of death to fall from thee.

¶ Then the Minister shall say,

THE Almighty God, who is a most strong tower to all them that put their trust in him, to whom all things in heaven, in earth, and under the earth, do bow and obey, be now and evermore thy defence; and make thee know, and feel that there is none other name under heaven given to man, in whom and through whom thou mayest receive salvation, but only the Name of our Lord Jesus Christ. Amen.

¶ And after that shall say,

UNTO God's gracious mercy and protection we commit thee. The Lord bless thee and keep thee. The Lord make his face to shine upon thee, and be gracious unto thee. The Lord lift up his countenance upon thee, and give thee peace both now and evermore. Amen.

¶ At the time of Execution, besides all or such part of the foregoing Office, as the Minister shall judge proper, shall be said the Commendatory Prayer for a Person at the point of departure, as it is in The Visitation of the Sick.

The Collect for the Communion Service.

O God, who declarest thy Almighty power most chiefly in shewing mercy and pity, we beseech thee to have mercy upon this thy servant, who for his transgressions is appointed to die. Grant that he may take thy judgements patiently, and repent him truly of his sins; that he recovering thy favour, the fearful reward of his actions may end with this life, and whensoever his soul shall depart from the body, it may be without spot presented unto thee, through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

The Epistle. Heb. xii. 11.

NO chastening for the present seemeth to be joyous, but grievous; nevertheless afterward it yieldeth the peaceable fruit of righteousness unto them which are exercised thereby.

The Gospel. St. John v. 24.

VERILY, verily, I say unto you, He that heareth my word, and believeth on him that sent me, hath everlasting life, and shall not come into condemnation, but is passed from death unto life.

A PRAYER FOR IMPRISONED DEBTORS.

MOST gracious God, look down in pity and compassion upon these thine afflicted servants, that are fallen under the misery of a close restraint. Give them always a deep sense of their sins, and of thy fatherly love and correction; and the more their confinement presseth hard upon them, the more let the comforts of thy grace and mercy abound towards them. Give to their creditors tenderness and compassion, and to them a meek and forgiving spirit towards all those that have confined them, and a full purpose to repair all the injuries and losses, that others have sustained by them. Raise them up friends to pity and relieve them; give them the continued comfort of thy countenance here, and so sanctify their afflictions, that they may work for them an eternal weight of glory, through the merits and mediation of Jesus Christ thy Son our Lord. Amen.

ARTICLES[a]

Agreed upon by the Archbishops and Bishops of both Provinces, and the whole Clergy, in the Convocation holden at London in the Year 1562, for the avoiding of Diversities of Opinions[b], and for the establishing of Consent touching true Religion. Reprinted by His Majesty's Commandment, with his Royal Declaration prefixed thereunto.

HIS MAJESTY'S DECLARATION[c].

BEING by God's Ordinance, according to Our just Title, Defender of the Faith, and Supreme Governour of the Church, within these Our Dominions, We hold it most agreeable to this Our Kingly Office, and Our own religious Zeal, to conserve and maintain the

[a] Articles &c.] We learn from the New Testament, that those who first embraced the Gospel declared their faith in Jesus, as the promised Messiah, in simple and general terms, Acts viii. 37: and there is no ground for supposing that the apostles required this declaration to be made in any one particular form of words. No such formulary is transmitted to us: and, had any ever existed, it would probably have been cited or alluded to in the New Testament, or in the early Apologies for Christianity. Every bishop was authorized to prescribe a formulary for the use of his own church: and there are still extant in writers, who lived near to the apostolick age, several abstracts of Christian faith, which, though they agree in substance, vary in expression. But, when heresies gained ground, and destroyed uniformity of belief among Christians, it became necessary to have a publick standard of faith: and to this cause we are to attribute the origin of creeds. The design of these creeds was to establish the genuine doctrines of the Gospel, in opposition to the errors which then prevailed; and to exclude from communion with the orthodox Church of Christ all who held heretical opinions. New dissensions and controversies continually arose: and we have to lament, that in process of time "the faith, which was once delivered unto the saints," became corrupted in the highest degree; and that those very councils which were convened according to the practice of the apostolick age for the purpose of declaring "the truth, as it is in Jesus," gave their sanction and authority to the grossest absurdities and most palpable errors. These corruptions, supported by secular power, and favoured by the darkness and ignorance of the times, were almost universally received through a succession of many ages, till at last the glorious light of the Reformation dispelled the clouds, which had so long obscured the Christian world.

At that interesting period the several churches, which had separated themselves from the Roman communion, found it expedient to publish confessions of their faith: and, in conformity to this practice, Edward VI., the first protestant king of England, caused to be published by his royal authority forty-two "Articles, agreed upon by the bishops and other learned and good men, in the Convocation held at London in the year 1552, to root out the discord of opinions, and establish the agreement of true religion." These Articles were repealed by Queen Mary, soon after her accession to the throne. But Queen Elizabeth in the beginning of her reign gave her royal assent to "Thirty-nine Articles, agreed upon by the archbishops and bishops of both provinces, and the whole clergy, in the Convocation holden at London in the year 1562, for avoiding diversities of opinion, and for the establishing of consent touching true religion." These Articles were revised, and some small alterations made in them, in the year 1571; since which time they have continued to be the criterion of the faith of the members of the Church of England. The Articles of 1562 were drawn up in Latin only: but in 1571 they were subscribed by the members of the two Houses of Convocation both in Latin and English: and therefore the Latin and English copies are to be considered as equally authentick. The original manuscripts, subscribed by the Houses of Convocation, were burnt in the fire of London: but Dr. Bennet has collated the oldest copies now extant, and it appears that there are no variations of any importance.

It is generally believed that Cranmer and Ridley were chiefly concerned in framing the forty-two Articles, upon which our thirty-nine are founded. But Bp. Burnet says, that "questions relating to them were given about to many bishops and divines, who gave in their several answers, which were collated and examined very maturely; all sides had a free and fair hearing before conclusions were made." Indeed, caution and moderation are no less conspicuous in them, than a thorough knowledge of the Scriptures, and of the early opinions and practice of Christians.

Bp. Burnet, in his History of the Reformation, has preserved the forty-two Articles published by King Edward the Sixth, and has pointed out in what respects they differ from the thirty-nine Articles which are now in force.

These thirty-nine Articles are arranged with great judgment and perspicuity, and may be considered under four general divisions: the first five contain the Christian doctrines concerning the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghost; in the sixth, seventh, and eighth, the rule of faith is established; the ten next relate to Christians, as individuals; and the remaining twenty-one relate to them, as they are members of a religious society. But, as all confessions of faith have had a reference to existing heresies, we shall here find, not only the positive doctrines of the Gospel asserted; but also the principal errors and corruptions of the church of Rome, and most of the extravagances into which certain protestant sects fell at the time of the Reformation, rejected and condemned. Bp. Tomline.

[b] —for the avoiding of Diversities of Opinions, &c.] See the concluding note on the Articles.

[c] His Majesty's Declaration.] The Articles were Church committed to Our Charge, in Unity of true Religion, and in the Bond of Peace; and not to suffer unnecessary Disputations, Altercations, or Questions to be raised, which may nourish Faction both in the Church and Commonwealth. We have therefore, upon mature Deliberation, and with the advice of so many of Our Bishops as might conveniently be called together, thought fit to make this Declaration following:

That the Articles of the Church of England (which have been allowed and authorized heretofore, and which Our Clergy generally have subscribed unto) do contain the true Doctrine of the Church of England, agreeable to God's Word: which We do therefore ratify and confirm, requiring all Our loving Subjects to continue in the uniform Profession thereof, and prohibiting the least difference from the said Articles; which to that end We command to be new printed, and this Our Declaration to be published therewith.

That We are Supreme Governour of the Church of England: And that if any difference arise about the external Policy, concerning the Injunctions, Canons, and other Constitutions whatsoever thereto belonging, the Clergy in their Convocation is to order and settle them, having first obtained leave under Our Broad Seal so to do: and We approving their said Ordinances and Constitutions, providing that none be made contrary to the Laws and Customs of the Land.

That out of Our Princely Care that the Churchmen may do the Work which is proper unto them, the Bishops and Clergy, from time to time in Convocation, upon their humble Desire, shall have Licence under Our Broad Seal to deliberate of, and to do all such Things, as, being made plain by them, and assented to by Us, shall concern the settled continuance of the Doctrine and Discipline of the Church of England now established; from which We will not endure any varying or departing in the least Degree.

That for the present, though some differences have been ill raised, yet We take comfort in this, that all Clergymen within Our Realm have always most willingly subscribed to the Articles established; which is an argument to Us, that they all agree in the true, usual, literal meaning of the said Articles; and that even in those curious points in which the present differences lie, men of all sorts take the Articles of the Church of England to be for them; which is an argument again, that none of them intend any desertion of the Articles established.

That therefore in these both curious and unhappy differences, which have for so many hundred years, in different times and places, exercised the Church of Christ, We will, that all further curious search be laid aside, and these disputes shut up in God's promises, as they be generally set forth to us in the holy Scriptures, and the general meaning of the Articles of the Church of England according to them. And that no man hereafter shall either print, or preach, to draw the Article aside any way, but shall submit to it in the plain and full meaning thereof: and shall not put his own sense or comment to be the meaning of the Article, but shall take it in the literal and grammatical sense.

That if any publick Reader in either of Our Universities, or any Head or Master of a College, or any other person respectively in either of them, shall affix any new sense to any Article, or shall publickly read, determine, or hold any publick Disputation, or suffer any such to be held either way, in either the Universities or Colleges respectively; or if any Divine in the Universities shall preach or print any thing either way, other than is already established in Convocation with Our Royal Assent; he, or they the Offenders, shall be liable to Our Displeasure, and the Church's censure in Our Commission Ecclesiastical, as well as any other: And We will see that there be due Execution upon them.

ARTICLES OF RELIGION.

I. Of Faith in the Holy Trinity[d].

Deut. vi. 4. 1 Cor. viii. 4. Jer. x. 10. 1 Thess. i. 9. Isa. xl. 28. Rom. xvi. 26.

THERE is but one living and true God[e], everlasting, without body, parts, or passions; of infinite power, wisdom, and goodness; the Maker, and Preserver of all things both visible and invisible. And in again ratified by King James I. in these words, which are commonly prefixed to them. Dr. Burn. It appears however from "papers, ascertaining the reign and time in which the Declaration before the thirty-nine Articles was first published," subjoined to Dr. Winchester's Dissertation on the seventeenth Article, that the Declaration was prefixed, not by King James, but by King Charles I. King James ratified the Articles, but it was by ratifying the Canons made 1603. Edit.

John iv. 24. Gen. xvii. 1. Matt. xix. 26. Luke i. 37. Ps. cxlvii. 5; cxlv. 9; cxxxvi. 1. Exod. xx. 11. Col. i. 16, 17. Neh. ix. 6.

[d] I. Of Faith in the Holy Trinity.] This first Article asserts the being and attributes of God, which are the foundation of all religion: and it farther declares, that the Godhead consists of three Persons; which, though it appears to have made a part of the original revelation to mankind, was so far forgotten or obscured, unity of this Godhead there be three Persons[f], of one substance, power, and eternity; the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghost.

Matt. xxviii. 19. 2 Cor. xiii. 14.

Rev. i. 4, 5. 1 John v. 7.

that it may be considered as one of the characteristick doctrines of the Gospel. Bp. Tomline.

[e] There is but one living and true God, &c.] The being of a God is manifest from the order of causes, which leads us back to one which is the original cause of all, which exists necessarily and of itself: from the idea or notion of a God, which implies something that necessarily exists, or must be of itself: from the consent of all civilized nations, very few, if any, having been so brutish as to deny it: from the creation of the world, and the order and usefulness of its several parts: from the force of conscience, which reproves us when we do ill, and commends us when we do well: from prophecies and miracles, which could not have been, if there had not been a God.

That there is "but one God," appears from 1 Cor. viii. 4, where St. Paul tells us, "That there is none other God but one." The same likewise appears from the very nature of God, who is a Being of infinite perfection: whereas, if there were two Gods, they might possibly clash and disagree, which would be an evidence of frailty, and therefore inconsistent with infinite perfection. And further: one God there must be: but, as one is sufficient, so, if there were more, neither this nor that would be necessary.

The attributes of "living and true" are ascribed to God. 1 Thess. i. 9: "Ye turned to God from idols, to serve the living and true God."

That He is "everlasting" is proved from that doxology of St. Paul, 1 Tim. i. 17: "Now unto the King eternal, immortal, invisible, the only wise God, be honour and glory for ever and ever. Amen." And reason tells us that He must be eternal, inasmuch as He is the first cause, which could not possibly be produced, either from any other cause, or from nothing. Now that, which is not produced by any other cause, exists of itself: and that, which exists of itself, must always exist.

That God is "without body," appears from John iv. 24: "God is a Spirit." I add, that a spiritual substance excels a bodily one: and therefore, if God were a bodily substance, angels and the souls of men would excel Him. Besides, all matter is of itself inactive, and void of motion, unless it be moved by something else: but every thing receives motion directly or indirectly from God, who is the first mover of all things.

That God is "without parts," or, according to the Latin Articles, "impartibilis," that is, "incapable of being divided into parts," follows from his being immaterial and spiritual. If he were a material and bodily substance, then, as He is infinite, He would fill all places in such a manner, that there would be no room for any other bodily substance.

That He is "without passions," or, according to the Latin Articles, "impassibilis," that is, "incapable of suffering," may be argued from Ps. cii. 26, 27, "They shall perish, but thou shalt endure: yea, all of them shall wax old as a garment: as a vesture shalt thou change them, and they shall be changed. But thou art the same, and thy years shall have no end." For the word "passion" in strictness of speech signifies suffering; and in this place it signifies God's reception of some impulse stronger than Himself, and which He cannot resist; as when a man is affected with joy, grief, anger, &c. But inasmuch as all things are of so frail a nature in comparison with God, no objects can have force enough to influence Him against his will.

The Scriptures indeed seem to attribute members to God, such as eyes and hands; as also passions, such as love, anger, hatred, &c.; of all of which, since He is the most simple essence, and is also immutable, and always infinitely happy, He is utterly incapable: and therefore those things are spoken by way of accommodation to the weakness of men, and not as suitably to the perfections of God.

God's "infinite power" is declared, Matt. xix. 26, "With God all things are possible."

His "infinite wisdom" appears from Ps. cxlvii. 5, "Great is our Lord and of great power: his understanding is infinite:" and from the admirable order and use of things: and, finally, from the various effects of divine Providence.

The "infinite goodness" of God may be proved from Luke xviii. 19, "None is good save one, that is, God;" by which is meant absolutely and infinitely good. For in a limited sense some men have been declared good: such as Joseph, the supposed father of our blessed Saviour; and the apostle Barnabas; and others. The goodness of God appears likewise from the creation and preservation of all things; but, above all, from the redemption of the world by our Lord Jesus Christ.

That God is "the Maker of all things, visible and invisible," is asserted Col. i. 16, "For by him were all things created that are in heaven and that are in earth, visible and invisible; whether they be thrones, or dominions, or principalities, or powers: all things were created by him and for him." Moreover, that the world is not eternal is manifest, from the arts, which in these later ages of it have been invented; from the countries, which of late have been discovered, and which were till then uncultivated; and from all the histories of it, the most ancient of which do not reach many ages back. It was therefore made. But that it was made by chance, considering the exact order, harmony, and beauty of it, is absurd and impossible. It had therefore a Maker. And who could that be but God?

That God is also "the Preserver of all things," is asserted Col. i. 17, "And he is before all things, and by him all things consist." Besides, inasmuch as nothing exists necessarily and of itself, but God; it follows that all things must and do depend on Him. Archdeacon Welchman, Veneer.

"It is to be observed," says Dr. Clarke, "that the Scripture, as it does not much insist upon proving to us the being of God, but rather always supposes that to be already known by the light of nature; so also, when it mentions any of the natural attributes of the divine essence, it does not usually enlarge upon the proof or explication of them, but generally makes mention of them occasionally only, and as presupposing them beforehand well known by man's reason." To which may be added, the tradition of the revelations to Adam and the early patriarchs, and the evidence from prophecies and miracles continually before the people to whom the Old Testament was immediately addressed. Bp. Tomline.

[f] And in unity of this Godhead there be three Persons, &c.] Though, as we have proved before, there is but one God, yet there are three Persons in the Godhead, as appears from Matt. xxviii. 19; 2 Cor. xiii. 14; 1 John v. 7. And that these three Persons are of one substance, power, and eternity is evident, because such attributes and divine honours are ascribed to them in Scripture, as belong not, and cannot be ascribed, to

II. Of the Word or Son of God, which was made very Man[g].

John i. 1. Heb i. 5—12. Rev. xxii. 13. THE Son, which is the Word of the Father, begotten from everlasting of the Father, the very and Rom. ix. 5. eternal God, and of one substance with the Father[h], took Man's nature[i] in the womb of the blessed Virgin, of her substance[j]: so that two whole and perfect Natures, that is to say, the Godhead and Manhood, were joined together in one Person[k], never to be divided, whereof is one any other being besides God. Archdeacon Welchman, Veneer.

Luke i. 31. Gal. iv. 4. Rev. i. 5, 6. 17, 18. Acts xx. 28.

Upon the subject of the doctrine asserted in this part of the Article, the reader is requested to refer to page 181, note r; page 53, notes r, s, t; page 55, note y; and page 51, note from Dean Vincent.

[g] II. Of the Word or Son of God, which was made very Man.] The Son, or second Person in the ever-blessed Trinity, is called the Word, John i. 1, "In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, and the Word was God." He was "begotten" indeed, or else He would not be a Son: but "from everlasting," or else He would not be God: and when we say, that He is "the very and eternal God, of one substance with the Father," that is, of one and the same Godhead with the Father, we mean that He is so, strictly and properly speaking, and not in a metaphorical or borrowed sense: but as the apostle says, "Christ, who is over all, God blessed for ever, Amen," Rom. ix. 5. Thus much is asserted in several places of Scripture: namely, Heb. i. 5, 6. 8. 10, 11; Rev. xxii. 13; Isa. xliv. 6.

That "the Son of God took man's nature in the womb of the blessed Virgin," appears from Luke i. 31, "And behold, thou shalt conceive in thy womb, and bring forth a Son, and shalt call his name Jesus;" and from Gal. iv. 4, "But when the fulness of time was come, God sent forth his Son, made of a woman, made under the law." For since it pleased God to promise, Gen. iii. 15, that "the seed of the woman should bruise the serpent's head;" it was necessary that He should be born of a virgin, that so He might not be the seed of man, as all other men are.

As these "two natures," the divine and human, were thus united, so were they not confounded: but, as the Article asserts, "two whole and perfect natures, the Godhead and Manhood, were joined together in one Person;" see Rev. i. 5, 6. 17, 18; of whom many things are spoken, which are proper to one of the natures only. Thus "God" is said to have shed "his blood," Acts xx. 28: and the "man" Christ Jesus is proposed as an object of "worship" to the "angels," Heb. i. 6. This manner of expression is called a communion of idioms. And the conjunction of the two natures is termed The Hypostatick Union. Concerning which Nestorius first, and then Eutyches, grievously erred: the former by dividing the Person, and the latter by confounding the two natures. An effectual stop was put to both those errors in four words by the Council of Chalcedon, which taught that Jesus Christ is one and the same in two natures, ἀσυγχύτως, ἀτρέπτως, ἀδιαιρέτως, ἀχωρίστως, that is, "without confusion," or "change" of natures, against Eutyches; and "without division" or "separation" of them, against Nestorius. Archdeacon Welchman, Veneer.

Concerning the doctrines here stated of the divinity of Christ, of his incarnation, and of the union of the two natures in his person, the reader is referred to page 291, note b; 371, z; 61, l; 56, 57, z, a; see also page 29, note t, parag. II.

[h] — eternal God, and of one substance with the Father,] If the Son or Word is truly God, He must be from all eternity, and must also be of the same substance with the Father, otherwise He could not be God: since a God, of another substance or of another duration, is a contradiction. Bp. Burnet. This expression answers to the Greek ὁμοούσιος, which was used by the ancients to denote the unity of essence between the Father and the Son, being grounded upon 1 John v. 7; and that of the Evangelist, "I and my Father are one," John x. 30. Which imports a unity of essence, and not of consent, as may be proved by our Saviour's own explication of his meaning, ver. 38; and by the sense the Jews understood Him in, as being a pretension to the divine nature, ver. 33. Dr. Nicholls.

[i] — took Man's nature &c.] There cannot be clearer proof of any matter of fact, than that our Saviour took upon Him human nature, and was truly man. The prophecies, which foretel the Messiah, do declare likewise that He was to be man. It was predicted as early as the fall of mankind, that "the seed of the woman should bruise the serpent's head," Gen. iii. 15. And in another prediction of the Messiah it is foretold, that "a Virgin shall conceive and bear a son," Isa. vii. 14. The angel, who notified his conception to the blessed Virgin, said, "She should conceive in her womb, and bring forth a Son," Luke i. 31. He was subject to all the properties and accidents, to which human nature is liable: He "grew," Luke ii. 40; and "increased in wisdom and stature," ver. 52; was "hungry," Matt. iv. 2, and "thirsty," John xix. 28: He "wept" over Jerusalem, Luke xix. 41; He "slept," Mark iv. 38; and "died," Matt. xxvii. 50. Dr. Nicholls.

[j] — in the womb of the blessed Virgin, of her substance:] This does not need any long or laboured proof, since the texts of Scripture are so express that nothing but wild extravagance can withstand them. But among the frantick humours that appeared at the Reformation, some, in opposition to the superstition of the church of Rome, studied to derogate, as much from the blessed Virgin on the one hand, as she had been over-exalted on the other: so they said, that Christ had only gone through her. But this impiety sunk so soon that it is needless to say any thing more to refute it. Bp. Burnet.

In order that the Reformation however might receive no prejudice from these monstrous opinions, it was by the compilers of the Articles thought advisable to make an express profession of our holding the true catholick doctrine in this particular. Dr. Nicholls.

[k] — in one Person,] The design of the definition that was made by the Church, concerning Christ's having "one Person," was chiefly to distinguish the nature of the indwelling of the Godhead in Him, from all prophetical inspirations. The Mosaical degree of prophecy was in many respects superior to that of all the subsequent prophets: yet the difference is stated between Christ and Moses in terms that impart things quite of another nature; the one being mentioned as a servant, the other as the Son that built the house. It is not said that God appeared to Christ, or that He spoke to Him: but God was ever with Him and in Him; and, while "the Word was made flesh," yet still "his Christ, very God, and very Man; who truly suffered[l], was crucified, dead and buried, to reconcile his Father to us[m], and to be a sacrifice, not only for original guilt[n], but also for actual sins of men.

Matt. xxvii; xx. 28. 1 Tim. ii. 6. Eph. ii. 16—18.

Isa liii 4—6. 1 John ii 2. 2 Cor. v. 21.

glory was as the glory of the only-begotten Son of God," John i. 14. The glory, that Isaiah saw, was called "his glory:" and on the other hand God is said to have "purchased his church with his own blood." The doctrine here asserted is plain in the Scriptures, that, though the human nature in Christ acted still according to its proper character, and had a peculiar will; yet there was such a constant presence, indwelling, and actuation on it from the eternal Word, as did constitute both human and divine nature "one Person." As these are thus so intirely united, so they are never to be separated. Christ is now exalted to the highest degree of glory and honour: and the characters of "blessing, honour, and glory," are represented in St. John's visions, as offered "to the Lamb for ever and ever," Rev. v. 13. Bp. Burnet.

[l] — who truly suffered, &c.] That the Messiah was to suffer was foretold in a variety of passages in the Old Testament. "It was written of the Son of man, that he must suffer many things," Mark ix. 12: and "the Spirit of God, which was in the prophets, testified beforehand the sufferings of Christ," 1 Pet. i. 11. He was to be "a man of sorrows and acquainted with grief; oppressed and afflicted; wounded and bruised; brought to the slaughter, and cut off out of the land of the living," Isa. liii. The suffering of Christ was also typified in the sacrifices of the law, and particularly in the passover. Our Saviour Himself forewarned his disciples of his passion; and St. Paul preached to the Thessalonians, that "the Christ must needs have suffered," Acts xvii. 3. If hunger and thirst, if revilings and contempt, if sorrows and agonies, if stripes and buffetings, if condemnation and crucifixion, be sufferings; Jesus suffered: if the infirmities of our nature, if the weight of our sins, if the malice of man, if the machinations of Satan, if the hand of God could make Him suffer; our Saviour suffered: if the annals of times, if the writings of his apostles, if the death of his martyrs, if the confession of the Gentiles, if the scoffs of the Jews, be testimonies; Jesus suffered: "and therefore those things, which God before had shewed by the mouth of all his prophets, that Christ should suffer, he hath fulfilled," Acts iii. 18. Bp. Tomline, Bp. Pearson.

The matter of fact concerning the death of Christ is denied by no Christian: the Jews do all acknowledge it: the first enemies to Christianity did all believe this, and reproached his followers with it. This was that which all Christians gloried in and avowed: so that no question was made of his death, except by a small number called Docetæ, who were not esteemed Christians, till Mahomet denied it in his Alcoran, who pretends that He was withdrawn, and that a Jew was crucified in his stead. But this corruption of the Gospel came too late afterwards, to have any shadow of credit due to it; nor was there any sort of proof offered to support it. So this doctrine concerning the death of Christ is to be received as an unquestionable truth. There is no part of the Gospel writ with so copious a particularity, as the history of his sufferings and death; as there was indeed no part of the Gospel so important as this. Bp. Burnet.

[m] — to reconcile his Father to us, &c.] Or, according to the Scripture's usual manner of speaking, to reconcile us to his Father. Whether this be expressed after the one way or the other, it comes to the same thing. This is certain, that Christ by his death has procured for us the divine favour. For He, lest mankind, who upon account of their sins were obnoxious to the divine justice, should utterly perish, offered Himself as an expiatory sacrifice to God: whence He is said, to "give his life a ransom for many," Matt. xx. 28; and 1 Tim. ii. 6, it is said, that "he gave himself a ransom for all." See also Eph. ii. 16—18, "That he might reconcile both," namely, Jews and Gentiles, "unto God in one body by the cross, having slain the enmity thereby: he came, and preached peace to you which were afar off, and to them that were nigh. For through him we have an access by one Spirit unto the Father." The prophet Isaiah speaking of Him says, "Surely he hath borne our griefs, and carried our sorrows; yet we did esteem him stricken, smitten of God, and afflicted. But he was wounded for our transgressions, he was bruised for our iniquities, the chastisement of our peace was upon him, and with his stripes we are healed. All we, like sheep, have gone astray: we have turned every one to his own way, and the Lord hath laid on him the iniquity of us all," Isa. liii. 4—6. St. John in his first Epistle, ii. 2, tells us, that Jesus Christ "is the propitiation for our sins: and not for our sins only, but also for the sins of the whole world:" for "he hath made him to be sin for us," saith St. Paul, "who knew no sin, that we might be made the righteousness of God in him," 2 Cor. v. 21. From all which it plainly follows, that our blessed Saviour was a sacrifice for all the sins of men, both original and actual. Archdeacon Welchman, Veneer.

In a great variety of passages, that lie spread in all the parts of the New Testament, it is as plain as words can make any thing, that the death of Christ is proposed to us, as our sacrifice and reconciliation, our atonement and redemption. So that it is not possible for any man who considers all this, to imagine that Christ's death was only a confirmation of his Gospel, a pattern of a holy and patient suffering of death, and a necessary preparation to his resurrection, by which He gave us a clear proof of his resurrection, and by consequence of eternal life, as by his doctrine He had shewed us the way to it. By this all the high commendations of his death amount only to this, that He by dying has given a vast credit and authority to his Gospel, which was the powerfullest mean possible to redeem us from sin, and to reconcile us to God. But this is so contrary to the whole design of the New Testament, and to the true import of that great variety of phrases, in which this matter is set out; that, at this rate of expounding Scripture, we can never know what we may build upon, especially when the great importance of this thing, and of our having right notions concerning it, is well considered: nor is it possible for us to preserve any reverence for the New Testament or the writers of it, so far as to think them even honest men, not to say inspired men, if we can imagine that in so sacred and important a matter they could exceed so much, as to represent that to be our sacrifice which is not truly so. Bp. Burnet.

[n] — not only for original guilt, &c.] By "original guilt" is meant that guilt, which was incurred by the disobedience of Adam, and transmitted to all his posterity: and by "actual sins of men" are meant those sins which individuals actually commit, for "there is no man that sinneth not," 1 Kings viii. 46. Bp. Tomline.

III. Of the going down of Christ into Hell[o].

Acts ii. 27. 31.

AS Christ died for us, and was buried, so also is it to be believed, that he went down into Hell.

IV. Of the Resurrection of Christ[p].

Acts i. 3. John xx. 27. Luke xxiv. 39. John xx. 17. Luke xxiv. 51. Acts i. 10, 11.

CHRIST did truly rise again[q] from death, and took again his body, with flesh, bones, and all things appertaining to the perfection of Man's nature; wherewith he ascended into Heaven, and there sitteth, until he return to judge all Men at the last day.

Heb. i. 3; viii. 1. John xiv. 3. 28. Acts iii. 21. 1 Thess. iv. 16. Acts xvii. 31. Matt. xxv. 31, 32. 2 Cor. v 10. 2 Pet. iii. 10.

V. Of the Holy Ghost[r].

John xv. 26. Gal. iv. 6. 1 Pet. i. 11.

THE Holy Ghost, proceeding from the Father and the Son, is of one substance, majesty, and

---

From what has been said it is plain, that Christ's death was our sacrifice: the meaning of which is, that God, intending to reconcile the world to Himself, and to encourage sinners to repent and turn to Him, thought fit to offer the pardon of sin, together with the other blessings of the Gospel, in such a way as should demonstrate both the guilt of sin, and his hatred of it; and yet with that, his love of sinners, and his compassion towards them. Bp. Burnet.

It should however be remembered here, that this reconciliation, which is made by the death of Christ between God and man, is not absolute and without conditions. He has established the covenant, and has performed all that was incumbent on Him, as both the priest and the sacrifice, to do and to suffer: and He offers this to the world, that it may be closed with by them on the terms, on which it is proposed: and, if they do not accept of it upon these terms, and perform what is injoined them, they can have no share in it. Bp. Burnet.

[o] III. Of the going down of Christ into Hell.] Concerning the doctrine of this Article, the reader is referred to page 30, note n.

Though there is unquestionable authority for the doctrine of this Article, Christ's descent into hell or hades is not mentioned in the abstracts of Christian faith which the early fathers have left us: nor is it in any of those numerous creeds which were composed by the councils of the fourth century, except that which was agreed to at Arminì in the year 359. In the beginning of the fifth century the church at Aquileia used the correspondiog expression in Latin. In the sixth century the Article was admitted into many creeds, and it was confirmed by the fourth council of Toledo, in 633. It seems probable, that the doctrine was first introduced into creeds for the purpose of declaring the actual separation of Christ's soul and body, in opposition to those who asserted that the crucifixion produced only a trance or deliquium, and that Christ did not really suffer death. Bp. Tomline. This Article is added, because it is a part of the Creed. Dr. Nicholls.

[p] IV. Of the Resurrection of Christ.] There are four branches of this Article: the first is concerning the truth of Christ's resurrection; the second concerning the completeness of it; the third concerning his ascension and continuance in heaven; and the fourth is concerning his returning to judge all men at the last day. These things are all so expressly affirmed in the Bible, and that in so particular a manner, that, if the authority of that book be once proved, little doubting will remain concerning them. Bp. Burnet.

[q] Christ did truly rise again &c.] We have the authority of St. Peter for affirming, that the resurrection of Christ was foretold by the royal Psalmist; see Acts ii. 29. And our Saviour Himself repeatedly foretold the same, Matt. xvii. 23; xx. 18, &c.; speaking of it to the Jews as a clear demonstration which would be afforded of his divine mission, John ii. 18—21. It is reasonable to expect, that the evidence of the truth of this great event, the importance of which was thus solemnly announced, should be proportionably strong and unequivocal: and upon inquiry we find that the resurrection of Christ is supported by the clearest and most satisfactory proofs. The ascension of Christ was also foretold by David, Ps. lxviii. 18, compare Eph. iv. 8, 9; and by our Saviour Himself, John xx. 17. His sitting at the right hand of God also is foretold in the Old Testament, as well as asserted in the New. Ps. cx. 1; Matt. xxii. 42—44; Heb. i. 13; Luke xxii. 69. Bp. Tomline.

When we say that "Christ did truly rise again from death," we mean that He rose again with that very body which was crucified and buried. The doctrine of his resurrection in general appears from Matt. xxviii. 6; "He is not here, for he is risen, as he said: Come, see the place where the Lord lay." And the reasoning of our blessed Saviour with his disciples, Luke xxiv. 39, "Behold my hands and my feet, that it is I myself; handle me and see, for a spirit hath not flesh and bones, as ye see me have;" proves, that when our Lord rose from the dead he "took again his body, with flesh and bones." His rising with "all things belonging to the perfection of human nature" appears from Acts x. 41, where St. Peter saith, that he and his fellow disciples "did eat and drink with him after he rose from the dead."

As we believe that our blessed Lord rose from the dead, as the Article asserts, so do we believe, that He ascended in like manner into heaven: and by this we mean, that He ascended into the highest heaven, and sitteth at the right hand of God to make intercession for us. "So then, after the Lord had spoken unto them, he was received up into heaven, and sat at the right hand of God," saith St. Mark, xvi. 19.

Our Lord's remaining in heaven till the day of judgment appears from Acts iii. 20, 21, "And he shall send Jesus Christ, which before was preached unto you; whom the heavens must receive until the times of restitution of all things, which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets, since the world began." And from Acts x. 42, where St. Peter says, "And he commanded us to preach unto the people, and to testify, that it is he, which was ordained of God to be the Judge of quick and dead." The time, when this is to be, is what this Article and all Christians call "the last day:" for the years and days, which this world is to endure, are fixed by God, though neither men nor angels can tell, when they shall receive their period or end. When this time is past, our Lord shall return from heaven to judge both the quick and the dead, and shall render to every man according to his works. Veneer.

Concerning the particulars here asserted, the reader is referred also to page 154, t; 158, c; and 171, z.

[r] V. Of the Holy Ghost.] In this Article there are Acts v. 3, 4. 1 Cor. iii. 16, 17; vi. 19.

glory, with the Father and the Son, very and eternal God.

VI. Of the Sufficiency of the holy Scriptures for salvation[s].

2 Tim. iii. 15—17. John xx. 31. Luke i. 4.

HOLY Scripture containeth all things necessary to salvation[t]: so that whatsoever is not read therein, nor may be proved thereby[u], is not to be required of any man, that it should be believed as an Article of the Faith, or be thought requisite or necessary to salvation. In the name of the holy Scripture

Matt. xv. 6, 9. Gal. i. 8, 9 Mark vii. 7.

---

two propositions: first, that the Holy Ghost proceeds both from the Father and the Son; secondly, that He is one of substance, majesty, and glory with the Father and the Son, very and eternal God. The first of these appears partly from John xv. 26, "But when the Comforter is come, whom I will send unto you from the Father, even the Spirit of truth, which proceedeth from the Father, he shall testify of me:" and partly from 1 Pet. i. 11, "Searching what or what manner of time the Spirit of Christ, which was in them, did signify, when it testified beforehand the sufferings of Christ, and the glory which should follow." The first of these texts proves the first branch of the proposition; the second makes good the latter.

The second proposition is proved from Acts v. 3, 4, "But Peter said, Ananias, why hath Satan filled thine heart to lie unto the Holy Ghost? Thou hast not lied unto men, but unto God." But to pursue this argument a little farther, it is necessary to lay down these two assertions: first, that the Holy Ghost is a Person, distinct from the Father and the Son; secondly, that He is very and eternal God. And, first, inasmuch as such operations are ascribed to the Holy Ghost, as cannot be ascribed but to a Person distinct from the Father and the Son; it follows that He is a Person distinct from both. Thus, Rom. viii. 27, He is said to "make intercession for the saints;" and, John xiv. 26, to "come, as sent by the Father, in the name of Christ." And, secondly, inasmuch as those things are ascribed to Him, which cannot be ascribed to any other but God: such as to have the bodies of the faithful for his temples, "Know ye not, that ye are the temple of God, and that the Spirit of God dwelleth in you? If any man defile the temple of God, him shall God destroy; for the temple of God is holy, which temple ye are," 1 Cor. iii. 16, 17; and again, vi. 19, "What? know ye not that your body is the temple of the Holy Ghost which is in you?" and to have the whole church dedicated to Him, as well as to the Father and the Son, as our blessed Lord ordered that it should, Matt. xxviii. 19, "Go ye therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost;" it follows that He is very and eternal God, equal to the Father and the Son, and is, together with them, to be adored and prayed to. Veneer.

In farther proof of the doctrine of this Article, as relating to the personality, the divinity, and the procession of the Holy Ghost, the reader is referred to page 175, note h; 371, a; and 292, e.

[s] VI. Of the Sufficiency of the holy Scriptures for salvation.] We have seen that the five first Articles relate to the foundation of all religion, the existence of a God, and to the characteristick doctrines of the Christian religion, concerning the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghost. The next point to be settled is the rule of our faith and practice: this is a subject, upon which there is a material difference between the church of Rome and the Church of England; and to that difference this Article is directed.

The divine inspiration of the holy Scriptures, and consequently their truth and obligation, are allowed both by papists and by the members of our Church: but the papists assert, that the books of the New Testament do not contain the whole rule of a Christian's faith and practice; they believe that the apostles orally delivered many doctrines and precepts of the highest importance to our eternal happiness, which are not contained in the New Testament; and they further believe, that these doctrines and precepts have been faithfully transmitted to the present times, and that there is an infallible authority, vested by Christ in his church, to judge of their correctness, and to distinguish those which are true from those which are false. On the contrary we of the Church of England affirm, that the Scriptures contain a complete rule of faith and practice; and we reject every doctrine and precept, as essential to salvation, or to be obeyed as divine, which is not supported by their authority. Bp. Tomline.

[t] Holy Scripture containeth all things necessary to salvation:] For the holy Scripture containeth all things which relate to faith or practice, beyond which God requires nothing of us. See 2 Tim. iii. 15—17. Archdeacon Welchman.

That the holy Scriptures are a complete rule of faith is proved, first, by the authority of the holy Scriptures. And this is so plainly laid down therein, that nothing, but a strange prejudice and resolution to support a cause, could contradict it. Those words of St. Paul are very full to this purpose: "All Scripture is given by inspiration of God, and is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness, that the man of God may be perfect, throughly furnished unto all good works," 2 Tim. iii. 16, 17. Moses expressly forbids, "That any one should add unto the word, that I command you, neither shall ye diminish ought from it," Deut. iv. 2. "Whatsoever I command unto you, observe and do it: thou shalt not add thereunto, nor diminish from it," Deut. xii. 32. The same prohibition is given out in the New Testament. For St. John, closing his book of Revelation, and with that our Christian canon, so that it may not improbably seem to bear relation to the whole New Testament, forbids any addition or diminution, with a curse annexed to it, "If any man shall add unto these things, God shall add unto him the plagues that are written in this book; and if any man shall take away from the words of the book of this prophecy, God shall take away his part out of the book of life, and out of the holy city, and from the things which are written in this book," Rev. xxii. 18, 19. But the substance of this had been before declared by St. Paul: "Though we, or an angel from heaven, preach any other Gospel unto you than that which we have preached unto you, let him be accursed," Gal. i. 8. And as for the endeavour of some to piece out God's written word by tradition, our Saviour warns us against this, when He blames the Pharisees for it; namely, in "teaching for doctrines the commandments of men," Matt. xv. 9; and "making the commandment of God of none effect by their traditions," ver. 3. 6.

Secondly, by reason, drawn from the nature of the thing, and the whole order of the gracious dispensation we do understand those canonical Books[x] of the Old and New Testament, of whose authority was never any doubt in the Church[y].

nf the Gospel, with which God hath been pleased to bless mankind, this is no more than we might expect. For our Saviour having first made known the Gospel to the world by his own preaching and suffering, and propagated it throughout the several parts thereof by the preaching of his apostles, in order to be conveyed down to successive generations; this could not well be effected without a written word. For to have delivered down the Gospel truths by word of mouth, or oral tradition, would have made it subject to as many errors, as the prejudices, fancies, and mistakes of the several relaters could have given it. Now since God has been pleased to make use of this method to convey these truths which He has revealed unto us, it is but reasonable to think, that all the truths, which He has judged necessary for our salvation, and which He has required of us to believe, are contained in this written word. For why God should leave some of the Gospel truths to be conveyed in a purer, and others in a more corrupt channel, some by Scripture, and others by tradition, is unaccountable: why, since He designed the Scripture to be in some measure the rule of faith, He should not at the same time render it a complete one: why this divine law of God must be eked out by human traditions, which have been uncertain in the best times, and pernicious in some, and which strangely vary according to different countries and ages. These notions highly reflect upon the divine wisdom and goodness; and are taken up only to defend the corrupt practices of the Romish church, which they are resolved to maintain at any rate, rather than to part with them.

The like reasons are alleged by the ancient divines of the church. Dr. Nicholls.

The ancient fathers always speak of the Scriptures as containing a complete rule of faith and practice; and appeal to them, and to them only, in support of the doctrines which they advance. Bp. Tomline.

[u] — so that whatsoever is not read therein, nor may be proved thereby, &c.] These words likewise are added in opposition to the Roman church, which allows articles of faith to be founded on tradition: but we on the contrary assert, that all doctrines of faith and life, and whatsoever is taught in the Church as a divine doctrine, ought to be founded upon the holy Scriptures. Dr. Nicholls.

Since He only has a right to prescribe the conditions of salvation, who has the sole power of conferring it; it does not belong to man to command or teach any other things as necessary to salvation, than what God Himself hath commanded and taught in the Scriptures, and what He hath declared to be sufficient for the end. See Matt. xv. 9; Gal. i. 8, 9. Archdeacon Welchman.

If this be our rule, our intire and only rule, then such doctrines, as are not in it, ought to be rejected: and any church that adds to the Christian religion is erroneous for making such additions, and becomes tyrannical if she imposes them upon all her members, and requires positive declarations, subscriptions, and oaths concerning them. In so doing she forces such as cannot have communion with her, but by affirming what they believe to be false, to withdraw from that which cannot be had without departing from the truth. So all the additions of the five sacraments; of the invocation of angels and saints; of the worshipping of images, crosses, and relicks; of the corporal presence in the eucharist; of the sacrifice offered in it for the dead as well as for the living, together with the adoration offered to it, with a great many more; are certainly errors, unless they can be proved from Scripture: and they are intolerable errors, if, as the Scripture is express in opposition to them, so they defile the worship of Christians with idolatry: and they become yet most intolerable, if they are imposed upon all that are in that communion; and if creeds or oaths, in which they are affirmed, are required of all in their communion. Here is the main ground of justifying our forming ourselves into a distinct body from the Roman church, and therefore it is well to be considered. But the further discussing of it will come properly in, when other particulars come to be examined. Bp. Burnet.

[x] — In the name of the holy Scripture we do understand those canonical Books &c.] By a canonical book of Scripture is meant a book, which, being written by divine inspiration, is to be received by us as a part of the canon, or rule, of Christian faith and practice. Dr. Bennet.

The canon of the New Testament, as we now have it, is fully proved from the quotations out of the books of the New Testament, by the writers of the first and second centuries, such as Clemens, Ignatius, Justin, Irenæus, and others. Next to these authorities we appeal to the catalogues of the books of the New Testament, that are given us in the third and fourth centuries, by Origen, a man of great industry, who had examined the state of many churches; by St. Athanasius; by the councils of Laodicea and Carthage; and after these we have a constant succession of testimonies, which deliver these as the canon universally received. Add to these things, first, that the books of the New Testament were read in all their churches, and at all their assemblies, so that this was a point in which it was not easy for men to mistake. Secondly, that this was so near the fountain, that the originals themselves of the apostles were no doubt so long preserved. Thirdly, that both the Jews, as appears from Justin Martyr, and the Gentiles, as appears by Celsus, knew that these were the books, in which the faith of the Christians was contained. Fourthly, that some question was made touching some of them, because there was not that clear or general knowledge concerning them, that there was concerning the others: yet upon fuller inquiry all acquiesced in them. Thus the canon of the New Testament is fixed upon clear and sure grounds.

Thence, without any further proof, we may be convinced of the canon of the Old Testament. Christ does frequently cite Moses and the prophets; He appeals to them; and, though He charged the Jews at that time, chiefly their teachers and rulers, with many disorders and faults, yet He never once so much as insinuated, that they had corrupted their law, or other sacred books; which, if true, had been the greatest of all those abuses that they had put upon the people. Our Saviour cited their books according to the translation that was then in credit and common use amongst them. When one asked Him which was the great commandment, He answered, "How readest thou?" And He proved the chief things relating to Himself, his death and resurrection, from the prophecies, that had gone before, which ought to have been fulfilled in Him. He also cites the Old Testament by a threefold division of the "Law of Moses, the Prophets, and the Psalms," Luke xxiv. 44, according to the three orders of books, into which the Jews had divided it; the Psalms, which

Of the Names and Number of the Canonical BOOKS.

GENESIS,
Exodus,
Leviticus, Numbers,
Deuteronomy,
Joshua,
Judges,
Ruth,
The First Book of Samuel,
The Second Book of Samuel,
The First Book of Kings,
The Second Book of Kings,
The First Book of Chronicles,
The Second Book of Chronicles,
The First Book of Esdras,
The Second Book of Esdras[z],
The Book of Esther,
The Book of Job,
The Psalms,
The Proverbs,
Ecclesiastes, or Preacher,
Cantica, or Songs of Solomon,
Four Prophets the greater,
Twelve Prophets the less.

And the other Books (as Hierome saith[a]) the Church doth read for example of life, and instruction of manners; but yet doth it not apply them to establish any doctrine[b]; such are these following:

---

was the first among "the holy writings," as they were called, being set for that whole volume. St. Paul says, that "to the Jews were committed the oracles of God," Rom. iii. 2: he reckons that among the chief of their privileges, but he never blames them for being unfaithful in their trust: and it is certain that the Jews have not corrupted the chief of those passages, that are urged against them to prove Jesus to have been the Christ. So that the Old Testament, at least the translation of the Seventy interpreters, which was in common use and in high esteem among the Jews in our Saviour's time, was, as to the main, faithful and uncorrupted. This might be further urged from what St. Paul says concerning those Scriptures, which Timothy had learned of a child: these could be no other than the books of the Old Testament. Thus, if the writings of the New Testament are acknowledged to be of divine authority, the full testimony that they give to the books of the Old Testament does sufficiently prove their authority and genuineness likewise. Bp. Burnet.

[y] — of whose authority was never any doubt in the Church.] Namely, in the catholick or universal church. For some particular churches did for some time doubt of a few of them: namely, the Epistle to the Hebrews; the Epistles of St. James and St. Jude; the second and third Epistles of St. John; and the Revelation. Archdeacon Welchman.

This part of the Article was manifestly penned in opposition to the papists, particularly with respect to their then late determination at the council of Trent, which received into the canon those books which we reject as apocryphal. Now the reason of our rejecting them is, because they were not received as canonical by the ancient church, whereas the ancient church did unanimously receive those which we do now receive. I do not say, that there never was a man, especially among the hereticks, that doubted of, or even rejected, some of those that we receive. Nor do I say, that every book, which we receive, was from the beginning received by every church. But I say, that the main body of orthodox Christians did always receive those books which we receive, when once they became acquainted with them, and had opportunity of examining into their authority. Now the far greater part of these books were thus universally received in the first and second centuries: and others, which were at first suspected by some considerable bodies of Christians, who were not as yet acquainted with them, were, after examination made, received also by those very bodies of Christians, and never after either rejected or even suspected by them.

When therefore the Article asserts, that there never was any doubt in the Church of the authority of those books which we receive, and approve as canonical; it must be understood in a limited sense, not absolutely, but respectively. There have been doubts concerning some of them: but so few, so short, so small, so inconsiderable, that comparatively, or with respect to the greatness of the Church's extent, they are nothing and none at all.

In a word then, our Church doth in this proposition deliver the reason, why she receives some, and rejects others, of those books, which the papists acknowledge for their canon of Scripture. She receives those, the authority of which was, comparatively speaking, never doubted of; and she rejects those, the authority of which never was acknowledged by her predecessors in the faith. Dr. Bennet.

[z] The Second Book of Esdras,] In this enumeration of the books of the Old Testament, the books of Ezra and Nehemiah are called the first and second books of Esdras, Esdras being the Septuagint translation of the Hebrew word Ezra. Ezra and Nehemiah were formerly joined in one book: and, when they were separated, the book of Nehemiah, being considered as a continuation of the book of Ezra, was called by his name. Bp. Tomline.

In our old English Bibles Nehemiah goes under the name of the second book of Esdras. Dr. Bennet.

[a] And the other Books (as Hierome saith) &c.] St. Jerome expressly saith, what is quoted from him, of the church in his days. His words are these. "As therefore the church readeth indeed the books of Judith, Tobit, and the Maccabees, but doth not receive them among the canonical Scriptures; so also she may read these two books," speaking of Ecclesiasticus and the Book of Wisdom, both which are apocryphal, "for the edification of the people, not to confirm the authority of the Church's doctrines." Pref. to the Proverbs, &c. Dr. Bennet. The words in the Article are repeated by St. Jerome in several of his prefaces. Bp. Burnet.

[b] — but yet doth it not apply them to establish any doctrine;] The chief reason, that presses us Christians to acknowledge the Old Testament, is the testimony that Christ and his apostles gave to those books, as they were then received by the Jewish church, to whom "were committed the oracles of God." Now it is not so much as pretended, that ever these books were received among the Jews, or were so much as known to them. None of the writers of the New Testament cite or mention them: neither Philo nor Josephus speaks of them. Josephus on the contrary says, they had only twenty-two books that deserved belief; but that those, which were written after the time of Artaxerxes, were not of equal credit with the rest: and that

The Third Book of Esdras,
The Fourth Book of Esdras,
The Book of Tobias,
The Book of Judith,
The rest of the Book of Esther,
The Book of Wisdom,
Jesus the Son of Sirach,
Baruch the Prophet,
The Song of the Three Children,
The Story of Susanna,
Of Bel and the Dragon,
The Prayer of Manasses,
The First Book of Maccabees,
The Second Book of Maccabees.

All the Books of the New Testament, as they are commonly received, we do receive, and account them Canonical.

VII. Of the Old Testament[c].

THE Old Testament is not contrary to the New[d]: for both in Matt. v. 17, 18. John v 39. 46. Acts xviii. 28.

in that period they had no prophets at all. The Christian church was for some ages an utter stranger to those books. Bp. Burnet.

There is no authority, internal or external, for admitting the books, commonly called apocryphal, into the sacred canon: they contain no prophecy or other authentick mark of inspiration; they were all written at times subsequent to the cessation of the prophetick spirit, but before the promulgation of the Gospel; they were not included in the Jewish canon, and therefore received no sanction from our Saviour; they are not cited or alluded to in any part of the New Testament; nor are they mentioned by any ecclesiastical writer of the three first centuries; and they are expressly rejected by Athanasius and Jerome in the fourth century. Though these two fathers, and several subsequent authors, speak of these books with respect, yet the same authority was never ascribed to them as to the Old and New Testament, till the council of Trent at its fourth session admitted them all, except the Prayer of Manasseh, and the third and fourth books of Esdras, which three books are not mentioned in the acts of the council, into their canon: and this still continues one of the many points of difference between the church of Rome and that of England. There is therefore no ground for applying the books of Apocrypha "to establish any doctrine:" but they are highly valuable as ancient writings, which throw considerable light upon the phraseology of Scripture, and upon the history and manners of the East; and, as they contain many noble sentiments and useful precepts, our Church, in imitation of the primitive church of Christ, "doth read them for example of life and instruction of manners." It does not however read all the books of the Apocrypha: it reads no part of either book of Esdras, or of the Maccabees, or of the book of Esther; nor does it read the Song of the Three Children, nor the Prayer of Manasseh. Bp. Tomline. Concerning this provision of the Church, see page 21, note l.

[c] VII. Of the Old Testament.] This article was directed against the opinion of certain persons, who thought that the Old Testament, after the promulgation of the New, was no longer of any use: and also against the Anabaptists and other enthusiasts, who, mistaking some expressions in the Epistles concerning justification by Christ without the works of the law, maintained that Christians were under no obligation to obey the moral precepts of the Mosaick dispensation. Bp. Tomline.

This Article is made up of the 6th and 19th of King Edward's Articles laid together: only the 19th of King Edward's has these words after "moral:" "Wherefore they are not to be heard which teach, that the holy Scriptures were given to none but to the weak; and brag continually of the Spirit, by which they do pretend that all, whatsoever they preach, is suggested to them; though manifestly contrary to the holy Scriptures." This whole Article relates to the Antinomians, as these last words were added by reason of the extravagance of some enthusiasts at that time: but, that madness having ceased in Queen Elizabeth's time, it seems it was thought that there was no more occasion for those words. Bp. Burnet.

[d] The Old Testament is not contrary to the New:] So far is the Old Testament from being contrary to the New, that they confirm one another, and convey authority to each other. "Think not that I am come to destroy the law and the prophets," saith our blessed Saviour; "I am not come to destroy, but to fulfil," Matt. v. 17, 18. It is said of St. Paul, Acts xviii. 28, that "he mightily convinced the Jews, and that publickly, shewing by the Scriptures that Jesus was the Christ." And in John v. 39, our Saviour says to the Jews, "Search the Scriptures: for in them ye think ye have eternal life, and they are they which testify of me." And again, ver. 46, "Had ye believed Moses, ye would have believed me: for he wrote of me."

As there is such an agreement between the Old and New Testament, so likewise do they both aim at the same end, that is, the eternal salvation of mankind by Jesus Christ. Thus, Gen. iii. 15, God saith to the serpent, "I will put enmity between thee and the woman, and between thy seed and her seed: it shall bruise thy head, and thou shalt bruise his heel." This is a promise of Christ to restore man from the miserable condition to which he had reduced himself by his disobedience, which is recorded in this chapter.

That the Old Testament concerns itself about the eternal salvation of mankind, may be proved beyond contradiction, from Dan. xii. 2, 3: where he speaks of a time, when "many of them that sleep in the dust of the earth shall awake, some to everlasting life, and some to shame and everlasting contempt. And they that be wise shall shine as the brightness of the firmament: and they that turn many to righteousness, as the stars for ever and ever."

As to the method of securing our salvation, the Old Testament gives us the law, and promises salvation to such as obey it. But inasmuch as the infirmity or weakness of human nature is so great, that no man can pay an exact obedience to the law; it follows that by the law no man is saved: and therefore the Old Testament points out Christ to us, as the only Author of our salvation, through the shadowing of ceremonies, types, and prophecies; and the New Testament shews Him to us plainly, as appears from Rom. iii. 21, "But now the righteousness of God without the law is manifested, being witnessed by the law and the prophets;" and from chap. xvi. 26, "But now is made manifest, and by the Scriptures of the prophets, according to the commandment of the everlasting God, made known to all nations for the obedience of faith;" and from Gal. iii. 24, "Wherefore the law was our schoolmaster to bring us unto Christ, that we might be justified by faith." Veneer.

There is not only the most perfect harmony and con-

the Old and New Testament ever-
Gen. iii. 15; xii. 1—3. Rom. iii. 21; xvi. 25, 26. lasting life is offered to Mankind by Christ, who is the only Mediator[e] between God and Man, being both God and Man. Wherefore they are not to be heard, which feign[f]
Gal. iii. 24. 1 Tim. ii. 5. 1 John ii. 1.

sistency, but the closest connexion and mutual dependence, between the Old and New Testaments: they are parts of the same system; they explain and confirm each other. The great plan of universal redemption, announced and typified in the one, is perfected and completed in the other: it was declared to Adam; it was promised to the patriarchs; it was typified by the law; it was predicted by the prophets; it was fulfilled in Christ. It was the eternal decree of God: it was gradually carried on through a long succession of ages, according to the dictates of his unerring wisdom; and was finally executed in his own good time. "Known unto God are all his works from the beginning," Acts xv. 18. "With him a thousand years are as one day," 2 Pet. iii. 8. "In him there is no variableness, or shadow of turning," James i. 17. Bp. Tomline.

See also the note from Hooker, page 26, note d.

[e] —who is the only Mediator &c.] This appears from 1 Tim. ii. 5, "For there is one God, and one Mediator between God and men, the man Christ Jesus." When we call Him a Mediator, we call Him so, not only as He is our Redeemer, but also as He is our Intercessor. "For, if any man sin, we have an advocate with the Father, Jesus Christ the righteous," 1 John ii. 1. Archdeacon Welchman. It is to be remembered however, that by a mediator here the Church means, not barely an intercessor or transactor of business between two parties, in which sense Moses was a mediator between God and the Israelites with respect to the ceremonial law: but such a mediator, intercessor, and transactor, as can plead the merit of his own blood, offered up in man's stead, to reconcile an offended God to sinful man. In this sense Christ is the only Mediator between God and man, being both God and man. Dr. Bennet.

It has been already proved that Christ partook both of the divine and human nature: and St. Paul expressly says, "There is one Mediator &c." Christ is represented, both in the Old and New Testament, as the only Redeemer of mankind, as the only sacrifice for the sins of the whole world. His merits will extend to all, who lived before and after the promulgation of the Gospel. "As in Adam all die, so in Christ shall all be made alive," 1 Cor. xv. 22. "He is the Lamb which was slain from the foundation of the world," Rev. xiii. 8. Bp. Tomline.

[f] —Wherefore they are not to be heard, which feign &c.] That the old fathers looked for spiritual and eternal things, sufficiently appears from Heb. xi. 10. 14. 26. 35. Abraham "looked for a city, which hath foundations, whose builder and maker is God." "They who say such things declare plainly that they seek a country." "Esteeming the reproach of Christ greater riches than the treasures in Egypt: for he (Moses) had respect unto the recompense of the reward." "Others were tortured, not accepting deliverance, that they might obtain a better resurrection." Archdeacon Welchman.

It is true, that if we take the words of the covenant, which Moses made between God and the people of Israel, strictly and as they stand, they import only temporal blessings: that was a covenant with a body of men and with their posterity, as they were a people engaged to the obedience of that law. Now a national covenant could only be established in temporal promises of publick and visible blessings, and of a long continuance of them upon their obedience; and in threatenings of as signal judgments upon the violation of them: but under those general promises of what was to happen to them collectively, as they made up one nation, every single person among them might, and the good men among them did, gather the hopes of a future state. It is clear that Moses did all along suppose the being of God, the creation of the world, and the promise of the Messiah, as things fully known and carried down by tradition to his days: so it seems he did also suppose the knowledge of a future state, which was then generally believed by the Gentiles as well as the Jews; though they had only dark and confused notions about it. But when God was establishing a covenant with the Jewish nation, a main part of which was his giving them the land of Canaan for an inheritance, it was not necessary that eternal rewards or punishments should be then proposed to them: but from the tenor of the promises made to their forefathers, and from the general principles of natural religion, not yet quite extinguished among them, they might gather this, that under those carnal promises blessings of a higher nature were to be understood. There are various passages in the Psalms, such as Ps. xvi. 11; xvii. 14, 15; xlix. 14, 15, which very clearly set forth David's belief, both of future happiness, and of the resurrection of his body. To which might be added some other passages in the Psalms; as Ps. lxxxiv. 11; lxxxvii. 6; xc. 17; xcvi. 13; Eccles. xi. 9; xii. 14; Isa. xxv. 8; xxvi. 19; and Dan. xii. 2; in all which it appears, that the holy men in that dispensation did understand, that under those promises in the books of Moses that seemed literally to belong to the land of Canaan, and other temporal blessings, there was a spiritual meaning hid, which it seems was conveyed down by that succession of prophets, that was among them, as the mystical sense of them. Bp. Burnet.

It appears from various authorities, that the Jews in general believed in a future state in the time of our Saviour: and, if they believed that they were to exist in another life, they would of course consider themselves capable of happiness or misery in that existence, and would place their hopes and confidence in the supreme Disposer of all events, whose interposition and mercy they had so often experienced, and who had given them such strong and repeated intimations of still greater favours and blessings. And though the Jews in general, at the time of our Saviour's appearance upon earth, had very erroneous notions of the kingdom, which the Messiah was to establish; yet we have no reason to think that those notions always prevailed, or that even then they looked for worldly grandeur and temporal benefits only: on the contrary it appears from an expression of our Saviour, that they had some expectation of happiness in another world: "Search the Scriptures," said He to the unbelieving Jews: "for in them ye think ye have eternal life," John v. 39. "But," says Bp. Burnet, "though the old fathers had a conveyance of the hope of eternal life made to them with a resurrection of their bodies, and a confidence in the mercy of God for pardoning the most heinous sins; yet it cannot be denied, that it was a light that shined in a dark place, till the day-star did arise; and that 'Christ brought life and immortality to light' by his Gospel, 2 Tim. i. 10, giving us fuller and clearer discoveries of it, both with relation to our souls and bodies; and that by Him also God has declared his righteousness for the remission of sins through the forbearance of that the Old Fathers did look only for transitory promises. Although the Law given from God by Moses[g], as touching Ceremonies and Rites, do not bind Christian men, nor the Civil precepts thereof ought of necessity to be received in any commonwealth; yet notwithstanding, no Christian man whatsoever is free from the obedience of the Commandments which are called Moral.

Heb. xi. 10. 14. 26. 35.

Jer. xxxi. 31, 32. Gal. iii. 25; v. 1. Col. ii. 16, 17. Heb. vii. 12. 28.

Matt. v. 19, &c. James ii. 8—11.

Rom. xiii. 9, 10.

VIII. Of the three Creeds[h].

THE three Creeds, Nicene Creed[l], Athanasius's Creed[k], and that which is commonly called the Apostles' Creed[l], ought thoroughly to be received[m] and believed: for they God, through the redemption that is in Christ Jesus, and through faith in his blood," Rom. iii. 24, 25. Bp. Tomline.

[g] — Although the Law given from God by Moses, &c.] In the remaining part of this Article, the precepts of the Old Testament are divided into those which do not oblige Christians, and those which do. First, it is said, that the ceremonies and rites of the law do not oblige Christians: and that the ceremonies of the Mosaical law were to be abolished, is foretold by God Himself, Jer. xxxi. 31, 32; and that they were in fact abolished by the Christian dispensation, appears from Gal. iii. 25. Secondly, it is said in this Article, that there is no necessity for receiving the civil precepts of the Mosaical law in any commonwealth; nor is it so much as hinted at in any part of Scripture, that there is a necessity for receiving them. On the contrary, St. Paul acknowledges the validity of the Roman laws, and boldly claims the benefit of them, Acts xxv. 10: he also commands the Romans to be subject to their governours, Rom. xiii; and St. Peter commands Christians in general to obey the government, under which they live, 1 Pet. ii. 13. But, thirdly, though the ceremonial and civil parts of the law do not oblige Christians, yet the moral part does: for so exquisitely fitted to the nature of man are the precepts of the moral law, that, if they were dissolved, the misery of mankind in this world would be beyond expression: it hath therefore pleased our blessed Saviour to ratify and confirm them afresh, Matt. v. 17—20; and that the moral law obligeth Christians, appears likewise from James ii. 8—11. Archdeacon Welchman, Veneer.

The Mosaick dispensation was preparatory to the Christian, and its principal objects were to separate the Jews from other nations, and to preserve in the world a knowledge of the one true God, which would otherwise have been utterly lost before the coming of the Messiah. It consisted of three parts: the worship of God, the civil polity of the Jews, and precepts for the direction of their moral conduct. The religious ceremonies and political regulations were blended together, and were calculated to keep the Jews united among themselves, and to prevent all intercourse with the rest of the world. The coming of the Messiah, by completing the use of these institutions, put an end to their obligation. The Apostles decreed that the ceremonial law was not binding upon those Gentiles, who embraced the Gospel; and that doctrine is fully explained and inforced in the Epistles to the Galatians and Hebrews: but the apostles and other Jewish Christians, although it was by no means required of the Gospel, seem to have continued in the observance of several injunctions of the Mosaick ritual, till the temple at Jerusalem was destroyed: since that time the Jews, although very numerous in different parts of the world, have no where existed as a nation; and the performance of their religious worship, as directed by the law of Moses, has been absolutely impossible. The form of civil government, established among the Jews, was adapted to their peculiar destination: but it was temporary even to them, and was obviously never intended for any other country or people. On the other hand the moral precepts, resting upon fixed and immutable principles, being founded in the essential difference between right and wrong, and being equally applicable to all persons at all times, will be binding upon every man as long as the world shall last. And this, which appears from the whole tenor of the New Testament, is expressly asserted by Christ Himself, in his sermon upon the mount: "Think not that I am come to destroy the law and the prophets: I am not come to destroy, but to fulfil: for verily I say unto you, till heaven and earth pass away, one jot or one tittle shall in no wise pass from the law till all be fulfilled," Matt. v. 18; in which declaration our Saviour evidently refers to the moral law: and all the moral precepts contained in the Old Testament, are not only separately confirmed and enforced in the New, but many of them are extended to a greater degree of strictness and purity in the same sermon of our Saviour. Bp. Tomline.

[h] VIII. Of the three Creeds.] By the word "Creed" is meant the substance of a Christian's belief. The Latin word for it is "Symbolum," which also signifies a watch word, or signal in war. For, as there are certain marks of distinction used in war, by which the soldiers on one side are distinguished from those of the other; so by these Creeds the orthodox or sound Christians of the catholick or universal church are distinguished from infidels and hereticks. Veneer, Archdeacon Welchman.

[l] — Nicene Creed,] See page 288, 289, notes t, u.

[k] — Athanasius's Creed,] See page 50, note n.

[l] — and that which is commonly called the Apostles' Creed,] See page 27, note g.

[m] — ought thoroughly to be received &c.] Great respect is due to all these Creeds, on account of their antiquity and general reception among Christians: but as they do not come immediately from Christ and his apostles, they have no other claim to our assent, than as they agree with the New Testament: and upon this ground our Church declares, that "they ought thoroughly to be received and believed, for they may be proved by most certain warrants of holy Scripture." Bp. Tomline. As many therefore as subscribe to this book of Articles, and yet do not believe that these Creeds are agreeable to the holy Scriptures, are guilty of lying abominably both to God and men. "Beloved, when I gave all diligence to write to you of the common salvation, it was needful for me to write unto you, and exhort you, that ye should earnestly contend for the faith, which was once delivered unto the saints," Jude 3. Archdeacon Welchman.

In proof of the contents of these Creeds, the reader is referred to the notes, pages 290—293; 50—59; 29—32; 370 371.

may be proved by most certain warrants of holy Scripture.

IX. Of Original or Birth-sin[n].

Rom. v. 14. ORIGINAL Sin standeth not in the following of Adam[o], (as the Pelagians[p] do vainly talk;) but Rom. v. 19. it is the fault and corruption of the nature of every man, that naturally is engendered of the offspring of Adam[q]; whereby man is very far gone from original righteousness[r], and is of his own nature inclined to evil, so that the flesh lusteth always contrary to the spirit; and therefore in every person[s] born into this world, Rom. vii. 18. Gen. viii. 21. Gal. v. 17.

[n] IX. Of Original or Birth-sin.] The rule of Christian faith being established in the last three Articles, our Church has thought it right in the next place to proceed to those points, which relate to Christians as individuals, and begins with "original or birth-sin." Bp. Tomline.

[o] Original Sin standeth not in the following of Adam, &c.] The denomination of "original sin," to denote the corruption or depravation of human nature, derived from the lapse of our first parents, is not of very early use in the Church. St. Austin is esteemed first to have used it. But, however, the doctrine is as early as Christianity itself; and the writers of the first centuries do express very clearly the thing itself, though under different names. For they call it "the old guilt," "the ancient wound," "the common curse," "the old sin," and the like. But after the Pelagian controversy was set on foot, the divines of the church generally used "originale peccatum," to signify the corruption of nature and proneness to sin, which was transmitted down from the first parents to their posterity; following therein St. Austin, who thought this the most significant expression to denote that depravation of nature, which the Pelagians denied.

Now that there is such an original warping of our nature which renders us unapt to good, and prone to sin; and for that reason places us, in our natural state, out of favour with God, is the constant doctrine of the holy Scriptures.

"The imagination of man's heart is evil from his youth," Gen. viii. 21. It is with relation to this general corruption of nature, which accompanies us from our birth, that Job asks the question, "Who can bring a clean thing out of an unclean?" Job xiv. 4. To the same purpose the Psalmist speaks, "Behold I was shapen in iniquity, and in sin did my mother conceive me," Ps. li. 5. Our Saviour says, "That which is born of the flesh is flesh," John iii. 6. The apostle tells us, that both Jews and Gentiles are equally born children of wrath: "were by nature the children of wrath even as others," Eph. ii. 3: "Wherefore, as by one man sin entered into the world, and death by sin: and so death passed upon all men, for that all have sinned," Rom. v. 12.

These express passages of holy Scripture, together with ordinary experience, occasioned the ancient writers of the church even before the Pelagian heresy sprang up, to assert in their writings this general depravation of human nature, and proneness of sin, caused by the fall of our first progenitors: as is manifest from many passages in the works of Ignatius, Justin Martyr, Tatian, Irenæus, Origen, Tertullian, Cyprian, Athanasius, Basil, Nazianzen, Chrysostom, and others of the earliest Christian writers. Dr. Nicholls.

Since infants, as well as adult persons, have need of a Mediator, it follows that there is something in them which stands in need of being remitted: and what can that be but sin? And since they are not capable of "following" or imitating any person, it is evident that the sin is the fault and corruption of nature. See Rom. v. 14: "Death reigned from Adam to Moses, even over them that had not sinned after the similitude of Adam's transgression." Archdeacon Welchman.

[p] — the Pelagians] Pelagius lived in the former part of the fifth century: he was a native of Wales, and his real name was Morgan, which in the Welch language signifies the same as Pelagius in Greek. He travelled into Italy, Africa, and Palestine. He denied original sin and the necessity of grace; and asserted that men might arrive at a state of impeccability in this life. These errors caused so much alarm and disturbance in the Christian world, that no less than thirty councils are said to have been held concerning them, between the years 412 and 430. His principal opponent was Augustine: and occasionally Jerome, Fulgentius, Prosper, and many others. Bp. Tomline.

[q] — that naturally is engendered of the offspring of Adam;] Christ is exempted from this guilt, as being supernaturally engendered. Archdeacon Welchman.

[r] — original righteousness,] By "original righteousness" the divines of the church understand a primitive rectitude of nature, which our first parents were formed with, and which if they had not sinned, would have been transmitted to all their posterity. Dr. Nicholls.

[s] — and therefore in every person &c.] These words imply, that every person who is born into the world, exclusive of the sins which he himself commits, or even if he does not live to commit sin, is, on account of the disobedience and guilt of Adam, subject to the wrath and punishment of God: and we have seen the same thing intimated in the second Article, where it is said, that Christ suffered "as a sacrifice not only for original guilt, but also for actual sins of men." This is the doctrine of Augustine and his followers, whose opinions upon this subject are thus stated by Bp. Burnet: "They believe that a covenant was made with all mankind in Adam as their first parent: that he was a person constituted by God to represent them all; and that the covenant was made with him, so that, if he had obeyed, all his posterity should have been happy through his obedience; but by his disobedience they were all to be esteemed to have sinned in him, his act being imputed and transferred to them all."

But many persons, although they reject the Pelagian system, do not accede to this opinion of Augustine concerning original guilt; as thinking it incompatible with the justice and goodness of God, to make the whole race of men liable to punishment for the sin of Adam, in which they had no concern: and the case, which appears the most repugnant to the divine attributes, is that of infants and idiots, who, being incapable of sinning, ought not to be subject to punishment. These men admit, that a mortal and corrupt nature is derived from Adam to all his descendants; and that this corruption is so strong, that no man ever lived to the age of maturity without sin; and consequently that every such person is liable to divine punishment, for the sins which he has himself actually committed, but not for Adam's sin. They therefore think, that infants and idiots die, because of Adam's sin; but that no farther punishment awaits them. Our being thus adjudged to death, and to all the miseries

Eph. ii. 3. Rom. v. 18. it deserveth God's wrath and damnation. And this infection of nature doth remain[t], yea in them that are regenerated; whereby the lust of the flesh[u], called in the Greek, Φρόνημα σαρκὸς, which some do expound the wisdom, some sensuality, some the affection, some the desire, of the flesh, is not subject to the Law of God. Rom. viii. 7. And although there is no condemnation for them that believe and are baptized, yet the Apostle doth confess, that concupiscence and lust hath of itself the nature of sin[v]. Rom. viii. 1. Rom. vii. 7.

---

that accompany mortality, they think may be well called "God's wrath and damnation," as temporal judgments are often so denominated in Scripture. In this sense they understand the words of the Article: and Bp. Burnet seems to think it possible, that the framers of it, although their own opinion coincided with that of Augustine, from a spirit of moderation designedly used such expressions, as would admit of another interpretation.

It must be acknowledged, that original guilt, considered in this point of view, is a difficult and abstruse subject: and, as the Scriptures do not inform us what were the full and precise effects of Adam's disobedience upon his posterity, it is perhaps scarcely to be expected that there should be an uniformity of opinion among divines upon that point. We may observe, however, that the difference between those who confine original guilt to a mere liability to death and sin, and those who extend it to a liability to punishment also, is not very material; since both sides admit that Christ died as a propitiation for all the sins of the whole world, whatever were the nature and character of those sins. In either case, the effects of Christ's obedience are commensurate with those of Adam's disobedience: and upon either principle, if we believe the Gospel and act conformably to its precepts, all our sins, whether original in Adam, or actual in ourselves, will be forgiven, and we shall be eternally happy: "As by the offence of one judgment came upon all men to condemnation; even so by the righteousness of one the free gift came upon all men unto justification of life," Rom. v. 18. Bp. Tomline.

[t] — And this infection of nature doth remain, &c.] Every man by sad experience, as well as by the apostle's assertion, Gal. v. 17, knows this to be too plain a truth to admit of its being doubted. Archdeacon Welchman.

It was a calumny, raised by the Pelagians against the orthodox, that they invalidated the efficacy of baptism by asserting that any sin or stain in the soul remained after it. Nevertheless the orthodox maintained, that the infection of nature does remain after baptism, and particularly, that these struggles and rebellions of the animal nature are purposely left in us by God, for an exercise of our faith, and to excite our vigilance and constancy in guarding against them. And this doctrine is grounded upon express assertions of the holy Scriptures: for St. Paul says, "The flesh lusteth against the Spirit, and the Spirit against the flesh; and these are contrary the one to the other, so that ye cannot do the things that ye would," Gal. v. 17. St. James excepts no person from being subject to the temptation of his lust: "Every man is tempted when he is drawn away of his own lust, and enticed," James i. 14. And the spiritual combat of the soul with its lusts is thus described by St. Peter, "Dearly beloved, I beseech you as strangers and pilgrims, abstain from fleshly lusts which war against the soul," 1 Pet. ii. 11. Dr. Nicholls.

The members of the church of Rome maintain, that original sin is intirely taken away by baptism: but there is no authority for this opinion in Scripture: on the contrary it militates against the assertion of St. Paul to the Galatian converts; the admonition of St. Peter to the Christians, to whom he writes; and the affirmation of St. James; all cited above. These Epistles were all written to persons, who had been baptized; and the apostles evidently consider them, as still liable to the "infection of nature," contracted by the fall of man. "There is no reason," says Bp. Burnet, "to think, that baptism takes away all the branches and effects of original sin: it is enough if we are by it delivered from the wrath of God, and brought into a state of favour and acceptation; we are freed from the curse of death by our being intitled to a blessed resurrection: and, if we are so far freed from the corruption of our nature, as to have a fœderal right to such assistance, as will enable us to resist and redress it, though it is not quite extinct in us so long as we live in these frail and mortal bodies, here are very great effects of our admission to Christianity by baptism, though this should not go so far as to root all inclinations to evil out of our nature." Bp. Tomline.

[u] — whereby the lust of the flesh, &c.] The consequence of the infection of nature remaining in us is, that the lust of the flesh is not subject to the law of God. "The carnal mind," saith St. Paul, "is enmity against God; for it is not subject to the law of God, neither indeed can be," Rom. viii. 7. And though what he says in the first verse of this chapter be very true, that "there is no condemnation to them which are in Christ Jesus, who walk not after the flesh, but after the Spirit;" yet he confesseth in the seventh verse of the foregoing chapter, that concupiscence and lust hath of itself the nature of sin. His words are, "What shall we say then? Is the law sin? God forbid. Nay, I had not known sin but by the law; for I had not known lust, except the law had said, Thou shalt not covet." The same appears from some of those other texts, made use of to make good the contents of this Article: namely, that "concupiscence and lust hath of itself the nature of sin," that is, of infirmity: for, except that it have the consent of the will along with it, it cannot be a wilful sin; neither will it be imputed to such as are regenerated, nor bring them into condemnation. Veneer, Archdeacon Welchman.

[v] — concupiscence and lust hath of itself the nature of sin.] It is observable here, that the compilers of our Articles do not say, that concupiscence hath only then the nature of sin, when it is ripened into outward act, or has the will consenting to it; but that it has the nature of sin of itself, antecedently to the compliance of the will, and before it is reduced into act. And moreover it is observable that they do not say, that concupiscence is a sin, properly so called, as when men voluntarily comply with a temptation, or do an unlawful action; but only that "it hath the nature of sin." Now a thing may have the nature of sin, or be deemed a sin in a large and figurative sense, to which no act of the will is consenting. Now the nature of sin does partly consist in a deflexion from the rectitude of the divine will, which must make it for that reason disagreeable to the divine wisdom and goodness; and

X. Of Free-Will[w].

Rom. viii. 8. THE condition of Man[x] after the fall of Adam is such, that he cannot turn and prepare himself[y], by his own natural strength and good works[z], to faith and calling upon God: wherefore we have no power to do good works pleasant and acceptable to God, without the grace of God[a] by Christ[b] preventing us[c], that we may have a good will, and John xv. 4, 5; vi. 44. 1 Cor. ii. 14; xii. 3.

2 Cor. iii. 5. Rom. viii. 26. Acts xvi. 14. Phil. ii. 13.

consequently render the persons, who are the subjects of this deflexion or depravation, out of favour with God. For no one can say, that the lusts and passions of our animal nature, and those tendencies to vice, which we all of us feel within ourselves, are as pleasing to God, as if all our appetites were perfectly calm and quiet, and were continually in that exact obedience and conformity to our reason, and the rules which God has prescribed, as they would have been, if man had continued in his unlapsed state.

And this doctrine was maintained by St. Austin himself in the midst of his most vigorous opposition to the Pelagian tenets. For he does not look upon it as a sin, properly so called, unless the consent of the will go along with it: but yet in a large and figurative sense he looked upon concupiscence, as we do, to have the nature of sin. Dr. Nicholls.

[w] X. Of Free-Will.] The same moderation is observed in this Article, as in the former: for all disputes concerning the degree of that feebleness and corruption, under which we are fallen by the sin of Adam, are avoided; and only the necessity of a preventing and co-operating grace is asserted. Bp. Burnet.

[x] The condition of Man &c.] God created man perfect in his kind, and with a will which was free to choose either good or evil. But he fell from that liberty, when he committed sin; he broke that power which he had of election or choice; he ceased to be free with relation to good, and became the servant of sin. Thence proceeds such a blindness of his understanding, such a perverseness of his will, and such an impetuousness of his passions and appetites, that, when left to himself, he is not able either to discern or choose those things which are truly good, but is hurried into the choice of such things as are contrary thereto. Thus our Saviour says, "Without me ye can do nothing," John xv. 5; and, "No man can come unto me, except the Father, which hath sent me, draw him," John vi. 44. And the apostle asserts, that "they that are in the flesh cannot please God," Rom. viii. 8; and 1 Cor. ii. 14, "The natural man receiveth not the things of the Spirit of God, for they are foolishness unto him: neither can he know them, for they are spiritually discerned:" and, 1 Cor. xii. 3, "No man can say that Jesus is the Lord, but by the Holy Ghost." Hence we have need of the assistance of the Holy Spirit, to enable us to choose and perform whatever is good: which, as it is the most excellent gift of God, and as it is freely given, is by way of eminence called "grace." And indeed it seems to be wanting to no one, who is not wanting to himself. Archdeacon Welchman.

[y] — that he cannot turn and prepare himself, &c.] These words are added in opposition to the opinion of those, who denied God's "preventing grace," though they owned his concurring or "assisting grace:" the latter being denied only by the Pelagians; the former by those, who were called formerly Semipelagians. Dr. Nicholls.

[z] — by his own natural strength and good works,] Works done before the grace of Christ may have some specious appearance of good; whence they are called "good," but improperly: for in reality they are not good. See Art. xiii. Archdeacon Welchman.

[a] — without the grace of God &c.] For neither can we "believe," unless "God open our hearts," Acts xvi. 14; neither can we "will" or "do," unless He "of his good pleasure work in us" for those ends, Phil. ii. 17. Archdeacon Welchman. God is said to "work in us both to will and to do:" the one seems to import the first beginning, and the other the progress, of a Christian course of life. Bp. Burnet.

[b] — by Christ] All the spiritual benefits, which God ever conferred upon men, He conferred "by," and for the sake of, "Christ" alone. And therefore as many as under the first covenant pleased God, and that some of them did please Him appears from Heb. xi., did it not by the strength of their own free will, but by the assistance of God's grace, which was then also conferred through Christ. For his merits extended to all ages of the world: and therefore He is called "the Lamb slain from the foundation of the world," Rev. xiii. 8. Archdeacon Welchman.

[c] — preventing us,] That is, going before us. See page 324, note y.

The most pious of those, who lived under the Mosaick dispensation, often acknowledge the necessity of assistance from God. David prays to God to "open his eyes, to guide and direct him," Ps. cxix. 18. 32. 35; to "create in him a clean heart, and renew a right spirit within him," Ps. li. 10. And Solomon says, that God "directeth men's paths, and giveth grace to the lowly," Prov. iii. 6. Even we, whose minds are enlightened by the pure precepts of the Gospel, and influenced by the motives which it suggests, must still be convinced of our weakness and depravity, and of the necessity of divine grace to regulate and strengthen our wills, and to co-operate with our endeavours after righteousness, as is clearly asserted in the New Testament. See the texts above cited: which sufficiently prove, that we stand in need both of a preventing and of a co-operating grace: or, in the words of the Article, that "we have no power to do good works pleasant and acceptable to God, without the grace of God by Christ preventing us, that we may have a good will, and working with us, when we have that good will."

Dr. Nicholls, after quoting many authorities to shew, that the doctrine of divine grace always prevailed in the Catholick church, adds, "I have spent perhaps more time in these testimonies, than was absolutely necessary: but whatever I have done is to shew, that the doctrine of divine grace is so essential a doctrine of Christianity, that not only the holy Scriptures and the primitive fathers assert it, but likewise that the Christians could not in any age maintain their religion without it; it being necessary, not only for the discharge of Christian duties, but for the performance of our ordinary devotions." And this seems to have been the opinion of the compilers of our most excellent Liturgy, in many parts of which both a preventing and co-operating grace is unequivocally acknowledged; particularly in the second Collect for Evening service, in the fourth Collect at the end of the Communion service, and in the Collects for Easter-day, for the fifth Sunday after Easter, and for the 3rd, 9th, 17th, 19th, and 25th Sundays after Trinity.

This assistance of divine grace is not inconsistent working with us, when we have that good will.

XI. Of the Justification of Man[d].

Ps. cxliii. 2. Rom. iii. 24—26. Eph. ii. 8, 9.

WE are accounted righteous before God[e], only for the merit of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ by Faith, and not for our own works[f] of deservings: Wherefore, that we are justified by Faith[g] only[h] is a most wholesome Doctrine, and very full of comfort, as more largely Rom. x. 10. Gal. v. 6. Rom. v. 1, 2.

with the free agency of men: it does not place them under an irresistible restraint, or compel them to act contrary to their will. Though human nature is greatly depraved, yet every good disposition is not totally extinguished, nor is all power of right action intirely annihilated. Men may therefore make some spontaneous, though feeble, attempt to act conformably to their duty, which will be promoted and rendered effectual by the co-operation of God's grace: or the grace of God may so far "prevent" our actual endeavours, as to awaken and dispose us to our duty: but yet not in such a degree, that we cannot withstand its influence. In either case our own exertions are necessary to enable us to "work out our own salvation," but our "sufficiency" for that purpose is from God. The joint agency of God and man in the work of human salvation is pointed out in the following passage: "Let us work out our own salvation with fear and trembling: for it is God that worketh in us both to will and to do, of his good pleasure," Phil. ii. 12, 13: and therefore we may assure ourselves that free will and grace are not incompatible, though the mode and degree of their co-operation be utterly inexplicable.

The doctrine of this Article has been the subject of much dispute among Christians: some sects contend for the irresistible impulses of grace; and others reject the idea of any influence of the divine Spirit upon the human mind. The following caution on the subject is from the Necessary Doctrine of a Christian Man, a work supposed to have been written by Archbishop Cranmer: "All men are to be admonished, and chiefly preachers, that in this high matter they looking on both sides so temper and moderate themselves, that they neither so preach the grace of God that they take away thereby free will, nor on the other side so extol free will, that injury be done to the grace of God." "Thus," as Dr. Jortin observes, "do the doctrine of divine grace, and the doctrine of free will or human liberty, unite and conspire in a friendly manner to our everlasting good. The first is adapted to excite in us gratitude, faith, and humility; the second to awaken our caution and quicken our diligence." Bp. Tomline.

[d] XI. Of the Justification of Man.] Justification, in the language of Scripture, signifies the being accounted just or righteous in the sight of God; or the being placed in a state of salvation. "When God justifies a man," says Mr. Vencer, "it is by forgiving him his trespasses, and accepting, esteeming, and rewarding him as a righteous person, although he is not really and strictly such. To justify, in the common spiritual notion of it, is to absolve from guilt, to discharge from punishment." Bp. Tomline.

[e] We are accounted righteous before God, &c.] Since the very best works of even the best men are imperfect, so that if God should "enter into judgment with his servants, no man living would be justified," Ps. cxliii. 2; it follows, that as many as are justified, are justified only "for," or because of, the merits of Christ, by faith; I mean, a lively faith, "which worketh by love," Gal. v. 6. So St. Paul teaches the Romans, iii. 24—26; "Being justified by his grace, through the redemption that is in Christ Jesus, whom God hath set forth to be a propitiation through faith in his blood, to declare his righteousness for the remission of sins that are past, through the forbearance of God: to declare, I say, at this time his righteousness, that he might be just, and the justifier of him that believeth in Jesus." And the Ephesians, ii. 8, 9: "By grace ye are saved through faith; and that not of yourselves, it is the gift of God: not of works, lest any man should boast." Archdeacon Welchman.

[f] — only for the merit of our Lord &c.—and not for our own works &c.] Our Church here, in opposition to the church of Rome, asserts, that we are justified only for the merits of Christ, and not for our own works or deservings. For they assert that men's inherent righteousness is the meritorious cause of their justification: that their works are truly meritorious: or, as the council of Trent expresses it, they do "ad vitam æternam consequendam vere promereri," "are truly meritorious in obtaining eternal life." As this doctrine of the merit of good works is one of the most arrogant and scandalous of the corruptions of the Romish church, so is it one of the most modern, having never been generally received in that church itself, before it was settled by the council of Trent. But, whatever sanction he given to it by that convention, it is contrary to the doctrine of the holy Scriptures, which declare, that we are so far from meriting of God, that "when we have done all those things which are commanded us, we are to say we are unprofitable servants," Luke xvii. 10. We are therein informed, that "every good gift and every perfect gift is from above, and cometh down from the Father of lights," James i. 17; that "God worketh in us both to will and to do, of his good pleasure," Phil. ii. 13. The same holy Scriptures instruct us, that all our very best actions are mixed with great failures and imperfections, Gal. v. 17: and that there is no proportion between the things of this world, and the infinite joys of the other, so that there cannot be any ground for a parity of the duty with the recompense, Rom. viii. 18; 2 Cor. iv. 17. And the current doctrine of antiquity is consonant to these great oracles of truth. Dr. Nicholls.

[g] — by Faith] The term "faith" in the New Testament stands generally for the complex of Christianity, in opposition to the Law, which stands as generally for the complex of the whole Mosaical dispensation. So that the "faith of Christ" is equivalent to this, the Gospel of Christ; because Christianity is a fœderal religion, founded, on God's part, on the promises that He has made to us, and on the rules that He hath set us; and on our part, on our believing that revelation, our trusting to those promises, and our setting ourselves to follow those rules. The believing of this revelation, and that great article of it, of Christ's being the Son of God, and the true Messiah, who came to reveal his Father's will, and to offer Himself up to be the sacrifice of this new covenant, is often represented as the great and only condition of the covenant on our part: but still this "faith" must receive the whole Gospel, the precepts as well as the promises of it; and receive Christ as a Prophet to teach, and a King to rule, as well as a Priest to save us. Bp. Burnet.

At the same time it should be noted, that we are justified by faith, not because of faith: for there is no more is expressed in the Homily of Justification[i].

XII. Of Good Works[k].

James ii. 17, 18.

ALBEIT that Good Works, which are the fruits of Faith[l], and follow after Justification, cannot put away our sins[m], and endure the severity of God's Judgement; yet are they pleasing and acceptable to God in Christ[n], and do spring out necessarily of a true and lively Faith[o];

1 John i. 7. Ps. cxliii. 2.

Eph. ii. 10. Tit. ii. 14. Heb. xiii. 15, 20, 21.

"merit" in our faith, than in our works. Faith therefore is not the cause, but the condition, of our justification, which is solely to be attributed to the bounty of God, and the merits of Christ. Archdeacon Welchman.

[h] — Wherefore, that we are justified by Faith only &c.] By "faith only" is not meant faith, as it is separated from the other evangelical graces and virtues; but faith as it is opposed to the rites of the Mosaical law: for that was the great question, that gave occasion to St. Paul's writing so fully upon this head; since many Judaizing Christians, as they acknowledged Christ to be the true Messiah, so they thought that the law of Moses was still to retain its force: in opposition to whom St. Paul says, that "we are justified by faith, without the works of the law," Rom. iii. 28; Gal. ii. 16. It is plain that he means the Mosaical dispensation: for he had divided all mankind into those "who were in the law," and those "who were without the law," Rom. ii. 12: that is, into Jews and Gentiles. Nor had St. Paul any occasion to treat of any other matter in those Epistles, or to enter into nice abstractions, which became not one that was to instruct the world in order to their salvation: those metaphysical notions are not easily apprehended by plain men, not accustomed to such subtilties; and are of very little value, when they are more critically distinguished. Bp. Burnet.

The word faith in this Article is used in the same sense, in which St. Paul uses it. The assertion in it, that "we are justified by faith only," is not intended to signify that we are justified by faith without moral virtue; but that faith, or obedience to the whole religion of Christ, including both belief and practice, is the only appointed means of justification, "our own works or deservings" being utterly insufficient for that purpose. This is pronounced to be "a wholesome doctrine, and very full of comfort:" and so it surely is; since it secures acceptance to our sincere, though imperfect, endeavours after righteousness, and places our hope of everlasting happiness upon the infallible promises of God, and the all-sufficient merits of Christ. Bp. Tomline.

[i] — as more largely is expressed in the Homily of Justification.] It is remarkable that there is no Homily with this title. The Homily entitled "Of the Salvation of all Mankind" is generally supposed to be here meant; though some learned men have thought, that the four Homilies upon "human misery, salvation, faith, and good works," were all referred to. The former opinion seems to be the better founded, as the word in the Article is "Homily," and not "Homilies;" and that Homily relates more particularly to the subject of this Article. Bp. Tomline.

It is called here the Homily of Justification, because the chief points of that doctrine are treated of therein. Now it must be observed, that the moderation of our Church is very remarkable; that, whereas the world was blown up into so much flame among the contending parties, concerning the speculative points which were raised about this doctrine, at the time of composing the Articles and Homilies of our Church; neither in the Article itself, nor in the Homily to which the Article refers, any of those nice matters are insisted on: but only the plain Christian doctrine in general is set down, and little more of the controversy touched upon, than what the gross errors of the Roman church concerning merits made absolutely necessary; omitting those disputes, which for a century and a half have perplexed the churches abroad, and the minds of some among ourselves, who have been pleased officiously to take them up here at home, to very little edification and much contention. Dr. Nicholls.

[k] XII. Of Good Works.] This Article was not among those of 1552: it was added in 1562, in opposition to the opinions of certain sects, called Antinomians, Solifidians, and Gospellers, who denied the necessity of good works. There might also have been a general wish in the compilers of these Articles, to obviate any mistake which might arise from the expression in the preceding Article, in which it is said, that "we are justified by faith only." Bp. Tomline.

[l] Albeit that Good Works, which are the fruits of Faith, &c.] By such works are meant those actions, which proceed from the principle of a true faith in Christ, and are performed after we are placed in a state of justification by being admitted to partake of the privileges and promises of the Gospel. Bp. Tomline.

[m] — cannot put away our sins, &c.] In opposition to the church of Rome, which thinks, that a work cannot be called good, if it is not entirely good; and that nothing can please God, in which there is a mixture of sin; we according to this Article believe, that human nature is so weak and so degenerated, that, as far as our natural powers concur in any action, there is still some allay in it; and that a "good work" is considered by God according to the main, both of the action and of the intention of him that does it; and that, as a father pities his children, so God passes over the defects of those, who serve Him sincerely, though not perfectly. Bp. Burnet.

This imperfection of our nature is acknowledged by the most pious men, whose characters are recorded in holy writ. For thus holy Job professes, "How should a man be just with God," Job ix. 2. "What is man that he should be clean? and he which is born of woman, that he should be righteous? behold, he putteth no trust in his saints, and the heavens are not clean in his sight," Job xv. 14, 15. So holy David, "If thou, Lord, shouldest mark iniquities, who should stand?" Ps. cxxx. 3. And again, "Enter not into judgment with thy servant, for in thy sight shall no man living be justified," Ps. cxliii. 2. So likewise Daniel, "O Lord, righteousness belongeth unto thee, but to us confusion of faces," Dan. ix. 7. And again, "We do not present our supplications before thee for our righteousness, but for thy great mercies," ver. 18. St. Paul affirms of himself that he had "not already attained, nor was already perfect," Phil. iii. 12. St. James declares, That "in many things we offend all," James iii. 2. And St. John, "If we say that we have no sin, we deceive ourselves, and the truth is not in us," 1 John i. 8. Dr. Nicholls.

We see in fact that the best men in all ages have been complaining and humbling themselves even for the sins of their holy things, for their vanity and desire of glory, for the distraction of their thoughts in devo-

Gal. v. 6. insomuch that by them a lively Faith
Matt. vii. 16. James ii. 18. may be as evidently known as a tree discerned by the fruit.

XIII. Of Works before Justification [p].

WORKS done before the grace of Christ [q]; and the Inspira- Rom. iii. 9, 10. 19, 20. 23; viii. 7, 8.

tion, and for the affection which they have to earthly things. It were a doctrine of great cruelty, which might drive men to despair, if they thought that no action could please God, in which they were conscious to themselves of some imperfection or sin. St. Austin urges this frequently, that our Saviour in teaching us to pray has made this a standing petition, "Forgive us our trespasses," as well as that, "Give us this day our daily bread:" for we sin daily, and do always need a pardon. Upon these reasons we conclude, that somewhat of the man enters into all that men do: we are made up of infirmities, and we need the intercession of Christ to make our best actions to be accepted of by God; for "if he should straitly mark iniquity, who can stand before him? But mercy is with him, and forgiveness," Ps. cxxx. 3, 4. So that with Hezekiah we ought to pray, that "though we are not purified according to the purification of the sanctuary, yet the good Lord would pardon every one, that prepareth his heart to seek God," 2 Chron. xxx. 18, 19. Bp. Barnet.

[n] —yet are they pleasing and acceptable to God in Christ,] Though good works are not meritorious, yet that they are pleasing to God, and accepted through Christ, appears from hence, because God hath "created us in Christ Jesus unto good works," Eph. ii. 10: and because Christ "gave himself for us, that he might purify unto himself a peculiar people, zealous of good works," Tit. ii. 14; who also "will render to every man according to his deeds," Rom. ii. 6. Our works indeed are imperfect, so that they "cannot endure the severity of God's judgment," much less expiate our sins, since they themselves rather want to be expiated by the merits of Christ. But for his sake God deals bountifully with us, and does not judge us severely, but has compassion upon our weakness, and ordains infinite rewards for those who do well, though imperfectly. Archdeacon Welchman.

That "good works are pleasing and acceptable to God in Christ," is also evident from the earnest exhortations, in almost every page of the New Testament, to the practice of the moral and social duties, and from the frequent and positive declarations of Scripture that they are indispensably necessary to salvation. Bp. Tomline.

It was a frequent calumny raised by the Papists against the Protestants from the beginning of the Reformation, that the whole of their religion consisted in faith, and that they did reject good works as unnecessary things. Nay, this calumny, false and scandalous as it is, is not only objected to the Protestants by the private writers of the Roman church, but even by the council of Trent itself; though at the same time they had the several Protestant confessions, which had been delivered in to them, lying before them. Therefore the Protestants in all their apologies and confessions do strenuously disavow this principle, which the Papists had so unjustly fastened upon them; and take all occasion to assert the necessity of good works: as in the confessions of Augsburgh, of Wirtemberg, and especially of Saxony, which comes nighest to our Articles. For this is a doctrine, which is every where inculcated in the holy Scriptures, as the main design of religion, and without which Christianity would only be an empty speculative science. For the exhortations and commands for the performance of good works are as express in Scripture as words can make them: see 1 Thess. vi. 7; Rom. vi. 15; Tit. ii. 12. 14. They elsewhere inform us, that no faith is true or genuine, unless it draw after it good works as a consequent of it, Gal. v. 6; 1 John v. 2; James ii. 17. Besides God denounces the severest punishment against those, who neglect or violate his commandments, 1 Thess. iv. 6; Rom. viii. 13; Col. iii. 6; Eph. v. 5. The writers of the ancient church do exactly agree with the holy Scriptures in this doctrine: for, though they set the highest value upon God's grace and a sincere faith, as to the point of justification; yet they always require the concomitancy or presence of good works. Dr. Nicholls.

[o] — and do spring out necessarily of a true and lively Faith;] A true faith has always love joined to it; and consequently is neither inactive, nor unfruitful. And further, he, who truly believes the Gospel, will be "careful to maintain good works," which he who neglects to do has only a dead faith, or even none at all. See Gal. v. 6; James ii. 18; Matt. vii. 16. Archdeacon Welchman.

If a man sincerely believes the divine authority of Christ's religion, and is firmly convinced that his eternal happiness depends upon his obedience to its precepts; such a faith will naturally produce the practice of those virtues, which are injoined by the Gospel; "insomuch that by them a lively faith may be as evidently known, as a tree discerned by the fruit." The performance of these good works is indeed the test and criterion of genuine faith, just as every "tree is known by its own fruit," Luke vi. 44. "Faith, if it hath not works, is dead," James ii. 17.

Thus our Church considers good works as essential to the character of a true Christian, and as the necessary consequences of sincere faith in Christ; but it does not allow the popish doctrine already mentioned, "that good works are truly meritorious towards the attainment of eternal life." The true Scripture doctrine is, that good works are indispensable, but not sufficient, for the attainment of eternal life. When we have done all those things which are commanded us, we still say, that "we are unprofitable servants," and humbly rely upon the merits and mediation of Christ for our salvation. Bp. Tomline.

[p] XIII. Of Works before Justification.] This Article is designed partly against an error of the Pelagians, who contended that the good actions of the heathens were acceptable to God; and to another of the Papists, who in some measure have closed with them in their fond distinction of good works into merits ex congruo and ex condigno. Dr. Nicholls.

[q] Works done before the grace of Christ; &c.] That works may be perfectly good, they must flow from a good principle, namely, faith: and they must tend to a good end, namely, the glory of God: and they must be in no respect deficient. But what mortal man, either before or after the grace of Christ, hath been thus happy in doing well? And therefore the works of unbelievers, how specious soever, can deserve nothing, by reason of their imperfection; and they are to be looked upon as evil rather than good, on account of their defects. See Rom. iii. 9, 10. 19, 20. 23; viii. 7, 8. And as these works cannot in their own nature be pleasing to God, without something else to make them so; so we are expressly told, Heb. xi. 6, that "without faith it is impossible to please him." Archdeacon Welchman, Veneer.

tion of his Spirit, are not pleasant to God, forasmuch as they spring not
Tit. iii. 5. Rom. iv. 2. 6. of faith in Jesus Christ, neither do they make men meet to receive grace[r], or (as the School-authors[s] say) deserve grace of congruity: yea rather, for that they are not done as God hath willed[t] and commanded

That the actions of such persons cannot be acceptable or pleasant to God, is evident from the particular reason here assigned in this Article. 1. Because they "spring not of faith in Jesus Christ:" that is, because the doers of them are not instructed in the principles of Christianity, and do not act upon those rules which God has prescribed, how He will be worshipped, and how He will have an acceptable service paid unto Him. For whatsoever men do of their own heads, without a command of God for it, however plausible it may be in its own nature, the apostle calls it a "will-worship," Col. ii. 23; and our Saviour condemns any such practice, saying, "In vain do they worship God, teaching for doctrines the commandments of men," Matt. xv. 9. Besides, we see, how that, when men were left to themselves to regulate and direct their religious worship, as they pleased, what gross and stupid idolatry they fell into: which began in the most early ages of the world, and overspread the whole face of the earth. Now there are hardly any actions, in which men are more sincere and serious, than the honours and respects which they ascribe to the divine nature; but yet the heathen nations, by paying a worship which God had not prescribed, or directing it to an object inferior to the great Creator of all things, were so far from being acceptable in the eyes of God, that they became hateful in his sight.

2. The good actions of unjustified persons, or unbelievers, are not pleasing to God, because they do not proceed from the love of God, or from any tendency to the advancement of his glory and honour; but only from some sensual or worldly principle, which has no relation to piety or religion. So that though it be allowed, that some of the more splendid actions of the heathens were brave and noble, and betokened a generous mind; yet it may be questioned, whether they were actions acceptable in the eyes of God, inasmuch as they may have proceeded from desire of fame, a design of gaining interest and respect from men, or some other principle quite foreign from goodness and piety. The case would have been otherwise, had the actions of such persons taken their rise from Christian or truly religious principles; in obedience to the commands and in regard to the honour of their great Creator, or for the love of their blessed Redeemer: for such religious considerations only can render an action acceptable in God's sight.

This is the constant doctrine of the holy Scripture. Our Saviour commands, that men's "good works should shine before men," not in order to vulgar applause, but "that they may glorify our Father which is in heaven," Matt. v. 16. The apostle exhorts us, to "do all to the glory of God," 1 Cor. x. 31: and that "the fruits of righteousness," that is, good works, "be by Jesus Christ, unto the praise and glory of God," Phil. i. 11. St. Peter injoins the same, though with particular relation to works of charity: "If any man minister, let him do it as of the ability which God giveth; that God in all things may be glorified through Jesus Christ," 1 Pet. iv. 11. St. Paul makes the love of God to be the great spring and principle of all virtuous actions. And we are elsewhere taught, that men's hearts are to be purified only by the Christian faith, Acts xv. 9. "Unto the pure all things are pure, but unto them that are defiled and unbelieving nothing is pure," Tit. i. 15. Dr. Nicholls.

A great difference is here to be made, between an external action, as it is considered in itself, and the same action, as it was done by such a man. An action is called good, from the morality and nature of the action itself; so actions of justice and charity are in themselves good, whatsoever the doer of them may be. But actions are considered by God, with relation to him that does them, in another light; his principles, ends, and motives, with all the other circumstances of the action, come into this account: for unless all these be good, let the action in its own abstracted nature be ever so good, it cannot render the doer acceptable or meritorious in the sight of God. Bp. Burnet.

[r] — neither do they make men meet to receive grace, &c.] For, when "the love of God our Saviour toward man appeared, not by works of righteousness which we have done, but according to his mercy he saved us, by the washing of regeneration, and renewing of the Holy Ghost," Tit. iii. 4, 5. For the clearing of this point it is necessary to observe that some of the Schoolmen speak of a twofold merit, a merit of congruity, and a merit of desert. The latter they ascribe to works, which a man does by the assistance of grace, and to which a reward is in justice due. The former they ascribe to such works as man does by the mere strength of free will, and which are to be rewarded only out of liberality. But what foundation is there for such a merit, since all of us are by nature evil? "since in us dwelleth no good thing?" Rom. vii. 18; "since they that are in the flesh cannot please God?" viii. 8; and finally, since "corrupt trees do by nature bring forth evil fruit?" Matt. vii. 17, 18. Archdeacon Welchman.

We find no such distinction, as is here spoken of, in the Scriptures: they teach us in general to consider man in his corrupt unregenerate state, as incapable of doing any thing, which shall be intitled to reward. Bp. Tomline.

This doctrine of "merit of congruity," which the church of Rome ascribes to persons in a state of nature or unbelief, is contrary to the notion, which the holy Scriptures give us of such persons, and likewise to the doctrine of preventing grace. For, first, the description, which the Scriptures afford us, of unbelievers is that they are enemies to God, "When we were enemies, we were reconciled by the death of his Son," Rom. v. 10; dead in sins, "even when we were dead in sins, he hath quickened us together with Christ," Eph. ii. 5; aliens from God, "having no hope, without God in the world," Eph. ii. 12. Nor is it reasonable to think, that persons, who sustain this character, can merit any thing of God. Secondly, this doctrine overthrows preventing grace: for, if there be any previous work to deserve grace, grace can neither make the first step in conversion, neither can it be free. Dr. Nicholls.

[s] — the School-authors] By "the School-authors," or School-men, are meant the writers of scholastic divinity: the age of the Church and form of theology, succeeding that of the fathers, being called "the Schools," because this mode of treating religion arose from the use of academical disputations. Todd's Johnson.

[t] — yea rather, for that they are not done as God hath willed &c.] This sentence of the Article is made good by what has been said already; as likewise by the

Rom. vii. 18; viii. 8. Matt. vii. 17. them to be done, we doubt not but they have the nature of sin.

XIV. Of Works of Supererogation[u].

Luke xviii. 10—14. VOLUNTARY Works besides, over and above, God's Commandments[v], which they call Works of Supererogation, cannot be taught without arrogancy and impiety[x]: for by them men do declare, that they do not only render unto God as much as they are bound to do, words of St. Paul, Rom. xiv. 23, "for whatever is not of faith is sin." Veneer.

So great and universal a depravity is introduced into the dispositions of men in consequence of the fall of Adam, that they can in no instance of themselves act as their Creator originally commanded; and therefore, as in all their works performed without divine assistance, there is a departure from the will of God, "we doubt not but they have the nature of sin."

It is the will of God, that we should act upon the motives which Christianity proposes to our actions, and no others: and every resistance to his will and command hath surely "the nature of sin." It is a principle of morals and legislation universally admitted, that actions are as their motives; and upon this principle this Article chiefly turns. Besides, it is not likely, that, if our motives be wrong, our actions should continue right, though they may incidentally be so. Actions are of a transitory, motives of a permanent, nature. Bp. Tomline.

Although it be true, according to the doctrine of this Article, that no actions of a heathen, or an unregenerated man can be so pure, as to be free from all sin, and to merit at God's hand as being works naturally perfect; yet by this we do not pretend to say, that a man in that state can do nothing, or that he has no use of his faculties. He can certainly restrain himself on many occasions; he can do many good works, and avoid many bad ones; he can raise his understanding to know and consider things according to the light that he has; he can put himself in good methods and good circumstances; he can pray and do many acts of devotion, which, though they are all very imperfect, yet none of them will be lost in the sight of God, who certainly will never be wanting to those, who are doing what in them lies, to make themselves the proper objects of his mercy, and fit subjects for his grace to work upon. Therefore this Article is not to be made use of, to discourage men's endeavours, but only to increase their humility; to teach them not to think of themselves above measure, but soberly; to depend always on the mercy of God, and ever to fly to it. Bp. Burnet.

[u] XIV. Of Works of Supererogation.] The works here mentioned are called in the Roman church likewise by the name of "counsels" and "evangelical perfections." They are defined by their writers to be "good works not commanded by Christ, but recommended:" rules, which do not oblige all men to follow them, under the pain of sin; but yet are useful to carry them on to a sublimer degree of perfection, than is necessary in order to their salvation. But there are no such counsels of perfection in the Gospel: all the rules, set to us in it, are in the style and form of precepts: and, though there may be some actions of more heroical virtue, and more sublime piety, than others, to which all men are not obliged by equal and general rules; yet such men, to whose circumstances and station they belong, are strictly obliged by them, so that they should sin if they did not put them in practice. Dr. Nicholls, Bp. Burnet.

[v] Voluntary Works besides, over and above, God's Commandments, &c.] The great obligations of "loving God with all our heart, soul, strength, and mind;" and "loving our neighbour as ourselves;" which are reckoned by our Saviour "the two great commandments, on which hang all the law and the prophets," Matt. xxii. 36—40, are of that extent, that it seems not possible to imagine, how any thing can be acceptable to God, that does not fall within them. We are farther required in the New Testament, to "cleanse ourselves from all filthiness both of the flesh and spirit, perfecting holiness in the fear of God," 2 Cor. vii. 1; and to reckon ourselves "his and not our own," and that "we are bought with a price;" and that therefore we ought to "glorify him both in our bodies and in our spirits which are his," 1 Cor. vi. 20. These and many more like expressions are plainly precepts of general obligation, for nothing can be set forth in more positive words than these are: and it is not easy to imagine, how any thing can go beyond them; for, if we are Christ's property, purchased by Him, then we ought to apply ourselves to every thing, in which his honour or the honour of his religion can be concerned, or which will be pleasing to Him. Bp. Burnet.

And besides these general precepts, there are particular ones directed to persons in every condition and relation of life, and extending to every point and circumstance, which can possibly promote the honour of God, contribute to the happiness of our fellow-creatures, or tend to purify our own minds: and all these things are injoined as duties of perfect and universal obligation; as indispensably necessary, wherever they are practicable. Since therefore God requires of us the entire exertion of all our powers, and not a single good action can be specified which is not commanded in the New Testament, it follows, that no room is left for "voluntary works besides, over and above, God's commandments, which they call works of supererogation;" nor can such works "be taught without arrogancy and impiety," since they imply a degree of merit, which man, in his present imperfect and corrupt state, is incapable of attaining, and are directly opposite to the plain and infallible word of God: or, as the Article expresses it, "for by them men do declare, that they do not only render unto God as much as they are bound to do, but that they do more for his sake, than of bounden duty is required: whereas Christ saith plainly, When ye have done all those things which are commanded you, say, We are unprofitable servants." These words, which are recorded in St. Luke's Gospel, xvii. 10, are so clear and decisive, that it is unnecessary to explain or inforce them. Bp. Tomline.

So far indeed is any man from being more good than he ought to be, that neither is he able to fulfil what he ought to do. And therefore even the best of men, laying aside all notions of supererogation, are daily to pray, that their debts or trespasses may be forgiven them. But that any one should at the same time be both a debtor and a supererogator, is manifestly absurd. Archdeacon Welchman.

[x] —cannot be taught without arrogancy and impiety:] Our Church does very justly tax the church of Rome with arrogance and impiety for maintaining this doctrine. For what can be more arrogant and impious, than for sinful man, whose life, when it is best spent, but that they do more for his sake, than of bounden duty is required: whereas Christ saith plainly, When ye have done all that are commanded to you, say, We are unprofitable servants. Luke xvii. 7—10.

XV. Of Christ alone without Sin[y].

CHRIST in the truth of our nature[z] was made like unto us in all things, sin only except, from which he was clearly void, both in his flesh, and in his spirit. He came to be the Lamb without spot[a], who, by sacrifice of himself once made, should take away the sins of the world, and sin, as Saint John saith, was not in him. But all we the rest[b], although baptized, and born again in Christ[c], yet offend in many things; Heb. ii. 14. Heb. iv. 15. John xiv. 30. 1 Pet. ii. 22. John i. 29. Heb ix. 11. 26. 1 John iii. 5. James iii. 2.

---

is full of failures and imperfections, to pretend not only to make satisfaction to God for his own sins, but to satisfy for the sins of other men likewise? Dr. Nicholls. In the New Testament we are always taught to trust to the mercies of God, and to the death and intercession of Christ, and to "work out our own salvation with fear and trembling," Phil. ii. 12: but we are never once directed to look for any help from saints, or to think that we can do any thing for another man's soul in this way. The Psalm has it, "No man can by any means give a ransom for his brother's soul," Ps. xlix. 7: the words of Christ cited in the Article are full and express against it. Bp. Burnet.

[y] XV. Of Christ alone without Sin.] This Article relates to the former, and is put here as another foundation against all works of supererogation; which depending upon the supposed perfection of the saints, this latter likewise is here opposed. The compilers had probably in view also the old Pelagian doctrine of the impeccability of holy men. Bp. Burnet, Dr. Nicholls. It consists of two parts: in the former Christ's freedom from sin is asserted; and in the latter it is declared that all men are guilty of sin. Bp. Tomline.

[z] Christ in the truth of our nature &c.] That Christ was a man, as well as, and as much as, ourselves, is declared Heb. ii. 14. His being entirely free from sin is apparent from chap. iv. 15; "For we have not an high-priest, which cannot be touched with the feeling of our infirmities, but was in all points tempted like as we are, yet without sin." From John xiv. 30: "Hereafter I will not talk much with you; for the Prince of this world cometh, and hath nothing in me." And from 1 Pet. ii. 22, where it is said, that "he did no sin, neither was guile found in his mouth." And indeed, if Christ had been guilty of any sin, He would have wanted a redeemer, as well as ourselves. But where could a redeemer have been found for Him? Archdeacon Welchman.

That Christ was free from sin of every species and denomination, appears from the whole course of his life, as recorded in the Gospels: and it is expressly asserted in the following passages in the Epistles, 1 Pet. ii. 22; Heb. iv. 15. (See the foregoing note.) He is also called "Holy, harmless, undefiled, and separate from sinners," Heb. vii. 26. The Socinians hold that Christ was peccable; which seems to be a consequence of their considering Him as a mere man, and of their denial of the doctrine of the atonement. Bp. Tomline.

The perfect sinlessness of Christ is so oft affirmed in the New Testament, that it can admit of no debate. This was not only true in his rational powers, the superior part called "the spirit" in opposition to the inferior part; but also in those appetites and affections that arise from our bodies, and from the union of our souls to them, called "the flesh." For, though in these Christ, having the human nature truly in Him, had in Him the appetites of hunger, yet the devil could not tempt Him to distrust God, or to desire a miraculous supply sooner than was fitting: He overcame even that necessary appetite, whenever there was an occasion given Him to "do the will of his heavenly Father," John iv. 34. He had also in Him the aversions to pain and suffering, and the horror at a violent and ignominious death, which are planted in our natures; and in this it was natural to Him to wish and to pray that the cup might pass from Him: but in this his purity appeared the most eminently, that though He felt the weight of his nature to a vast degree, He did, notwithstanding that, limit and conquer it so entirely, that He resigned Himself absolutely to his Father's will; "Not my will, but thy will be done." Bp. Burnet.

[a] — He came to be the Lamb without spot, &c.] The Jews were commanded, when they celebrated the passover in commemoration of their deliverance from Egyptian bondage, to choose out of their flocks a lamb without spot or blemish, and to offer it as a sacrifice to God. This was a type of Christ: who, being without spot or sin, offered Himself to God as a sacrifice for the sins of the whole world; and thence He is called the true Paschal Lamb. "Christ our passover is sacrificed for us," 1 Cor. v. 7. "Behold the Lamb of God, which taketh away the sins of the world," John i. 29. "Now once in the end of the world hath he appeared, to put away sin by the sacrifice of himself," Heb. ix. 26. "Ye know that he was manifested to take away our sins, and in him is no sin," 1 John iii. 5. Bp. Tomline.

[b] — But all we the rest, &c.] There is no mortal man, that is or ever was perfectly good. Some few indeed are said in the Scripture to be "righteous," such for instance as Noah, Job, and Zacharias: but they were only so comparatively, and according to the free and undeserved favour of God, who accepts of sincerity of mind instead of absolute perfection. Archdeacon Welchman.

There seems to be a particular design in the contexture and writing of the Scriptures, to represent to us some of the failings of the best men: for though Zacharias and Elisabeth are said to have been "blameless," Luke i. 6, that must be meant only of the exterior and visible part of their conversation, that it was free from blame, and of their being accepted of God; but that is not to be carried to import a sinless purity before God; for we find the same Zacharias guilty of misbelieving the message of the angel to him, to such a degree, that he was punished for it with a dumbness of above nine months' continuance, ver. 20. Perhaps the Virgin's question to the angel had nothing blameworthy in it: but our Saviour's answers to her, both when she came to Him in the temple, when He was twelve years old, Luke ii. 49, and more particularly when she moved Him at the marriage in Cana to furnish them with wine, John ii. 4, look like a reprimand. The contentions among the apostles about the pre-eminence, and in particular the ambition of James and John, Matt. xx.

1 John i. 8. and if we say we have no sin, we deceive ourselves, and the truth is not in us.

XVI. Of Sin after Baptism[d].

NOT every deadly sin[e] willingly committed after Baptism is sin against the Holy Ghost, and unpardonable. Wherefore the grant of repentance[f] is not to be denied to such as fall into sin after Baptism. After we have received the Holy Ghost[g], we may depart from grace given, and fall into sin, and by the Matt. xii. 31, 32. Mark iii. 28—30. Gal. vi. 1.

20. 24, cannot be excused. St. Peter's dissimulation at Antioch in the Judaizing controversy, Gal. ii. 11—14, and the sharp contention that happened between Paul and Barnabas, Acts xv. 39, are recorded in Scripture; and they are both characters of the sincerity of those who penned them, and likewise marks of the frailties of human nature, even in its greatest elevation, and with its highest advantages. So that all the high characters which are given of the best men, are to be understood, either comparatively to others whom they exceeded, or with relation to their outward actions, and the visible parts of their life: or they are to be meant of their zeal and sincerity, which is valued and accepted of God, and, as it was to Abraham, is imputed to them for righteousness. Bp. Burnet.

[c] — although baptized, and born again in Christ, &c.] This clause seems to be levelled against the Pelagians and their followers, who asserted that persons after baptism might live without sin. But this extravagant doctrine, as it is contrary to the holy Scriptures, so the ancient fathers in their several ages have declared their opinion against it. Dr. Nicholls. "Let no one," says Cyprian, "flatter himself with the idea of being innocent, since no one is innocent; and by extolling himself a person would only aggravate his punishment. He is instructed and taught that he is guilty of sin every day, since he is commanded to pray every day." Some modern enthusiasts consider themselves as intirely free from sin; and the Moravian Anabaptists are said to omit this part of the Lord's Prayer, "Forgive us our trespasses, as we forgive them that trespass against us;" because, being regenerated, they are no longer guilty of sin.

While we condemn the presumption of those, who think more highly of themselves than they ought to think, we must be careful not to suffer the infirmity of human nature to be abused into an encouragement to sin, or perverted into a cause of gloomy despondence: it should rather stimulate us to vigilance and exertion, than drive us to negligence and despair. Though we cannot arrive at sinless purity, it is still our duty to aim at an uniform obedience to all God's commands: and to indulge any apprehensions, which tend to weaken the energy of our minds, is doubly sinful, because we thus voluntarily increase the difficulty of obedience to the will of God; and in reality doubt his assurance, that our sincere endeavours to persevere in the paths of virtue and religion will be forwarded by the assistance of divine grace. Bp. Tomline.

[d] XVI. Of Sin after Baptism.] This Article is levelled against the doctrine of the Novatians of old, who held every sin committed after baptism to be unpardonable. This doctrine being revived by some of the Anabaptists or other enthusiasts, which sprang up at the beginning of the Reformation, it is not improbable that the compilers of the Articles had an eye likewise upon their heterodoxy. For as the Papists were wont maliciously to impute the wild doctrines of all the several sorts of enthusiasts to all Protestants, so it was thought here convenient to defend our Church against the imputation of any such opinion. Dr. Nicholls.

In the preceding Article notice was taken of a sect of Christians who maintain the peccability of Christ; and in this we have to argue against those, who contend for the impeccability of man. Bp. Tomline.

[e] Not every deadly sin &c.] By "deadly sin" in this Article we are not to understand such sins, as in the church of Rome are called "mortal," in opposition to others that are "venial:" as if some sins, though offences against God, and violations of his law, could be of their own nature such slight things, that they deserved only temporal punishment, and were to be expiated by some piece of penance or devotion, or the communication of the merits of others. The Scripture no where teaches us to think so slightly of the majesty of God or of his law. There is a "curse" upon every one "that continueth not in all things which are written in the book of the law to do them," Gal. iii. 10; and the same curse must have been on us all, if Christ had not redeemed us from it; "the wages of sin is death." And St. James asserts, that there is such a complication of all the precepts of the law of God, both with one another, and with the authority of the Lawgiver, that "he who offends in one point is guilty of all," James ii. 10, 11. So since God has in his Word given us such dreadful apprehensions of his wrath, and of the guilt of sin, we dare not soften these to a degree below the majesty of the eternal God, and the dignity of his most holy laws. But, after all, we are far from the conceit of the Stoicks, who made all sins alike. We acknowledge that some sins of ignorance and infirmity may consist with a state of grace; which is either quite destroyed, or at least much eclipsed and clouded by other sins, that are more heinous in their nature, and more deliberately gone about. It is in this sense that the word "deadly sin" is to be understood in the Article; for though in the strictness of justice every sin is "deadly," yet in the dispensation of the Gospel those sins only are "deadly," that do deeply wound the conscience, and that drive away grace. Bp. Burnet.

Every sin is in its nature deadly, since "the wages of sin is death," Rom. vi. 23: and every sin is committed against the Holy Ghost, as well as against the Father and the Son; but still pardonable, if it be not that sin which is emphatically styled "The sin against the Holy Ghost;" and that is "blasphemy against the Holy Ghost;" Matt. xii. 31, 32; Mark iii. 28—30. Of which sin St. Jerome says, that "they only are guilty, who though in miracles they see the very work of God, yet slander them, and say that they are done by the devil; and ascribe to the operation of that evil spirit, and not to the divine power, all those mighty signs and wonders which were wrought for the confirmation of the Gospel." In relation to all other sins, we are, as Clement of Rome observes, "to fix our eyes on the blood of Christ, which was shed for our salvation, and hath obtained the grace of repentance for the whole world." Archdeacon Welchman.

And, "the doors," says Clement of Alexandria, "are open to every one, who in truth and with his whole heart returns to God: and the Father most willingly receives a son, who truly repents. This is the general tenor of Scripture, in which all men are invited to repentance without any discrimination or exception.

grace of God we may arise again, and amend our lives. And therefore they are to be condemned, which say, they can no more sin as long as they live here, or deny the place of forgiveness to such as truly repent.

1 John i. 8.
2 Cor. ii. 6—8.

XVII. Of Predestination and Election [h].

PREDESTINATION to Life is the everlasting purpose of God [i], whereby [k] (before the foundations of the world were laid) he hath

Eph. i. 4, 5. Matt. xxv. 34.
2 Tim. i. 9.

And we are told, even under the Mosaick dispensation, that "though our sins be as scarlet, they shall be as white as snow; though they be red like crimson, they shall be as wool," Isa. i. 18. And the exhortations to amendment and reformation, contained in the Epistles, are all addressed to persons, who had been already baptized, and who had been guilty of faults or sins subsequent to their baptism. Bp. Tomline.

[f] — Wherefore the grant of repentance &c.] It follows from the foregoing case, that "the grant of repentance is not to be denied to such, as fall into sin after baptism." This doctrine is further confirmed by what St. Paul says, Gal. vi. 1, "Brethren, if a man be overtaken in a fault, ye which are spiritual restore such an one in the spirit of meekness; considering thyself, lest thou also be tempted." Veneer. According to what has been said already upon former Articles, it has appeared that the sanctification of regenerated men is not so perfected in this life, but that there is still a mixture of defects and imperfections left in them: and the state of the new covenant is a continuance of repentance and remission of sins; for, as oft as one sins, if he repents truly of it, and forsakes his sins, there is a standing offer of the pardon of all sins; and therefore Christ has taught us to pray daily, "Forgive us our sins." If there were but one general pardon offered in baptism, this would signify little to those, who feel their infirmities, and the sins that do so easily beset them, so apt to return upon them. St. Peter's denial, his repentance, and his being restored to his apostolical dignity, seem to be recorded, partly on this account, to encourage us, even after the most heinous offences, to return to God; and never to reckon our condition desperate, were our sins ever so many, but as we find our hearts hardened in them into an obstinate impenitency. Bp. Burnet.

[g] — After we have received the Holy Ghost, &c.] Although the Holy Ghost purifies our minds, and assists and co-operates with us in the performance of our duty; yet he does not intirely take away the corruption and infirmity of our nature, nor does He destroy our free agency: and consequently, "after we have received the Holy Ghost, we may depart from grace given, and fall into sin." But, as we may relapse from virtue unto wickedness, so "we may rise again and amend our lives;" we may return to a sense of our duty, and again yield obedience to the influence of God's Holy Spirit: "and therefore they are to be condemned which say, they can no more sin as long as they live here, or deny the place of forgiveness to such as truly repent." "As those," says Bishop Pearson, "who are received into the church by the sacrament of baptism, receive the remission of their sins, of which they were guilty before they were baptized; so, after they are thus made members of the church, they receive remission of their future sins by their repentance. Christ, who hath left us a pattern of prayer, hath thereby taught us for ever to implore and beg the forgiveness of our sins: that as we, through the frailty of our nature, are always subject unto sin, so we should always exercise the acts of repentance, and for ever seek the favour of God. This then is the comfort of the Gospel, that, as it discovereth sin within us, so it propoundeth a remedy unto us. While we are in this life encompassed with flesh; while the allurements of the world, while the stratagems of Satan, while the infirmities and corruptions of our nature, betray us to the transgression of the law of God; we are always subject to offend: whence whosoever saith that he has no sin is a liar, contradicting himself, and contracting iniquity by pretending innocency; and so long as we can offend, so long we may apply ourselves unto God by repentance, and be renewed by his grace, and pardoned by his mercy." Bp. Tomline.

[h] XVII. Of Predestination and Election.] Predestination is with reason considered as one of the most abstruse doctrines of theology: and it has, in different ages of the Christian church, been the fruitful source of a great variety of controversies. These disputes have been chiefly upon points far beyond the capacity of men, and have tended but little to promote the true interests of Christianity. This Article is drawn up with great caution and judgment: in the former part of it, which relates to the meaning of the terms "predestination and election," the words of Scripture are chiefly used; and the latter part is obviously designed to guard against the evils and mischiefs, which might arise from mistaken ideas upon these intricate subjects. Bp. Tomline.

The truth of this whole Article will sufficiently appear from the texts of Scripture in the margin. But I would desire the reader to observe, that only the grace of election is asserted in it, and that the severity of reprobation is left wholly untouched upon. And here I would advise him to stop and to restrain his curiosity. For the doctrine of predestination is a profound abyss, in sounding which it is but to little purpose for young men to busy themselves. Much less does it become preachers, to trouble their hearers about these deep mysteries: they should rather set forth God's promises in general terms, as they are proposed in the Holy Scriptures, and as it is our duty to embrace them. Archdeacon Welchman.

It may not be amiss to observe here, in consequence of this Article being drawn up with so much caution, prudence, and tenderness, that if so judicious and learned a body of men, as the compilers of the Articles, were so shy of mentioning a doctrine, which, if understood in a strict and rigid sense, carries in it so shocking a reflection upon the goodness of God; one cannot but surmise that they suspected the truth of it, and modestly insinuated that those men are at least very indiscreet, who take upon them to preach to the most common audiences on subjects of this kind; and that they would have been exceedingly surprised, to have seen the declining it ranked among the several reasons which are urged in defence of separating from the Established Church. Veneer.

[i] Predestination to Life is the everlasting purpose of God, &c.] God is represented in Scripture as having pre-ordained the redemption of mankind through Christ before the foundation of the world. This redemption was to be in the nature of a covenant between God and man: and the salvation of every individual was to depend upon his observance of the proposed conditions. Men, in consequence of their free agency, would have constantly decreed by his counsel, secret to us, to deliver from curse and damnation those whom he hath chosen in Christ out of mankind, and

Gal. iii. 10.

1 Pet. i. 2.

it in their power to accept or reject this offered salvation: and God, by his prescience, foresaw who would accept, and who would reject it. Those, who He foresaw would perform the conditions of the Gospel covenant, may be said to be predestinated to life, "for whom he did foreknow, he also did predestinate," Rom. viii. 30. This appears to me the only sense, in which predestination is reconcileable with the attributes of God, and the free agency of man: and in this sense it is "the everlasting purpose of God, whereby (before the foundations of the world were laid) He hath constantly decreed by his counsel, secret to us, to deliver from curse and damnation those whom he hath chosen in Christ out of mankind, and to bring them by Christ to everlasting salvation, as vessels made to honour:" for we cannot conceive that a Being of infinite justice and mercy would arbitrarily select out of his rational creatures a determinate number, on whom He would bestow the blessing of eternal happiness: while He consigned all the rest to eternal punishment, as maintained by those who are called Supralapsarians; or passed them over as unworthy of his regard and attention, according to the doctrine of those who are called Sublapsarians. Such an idea of election ought surely to be rejected. We are to consider men as "elect according to the foreknowledge of God," 1 Pet. i. 2; that is, as He foresaw that they would be obedient to his laws. Bp. Tomline.

Some would have it thought that this Article asserts the doctrine of absolute predestination. But it will appear unreasonable to understand it in that sense, if it be considered, that in the very foregoing Article it is expressly declared, that "we may fall from grace given;" whereas they who are for the absolute decrees must of consequence assert, that a man cannot fall from grace: for, if we may fall from the means, we may also fall from the end; and if we are not absolutely predestinated to persevere in grace, we cannot be absolutely predestinated to salvation. And indeed the Puritans, in the beginning of King James the First's reign, were sensible, that this doctrine of the defectibility of grace was inconsistent with their opinion of absolute predestination: and therefore desired that these words, "though not finally," might be added at the end of the aforesaid clause which states that "we may fall from grace given;" but the king and the bishops would not hearken to it. It is likewise to be observed, that our Church does in her Catechism assert, that "God the Son redeemed all mankind:" which can never be reconciled to the doctrine of absolute election and reprobation. Veneer. And in the communion service it is said, that Christ, "by the one oblation of himself once offered, made there a full, perfect, and sufficient sacrifice, oblation, and satisfaction for the sins of the whole world." Bp. Tomline.

That the doctrine of our Church is in some places utterly irreconcileable with the absolute and irrespective predestination of both the Supralapsarians and Sublapsarians, is to me indisputably clear: insomuch that could I think absolute predestination true, I could not subscribe to the use of the liturgy. Wherefore, though I do by no means censure such absolute predestinarians as think the liturgy consistent with their notions, and do conform accordingly; yet I must own, I do not see how I could get over those difficulties, were I persuaded of the truth of their notions. And consequently I must, till I receive greater light, believe that our Church condemns those notions, by injoining and asserting such things as are irreconcilcable to them. But then, with respect to this seventeenth Article, I do not determine, whether our Church does condemn absolute predestination or not. If those, who maintain it, think themselves able to reconcile this Article to their doctrine, I am satisfied: though I must add, that I will not be bound to do the same. As for conditionate predestination, if she does not assert or favour it, yet that she does not condemn it in this Article, Mr. Plaifere has demonstrated in his "Appello Evangelium" beyond all possibility of contradiction. And indeed it is to me a most astonishing thing, that the patrons of absolute predestination are able to persuade themselves, as they very frequently and confidently maintain, that conditionate predestination is condemned in this Article by our Church. For every body that understands their notions must be forced to see, one would think, that there is not one syllable in this Article, but what the patrons of conditionate predestination would heartily approve and teach. It would be endless to enumerate all the authorities, by which this might be made appear. Let it therefore suffice, that the only part, wherein any difficulty can be pretended, is the first paragraph: and that Arminius himself, not to mention others his professed followers, does manifestly assert every branch of it. And let any man consider the true state of the controversy between the respective patrons of absolute and conditionate predestination; and then I challenge him to find me any one syllable in the first paragraph of the Article, that favours absolute predestination in opposition to that which is conditionate. Dr. Bennet.

[k] — the everlasting purpose of God, whereby &c.] The first proposition in this Article is our Church's definition of what she means by "predestination to life." She says, first, it is "the everlasting purpose of God." Now every purpose of God is everlasting; because God from all eternity knew all contingent events, and was resolved concerning them, either to permit or prevent them. Secondly, by this purpose He "constantly decreed:" for inconstancy is impossible in God. Thirdly, He decreed "before the foundations of the world were laid." This must needs be true, because his purpose was everlasting. Fourthly, He thus decreed to "deliver those, whom he hath chosen in Christ out of mankind, from curse and damnation." Now that some are to be delivered from that curse and damnation, into which original sin had plunged them, the whole tenor of the Scripture shews. And that God has in Christ chosen some out of mankind, is evident: because those, that embrace Christianity, are upon this account frequently called the elect or chosen: but then those, who embrace Christianity, are not all of them delivered from curse and damnation; because some of them do not perform the conditions of the Gospel; and consequently, though they enjoy the first or temporal election, yet they do not enjoy the second or eternal one, which is unattainable without perseverance in good works. Now it is this second, even the eternal election, which the Church speaks of in this place: because those, who are here called "the chosen in Christ," are "delivered from curse and damnation;" whereas such as enjoy the temporal, but miss of the eternal election, do fall into that curse and damnation, from which the others are delivered. Fifthly, those that are chosen in Christ, namely, those that enjoy the second or eternal election, God not only delivers from curse and damnation, but He also "brings them by Christ to everlasting salvation, as vessels made to honour." That He brings to bring them by Christ to everlasting

Rom. viii. 30. salvation, as vessels made to honour. Wherefore, they which be endued with so excellent a benefit of God be called according to God's purpose by his Spirit working in due season: they through grace obey the calling:
Eph. i. 7. they be justified freely: they be
Gal. iv. 4, 5. made sons of God by adoption: they
Rom. viii. 29. be made like the image of his only-begotten Son Jesus Christ: they walk
Eph. ii. 10. religiously in good works, and at
Eph. i. 11. 1 Pet. i. 3—5. length, by God's mercy, they attain to everlasting felicity.

As the godly consideration of Predestination[l], and our Election in Christ, is full of sweet, pleasant, and unspeakable comfort to godly persons, and such as feel in themselves the working of the Spirit of Christ, mortifying the works of the flesh, and their earthly members, and drawing up their mind to high and heavenly things, as well because it doth greatly establish and confirm their faith of eternal Salvation to be enjoyed through Christ, as because it doth fervently kindle their love towards God: So, for curious and carnal persons, lacking the Spirit of Christ, to have continually before their eyes the sentence of God's Predestination, is a most dangerous downfal[m], whereby the Devil doth thrust them either into desperation, or into wretchlessness[n] of most unclean living, no less perilous than desperation.

Furthermore, we must receive God's promises[o] in such wise, as they John iii. 16. 1 Tim. ii. 4. 6.

---

them to everlasting salvation; and that this is done by Christ, that is, by the merits of Christ, in whom they believe, and whose Gospel they obey; and that upon this account they are treated as vessels made to honour; none can question. Sixthly, all this is done "by God's counsel secret to us." For God is the only contriver and finisher of the happiness of the elect: and what particular men those elect are, whom He has thus decreed to save, we know not: because He alone can search the heart; nor has He revealed to us, what particular Christians will persevere: so that this counsel of his, for the salvation of particular Christians, must needs be secret to us. This definition therefore of "predestination to life" needs no farther proof, being manifestly built upon the constant doctrine of the Scriptures, repeated in almost every page of the New Testament: and indeed the doctrine of this definition is universally allowed, except by such as deny God's certain prescience of future contingent events.

The second proposition sets forth the manner of God's bringing this great work to a conclusion. The Church says, first, that "they which be endued with so excellent a benefit," that is, those who are predestinated to life, "are called according to God's purpose by his Spirit working in due season:" that is, they not only become professors of Christianity, but are inwardly moved and prompted by God's grace to the performance of his will. Secondly, "they through grace obey the calling:" that is, they are effectually wrought and prevailed upon thereby. Thirdly, "they be justified freely:" that is, they are esteemed righteous by God, who extends his free mercy to them for Christ's sake. Fourthly, "they be made sons of God by adoption;" it may be said, all Christians are such by virtue of their profession: but then those, that are thus effectually chosen, do come to the possession of that inheritance, which their elder brother Christ hath purchased for them with his blood; whereas others, though for a while they are honoured with the name of adopted sons, are afterwards cast off by their Father upon account of their disobedience. Fifthly, "they be made like the image of his only-begotten Son Jesus Christ:" that is, sixthly, "they walk religiously in good works;" for without holiness no man shall see the Lord. Seventhly, at length, namely, after they have finished their Christian course, and persisted in sincere piety to the end of their days, "by God's mercy they attain to everlasting felicity." The truth of all these particulars is readily acknowledged by all parties. Dr. Bennet.

[l] As the godly consideration of Predestination, &c.] That is, as a due consideration of the divine decree to save all, who shall believe and obey the Gospel, is a source of inexpressible consolation to virtuous and godly persons; encourages them to rely upon the promised assistance of the Holy Spirit; fortifies them against the temptations to fleshly lusts; teaches them to set their affection on things above; strengthens their faith; and animates their love towards God: so the unwarranted idea of God's absolute and unconditional predestination is apt to drive the presumptuous and wicked, who resist the influence of the Spirit of Christ, either into a state of gloomy despondency on the one hand, or into a course of unbridled licentiousness on the other. If a man thinks that he is under an inevitable decree, as he will have little remorse for all the evil he does, while he imputes it to that inevitable force that constrains him; so he will naturally conclude that it is to no purpose for him to struggle with impossibilities: and men being inclined both to throw all blame off from themselves, and to indulge themselves in laziness and sloth, these practices are too natural to mankind to be encouraged by opinions that favour them. All virtue and religion, all discipline and industry, must arise from this, as their first principle, that there is a power in us to govern our own thoughts and actions, and to raise and improve our faculties. If this is denied, all endeavours, all education, all pains, either on ourselves or others, are vain and fruitless things. Bp. Tomline, Bp. Burnet.

[m] — downfal,] The Latin word is "præcipitium," a precipice, which seems better to describe the dangerous situation in which such persons are placed. Bp. Tomline.

[n] — wretchlessness] That is, carelessness. Bp. Tomline.

[o] Furthermore, we must receive God's promises &c.] "God's promises generally set forth in holy Scripture" seem here to be opposed to "the counsel of God secret to us," spoken of in the former part of this Article: and it is declared, that, whatever promises are made to us in Scripture, we are to receive them implicitly, and not pervert their obvious sense by abstruse inquiries into be generally set forth to us in holy Scripture: and, in our doings, that will of God is to be followed[p], which we have expressly declared unto us in the Word of God. Luke x. 25–28.

XVIII. Of obtaining eternal Salvation only by the Name of Christ[q].

THEY also are to be had accursed[r] that presume to say[s], That every man shall be saved by the Law or Sect which he professeth[t], so that he be diligent to frame his life according to that Law, and the light of Nature. For holy Scripture doth set out unto us only the Name of Jesus Christ, whereby men must be saved. Mark xvi. 16. John xiv. 6. Acts iv. 12. 1 John v. 11, 12.

XIX. Of the Church[u].

THE visible Church of Christ[x] is a Congregation of faithful men, Acts ii. 42.

---

the hidden mysteries of the divine dispensations. The promises, that "whosoever believeth in the only-begotten Son of God shall not perish, but have everlasting life," John iii. 16; and that the death of Christ will be accepted as "a propitiation for the sins of the whole world," 1 John ii. 2; are so plain, that we cannot well mistake their meaning, as far as they respect ourselves: and they are also so important, that, if we value our own comfort, we shall not suffer our faith in them to be shaken by any difficulties which speculative men may raise concerning election and predestination, as they relate to mankind at large. Bp. Tomline.

This proposition imports, that we must apply general promises to ourselves; not doubting, but that, if we perform the conditions, we shall enjoy the mercy. The reason is, because all particulars are included in universals: and consequently a general promise is made a particular one to myself, if I be such a person as that general promise is made to. Dr. Bennet.

[p] — and, in our doings, that will of God is to be followed, &c.] The will of God can be collected from Scripture only: as it there stands revealed, it is to be obeyed without any exception or reserve: no rules of action are to be allowed, which are not authorized by the declarations of Scripture; no conduct is to be justified or excused, which is contradictory to the written word of God.

This last branch of the Article seems to have been directed against a set of profligate enthusiasts, who, at the time of the Reformation, urged the will of God as an excuse for their vices. The impiety and the mischief of such a principle, which is a most unjustifiable perversion of the doctrine of predestination, are equally obvious. The will of God, as was just now observed, can be known only from the Scriptures; and his will so revealed ought to be the rule of every one's conduct. Bp. Tomline.

"The Article of predestination," says Dr. Waterland, "has been vainly enough urged in favour of Calvinistical tenets: for, not to mention the saving clause in the conclusion, or its saying nothing at all of reprobation, and nothing in favour of absolute predestination to life; there seems to be a plain distinction, as Plaifere has well observed, in the Article itself, of two kinds of predestination; one of which is recommended to us, the other condemned. Predestination, rightly and piously considered, that is, considered not irrespectively, not absolutely, but with respect to faith in Christ, faith working by love, and persevering; such predestination is 'a sweet and comfortable doctrine:' but 'the sentence of God's predestination,' it is not said here 'in Christ' as before, that sentence, simply or absolutely considered, as curious and carnal persons are apt to consider it, is a most dangerous downfal, leading either to security or desperation, as having no respect to foreseen faith, and a good life, nor depending upon it, but antecedent in order to it. The Article then seems to speak of two subjects: first, of predestination, soberly understood with respect to faith in Christ, which is wholesome doctrine; secondly, of predestination simply considered, which is a dangerous doctrine. And the latter part seems to be intended against those Gospellers, whereof Bishop Burnet speaks. Nor is it imaginable that any true and sound doctrine of the Gospel should of itself have any aptness to become a downfal even to carnal persons: but carnal persons are apt to corrupt a sound doctrine, and suit it to their own lusts and passions, thereby falsifying the truth. This doctrine, so depraved and mistaken, our Church condemns: that is, she condemns absolute, irrespective predestination, not the other." Bp. Tomline.

[q] XVIII. Of obtaining eternal Salvation only by the Name of Christ.] This Article is to be considered as directed against those who maintained, that it was a matter of indifference, whether men embraced the Gospel or not; that all religions were equally acceptable to God; and that all men would obtain salvation, although they rejected the Gospel, provided they observed the rules of the religion which they professed, and acted in conformity to the dictates of reason. Bp. Tomline.

[r] They also are to be had accursed &c.] That is, they are to be looked upon, as subject to the wrath of God, and unworthy of communion with the Church. It was formerly the custom to condemn errors in this form: "If any one holds such an error, anathema sit," which we translate, "let him be accursed:" many instances of this kind may be found, not only in the acts of Councils, but also in the controversial writings of the ancient fathers; and the practice seems to have been derived from some expressions in Scripture, such as Rom. ix. 3; 1 Cor. xvi. 22; Gal. i. 8. The persons, against whom an anathema was pronounced, were excluded from communion with the church of Christ. Bp. Tomline.

[s] — that presume to say, &c.] They certainly, if any, deserve to be anathematized or accursed, who make the Gospel of Christ of none effect, and look upon it as entirely useless. For in vain hath Christ revealed it, and in vain hath He commanded it to be preached throughout the world, if, after all, believers and unbelievers are equally entitled to salvation. So far is this from being the case, that it is said of our blessed Saviour, Acts iv. 12, that "there is no salvation in any other; for there is none other name under heaven given among men whereby we must be saved." And in Mark xvi. 16, salvation is promised to those only who believe, and damnation is denounced upon those who believe not. See also John xiv. 6; 1 John v. 11, 12. How God will deal with those, among whom Christ hath not been preached, is not our business to determine. Charity indeed requires us to hope well of such of them, if any such there be, who live up to the rules of right reason: but to place them upon a level with in the which the pure Word of God is preached, and the Sacraments be duly ministered according to Christ's ordinance in all those things the church of God is a very high degree of boldness and presumption. Concerning such persons this Article is silent: and it only declares those men to deserve being anathematized, who hold all religions to be indifferent matters, as if God regarded them all alike: whereas the religion of Christ is still the only way, which God has instituted, to salvation. Archdeacon Welchman, Veneer.

[t] — That every man shall be saved by the Law or Sect which he professeth, &c.] A great difference is to be observed between the words "saved by the law," and "saved in the law;" the one is condemned, but not the other. To be "saved by a law or sect" signifies, that by the virtue of that law or sect such men who follow it may be saved: whereas to be "saved in a law or sect" imports only that God may extend his compassions to men that are engaged in false religions. The former only is condemned, by this Article, which affirms nothing concerning the other. In sum: if the Christian religion was delivered to the world in the name of God, and was attested by miracles, so that we believe its truth; we must believe every part and tittle of it, and by consequence those passages, which denounce the wrath and judgments of God against impenitent sinners, and which promise mercy and salvation only upon the account of Christ and his death. We must "believe with our hearts, and confess it with our mouths:" we must "not be ashamed of Christ or of his words," lest He should be "ashamed of us, when he comes in the glory of his Father, with his holy angels," Rom. x. 9; Mark viii. 38. This, I say, being part of the Gospel, must be as true as the Gospel itself is. Bp. Burnet.

As to such then, to whom the Christian religion is revealed, there can no question be made; for it is certain they are under an indispensable obligation to obey and follow that which is graciously revealed to them. Concerning those, who never heard of this religion, whether, or how, they can be saved, there are passages in Scripture, such as Rom. ii. 12. 14, 15; x. 14; Acts x. 34, 35; which seem to import, that those, who make the best use they can of that small measure of light that is given them, shall be judged according to it; and that God will not require more of them than He has given them. This agrees so well also with the ideas which we have both of justice and goodness, that this opinion wants not special colours to make it look well. But on the other hand, the pardon of sin, and the favour of God, are so positively limited to the believing in Christ Jesus, and it is so expressly said, that "there is no salvation in any other," and that "there is none other name" or authority "under heaven given among men, whereby we must be saved;" that the only distinction, which can be made in this matter, is this, that it is only on the account and in the consideration of the death of Christ that sin is pardoned and men are saved.

This is the only sacrifice in the sight of God: so that whosoever are received into mercy, have it through Christ as the channel and conveyance of it. But it is not so plainly said, that no man can be saved, unless he has an explicit knowledge of this, together with a belief in it. Few in the old dispensation could have that: infants and idiots have it not: and yet it were a bold thing to say, that they may not be saved by it. So it does not appear to be clearly revealed, that none should be saved by the death of Christ, unless they do explicitly both know it and believe in it: since it is certain, that God may pardon sin only upon that score, without obliging all men to believe in it, especially when it is not revealed to them.

And here another distinction is to be made, which will clear this whole matter, and all the difficulties that arise out of it. A great difference is to be made between a fœderal certainty of salvation, secured by the promise of God and of this new covenant in Christ Jesus, and the extent to which the goodness and mercy of God may go. None are in the fœderal state of salvation but Christians: to them is given the covenant of grace, and to them the promises of God are made and offered; so that they have a certainty of it upon their performing those conditions, that are put in the promises. All others are out of this promise, to whom the tidings of it were never brought: but yet a great difference is to be made between them, and those who have been invited to this covenant, and admitted to the outward profession and the common privileges of it, and who yet have in effect rejected it. These are under such positive denunciations of wrath and judgment, that there is no room left for any charitable thoughts or hopes concerning them: so that if any part of the Gospel is true, that also must be true, that they are under condemnation, for having "loved darkness more than light," John iii. 19, when the light shone upon them and visited them. But as for them, whom God has left in darkness, they are certainly out of the covenant, out of those promises and declarations that are made in it: so that they have no fœderal right to be saved; neither can we affirm that they shall be saved: but on the other hand they are not under those positive denunciations, because they were never made to them; therefore since God has not declared that they shall be damned, no more ought we to take upon us to damn them.

Instead of stretching the severity of justice by an inference, we may rather venture to stretch the mercy of God: since that is the attribute, which is most magnificently spoken of in the Scriptures; so that we ought to think of it in the largest and most comprehensive manner. But indeed the most proper way is, for us to stop where the revelation of God stops; and not to be wise beyond what is written, but to leave the secrets of God as mysteries, too far above us to examine, or to sound their depth. We do certainly know on what terms we ourselves shall be saved or damned: and we ought to be contented with that, and rather study to "work out our own salvation with fear and trembling," than to let our minds run out into uncertain speculations concerning the measures and the conditions of God's uncovenanted mercies: we ought to take all possible care, that we ourselves come not into condemnation, rather than to decide positively of others, who must, or who must not, be condemned.

It is therefore enough to fix this according to the design or the Article, that it is not free to men to choose at pleasure what religion they will: as if that were left to them, or that all religions were alike: for this strikes at the foundation, and undermines the truth of all revealed religion. None are within the covenant of grace, but true Christians: and all are excluded out of it, to whom it is offered, who do not receive and believe it, and live according to it. So in a word, all, that are saved, are saved through Christ: but whether all these shall be called to the explicit knowledge of Him, is more than we have any good ground to affirm. Bp. Burnet.

that of necessity are requisite to the same.

As the Church[y] of Jerusalem[z], Alexandria, and Antioch, have erred;

[u] XIX. Of the Church.] We now enter upon the fourth and last division of the Articles, namely, those which relate to Christians as members of a religious society; and the first point to be settled upon this subject is the meaning of the word "Church." Bp. Tomline.

[x] The visible Church of Christ &c.] This expression seems to be used in contradistinction to the mystical or invisible church of Christ. The mystical church consists of those persons, who have truly believed and obeyed the Gospel; and who are conceived, although they have lived at different periods, to be united into one body, which is called mystical or invisible, not only because they are not now all upon earth; but because the qualities and properties, which gave them a claim to be members of this blessed society, were never the objects of sense, and could not be judged of by men from merely external circumstances. The visible church in its most extensive sense may include all persons, who are, or have been, by outward profession, Christians, whether they have or have not believed all the doctrines, or obeyed all the precepts of the Gospel. This may be called the visible Catholick church: and our Saviour Himself alludes to the mixture of real and nominal Christians in his visible church, Matt. xiii. 47. 24. But in this Article the "visible church" is used in a more limited sense; and comprehends only the Christians of one country or city, or of one persuasion: thus it mentions the church of Jerusalem, of Alexandria, of Antioch, and of Rome; and in like manner we often speak of the Church of England, of Holland, of Geneva, and of the Lutheran church: and all those different churches are parts of the visible Catholick church. It is well known that the church of Rome considers itself as the only Christian church: but on the other hand we extend the name to any "congregation of faithful men, in the which the pure word of God is preached, and the sacraments be duly administered, according to Christ's ordinance in all those things that of necessity are requisite to the same." Bp. Tomline.

Since it is religion that makes a church, and not the church that makes religion, the church is to be tried and discerned by religion, and not religion by the church. The visible church therefore, for the invisible church, which consists of the elect only, is not here treated of, is such an one as is described Acts ii. 42: such an one as "continues stedfastly in the Apostles' doctrine and fellowship, and in breaking of bread, and in prayers:" or, in other words, it is such an one, as professeth the Christian religion, and believes in the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghost, and baptizes its members in their name, and celebrates the Lord's Supper, as Christ hath appointed. These things are essential to a church: and, as long as these are preserved, a church does not cease to be, though in some other things it may err; for every error does not subvert the foundations of a church. But particular churches may not only err, but also fall off entirely from Christ: for that saying of his, "Upon this rock I will build my church, and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it," Matt. xvi. 18, is to be understood only of the catholick or universal church. Archdeacon Welchman, Veneer.

The word church is used in the New Testament in a more or less extended sense. Sometimes it means the whole body or society of faithful Christians throughout the world, Matt. xvi. 18; or believers in the Gospel or Christians, generally, Acts ii. 42; Eph. v. 23—25. But in a more limited sense St. Paul, in addressing the Corinthian Christians, calls them "the church of Christ which is at Corinth," 1 Cor. i. 2: St. John writes "to the seven churches which are in Asia," Rev. i. 4: and St. Luke says, that St. Paul "went through Syria and Cilicia confirming the churches," Acts xv. 41. In these passages the word "church" is applied to the Christians of particular cities. And even the believers of a single family are by St. Paul called the church, in the cases of Priscilla and Aquila, Nymphas, and Philemon, Rom. xvi. 3. 5; Col. iv. 15; Philem. ver. 2. Bp. Tomline.

[y] As the Church'&c.] The latter part of this Article relates to the pretended claim of infallibility in the church of Rome: and the compilers of our Articles have very wisely taken the first opportunity, which the plan of their arrangement allowed, to deny this claim; since, if it were admitted, all the other doctrines of Popery would be at once established; an infallible church could not maintain an untrue doctrine. Bp. Tomline.

[z] As the Church of Jerusalem, &c.] This Article takes notice of the errors of the churches of Jerusalem, Alexandria, and Antioch, because they were the most famous ones, and were advanced to the dignity of being patriarchal churches, as well as that of Rome. Archdeacon Welchman.

It is not questioned but that the other patriarchal churches have erred: both that, where our Saviour Himself first taught, and which was governed by two of the apostles successively; and those, which were founded by St. Peter, in person or by proxy, as church history represents Alexandria and Antioch to have been. Bp. Burnet.

That the church of Rome hath erred, as stated in the Article, is evident from the whole course of our controversies with them. Their errors in life they dare not deny; and their errors in "faith and manner of ceremonies" evidently appear from their Trent Creed, which is burdened with a vast variety of such admirable falsehoods as have grievously corrupted their worship. For instance, the doctrine of transubstantiation has led them to the grossest idolatry. Dr. Bennet.

That "the church of Rome has erred in their manner of living," is sufficiently evident from history. Bishop Burnet says, that "for above 800 years the papacy, as it is represented by their own writers, is perhaps the worst succession of men that is to be found in history:" and that "the church of Rome has erred in its ceremonies, and in matters of faith," will fully appear from the following Articles.

The church of Rome existed many centuries before any mention was made of infallibility, although it had, as every one knows, frequent disputes with other churches from a very early period. This doctrine was afterwards asserted and received: and its long and general prevalence is perhaps the strongest instance, which can be produced from the annals of the world, of the presumption and artifice of one set of men, and of the blindness and credulity of another. But since infallibility has been an established tenet of the church of Rome, there has been a difference of opinion among Papists, whether it be vested in the popes themselves, when they pronounce their decrees ex cathedrâ; or in general councils. This very doubt is an argument against the thing itself; since, wherever so important and distinguished a privilege as infallibility resided, it could not but be manifest and apparent: and we may conclude, that if it had pleased God to place such a power in any part of his church, He would have dis-so also the Church of Rome hath erred, not only in their living and manner of Ceremonies, but also in matters of faith.

XX. Of the Authority of the Church[a].

THE Church hath power[b] to decree Rites or Ceremonies[c], 1 Cor. xiv. 40. and authority in Controversies of Faith[d]: And yet it is not lawful[e] for the Church to ordain any thing that is contrary to God's Word written, neither may it so expound one place of Scripture[f], that it be repugnant to another. Wherefore, although the Church be a witness and a keeper[g] 1 Tim. i. 3. Tit. iii. 10. Matt xxviii. 20. Gal. i. 6—8. Rom. iii. 4. Rom. iii. 2.

tinctly pointed out the persons in whom it was to be found. General Councils will be considered hereafter. In the mean time we may observe, that many popes, in their bulls and other publick instruments, have themselves laid claim to their own personal infallibility in the most arrogant and blasphemous manner. This monstrous doctrine is now so universally reprobated, as being repugnant to the nature of man, as unfounded in Scripture, as inconsistent with God's general government of the world, as unsupported by miracles or any other authentick sign, and as clearly refuted by the opposite and contrary decisions of different popes; that it is unnecessary to add any thing further upon the subject. Bp. Tomline.

[a] XX. Of the Authority of the Church.] The meaning of the word "Church" having been settled in the preceding Article, the next thing to be determined is, what authority belongs to every particular church? and this inquiry naturally divides itself into two parts; namely, external forms, and matters of faith: both of which are treated of in this Article. Bp. Tomline.

[b] The Church hath power &c.] By the Church we are here to understand those that are vested with ecclesiastical authority. It is not meant to exclude such, as have nothing to do with the government of the Church, from being a part of the Church; for if the governours of the Church be included in the definition of the Church, as every one grants they are, then any part of ecclesiastical authority, which of right is exercised by these governours, may properly and consistently be said to be exercised by the Church. And since it is their business to take care, that "every thing be done in the Church decently and in order," 1 Cor. xiv. 40; and to take care that the true faith be preserved, as appears from Tit. iii. 10, "A man that is an heretick, after the first and second admonition reject," and from 1 Tim. i. 3, "As I besought thee to abide still at Ephesus, when I went into Macedonia, that thou mightest charge some that they teach no other doctrine:" it follows, that they must have a right to decree rites and ceremonies, without which nothing can be done in publick assemblies that is decent and orderly; and that they must have authority in controversies of faith, that the peace of the Church be not disturbed by contentious disputations, and that the minds of the faithful be not corrupted by the sophistry of hereticks. Archdeacon Welchman, Veneer.

[c] — to decree Rites or Ceremonies,] It is very visible, that in the Gospels and Epistles there are but few rules laid down as to ritual matters. In the Epistles there are some general rules given, that must take in a great many cases; such as, "Let all things be done to edification, to order, and to peace," Rom. xiv. 19; 1 Cor. xiv. 40: and in the Epistles to Timothy and Titus, many rules are given in such general words, as, "Lay hands suddenly on no man," that, in order to the guiding of particular cases by them, many distinctions and specialities were to be interposed, to making them practicable and useful. In matters that are merely ritual, the state of mankind in different climates and ages is apt to vary; and the same things, that in one scene of human nature may look grave, and seem fit for any society, may in another age look light, and dissipate men's thoughts. It is also evident, that there is not a system of rules given in the New Testament about all these: and yet a due method in them is necessary, to maintain the order and decency that become divine things. This seems to be a part of the Gospel "liberty," that it is not "a law of ordinances," Gal. ii. 4; iv. 9; v. 1: these things being left to be varied according to the diversities of mankind.

The Jewish religion was delivered to one nation, and the main parts of it were to be performed in one place: they were also to be limited in rituals, lest they might have taken some practices from their neighbours round about them, and so by the use of their rites have rendered idolatrous practices more familiar and acceptable to them. And yet they had many rites among them in our Saviour's time, which are not mentioned in any part of the Old Testament: such was the whole constitution of their synagogues, with all the service and officers that belonged to them; they had a baptism among them, besides several rites added to the Paschal service. Our Saviour reproved them for none of these: He hallowed some of them to be the fœderal rites of his new dispensation: He went to their synagogues: and, though He reproved them for overvaluing their rites, for preferring them to the laws of God, and making these void by their traditions, yet He does not condemn them for the use of them. And, while of the greater precepts He says, "These things ye ought to have done;" He adds concering their rites and lesser matters, "and not to have left the other undone," Matt. xxiii. 23.

If then such a liberty was allowed in so limited a religion, it seems highly suitable to the sublimer state of the Christian liberty, that there should be room left for such appointments and alterations, as the different state of times and places should require. In such rules we ought to acquiesce. Nor can we assign any other bounds to our submission in this case, than those which the Gospel has limited. "We must obey God rather than man," Acts v. 29; and we must in the first place "render to God the things that are God's," and then "give to Cæsar the things that are Cæsar's," Matt. xxii. 21. So that if either Church or State have power to make rules and laws in such matters, they must have this extent given them; that, till they break in upon the laws of God and the Gospel, we must be bound to obey them. A mean cannot be put here; either they have no power at all; or they have a power that must go to every thing that is not forbid by any law of God. This is the only measure that can be given in this matter. Bp. Burnet.

[d] — authority in Controversies of Faith:] It appears from the preceding Article, that it is not here intended to ascribe to the Church an infallible authority. The words of this Article are, "controversies of faith:" and this expression perhaps alludes to disputes which may arise between the members of any church; and it may be designed to assert, that the governing part of the Church has authority to take cognizance of such disputes, and to deliver their judgment concerning the points in controversy. Great weight and deference of holy Writ, yet, as it ought not to decree any thing against the same[h], so besides the same ought it not to enforce any thing to be believed for necessity of Salvation.

Acts iv. 19. Gal. iii. 15; i. 9.

XXI. Of the Authority of General Councils[i].

GENERAL Councils may not be gathered together[k] without the commandment and will of Princes. And when they be gathered together[l], (forasmuch as they be an assembly of men, whereof all be not governed with the Spirit and Word of God,) they may err, and sometimes have erred, even in things pertaining unto God. Wherefore things ordained by them[m] as necessary to salvation have neither strength nor would be due to such decisions: and every man, that finds his own thoughts differ from them, ought to examine the matter over again with much attention and care, freeing himself all he can from prejudice and obstinacy, with a just distrust of his own understanding, and an humble respect to the judgment of his superiors. This is due to the consideration of peace and union, and to that authority which the Church has to maintain it: but if, after all possible methods of inquiry, a man cannot master his thoughts, or make them agree with the publick decisions, his conscience is not under bonds; since this authority is not absolute, nor grounded upon a promise of infallibility. But this, however, we may observe, that, without any pretension to infallibility, and without any infringement of the right of private judgment, the Church has power to declare Articles of faith, provided they be authorized by Scripture, as guides to truth, and as conditions upon which it receives persons into its communion. This is the principle of all Creeds; and indeed the only principle upon which the unity of "the faith once delivered to the saints" can be preserved. Every church therefore must possess a right to compose new or to alter existing Articles, according as the circumstance of the times shall make it necessary to defend the purity of Christian doctrine against prevailing heresies, and to point out to the unlearned part of the community the snares which may be laid in their paths. Bp. Burnet, Bp. Tomline.

Rom. xiii. 1.

[e] And yet it is not lawful &c.] The written word of God is the rule of our faith and practice; and no consideration whatever can justify a departure from it. Bp. Tomline.

[f] — neither may it so expound one place of Scripture, &c.] All Scripture being given by inspiration of God, there must be a perfect consistency and agreement in all its parts; and consequently no church can have a right to interpret one passage of Scripture in such a manner, as to make it contradictory to another. Bp. Tomline.

[g] — Wherefore, although the Church be a witness and a keeper &c.] It appears by historical evidence, that the holy Scriptures have been constantly extant in the Church; and that she has in all ages received the same Scriptures which we now enjoy: and therefore she is a witness and keeper of them. Dr. Bennet. The Church's being called the witness of holy writ is not to be resolved into any judgment that they pass upon it, as a body of men that have authority to judge and give sentence, so that the canonicalness or the uncanonicalness of any book shall depend upon their testimony: but is resolved into this, that such successions and numbers of men, whether of the laity or clergy, have in a course of many ages had these books preserved and read among them; so that it was not possible to corrupt that, upon which so many men had their eyes in all the corners and ages of Christendom.

And thus we believe the Scriptures to be a book written by inspired men, and delivered by them to the church, upon the testimony of the church that at first received it; knowing that those great matters of fact, contained and appealed to in it, were true: and also upon the like testimony of the succeeding ages, who preserved, read, copied, and translated that book, as they have received it from the first. Bp. Burnet.

[h] — as it ought not to decree any thing against the same, &c.] To the Christians "are committed the oracles of God," as they were to the Jews in old time, as St. Paul observes, Rom. iii. 2. Yet the church ought not to "decree any thing against the same," which is farther confirmed by the answer of Peter and John to the Jewish rulers, Acts iv. 19, "Whether it be right in the sight of God to hearken unto you more than unto God, judge ye." Neither ought the church to "inforce any thing besides to be believed for necessity of salvation;" which is likewise confirmed by what St. Paul saith, Gal. iii. 15, "Brethren, I speak after the manner of men: though it be but a man's covenant, yet if it be confirmed, no man disannulleth or addeth thereunto." We may argue therefore, that much less may men presume to take from, or add to, the word of God. See Article vi. Veneer.

[i] XXI. Of the Authority of General Councils.] In the last Article the power of an individual church was considered: this relates to the authority of general Councils, which are the aggregate of all particular churches, that is, of persons lawfully appointed to represent them. Bp. Tomline.

[k] General Councils may not be gathered together &c.] Clergymen are subject to their princes, according to these words, "Let every soul be subject to the higher powers," Rom. xiii. 1. If then they are subject to them, they cannot be obliged to go out of their dominions upon the summons of any other: their persons being under the laws and authority of that country to which they belong. Bp. Burnet.

Since it is not lawful for bishops to leave their own country, and go into other dominions, without the leave of their own princes, it follows, that they cannot without the will of princes assemble at general Councils. There were indeed many provincial Councils, but no general one, before Constantine, by whose authority the first, that is, the Nicene Council, was assembled, as also the following ones were by the authority of the following emperors. Archdeacon Welchman.

The four first general Councils, namely, that of Nice, in the year 325; of Constantinople, in 381; of Ephesus, in 431; and of Chalcedon, in 451; were summoned respectively by the Emperors Constantine, Theodosius the Great, Theodosius the Younger, and Marcian, whose dominions included the whole, or nearly the whole, of Christendom. The emperors continued to exercise the same power for several centuries afterwards: but at length the popes of Rome, among other usurpations, assumed to themselves the right of summoning general Councils; and the first which met by their authority was the first Lateran Council, in the year 1132. Authors are not agreed about the number of general Councils: papists usually reckon eighteen; but protestant writers will not allow, that nearly so authority, unless it may be declared that they be taken out of holy Scripture.

XXII. Of Purgatory[n].

THE Romish Doctrine concerning Purgatory[o], Pardons[p], Worshipping and Adoration, as well of Images[q] as of Reliques[r], and also Invocation of Saints[s], is a fond thing[t] vainly invented, and grounded upon no warranty of Scripture, but rather repugnant to the Word of God.

---

many had a right to that name. The last general Council was that held at Trent for the purpose of checking the progress of the Reformation. It first met by the command of Pope Paul the Third, in 1545: it was suspended during the latter part of the pontificate of his successor, Julius the Third; and the whole of the pontificates of Marcellus the Second and Paul the Fourth; that is, from 1552 to 1562; in which year it met again by the authority of Pope Pius the Fourth; and it ended while he was Pope, in 1563. Bp. Tomline.

[l] — And when they be gathered together, &c.] Since bishops are still but men, as well when they are in a Council, as when they are out of it, and still liable to the weaknesses and imperfections of human nature, it is no wonder that what is human should err, and it is manifest that even they have actually erred. Archdeacon Welchman.

For the proof of this, take a remarkable instance. The Council of Ariminum consisted of about four hundred bishops, from all parts of the Christian world; a number much superior to that which assembled at Nice. And yet, though it was orthodox at first, it fell in at last with the Arians; and consequently "erred, even in things pertaining to God." Dr. Bennet.

Indeed, neither the first general Councils themselves, nor those who defended their decisions, ever pretended to infallibility; this was a claim of a much more recent date, suited to the dark ages, in which it was asserted and maintained, but now considered equally groundless and absurd in the case of general Councils, as in that of the popes. The observation which we made upon the pretended claim of infallibility in the Roman pontiffs, may be extended to general Councils. If God had been pleased to exempt them from a possibility of error, he would have announced that important privilege in his written word; but no such promise or assurance is mentioned in the New Testament. If infallibility belonged to the whole church collectively, or to any individual part of it, it must be so prominent and conspicuous, that no mistake or doubt could exist upon the subject: and above all, it must have prevented those dissensions, contests, heresies, and schisms, which have abounded among Christians from the days of the Apostles to the present times; and of which that very church, which is the assertor and patron of this doctrine, has had its full share. Bp. Tomline.

[m] — Wherefore things ordained by them &c.] See the sixth Article, and the notes there. As to the four general Councils which this church declares she receives, they are received only because we are persuaded from the Scriptures, that their decisions are made according to them: that the Son is truly God, of the same substance with the Father; that the Holy Ghost is also truly God; that the divine nature was truly united to the human in Christ, and that, in one person; that both natures remained distinct, and that the human nature was not swallowed up of the divine. These truths we find in the Scriptures, and therefore we believe them. We reverence those Councils for the sake of their doctrine: but do not believe the doctrine for the authority of the Councils. Bp. Burnet.

[n] XXII. Of Purgatory.] This Article is entitled "Of Purgatory:" but it relates to four other doctrines as well as purgatory; all of which were maintained by the church of Rome, and were rejected by our Church, and indeed by all Protestants, at the time of the Reformation. Bp. Tomline.

There are two small variations in this Article from that published in King Edward's reign. What is here called "the Romish doctrine" is there called "the doctrine of Schoolmen." The plain reason of this is, that these errors were not so fully espoused by the body of the Roman church, when these Articles were first published, so that some writers, who softened matters, threw them upon the Schoolmen; and therefore the Article was cautiously worded, in laying them there: but before these, which we have now, were published, the decree and canons concerning the mass had passed at Trent, in which most of the heads of this Article are either affirmed or supposed; though the formal decree concerning them was made some months after these Articles were published. This will serve to justify that diversity. The second difference is only the leaving out of a severe word. "Perniciously repugnant to the word of God" was put at first: but "perniciously" being considered to be only a hard word, they judged very right in the second edition of them, that it was enough to say "repugnant to the word of God." Bp. Burnet.

[o] The Romish Doctrine concerning Purgatory, &c.] The first of the particulars here rejected is purgatory; concerning which the doctrine of the church of Rome is, that every man is liable both to temporal and eternal punishment for his sins; that God, upon the account of the death and intercession of Christ, does indeed pardon sin as to its eternal punishment; but the sinner is still liable to temporal punishment, which he must expiate by acts of penance and sorrow in this world, together with such other sufferings as God shall think fit to lay upon him: but, if he does not expiate them in this life, there is a state of suffering and misery in the next world, where the soul is to bear the temporal punishment of its sins, which may continue longer or shorter till the day of judgment. And in order to the shortening of this, the prayers and supererogations of men here on earth, or the intercession of the saints in heaven, but above all things the sacrifice of the mass, are of great efficacy. This is the doctrine of the church of Rome, asserted in the Councils of Florence and Trent. Bp. Burnet.

The practice of praying for the dead began in the third century; but it was not till long afterwards, that purgatory was even mentioned among Christians. It was at first doubtfully received; and was not fully established till the papacy of Gregory the Great, in the beginning of the seventh century. The belief, that the saying of masses would redeem the souls of the dead from the punishment of purgatory, was the source of great gain to the clergy of the Western churches: the endowments indeed for that purpose became so large and frequent in this country, that it was necessary to restrain them by statutes of Mortmain. The doctrine of purgatory was never admitted into the Greek church; but something of this kind seems to have been believed by Pagans, Jews, and Mahometans.

Not only purgatory itself is not mentioned in Scrip-

XXIII. Of Ministering in the Congregation[u].

IT is not lawful for any man[x] to take upon him the office of public preaching, or ministering the Sacraments in the Congregation, before he be lawfully called, and sent to execute the same. And those we Heb. v. 4.

ture, but there is not the slightest authority for that distinction between temporal and eternal punishment, which is the foundation of this doctrine: nor are we directed to offer prayers or masses for the dead. It is no where said, that there is any species of guilt or punishment, from which the merits of Christ will not deliver us: on the contrary we are told, that "the blood of Jesus Christ will cleanse us from all sin," 1 John i. 7; and that "now there is no condemnation to them which are in Christ Jesus," Rom. viii. 1. Full and complete forgiveness of sins in the world to come, without any reserve or exception, is promised to repentant sinners: and we have the most positive assurances, that they will be eternally happy, without any intimation of suffering preparatory to their entrance into those joys which are at God's right hand for evermore. And therefore the doctrine of an intermediate state of pain and torment, from which the merits of our Redeemer cannot deliver us, is not only "grounded upon no warranty of Scripture," but is so far positively "repugnant to the word of God," as it is contrary to the absolute and unreserved offers of mercy, peace, and happiness, contained in the Gospel; and as it derogates from the fulness and perfection of the one expiatory sacrifice made by the death of Christ for the sins of all mankind. It seems also absurd to suppose, that considerable sufferings should await, in a future life, those who are to be finally saved; and that there should be effectual methods of avoiding or shortening those sufferings, without any mention of the evil or its remedy in any part of the New Testament. To this argument from the silence of Scripture we may add, that the Gospel represents Lazarus as conveyed at once to a state of comfort and joy; that our Saviour promised the thief upon the cross, that he should on that day be with him in paradise; that St. Paul represents "to depart and to be with Christ," Phil. i. 23, "to be absent from the body, and present with the Lord," 2 Cor. v. 8, as states which were immediately to follow each other; and that St. John says, "Blessed are the dead, which die in the Lord from henceforth: Yea, saith the Spirit, that they may rest from their labours," Rev. xiv. 13: but how do they rest from their labours, if they have still the pains of purgatory to endure?

With respect to temporal punishments it is evident, that God sometimes interposes in visible judgments upon the wicked, as well as in blessings upon the good: but on the other hand the wicked often appear to prosper, while the good are suffering under adversity. And indeed the Gospel warns all men, without any discrimination, to expect crosses and afflictions in this probationary life, and requires faith and patience under the heaviest pressure of the most unprovoked calamities. These are parts of the divine government of this world, which are ordained for the wisest and most salutary purposes, and have no concern whatever with a state of punishment in another life previous to a state of happiness. Bp. Tomline.

[p] — Pardons,] The next particular in this Article is, the condemning of the Romish doctrine concerning "pardons" or indulgences: this is founded on the distinction between the temporal and eternal punishment of sin; and the pardon is of the temporal punishment, which is believed to be done by a power lodged singly in the pope, derived from these words, "Feed my sheep," and "To thee will I give the keys of the kingdom of heaven." This may be by him derived, as they teach, not only to bishops and priests, but to the inferior orders, to be dispensed by them: and it excuses from penance, unless he who purchases it thinks fit to use his penance in a medicinal way as a preservative against sin. So the virtue of indulgences is the applying of the treasure of the church upon such terms, as popes shall think fit to prescribe, in order to the redeeming of souls from purgatory, and from all other temporal punishments; and that for such a number of years as shall be specified in the bulls, some of which have gone to thousands of years: one I have seen to ten hundred thousand: and as these indulgences are sometimes granted by special tickets, like tallies struck on that treasure, so sometimes they are affixed to particular churches and altars, to particular times or days, chiefly to the year of Jubilee; they are also affixed to such things as may be carried about, to Agnus Dei's, to medals, to rosaries and scapularies; they are also affixed to some prayers, the devout saying of them being a mean to procure great indulgences. The granting of these is left to the pope's discretion, who ought to distribute them as he thinks might tend most to the honour of God and the good of the church; and he ought not to be too profuse, much less to be too scanty, in dispensing them.

This has been the received doctrine and practice of the church of Rome since the twelfth century; and the council of Trent in a hurry in its last session did in very general words approve of the practice of the church in this matter; and decreed that indulgences should be continued: only they restrained some abuses, particularly that of selling them; yet even those restraints were wholly referred to the popes themselves: so that this crying abuse, the scandal of which had occasioned the first beginning and progress of the Reformation, was upon the matter established; and the correcting of the excesses in it was trusted to those, who had been the authors of them, and the chief gainers by them. This point of their doctrine is more fully opened than might perhaps seem necessary, if it were not that a great part of the confutation of some doctrines is the exposing of them.

As for the doctrine itself, all that has been already said against the distinction of temporal and eternal punishment, and against purgatory, overthrows it; since the one is the foundation on which it is built, and the other is that which it pretends to secure men from: and therefore this falls with those. All that was said upon the head of the sufficiency of the Scriptures comes also in here: for if the Scriptures ought to be our rule in any thing, it must be chiefly in those matters, which relate to the pardon of sin, to the quiet of our consciences, and to a future state. Therefore a doctrine and practice, which have not so much as colours from Scripture in a matter of such consequence, ought to be rejected by us upon that single account. Bp. Burnet.

For the support of the doctrine of indulgences there is not one passage in holy Scripture: but there are several, which are inconsistent with the doctrine and practice of the church of Rome in this particular. Thus 1 John i. 9, we are told, that it is "God who cleanseth us from all unrighteousness." And St. Peter, speaking of our blessed Saviour, Acts iv. 12, hath these words, "Neither is there salvation in any other; for there is ought to judge lawfully called[y] and sent, which be chosen and called to this work by men who have publick authority given unto them in the Tit. i. 5.

none other name under heaven given among men, whereby we must be saved." And Isaiah tells us, liii. 5, that "he was wounded for our transgressions, and bruised for our iniquities," that "the chastisement of our peace was upon him, and with his stripes we are healed." And that the saints have no merit at all, much less such a degree of it as this doctrine supposes, so that having suffered more than was requisite to satisfy for their own sins, they have left a stock to the treasure of the church for the advantage of others, is already proved under the 14th Article. Veneer.

[q] —Worshipping and Adoration,—of Images] That the first Christians had no images is evident from hence, that they were reproached by the heathen, because they did not use them: and we find almost every ecclesiastical writer of the four first centuries arguing against the Gentile practice of image-worship from the plain declarations of Scripture, and from the pure and spiritual nature of God. In the beginning of the fourth century the council of Illyberis decreed, that pictures ought not to be placed in churches, "lest that which is worshipped should be printed on the walls." Images seem to have been introduced into churches in the fifth century: and it was probably first done, to preserve the remembrance, and do honour to the memory, of departed saints, though some have imagined it originated in a wish to comply with the prejudices of the heathen, and to make them better disposed to embrace the Gospel. It was impossible to look at these interesting representations, standing in places consecrated to the service of God, without feeling some degree of respect: that respect was gradually heightened into reverence, and at length ended in absolute worship; so that Christians, who in the first ages were reproached by the heathen for not having images, were in the seventh century accused by the Jews, and even by Mahometans, of the grossest idolatry. In the following century began the famous controversy about the breaking of images, which was carried on for more than a hundred years with the greatest eagerness and animosity, both in the east and in the west. Different popes and different councils, notwithstanding their pretensions to infallibility, espoused different sides of the question: but at length, after much uncertainty and fluctuation of opposite interests, those who contended for the lawfulness of worshipping images prevailed, and from that time image-worship has been an established doctrine of the church of Rome. It was decreed by the council of Trent, the last general council, that "due worship should be given to images:" and several regulations were added upon the subject. Among other corruptions of the church of Rome, that of the use of images was rejected by our Reformers, as being contrary to the practice of the primitive church, and plainly "repugnant to the word of God." Bp. Tomline.

The worshippers of images have endeavoured to excuse themselves from the heinous charge of idolatry, by distinguishing between an image and an idol, between an absolute and a relative worship: but in vain; for God hath not only forbidden the worshipping of idols, as in 1 John v. 21, "Little children, keep yourselves from idols," and in a multitude of places besides; but hath absolutely forbidden us to pay any religious worship to images. See Exod. xx. 4, 5. Archdeacon Welchman, Veneer.

[r] —as of Reliques,] The fourth doctrine condemned in this Article is "the worshipping and adoration of reliques." In the early ages of the Gospel, when its professors were exposed to every species of danger and persecution, it was natural for Christians to shew every mark of respect, both to the bodies and to the memory of those, who had suffered death in its cause. They collected their remains and buried them, not only with decency, but with all the solemnity and honour which circumstances would allow. It was also the custom for Christians to hold their religious meetings at the places where their martyrs were buried, by which they seemed, as it were, united with them; and to display their attachment to their departed brethren by such rites, as were dictated by the fervour of their devout affection, and were consistent with the principles of their religion. It does not appear that this boundary was ever transgressed in the three first centuries: but in the fourth century, when the pure and simple worship of the Gospel began to be debased by superstitious practices, we find strong proofs of an excessive love for every thing which had belonged to those who had distinguished themselves by their exertions or their sufferings for the truth of Christianity, and especially for any part of their garments, hair, or bones. Augustine in Africa, and Vigilantius in Spain, complained loudly of this culpable fondness for reliques, which they speak of as a new corruption, then first appearing in the Christian world: but the warm disposition of Jerome led him to stand forward in their defence with more zeal than discretion. However, this learned father, even while he leans to the opinion that miracles were sometimes wrought by reliques, explicitly disclaims all idea of offering them worship. But, when superstition has once made its way into the minds of men, it gradually gains ground: and it is difficult to set limits to it, particularly when there is a set of persons, respected for their piety, who are studious to encourage it. Monks carried about reliques; and with great ease, and no small advantage to themselves, persuaded that ignorant age of their value and importance. Under their recommendation and patronage, they were soon considered as the best preservatives against every possible evil of soul and body: and when the worshipping of images came to be established, the enshrining of reliques was a natural consequence of that doctrine. This led the way to absolute worship, which was now preached by the Romish clergy as a Christian duty. Every one thought it necessary to possess a relique of some saint or martyr, as the effectual means of securing his care and protection: and fraud and imposition did not fail to furnish a supply proportionable to the demand. The discovery of the catacombs at Rome was an inexhaustible source of reliques; and thus the popes themselves became directly interested in maintaining this superstitious worship. The council of Trent authorized the adoration of reliques; and they continue in high esteem among the papists of the present day. What has been already said is amply sufficient to point out the absurdity of worshipping reliques. It is a doctrine manifestly "grounded upon no warranty of Scripture:" it is "a fond thing," that is, foolish and trifling, in the extreme, directly contrary to the practice of the primitive Christians, and utterly irreconcileable with common sense. Bp. Tomline.

The saints themselves, when they were upon earth, rejected the adoration that was offered them, and that too with a great deal of vehemence, as we see in Acts x. 25, 26; xiv. 13—15. How the reliques came to be more Congregation, to call and send Ministers into the Lord's vineyard.

XXIV. Of speaking in the Congregation in such a tongue as the people understandeth[z].

1 Cor. xiv. 11. 14—19.

IT is a thing plainly repugnant[a] to the Word of God, and the custom of the Primitive Church, to have publick Prayer in the Church, or to minister the Sacraments, in a tongue not understanded of the people.

XXV. Of the Sacraments[b].

SACRAMENTS ordained of Christ be not only badges[c] or holy than the saints themselves, it is hard to imagine. Veneer.

[s] — and also Invocation of Saints,] The practice of invoking saints was not known in the three first centuries, or in the middle of the fourth century: for the invocation of Christ is urged by Athanasius, Cyril, Basil, and other fathers of that time, as an argument for his divinity, because they did not pray to angels or other creatures; and Augustine, who died at the age of 76, in the year 430, says, "Let not the worship of dead men be any part of our religion: they ought to be so honoured that we may imitate them, but not worshipped." This passage seems to refer to the invocation of martyrs, which probably began at the end of the fourth century. The primitive Christians commemorated the deaths of the first martyrs every year on the day on which they suffered; and the invocation of saints probably originated from the orations pronounced upon those occasions, the earliest of which now extant are those of Gregory Nazianzen, who lived towards the end of the fourth century. In these orations, which were written with all the latitude of declamatory eloquence, there was frequently a sort of rhetorical address to the dead person, who was considered as enjoying happiness in heaven, and a kind of petition to intercede with God in favour of those who were paying that honour to his memory. This was at first entered upon doubtfully, and always with some such qualification as this, "If there be any sense or knowledge of what we do below." These qualifications were gradually omitted: the orators addressed the dead directly, and solicited their assistance without any reserve. In the fifth century they prayed to God to listen to the intercessions of his saints and martyrs: not long afterwards litanies were appropriated to them: and at length, by an easy transition, prayers were offered to them in the same manner as to God and Christ. Thus the invocation of saints became an established practice of the Christian church: it was continued through the dark ages: and the council of Trent decreed, that "all men are to be condemned who do not own, that the saints, reigning with Christ, offer their prayers to God for men; and that it is useful to invoke them to procure their assistance in asking God for blessings through Christ."

A very little inquiry will convince us, that there is no foundation whatever for this doctrine in Scripture. We are commanded to offer our prayers to God through Christ alone: "There is one God, and one Mediator between God and men, the man Christ Jesus," 1 Tim. ii. 5. "Through him we have access to the Father," Eph. ii. 18. No other person is mentioned, by whom we can approach the Father: and the silence of Scripture is decisive upon this subject; for we may rest assured, that every necessary direction is given to us, relative to the important duty of prayer. The worshipping of angels is forbidden by St. Paul: "Let no man beguile you of your reward in a voluntary humility, and worshipping of angels," Col. ii. 18: it must therefore be unlawful to worship men, who were made inferior to angels. Several of the apostles and first Christians, particularly St. James the Great and St. Stephen, had suffered martyrdom when the Epistles and Acts of the Apostles were written: but no mention is made of offering prayers to them, or through them. Bp. Tomline.

[t] — is a fond thing &c.] Between the five doctrines condemned in this Article there is a close connexion, and their history in general carries with it their complete refutation. All of them had specious beginnings; and the mischief, in almost every case, proceedeth from their being allowed to transgress the bounds of propriety, without correction or remonstrance from those, whose duty it was to watch over and preserve the purity of Christian worship. The increasing darkness of the times soon caused them to degenerate still farther: but they had then made such an impression upon the minds of men, and so many of the clergy found it their interest to support them, that all resistance from the sound and orthodox part of the Church became ineffectual. The desire of complying with the prejudices of the heathen might also have some weight in the introduction of practices, which by degrees led to some of these corruptions: but the great source of all those evils seems to have been that spirit of "will-worship," which was gradually admitted into the church, notwithstanding the solemn caution which had been given against it. Our Reformers therefore were fully justified in rejecting these doctrines, which had thus arisen from indiscretion and avarice on the one side, and from ignorance and superstition on the other; and to pronounce them "grounded on no warranty of Scripture, but rather repugnant to the word of God." Bp. Tomline.

[u] XXIII. Of Ministering in the Congregation.] This Article consists of two parts: the former asserts the unlawfulness of exercising the publick offices of religion without a regular appointment; and the latter relates to the authority, by which ministers are to be appointed. Bp. Tomline.

[x] It is not lawful for any man &c.] Since the ministers of the word and sacraments are "ambassadors for Christ," and "ministers of God," 2 Cor. v. 20; vi. 4; they must necessarily receive their authority from God, and be sent by Him; and must not assume that authority to themselves, unless they are called to it by God. And since God our Saviour from the time when He called the apostles has not immediately called any one to the ministry; it follows that they must be called by those whose business it is to call others. Thus the apostles ordained presbyters and bishops; and the bishops, ordained by the apostles, did thenceforth ordain others. See Acts xx. 28; Heb. v. 4. Archdeacon Welchman.

But upon this point the reader is requested to refer to the observations on the Ordination Service, page 673, note e.

[y] — And those we ought to judge lawfully called &c.] We know that the power of "calling and sending ministers into the Lord's vineyard" was granted to the bishops only, from the age of the apostles to the time of the Reformation; but that from thenceforwards some churches, which in other things were rightly reformed, have allowed it also to presbyters; whether justly or tokens of Christian men's profession, but rather they be certain sure witnesses, and effectual signs of grace, and God's good will towards us, by the which he doth work invisibly in us, and doth not only quicken, but also strengthen and confirm our Faith in him.

Acts ii. 38. 1 Cor. x. 16. Eph. v. 26.

There are two Sacraments[d] ordained of Christ our Lord in the Gospel, that is to say, Baptism, and the Supper of the Lord.

Matt. xxviii. 19. 1 Cor. xi. 23—26.

---

not, we leave it to themselves to consider: we neither judge nor despise them. But the case is widely different with our own countrymen; who, rebelling against an excellently well constituted Church, have arrogated to themselves this power of ordination. These therefore we rightly and deservedly account guilty of schism and disorder. Archdeacon Welchman.

Upon this point also the reader is referred to previous observations, page 673, notes f, g; 687, p.

[z] XXIV. Of speaking in the Congregation in such a tongue as the people understandeth.] In King Edward's Articles they took in preaching with prayer; but the present Article is restrained to prayer. The former only affirms the use of a known tongue to be most fit and agreeable to the word of God: the latter denies the worship in an unknown tongue to be lawful, and affirms it to be "repugnant to the word of God;" to which it adds "and the custom of the primitive church." Bp. Burnet.

[a] It is a thing plainly repugnant &c.] The object, for which Christians assemble themselves together, being to hear the word of God, to offer their united prayers and praises to their heavenly Father, and to participate in those holy ordinances which it hath pleased the divine Author of our religion to institute; it seems obvious to common sense, that the publick service of the Church should be performed in a language understood by the congregation. One of the general rules given by St. Paul relative to publick worship is, "Let every thing be done unto edifying," 1 Cor. xiv. 26: but how can the people be edified, unless they understand the language, in which their ministers read and speak? And the same apostle reproves certain persons, who had abused the gift of tongues, by speaking in unknown tongues in the congregation at Corinth, in a manner that plainly shews, that the common people ought not to be called upon to join in the publick service of God, unless they comprehend what is said. See 1 Cor. xiv. 11, &c.

There is scarcely any duty more repeatedly and more earnestly inforced in Scripture, than that of prayer: and surely all the various precepts and instructions, delivered to us upon this important subject, imply that our prayers are to be offered in a language which we understand. We are to "worship God in spirit and in truth," but how can the mind or heart of those be affected, who do not comprehend the meaning of the words, which they hear and utter? Bp. Tomline.

The custom of the primitive church is no less clear in this point. As the Christian religion was spread to different nations, so they all worshipped God in their own tongue. The Syriack, the Greek, and the Latin, were indeed of that extent, that we have no particular history of any churches, that lay beyond the compass of those languages; but there was the same reason for putting the worship of God in other languages, that there was for those. There are very large passages both in Origen and St. Basil, which mention every tongue's "praising of God;" and, that the Gospel being spread to many nations, He was in every nation praised in the language of that nation. This continued so long to be the practice even of the Latin church, that in the ninth century, when the Slavons were converted, they were allowed by the pope to have their publick services in their own tongue. But in the other parts of the Western church, the Latin tongue continued to be so universally understood by almost all sorts of people, till the tenth or eleventh century, that there was no occasion for changing it. And by that time the clergy were affecting to keep the people in ignorance, and in a blind dependence upon themselves; and so were willing to make them think, that the whole business of reconciling the people to God lay upon them, and that they were to do it for them. A great part of the service of the mass was said so low, that even they, who understood some Latin, could not be the better for it, in an age in which there was no printing, and so few copies were to be had of the publick offices. The Scriptures were likewise kept from the people; and the service of God was filled with many rites, in all which the clergy seemed to design to make the people believe, that these were sacred charms, of which they only had the secret. So that all the edification, which was to be had in the publick worship, was turned to pomp and shew, for the diversion and entertainment of the spectators. Bp. Burnet.

As the same principle has ever actuated the governing part of the Romish church, they have never made any alteration in this practice: the whole of their liturgy is still in Latin. Bp. Tomline.

[b] XXV. Of the Sacraments.] We have now before us a series of Articles, seven in number, which treat of the Christian doctrine of Sacraments. The two first relate to Sacraments in general, the third to Baptism, and the other four to the Lord's Supper. Under this Article we are to consider the meaning of the word "Sacrament;" and to distinguish the real Sacraments of the Gospel from the pretended ones of the church of Rome. Bp. Tomline.

In the Articles of 1552 the definition of the word "Sacrament" was made the last clause in this Article, and nothing was said in it concerning the five popish sacraments. Bp. Tomline.

[c] Sacraments ordained of Christ be not only badges &c.] Sacraments indeed are so many "tokens" or marks of distinction, by which Christians are distinguished from unbelievers; but they are also visible signs of an invisible grace, and do really convey that grace, of which they are signs, to those who receive them worthily: but they do this, not by their own virtue or power, but by the operation of the Holy Ghost accompanying them. Thus baptism regenerates us, Acts ii. 38; Eph. v. 26; and in 1 Cor. x. 16, we are told that the Lord's Supper communicates to us the body and blood of Christ. Archdeacon Welchman, Veneer.

In further proof and illustration of this part of the Article, the reader is requested to refer to pages 377, 378, notes m, n, o, p, q, r.

[d] There are two Sacraments &c.] As for the number of the sacraments, since it belongs to Him only to institute them, who is able to confer the accompanying grace, there cannot be more than those which God Himself hath instituted. And those which He hath instituted are but two; namely, Baptism, and the Supper of the Lord: for to those only doth the definition of a sacrament belong. Veneer.

Those five commonly called Sacraments[e], that is to say, Confirmation, Penance, Orders, Matrimony, and extreme Unction, are not to be counted for Sacraments of the Gospel[f], being such as have grown partly of the corrupt following of the Apostles, partly are states of life allowed in the Scriptures; but yet have not like nature of Sacraments with Baptism, and the Lord's Supper, for that they have not any visible sign or ceremony ordained of God.

The Sacraments were not ordained[g] of Christ to be gazed upon, or to be carried about, but that we should duly use them[h]. And in such only as worthily receive the same[i] they have a wholesome effect

---

Concerning this particular, the reader is referred to page 376, note k.

[e] Those five commonly called Sacraments,] That is, which were commonly called so, when these Articles were drawn up. The number of Sacraments was not among the abuses first corrected by the Reformers.

In the primitive ages of Christianity there was no dispute concerning the number of Sacraments, properly so called; and consequently we find very little upon that subject in the early ecclesiastical writers. However, the Recognitions, which were written at the end of the second century, allow of only two Sacraments: and Justin Martyr, Tertullian, Cyril of Jerusalem, Augustine, and Chrysostom, all mention two Sacraments; namely, Baptism, and the Lord's Supper; and no more. Peter Lombard, a writer of the twelfth century, is the first who reckons seven sacraments, adding to the above two these five; confirmation, penance, orders, matrimony, and extreme unction. Pope Eugenius IV, about the middle of the fifteenth century, pronounced that these five, as well as the other two, ought to be considered as sacraments. In the following century all seven were declared to be equally sacraments by the Council of Trent: and from that time they have always been considered as such by the Romish church. Bp. Tomline.

Concerning the five popish sacraments, the reader is referred to page 376, note l.

[f] — are not to be counted for Sacraments of the Gospel,] Namely, in the strict and proper sense of the word: they were not instituted as such by Christ or his apostles; nor were they known by that name in the primitive age of the church. Confirmation and Orders we allow to be holy functions derived from the apostles, though they want the essential qualities of a sacrament. Penance, as practised by papists, is a corruption of a part of ancient ecclesiastical discipline, and was perverted into its present form of sacrament by the management and contrivance of the clergy in the times of darkness and ignorance. Matrimony has no claim whatever to be considered as a Christian sacrament, since it was not instituted by our Saviour, nor was its original character changed by the Gospel. It is indeed a divine institution; and a state of so much importance to the happiness of mankind, that it is very proper to be solemnized by prayer and other acts of religious worship. And lastly, we intirely reject extreme unction, as having no other foundation than that of a symbolical rite, incidentally mentioned in Scripture, as accompanying the miraculous healing of bodily diseases in the apostolick age.

I shall only farther observe upon this subject, that as St. Peter commanded his hearers to be baptized "for the remission of sins," so our Saviour, when He instituted the Lord's Supper, took the cup, and gave it to the apostles, saying, "Drink ye all of it; for this is my blood of the New Testament, which is shed for many for the remission of sins:" thus remission of sins, which was the great object of Christ's coming into the world, is pronounced to be closely connected with Baptism and the Lord's Supper, and with no other rite or ceremony whatever. This circumstance clearly points out the importance of these two ordinances to our eternal salvation; and is at the same time an irrefragable proof, that all other ordinances, and consequently "the five, commonly called Sacraments, have not like nature of Sacraments with Baptism and the Lord's Supper." Bp. Tomline.

[g] The Sacraments were not ordained &c.] By the word "Sacraments" in this clause the Church means the sacramental elements: and she manifestly strikes at that known practice of the papists, who elevate the host, and carry it about to be seen and adored by the people. But the papists themselves never used to carry about or elevate the element of Baptism that I know of: and therefore I cannot tell how our Church happened to express herself in the plural number. However the proposition is certainly true with respect to the elements of both the Sacraments. For the design of the sacramental elements is to be learned from Scripture, which says nothing of our gazing on them, or carrying them about. I confess, if the doctrine of transubstantiation were true, there would be a good reason in the nature of the thing, and consequently a good argument from the very institution, for elevating and carrying about the host, that the people might not only gaze or behold it, but also adore it. But since that doctrine is monstrously false, there can be no pretence for such customs. Dr. Bennet.

Though the remaining part of this Article speaks of "Sacraments" in the plural number, yet it more particularly relates to the Lord's Supper only. Bp. Tomline.

[h] — but that we should duly use them.] It is evidently incumbent upon every Christian to use the Sacraments, according to the design of their original institution. The Sacrament of Baptism, being the admission of a person into the Christian church, is not to be repeated. When any one in the primitive times, on account of persecution, or from any other cause, apostatized from the Christian religion, and afterwards returned to it; he was not re-baptized. On the other hand, the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper being a declaration of a person's continuance in the Christian religion, no opportunity of receiving it ought to be omitted. It was administered much more frequently in the primitive ages, than it is in the present times: and it is deeply to be lamented, that Christians are now much less constant and regular in partaking of it, than they formerly were. Bp. Tomline.

[i] And in such only as worthily receive the same &c.] We derive no benefits from the receiving of the Sacrament, nor indeed from the performance of any part of our religious duty, unless it be done with a proper disposition, and a suitable frame of mind: "God is a or operation: but they that receive them unworthily[k] purchase to themselves damnation, as Saint Paul saith. 1 Cor. xi. 29.

XXVI. Of the Unworthiness of the Ministers, which hinders not the effect of the Sacrament[l].

ALTHOUGH in the visible Church[m] the evil be ever mingled with the good, and sometimes the evil have chief authority in the Ministration of the Word and Sacraments, yet forasmuch as they do not the same in their own name, but in Christ's, and do minister by his commission and authority, we may use their Ministry, both in hearing the Word of God, and in receiving of the Sacraments. Neither is the effect of Christ's ordinance taken away by their wickedness, nor the grace of God's gifts diminished from such as by faith and rightly do receive the Sacraments ministered unto them; which be effectual, because of Christ's institution and promise, although they be ministered by evil men. Matt. xiii. 47. 24. 1 Cor. iii. 5. Matt. xxiii. 2, 3. Phil. i. 15—18. 1 Cor. iii. 9.

Nevertheless, it appertaineth to

Spirit; and they that worship him must worship him in spirit and in truth," John iv. 24. This sentence also of the Article is directed against the papists, who maintain that the partaking of the Lord's Supper necessarily promotes our salvation; that the opus operatum, as they call it, is always attended with real benefit. Bp. Tomline.

[k] — but they that receive them unworthily &c.] This proposition is founded, with respect to the Lord's Supper, on St. Paul's words, 1 Cor. xi. 29; and the reason of the thing proves the same with respect to Baptism. But though our Church quotes St. Paul's words, in delivering her sentiments concerning the unworthy partakers of both Sacraments; yet, it must not be imagined that she understands this text of St. Paul of both the Sacraments. She only applies his expression "damnation" to the unworthy partakers of Baptism, as well as of the Lord's Supper. And, that she may adapt St. Paul's expression to both the Sacraments, she changes the verbs, saying, that the unworthy partakers do, not "eat and drink," but "purchase to themselves damnation." Dr. Bennet.

Concerning the meaning of the word "damnation," as here used, the reader is referred to page 305, note x.

It is much to be feared that the expression, "we eat and drink our own damnation," in our Communion-service, deters many persons from participating of the Lord's Supper; and therefore I recommend it to all clergymen, occasionally to explain to their congregations the meaning of the original passage from which it is taken, as well as the sense of the word "damnation," when our Bible was translated. Bp. Tomline.

[l] XXVI. Of the Unworthiness of the Ministers, which hinders not the effect of the Sacrament.] The enormous and publick vices of the Roman clergy, at the time of the Reformation, gave great offence; and caused the revival of the tenet of the ancient Donatists, that not only heresy and schism, but personal sins also, invalidated the sacred functions of Christian ministers. This opinion was maintained by the Anabaptists, but it was by no means general among Protestants; it was not adopted by Luther or Calvin; it was condemned in the confession of Augsburg, and in that of the Helvetick churches; and it is rejected by our Church in this Article. Bp. Tomline.

[m] Although in the visible Church &c.] The ministers of the Gospel do not minister their own, but Christ's sacraments; and the Church in receiving them hath respect to Christ Himself, and not to them: and therefore she receives them not so much from the ministers, as from Christ by their hands. The virtue then and efficacy of them, since it depends upon Christ alone, cannot be hindered by a minister, how wicked soever he be. "Who then is Paul, and who is Apollos, but ministers by whom ye believed, even as the Lord gave to every man? I have planted, Apollos watered; but God gave the increase," 1 Cor. iii. 5, 6. Archdeacon Welchman.

Attendance upon the publick service of God is the duty of every Christian, and the personal faults of the ministers by no means justify us in absenting ourselves from it. "The scribes and Pharisees," says our Saviour, "sit in Moses's seat: all therefore whatsoever they bid you observe, that observe and do; but do not ye after their works, for they say and do not," Matt. xxiii. 2, 3. In the same manner Christians are bound to observe whatever their ministers shall deliver out of the Word of God, and to consider every ordinance as valid, which they shall perform agreeably to the institution of Christ; although in their characters, and in the disagreement between their lives and doctrine, they shall resemble the scribes and Pharisees. Bp. Tomline.

Sacraments are to be considered only as the publick acts of the church: and though the effect of them, as to him that receives them, depends upon his temper, his preparation and application; yet it cannot be imagined, that the virtue of those federal acts, to which Christians are admitted, in them, the validity of them, or the blessings that follow them, can depend on the secret state or temper of him that officiates. Even in the case of publick scandals, though they may make the holy things to be loathed by the aversion, that will naturally follow upon them; yet after all, though that aversion may go too far, we must still distinguish between the things, that the ministers of the church do as they are publick officers, and what they do as they are private Christians. Their prayers, and every thing else that they do as they are private Christians, have their effect only according to the state and temper that they are in when they offer them up to God: but their public functions are the appointments of Christ, in which they officiate; they can neither make them the better nor the worse by any thing that they join to them. And if miraculous virtues may be in bad men, so that in the great day some of those, to whom Christ shall say, "I never knew you; depart from me ye that work iniquity," may yet say to Him, "Lord, Lord, have we not prophesied in thy name, and in thy name have cast out devils, and in thy name have done many wonderful works?" then certainly this may be concluded much more concerning those standing functions and appointments, that are to continue in the church. Bp. Burnet. If the faults of ministers vitiate the Sacrathe discipline of the Church[n], that enquiry be made of evil Ministers, and that they be accused by those that have knowledge of their offences; and finally being found guilty, by just judgement be deposed.

1 Tim. v. 19.

3 John 10.

XXVII. Of Baptism[o].

BAPTISM is not only a sign of profession, and mark of difference, whereby Christian men are discerned from others that be not christened, but it is also a sign of Regeneration[p] or new Birth, whereby, as by an instrument, they that receive Baptism rightly are grafted into the Church; the promises of forgiveness of sin, and of our adoption to be the sons of God by the Holy Ghost, are visibly signed and sealed; Faith is confirmed, and Grace increased by virtue of prayer unto God. The Baptism of young Children[q] is in any wise to be retained in the Church, as

Tit. iii. 5.

1 Cor. xii 13. Acts ii. 41.

Heb. x. 22. Gal. iii. 26, 27.

Acts ii. 42.

Mark x. 14. Matt. xxviii. 19.

---

ments, no one can tell whether he has received the Lord's Supper, or whether he was baptized, or not. Bp. Tomline.

[n] Nevertheless, it appertaineth to the discipline of the Church, &c.] The last paragraph of this Article is so clear, that it needs no explanation; and is so evident, that it needs no proof. Timothy was required to receive "an accusation of an elder," when regularly tendered to him; and to "rebuke before all those that sinned;" and he was charged to withdraw himself from "those teachers, who consented not to wholesome words," and who "made a gain of godliness," 1 Tim. v. 1. 19, 20; vi. 3—5. A main part of the discipline of the primitive church lay heaviest on the clergy: and such of them, as either apostatized, or fell into scandalous sins, were, even upon their repentance, received indeed into the peace of the church, but they were appointed to communicate among the laity, and were never after that admitted to the body of the clergy, or allowed to have a share in their privileges. Certainly there is nothing more incumbent on the whole body of the church, than that all possible care be taken to discover the bad practices which may be among the clergy: for these will ever raise strong prejudices, not only against their persons, but even against their profession, and against that religion which they seem to advance with their mouths, while in their works and by their lives they detract from it, and seem to deny its authority. Bp. Burnet.

[o] XXVII. Of Baptism.] The Greek words βαπτίζω and βαπτισμὸς, from whence the English word "Baptism" is taken, among the sacred writers denote any washing, whether it be by dipping or sprinkling. See Mark vii. 4; Luke xi. 38. But whether the sacrament of Baptism be administered by dipping or by sprinkling, it significantly points out to us the grace, which is conferred by this sacrament. For, as the filth of the body is washed away by water, so are the stains of the soul by remission of sins: and, as in immersion or dipping it is intimated, that we are buried and rise again with Christ, so in aspersion or sprinkling it is likewise signified, that we die and are born again; since it was the custom to wash the dead, as well as those who were newly born. See Acts ix. 37. Archdeacon Welchman. See page 345, note n.

[p] Baptism is not only a sign of profession &c.—but it is also a sign of Regeneration &c.] "He saved us," saith St. Paul, "by the washing of regeneration, and renewing of the Holy Ghost, Tit. iii. 5. "They that receive baptism rightly," that is, they that receive it, (from persons duly authorized, Bp. Tomline.) in the name of the Father, of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost, together with a serious profession of faith and repentance, are thereby "grafted into the church:" for "by one Spirit are we all baptized into one body," 1 Cor. xii. 13. To them "the promise of forgiveness of sin is visibly signed and sealed:" and therefore the author of the Epistle to the Hebrews exhorts them to "draw near to God with a true heart, in full assurance of faith, having their hearts sprinkled from an evil conscience, and their bodies washed with pure water," Heb. x. 22: and so we read in Acts xxii. 16, "And now why tarriest thou? Arise, and be baptized, and wash away thy sins, calling on the name of the Lord." "The promise of our adoption to be the sons of God by the Holy Ghost" is likewise "signed and sealed to them:" for, as the apostle says to the Galatians, iii. 26, 27, "Ye are all the children of God by faith in Christ Jesus. For as many of you, as have been baptized into Christ, have put on Christ." Also "by baptism faith is confirmed, and grace increased, by virtue of prayer unto God:" thus we see, Acts ii. 41, 42, with how ardent a zeal the new converts behaved themselves after they had been baptized, "continuing stedfastly in the apostles' doctrine and fellowship, and in breaking of bread, and in prayers." Such is the case with adult persons: nor is it to be imagined, even as to infants, that God is in vain called upon by the church for them. Archdeacon Welchman.

Baptism therefore is a federal admission into Christianity: it is the seal of a contract, in which all the privileges and blessings of the Gospel are on God's part conditionally promised to the persons baptized; and they on the other hand engage by a solemn profession and vow to maintain the doctrines, and observe the precepts, of the Christian religion.

The spiritual effects of baptism are clearly asserted in the ancient ecclesiastical writers: and nothing can mark more strongly the high idea they entertained of the importance of this sacrament, than the names which they applied to it. They called it a divine indulgence; an absolution from sin; birth in water; a regeneration of the soul; the laver of regeneration; the water of life; the unction; the seal of the Lord; the illumination; the salvation; the garment of immortality; the priesthood of the laity; and the signature of faith. Bp. Tomline.

Concerning the spiritual effects of baptism the reader is requested to refer to pages 348—350, note u; 338, r; 379, x, y; also, 367, 368, c, d, e.

[q] — The Baptism of young Children &c.] The last head in this Article relates to the baptism of infants, which is spoken of with that moderation, which appears eminently through all the Articles of our Church. On this head it is only said, to be "most agreeable with the institution of Christ," and that therefore it "is to be in any ways retained in the church." Bp. Burnet.

That the baptizing of young children is most agreeable with the institution of Christ, may be thus proved. If our Saviour hath declared, that none but baptized most agreeable with the institution of Christ.

XXVIII. Of the Lord's Supper[r].

THE Supper of the Lord is not only a sign[s] of the love that Christians ought to have among themselves one to another; but rather is a Sacrament of our Redemption by Christ's death: insomuch that to such as rightly, worthily, and with faith, receive the same, the Bread which we break is a partaking of the Body of Christ; and likewise the Cup of Blessing is a partaking of the Blood of Christ. Matt. xxvi. 26—28. 1 Cor. x. 16.

Transubstantiation (or the change of the substance[t] of Bread and Wine) persons can enter into the kingdom of God; and if He hath declared that young children are capable of entering; it follows that He intended they should be baptized. But our Saviour hath declared, that none but baptized persons are capable of entering into the kingdom of God, John iii 5; and that young children are capable of entering; Mark x. 14: therefore He intended they should be baptized. Also, it is most agreeable with Christ's institution; for He commanded his apostles to "go and baptize all nations," Matt. xxviii. 19: now nations consist of young children, as well as of adult persons. Veneer, Archdeacon Welchman.

---

Infant baptism is not mentioned in the canons of any council, nor is it inserted as an object of faith in any creed; and thence we infer that it was a point not controverted at any period of the ancient church: and we know that it was the practice in all established national churches. Dr. Wall says, that Peter Bruis, a Frenchman, who lived about the year 1030, was the first Antipædobaptist teacher who had a regular congregation. The Anabaptists of Germany took their rise in the beginning of the sixteenth century: but it does not appear that there was any congregation of Anabaptists in England till the year 1640. Bp. Tomline.

For more particulars concerning this part of the Article, the reader is referred to page 330, note q; 380, c.

[r] XXVIII. Of the Lord's Supper.] The institution of the sacrament of the Lord's Supper is recorded by the three first Evangelists, and by the apostle St. Paul whose words differ very little from those of his companion St. Luke: and the only difference between St. Matthew and St. Mark is, that the latter omits the words, "for the remission of sins." There is a very general agreement among them all. This sacrament, being thus instituted, was adopted by all early Christians with very few exceptions: and no modern sect rejects it, except the Quakers, and some Mysticks, who make the whole of religion to consist of contemplative love. Bp. Tomline.

[s] The Supper of the Lord is not only a sign &c.] The Lord's Supper is indeed a sign of that mutual love, and of that intimate friendship, which is, or ought to be, among Christians: "for we, being many, are one bread and one body; for we are all partakers of that one bread," 1 Cor. x. 17. Revelation is one of the strongest obligations to friendship; and by this text it is declared, that by receiving the Lord's Supper we are made members one of another. But it chiefly points out to us Christ offered as an expiatory sacrifice for us; and as such it really exhibits Him to every one, who worthily partakes of the sacred elements of bread and wine. That it is "a sacrament of our redemption" appears from the words of the institution in Matt. xxvi. 28; Luke xxii. 20. And to those who receive it worthily, "The cup of blessing, which we bless, is it not the communion of the blood of Christ? The bread, which we break, is it not the communion of the body of Christ?" 1 Cor. x. 16. Archdeacon Welchman.

The expressions in the Article, "partaking in the body and blood of Christ," and in St. Paul's Epistle, "the communion of the body and blood of Christ," are synonymous; and signify, that those, who worthily receive the Lord's Supper, share in the benefits which were purchased for mankind by the death of Christ; such as reconciliation to God, the assistance of his holy Spirit, the strengthening of faith, and final remission of sins in those, who continue to believe and obey the Gospel. The Lord's Supper therefore fully answers the description of "sacraments ordained by Christ," as given in the twenty-fifth Article: that they "are not only badges or tokens of Christian men's profession, but rather they be certain sure witnesses and effectual signs of grace and God's good will towards us, by the which he doth work invisibly in us, and doth not only quicken, but also strengthen and confirm our faith in him." Bp. Tomline.

Concerning the doctrine stated in this part of the Article, the reader is requested to refer to page 381, note h, i; 304, u; 315, g; 301, g: see also 328, n.

[t] Transubstantiation, or the change of the substance &c.] The Article next condemns the popish doctrine of transubstantiation, or the change of the substance of bread and wine into the real substance of Christ's body and blood, in the administration of the Lord's Supper. The idea of Christ's bodily presence in the eucharist was first started in the beginning of the eighth century, and it owed its rise to the indiscretion of preachers and writers of warm imaginations, who, instead of explaining judiciously the lofty figures of Scripture language upon this subject, understood and urged them in their literal sense. Thus the true meaning of these expressions was grossly perverted: but as this conceit seemed to exalt the nature of the holy Sacrament, it was eagerly received in that ignorant and superstitious age; and was by degrees carried farther and farther, by persons still less guarded in their application of these metaphorical phrases, till at length, in the twelfth century the actual change of bread and wine into the body and blood of Christ, by the consecration of the priest, was pronounced to be a Gospel truth, by the pretended authority of the church of Rome. The first writer who maintained this doctrine was Paschase Radbert, in the ninth century, before it was firmly established; and the first publick assertion of it was at the third Lateran council, in the year 1215, after it had been for some time openly avowed by the popes, and, in obedience to their injunctions, inculcated by the clergy. It is said to have been brought into England about the middle of the eleventh century, by Lanfranc, afterwards Archbishop of Canterbury; but the term transubstantiation was not known till the thirteenth century, when it was invented by Stephen bishop of Autun. This has always been a favourite doctrine of the church of Rome, as it impressed the common people with higher notions of the power of the clergy, and therefore served to increase their influence.

in the Supper of the Lord, cannot be proved by holy Writ[u], but is repugnant to the plain words of Scripture[x], overthroweth the nature of a Sacrament, and hath given occasion to many superstitions.

1 Cor. xi. 27, 28.

The body of Christ is given[y], taken, and eaten, in the Supper, only after an heavenly and spiritual manner. And the mean whereby the Body of Christ is received and eaten in the Supper is Faith[z].

John vi. 53. 47.

The Sacrament of the Lord's Supper was not[a] by Christ's ordinance

---

It met however with opposition upon its original introduction, particularly from Bertram and John Scott; and again at the first dawn of the Reformation, both upon the continent and in this country. It was objected to by the Waldenses; and there are strong expressions against it in some parts of Wickliff's works. Luther, in contradiction to the other reformers, only changed transubstantiation into consubstantiation, which means that the substance of Christ's body and blood is present in the holy Sacrament with the substance of the bread and wine; and his perseverance in this opinion was a principal cause of the division among the reformed churches. He was opposed by Zuingle and Calvin, but the Confession of Augsburg, which was drawn up by Melanchthon, favours consubstantiation. There is however considerable doubt concerning the real sentiments of Melanchthon, upon this subject, especially in the latter part of his life. Some of our early English reformers were Lutherans, and consequently they were at first disposed to lean towards consubstantiation; but they seem soon to have discovered their error, for in the Articles of 1552, it is expressly said, "A faithful man ought not either to believe or openly confess the real and bodily presence, as they term it, of Christ's flesh and blood in the sacrament of the Lord's Supper." This part of the Article was omitted in 1562, probably with a view to give less offence to those who maintain the corporal presence, and to comprehend as many as possible in the Established Church. Bp. Tomline.

Concerning this doctrine the reader is referred also to page 381, note i.

[u] — cannot be proved by holy Writ.] In arguing against this doctrine, we may first observe, that it is contradicted by our senses, since we see and taste that the bread and wine after consecration, and when we actually receive them, still continue to be bread and wine, without any change or alteration whatever. And again, was it possible for Christ, when He instituted the Lord's Supper, to take his own body and his own blood into his own hands, and deliver them to every one of his apostles? or was it possible for the apostles to understand our Saviour's command to drink his blood literally, when they were forbidden, under the severest penalties, to taste blood by the law of Moses, of which not only they themselves, but Christ also had been a strict observer? They expressed not the slightest surprise or reluctance when Christ delivered to them the bread and wine, which could not have been the case, had they conceived themselves commanded to eat the real body and drink the real blood of their Lord and Master. The bread and wine must have been considered by them as symbolical, and indeed the whole transaction was evidently figurative in all its parts; it was instituted, as was just now observed, when the Jews, by killing the paschal lamb, commemorated their deliverance from Egyptian bondage by the hand of Moses, which was typical of the deliverance of all mankind from the bondage of sin by the death of Christ, the Lamb slain from the foundation of the world; and as the occasion was typical, so likewise were the words used by our Saviour: "This is my body which is broken, and this is my blood which is shed." But his body was not yet broken, nor was his blood yet shed; and therefore the breaking of the bread, and the pouring out of the wine, were then figurative of what was about to happen, as they are now figurative of what has actually happened. He also said, "This cup is the new testament in my blood," 1 Cor. xi. 25; which words could not be meant in a literal sense; the cup could not be changed into a covenant, though it might be a representation or memorial of it. Our Saviour called the wine, after it was consecrated, "the fruit of the vine," Matt. xxvi. 29, which implied that no change had taken place in its real nature. Since then the words, "this is my body, and this is my blood," upon which the papists pretend to support this doctrine, were manifestly used in a figurative sense, and must have been so understood by the apostles, to whom they were originally addressed, we may safely pronounce that transubstantiation, or the change of the substance of bread and wine, in the supper of the Lord, cannot be proved by holy writ. That the early Christians understood our Saviour's words in a figurative sense, appears from the writings of more than twenty fathers, without a single authority on the opposite side. Bp. Tomline.

[x] — is repugnant to the plain words of Scripture, &c.] That transubstantiation is "repugnant to the plain words of Scripture," appears from St. Paul's saying, "we are all partakers of that one bread," 1 Cor. x. 17; and, "as often as ye eat this bread," 1 Cor. xi. 26: so that it is bread, and not Christ's flesh, even when we eat and partake thereof. Parity of reason proves the same of the wine. 2. That transubstantiation "overthroweth the nature of a sacrament," is evident, because it supposes what we eat and drink, to be, not the sign, but the thing signified. 3. It has also "given occasion to many superstitions." That it has given occasion to abominable idolatry, is evident from the adoration of the host, which is grounded on it. But, though idolatry is worse than superstition, yet it is different from it. Wherefore for the proof of this branch of the proposition, let it be considered, that in cases of imminent danger, or great calamities, the host is exposed by the papists to appease God's anger, and prevent or remove his judgments: or reference may be had to the provisions made in the Romish church in the event of any accident happening to the consecrated element. Our Reformers were too well acquainted with these superstitions: though, blessed be God, we have not instances ready at hand. Dr. Bennet.

[y] The body of Christ is given, &c.] Concerning the statement in this clause, the reader is referred to the notes specified under the two preceding clauses: particularly page 381, i; and 315, n.

[z] — is Faith.] Since Christ saith, John vi. 53, "Except ye eat the flesh of the Son of man and drink his blood, ye have no life in you;" and since He also saith, ver. 47, that "he that believeth on him hath everlasting life:" it is manifest that faith is the mean by which the body of Christ is eaten. See also John vi. 35. Archdeacon Welchman.

[a] The Sacrament of the Lord's Supper was not &c.] It is evident that none of the things here mentioned formed part of Christ's ordinance: for, when He instireserved, carried about, lifted up, or worshipped.

XXIX. Of the Wicked which eat not the Body of Christ in the use of the Lord's Supper[b].

THE Wicked, and such as be void of a lively faith[c], although they do carnally and visibly press with their teeth (as Saint Augustine saith[d]) the Sacrament of the Body and Blood of Christ, yet in no wise are they partakers of Christ: but rather, to their condemnation, do eat and drink the sign or Sacrament of so great a thing. 1 John i. 6, 7. 1 Cor. xi. 20.

XXX. Of both kinds[e].

THE Cup of the Lord is not to be denied to the Lay-people[f]:

---

tuted the Lord's Supper, He said, "Take, eat, drink;" but not, "Reserve, carry about, &c." Archdeacon Welchman.

This last part of the Article refers also to the papists, among whom it is the custom to reserve part of the consecrated bread, for the purpose of giving it to the sick, or other absent persons, at some future time; they also carry about the host, when consecrated, in solemn procession, elevate it with superstitious ceremony, and worship it in the same manner as they would worship Christ Himself. None of these practices are warranted by Christ's ordinance, or any authority of Scripture; they are utterly inconsistent with the simplicity and spiritual nature of Christian sacraments; they were unknown in the primitive ages of the Gospel; and have evidently originated from the absurd doctrine of transubstantiation. Bp. Tomline.

Our Church, by cutting off these abuses, has restored this sacrament to its primitive simplicity, according to the institution and practice of the primitive ages. Bp. Burnet.

[b] XXIX. Of the Wicked which eat not the Body of Christ in the use of the Lord's Supper.] This Article is connected with the preceding, and follows from it; it was probably directed against the Papists, who contend, that the mere receiving of the Lord's Supper procures remission of sins, ex opere operato, as it were mechanically, whatever may be the character and disposition of the communicant. Bp. Tomline.

[c] The Wicked, and such as be void of a lively faith, &c.] This Article is an inference or deduction from the former: for since a lively faith is the mean, whereby we eat the body of Christ in the Lord's Supper, it is impossible that the wicked, who have no true faith, should be partakers of the body of Christ: and St. John tells us, that, "if we say that we have fellowship with him, and walk in darkness, we lie, and do not the truth: but if we walk in the light, as he is in the light, we have fellowship one with another, and the blood of Jesus Christ his Son cleanseth us from all sin," 1 John i. 6, 7. And further, this Article, which is drawn up in the very words of St. Augustine, intirely overthrows the doctrine of transubstantiation. For, if the elements be changed into the very body and blood of Christ, then no reason can be assigned, why wicked men, and even mice, may not eat the body of Christ. This even the Romanists acknowledge; and say withal, that the host, by whomsoever or whatsoever devoured, is still the body of Christ, as long as any of the species of it remains. So that, according to this doctrine, we must give no credit to what St. Paul saith to the Corinthians, 1 Cor. x. 21, "Ye cannot drink the cup of the Lord and the cup of devils: ye cannot be partakers of the Lord's table, and of the table of devils:" or to what he saith, xi. 20; where, speaking of their disorderly communions, he tells them, that "this was not to eat the Lord's Supper." Archdeacon Welchman, Veneer.

The sacrament being a federal act, he who dishonours God, and profanes this institution, by receiving it unworthily, becomes highly guilty before God, and draws down judgments upon himself; and, as it is confessed on all hands, that the inward and spiritual effects of the Sacrament depend upon the state and disposition of him that communicates, so we, who own no other presence, but an inward and spiritual one, cannot conceive that the wicked, who believe not in Christ, do receive him. Bp. Burnet.

[d] — (as Saint Augustine saith)] The passage of St. Augustine, to which this Article refers, is in his 26th treatise on St. John. The words are these: "'He that eateth my flesh, and drinketh my blood, dwelleth in me, and I in him.' To dwell then in Christ, and to have Him dwelling in us, this is to eat that food, and to drink that drink. And he, who by this means doth not dwell in Christ, and in whom Christ doth not dwell, without doubt neither spiritually eats his flesh, nor drinks his blood, though he carnally press with his teeth the sacrament of the body and blood of Christ: but rather to his own condemnation he eats and drinks the sacrament of so great a thing, because he hath presumed to come impure to the sacraments of Christ, which none receive worthily, but they who are pure: of whom it is said, 'Blessed are the pure in heart, for they shall see God,' Matt. v. 8." Archdeacon Welchman.

[e] XXX. Of both kinds.] It appears from the unanimous testimony of the fathers, and from all the ancient rituals and liturgies, that the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper was, in the early ages of the Church, administered in both kinds, as well to the laity as to the clergy. The practice of denying the cup to the laity arose out of the doctrine of transubstantiation. The belief that the sacramental bread and wine were actually converted into the body and blood of Christ, naturally produced, in a weak and superstitious age, an anxious fear lest any part of them should be lost or wasted. To prevent any thing of this kind in the bread, small wafers were used, which were put at once into the mouths of the communicants by the officiating ministers; but no expedient could be devised to guard against the occasional spilling of the wine in administering it to large congregations. The bread was sopped in the wine, and the wine was conveyed by tubes into the mouth, but all in vain; accidents still happened, and therefore it was determined that the priests should entirely withhold the cup from the laity. It is to be supposed, that a change of this sort, in so important an ordinance as that of the Lord's Supper, could not be effected at once. The first attempt seems to have been made in the twelfth century; it was gradually submitted to, and was at last established by the authority of the council of Constance, in the year 1414; but in their decree they acknowledged that "Christ did institute this sacrament of both kinds, and that the faithful, in the primitive church, did receive both for both the parts of the Lord's Sacrament, by Christ's ordinance and commandment, ought to be ministered to all Christian men alike.

Matt. xxvi. 27. Mark xiv. 23 1 Cor. xi. 26—28.

XXXI. Of the one Oblation of Christ finished upon the Cross[g].

Heb. x. 10.

THE Offering of Christ once made[h] is that perfect redemption, propitiation, and satisfaction, for all the sins of the whole world, both original and actual; and there is none other satisfaction for sin, but that alone. Wherefore the sacrifices of Masses[i], in the which it was commonly said, that the Priest did offer Christ for the quick and the dead, to have remission of pain or guilt, were 1 John ii. 2.

Heb. x 26.

Heb. ix 25, 26.

---

kinds; yet a practice being reasonably introduced to avoid some dangers and scandals, they appoint the custom to continue of consecrating in both kinds, and of giving to the laity only in one kind," thus presuming to depart from the positive commands of our Lord respecting the manner of administering the sign of the covenant between Himself and mankind. From that time it has been the invariable practice of the church of Rome to confine the cup to the priests. And it was again admitted at the Council of Trent, that the Lord's Supper was formerly administered in both kinds to all communicants, but it was openly contended, that the church had power to make the alteration, and that they had done it for weighty and just causes. These causes are not stated in the canon of the council. The reformed churches, even the Lutheran, which maintains the doctrine of consubstantiation, restored the cup to the laity. In a convocation held in the first year of Edward the Sixth's reign it was unanimously voted that the sacrament of the Lord's Supper should be received in both kinds by the laity as well as the clergy; and therefore it is remarkable that there was nothing on this subject in the Articles of 1552: both this and the preceding Article were added in 1562. Bp. Tomline.

[f] The Cup of the Lord is not to be denied to the Laypeople: &c.] Concerning the doctrine of this Article, the reader is requested to refer to page 318, note g; and 316, p, parag. 2.

Wherever the institution of the Lord's Supper is mentioned, there is not the least hint that the clergy are to receive it in one manner, and the laity in another. And if one part of this sacrament be more necessary than the other, it seems to be the cup; since it represents the blood of Christ, to which remission of sins and our redemption are more often ascribed in Scripture, than to his body. It is trifling in the Romanists to say that the blood is with the body: since in the Eucharist we commemorate, not the life of our Lord, but his death, in which the blood was separated from his body. See 1 Cor. xi. 26; Luke xxii. 19, 20: and to represent his blood, thus separated from his body, the cup was consecrated apart by Him. Christ Himself also seems to have guarded designedly against this piece of sacrilege of denying the cup to the laity, by commanding that "all" should drink of the cup, Matt. xxvi. 27. And, in Mark xiv. 23, it is said, that "all drank of it;" which is no where expressly said of eating the bread. See also 1 Cor. xi. 26—28; in all which verses the Corinthians in general are expressly required to "drink of that cup." Archdeacon Welchman, Veneer.

There is not any one of all the controversies that we have with the church of Rome, in which the decision seems more easy and shorter than this. And, as there is not any one in which she has acted more visibly contrary to the Gospel than in this; so there is not any one that has raised higher prejudices against her, that has made more forsake her, and has possessed mankind more against her, than this. This has cost her dearer than any other. Bp. Burnet.

[g] XXXI. Of the one Oblation of Christ finished upon the Cross.] The papists believing that the bread and wine are by consecration changed into the real body and blood of Christ, consider Christ as offered up to God at every celebration of the eucharist; and maintain that this sacrifice of Christ will be the means of shortening the pains of purgatory, and of reconciling God to those who shall procure such masses to be said, whether they be living or dead. Hence the rich are induced to give or bequeath money for this purpose, and masses are constantly said in popish churches, in the name, and at the request, of particular persons, whose salvation they are supposed to promote. These are called solitary masses, as the priests only partake of them; and it frequently happens that several of these masses are going on at the same time, at different altars in the same church. These masses were unknown among early Christians; and even at the council of Mentz, at the end of the reign of Charlemagne, it was decreed, that no priest should say mass alone. Solitary masses did not come into general use till the twelfth century, soon after the doctrine of transubstantiation was established; but the belief that particular persons might be benefited by offerings made in their name at the Lord's table, was more ancient; and the custom of praying for the dead at the administration of the Lord's Supper, was as old as the time of Chrysostom. From these practices to that of offering private masses for the dead or living, the transition was easy, with the assistance of the newly-invented doctrine of transubstantiation; and more especially as these masses were made the source of great wealth to the clergy. The Article now to be explained is directed against this doctrine and practice of the church of Rome, and it begins by asserting that the offering, &c. Bp. Tomline.

[h] The Offering of Christ once made &c.] St. Paul tells us, that "we are sanctified through the offering of the body of Jesus Christ once for all," Heb. x. 10. And St. John, that "he is the propitiation for our sins; and not for ours only, but also for the sins of the whole world," 1 John ii. 2. Since then the offering of Christ, which was once made upon the cross, is sufficient, there is no occasion for any other: and since it is perfect, it ought not to be repeated. And indeed St. Paul, in the 26th verse of the chapter before mentioned, saith, "there remaineth no more sacrifice for sin."

Further: if Christ Himself be truly offered in the mass, it follows that He is also slain again, which is absurd and shocking to suppose; "for then he must often have suffered since the foundation of the world: but now once in the end of the world hath he appeared to put away sin by the sacrifice of himself," Heb. ix. 26.

It is likewise a necessary consequence of this doctrine, that the blood of Christ is often shed, which blasphemous fables, and dangerous deceits[k].

XXXII. Of the Marriage of Priests[l].

BISHOPS, Priests, and Deacons[m], are not commanded by God's Law, either to vow the estate of single life, or to abstain from marriage: therefore it is lawful for them, as for all other Christian men, to marry at their own discretion, as they shall judge the same to serve better to godliness.

1 Cor. ix. 1 Tim. iii. 11.

Heb. xiii. 4.

XXXIII. Of excommunicate Persons, how they are to be avoided[n].

THAT person[o] which by open denunciation of the Church, is is likewise shocking to suppose: for we are told, ver. 22 of the same chapter, that "without shedding of blood there is no remission." This certainly, if any thing be so, is "a blasphemous fable." Archdeacon Welchman, Veneer.

---

In further proof of the doctrine of this Article, the reader is referred to page 315, notes from Dean Comber and Bp. Overall; and 319, e.

[i] Wherefore the sacrifices of Masses,] "Masses" was the name for the Lord's Supper in England till the middle of the reign of King Edward VI. Bp. Tomline. See page 288, note q, last paragraph.

[k] — were blasphemous fables, and dangerous deceits.] "The sacrifices of masses" may justly be called fables, since they have no authority in Scripture; and they are blasphemous, inasmuch as they derogate from the sufficiency of the death and passion of Christ, as an expiation for the sins of mankind; and they are dangerous deceits, because they encourage wickedness, by holding out an easy method of pardon, and lead men to place their hope of salvation upon a false foundation. Bp. Tomline.

This is the last of the Articles that relate to this Sacrament. Next to the infallibility of the church, this is the dearest piece of the doctrine of the church of Rome; and is that in which both priests and people are better instructed, than in any other point whatsoever; and therefore this ought to be studied on our side with a care proportioned to the importance of it; that so we may govern both ourselves and our people aright in a matter of such consequence, avoiding with great caution the extremes on both hands, both of excessive superstition on the one hand, and of profane neglect on the other. For the nature of man is so moulded, that it is not easy to avoid the one, without falling into the other. We are now visibly under the extreme of neglect; and therefore we ought to study by all means possible to inspire our people with a just respect for this holy institution, and to animate them to desire earnestly to partake often of it; and, in order to that, to prepare themselves seriously to set about it with the reverence and devotion, and with those holy purposes and solemn vows, that ought to accompany it. Bp. Burnet.

[l] XXXII. Of the Marriage of Priests.] The first period of this Article, to the word "therefore," was all that was published in King Edward's time. They were content to lay down the assertion; and left the inference to be made as a consequence, that did naturally arise out of it. Bp. Burnet.

There was scarcely any point more canvassed at the time of the Reformation, than the right of the clergy to marry. The celibacy of the Romish clergy was with reason considered to be a principal cause of their irregular lives; and the wisest of the Reformers were exceedingly anxious to abolish a practice which had been injurious to the interests of religion, by its tendency to corrupt the morals of those who ought to be examples of virtue to the rest of mankind. Bp. Tomline.

Siricius, who according to Dufresnoy died in the year 399, was the first pope that forbade the marriage of the clergy; but it is probable that this prohibition was but little regarded, as the celibacy of the clergy seems not to have been completely established till the papacy of Gregory VII., at the end of the eleventh century, and even then it was loudly complained of by many writers. The history of the following centuries abundantly proves the bad effects of this abuse of church power. Bp. Tomline.

[m] Bishops, Priests, and Deacons, &c.] Since it appears from 1 Cor. ix. 5, that the apostles had and led about their wives; and since St. Paul tells us, 1 Tim. iii. 11, what qualifications the wives of presbyters and deacons ought to have; and finally, since we are told in Heb. xiii. 4, that "marriage is honourable in all, and the bed undefiled:" it follows that it is lawful for the clergy to marry, as well as for other Christians, as this Article directs. Veneer.

See also page 690, note e.

[n] XXXIII. Of excommunicate Persons, how they are to be avoided.] Excommunication was practised in the early times of the church for certain offences, and excommunicated persons were upon repentance again restored to communion. There were two sorts of excommunication, the less and the greater; by the former, men were excluded from partaking of the eucharist, but they were allowed to attend the other parts of divine service; by the latter they were entirely expelled from church, and were not permitted to be present at the performance of any publick office of religion; the former was temporary, but the latter was perpetual, unless the delinquent gave full proof of his repentance. These punishments, while there was a just sense of religion, and separation from the publick worship was considered as a great evil, were found to have a very salutary effect; but the power of excommunication, which was at first kept within due bounds, was gradually enlarged, and was at last carried to an exorbitant height, and perverted to the worst of purposes by the popes of Rome; they inflicted it upon the most trifling and improper occasions, and in a manner authorized neither by reason nor Scripture, and entirely unknown in the more ancient times. Among the early Christians, excommunication did not deprive a person of his natural or civil rights; but the popes pretended by their excommunications, not only to take away the common rights of social life, such as the obedience due from children to their parents, and protection from the magistrate, but also to depose princes from their thrones, and absolve subjects from their allegiance; they even interdicted whole churches and nations, and forbade them the use of the sacraments; they endeavoured, for the most frivolous and unjust causes, to dissolve every tie which keeps mankind united, and to deprive whole countries of every social and religious comfort. The consequences of this extravagant and mischievous usurpation of authority was, that, in process of time, papal excommunication fell into total disregard, and at the Council of Trent it was rightly cut off from the unity of the Church, and excommunicated, ought 2 Thess. iii. 6. 14. to be taken of the whole multitude of the faithful, as an Heathen and Publican, until he be openly reconciled by penance[p], and received into 1 Cor. v. 11. 13. Matt. xviii. 17. the Church by a Judge that hath authority thereunto.

XXXIV. Of the Traditions of the Church[q].

IT is not necessary[r] that Traditions and Ceremonies be in all places one, and utterly like; for at all times they have been divers, and may be changed according to the diversities of countries, times, and men's man-expressly acknowledged "Cum experientia doceat, si excommunicatio temere aut levibus ex causis incutiatur, magis contemni quam formidari, et perniciem potius parere quam salutem." Most of the reformed churches asserted the power of excommunication; it makes a part of our Church discipline, but it has of late years been very rarely practised. Bp. Tomline.

---

[o] That person &c.] The nature of all societies must import this; that they have a power to maintain themselves according to the design and rules of their society. A combination of men, made upon any bottom whatsoever, must be supposed to have a right to exclude out of their number such as may be a reproach to it, or a mean to dissolve it: and it must be a main part of the office and duty of the pastors of the Church to separate the good from the bad: to warn the unruly; and to put from among them wicked persons. Bp. Burnet.

Since the Church is a society of holy persons subject to Christ, what can be more equitable, than that such an one as rebels against Christ, and by his notorious crimes is become a scandal to the Christian name, should be driven out from the communion of the church, and be looked upon as heathen, since he lives such a heathenish life? It is the duty of all good Christians to "withdraw themselves from every brother that walketh" thus "disorderly, to note that man, and to have no company with him that he may be ashamed," 2 Thess. iii. 6. 14. But if he repent, he is to be restored again to communion with the Church. But in the mean time it is to be observed, that princes and subjects, husbands and wives, parents and children, masters and servants, notwithstanding any sentence of excommunication, ought to perform their respective duties to each other; since these are obligations, which have no dependence on the religion of the persons, to whom they are to be performed. Archdeacon Welchman.

[p] — until he be openly reconciled by penance, &c.] Penance is an ecclesiastical punishment, used in the discipline of the Church, which doth affect the body of the penitent: by which he is obliged to give a publick satisfaction to the Church for the scandal he hath given by his evil example. So in the primitive times they were to give testimonies of their reformation, before they were re-admitted to partake of the mysteries of the Church. In the case of incest, or incontinency, the sinner is usually enjoined to do a publick penance in the cathedral or parish church, or publick market, bare legged and bare headed, in a white sheet: and to make an open confession of his crime in a prescribed form of words: which is augmented or moderated according to the quality of the fault, and the discretion of the judge. So in smaller faults and scandals, a publick satisfaction or penance, as the judge shall decree, is to be made before the minister, churchwardens, or some of the parishioners, respect being had to the quality of the offence, and circumstances of the fact; as in the case of defamation, or laying violent hands on a minister, or the like. Dr. Burn.

As excommunication is a publick sentence pronounced by a lawful magistrate, so restoration of an excommunicated person to communion with the Church ought to be a publick act, executed by a judge who hath authority thereunto, and with such forms, and after such acts of publick penance, as the Church has thought proper to prescribe. Bp. Tomline.

[q] XXXIV. Of the Traditions of the Church.] The word "tradition" is not here used in the same sense in which it was used in the explanation of the sixth Article. It there signified unwritten articles of faith, asserted to be derived from Christ and his apostles; in this Article it means customs or practices, relative to the external worship of God, which have been delivered down from former times: that is, in the sixth Article, traditions meant traditional doctrines of pretended divine authority; and in this it means traditional practices acknowledged to be of human institution. Bp. Tomline.

The word means the same, as is expressed immediately by the word "ceremonies" which is only explanatory: and which she afterwards calls "rites," supposing them the same with ceremonies. Dr. Bennet.

[r] It is not necessary &c.] Rites and ceremonies are in themselves indifferent, as is agreed on all hands: and therefore there is no necessity for their being the same in all countries and all times. For, as the apostle argues, Rom. xiv. 17, the essential parts of religion are of another nature; namely, "righteousness, peace, and joy in the Holy Ghost."

Nevertheless when those indifferent things are established by the authority of the Church, they ought to be observed by all, out of reverence to that authority, because it is from God, who hath commanded us to "obey those who have the rule over us," Heb. xiii. 17; and to "be subject to the higher powers," Rom. xiii. 1; and who hath left a power with the governours of the Church to take care that "all things" in the publick worship "be done decently and in order," 1 Cor. xiv. 40. And therefore, whosoever wilfully and openly breaks the traditions and ceremonies of the Church, thus ordained, is a schismatical person, a disturber of the peace of the Church; and, inasmuch as all vice is of a spreading and infectious nature, as St. Paul tells us, 1 Cor. xv. 33, a wounder of the consciences of the weak brethren, by inclining them to follow his bad example. And although private admonition be requisite, when men's faults are not open and notorious; yet when the case is otherwise, "they that sin are to be rebuked before all, that others also may fear," 1 Tim. v. 20. Veneer.

It is scarcely necessary to add, that if every individual were at liberty to use his own private judgment, in opposition to the orders and decisions of the Church, uniformity of worship would be instantly destroyed, and the dissolution of the Church itself would quickly follow. "And hurteth the authority of the magistrate." It is evident, from the nature of human society, that every wilful violation of an established religious ceremony must weaken lawful authority, and tend to ners, so that nothing be ordained against God's Word. Whosoever through his private judgement, willingly and purposely, doth openly break the traditions and ceremonies of the Church, which be not repugnant to the Word of God, and be ordained and approved by common authority, ought to be rebuked openly, (that others may fear to do the like,) as he that offendeth against the common order of the Church, and hurteth the authority of the Magistrate, and woundeth the consciences of the weak brethren.

Acts xxiv. 16.

1 Tim. v. 20.

1 Cor. xi. 16.

Rom. xiii. 1. Heb. xiii. 17. 1 Cor. viii. 12.

Every particular or national Church[s] hath authority to ordain, change, and abolish, ceremonies or rites of the Church ordained only by man's authority, so that all things be done to edifying.

Rom. xiv 19.

XXXV. Of the Homilies[t].

THE second Book of Homilies[u], the several titles whereof we have joined under this Article, doth introduce disorder and confusion; but at no period of the world has this truth been so conspicuous as in the present times. "And woundeth the consciences of weak brethren," by violating rules which they think ought to be observed, by leading them by the force of example into practices which they themselves condemn; by raising prejudices and scruples in their minds; and by making them dissatisfied with the establishment under which they live; "and when ye sin so against the brethren, and wound their weak consciences, ye sin against Christ," 1 Cor. viii. 12. Bp. Tomline.

[s] Every particular or national Church &c.] The second branch of this Article is against the unalterableness of laws made in matters indifferent; and it asserts the right of every national church to take care of itself. That the laws of any one age of the Church cannot bind another, is very evident from this, that all legislature is still entire in the hands of those who have it. The laws of God do bind all men at all times: but the laws of the Church, as well as the laws of every state, are only provisions made upon the present state of things, from the fitness or unfitness that appears to be in them, for the great ends of religion, or for the good of mankind. All these things are subject to alteration; therefore the power of the Church is in every age entire, and is as great as it was in any one age, since the days in which she was under the conduct of men immediately inspired. Bp. Burnet.

Also, the authority of ordaining, changing, and abolishing such ceremonies is lodged in every national church. For such churches have no power over each other: they are equally subject to Christ, who is their King and Lord; and their authority is equal. Whence it follows, that in such things, as He hath neither commanded nor forbidden, every church may use its liberty as occasion shall require; provided it does, as St. Paul directs, Rom. xiv. 19; that is, if it "follow after the things that make for peace, and things wherewith one may edify another." Veneer.

Every empire, kingdom, or state is an entire body within itself. The magistrate has that authority over all his subjects, that he may keep them all at home, and hinder them from entering into any consultations or combinations, but such as shall be under his direction: he may require the pastors of the church under him to consult together about the best methods for carrying on the ends of religion: but neither he nor they can be bound to stay for the concurrence of other churches. In the way of managing this, every body of men has somewhat peculiar to itself; and the pastors of that body are the properest judges in that matter. We know that the several churches, even while under one empire, had great varieties in their forms, as appears in the different practices of the Eastern and Western churches: and, as soon as the Roman empire was broken, we see this variety did increase. The Gallican churches had their missals different from the Roman: and some churches of Italy followed the Ambrosian. Even in this church there was a great variety of usages, which perhaps were begun under the Heptarchy, when the nation was subdivided into several kingdoms. Bp. Burnet.

But though there may sometimes be sufficient ground for ordaining new ceremonies, or for altering or abolishing old ones, it is to be remembered, that changes in established forms are not to be made for slight causes, or without full deliberation; and we are always to keep in view the apostolical precept alluded to in the Article: "Let us follow after the things which make for peace, and things wherewith we may edify one another," Rom. xiv. 19. The principle, upon which the popish ceremonies were rejected at the time of the Reformation, was of a higher nature than that upon which we have been now arguing; they were condemned, because they were inconsistent with the simplicity of Christian worship, and were calculated to perpetuate that superstition to which they owed their origin. It is sometimes objected to the discipline of our Church, that several of its ceremonies are still the same as those of Rome: but to this it may be answered, that we have retained none which are not authorized by the practice of the early Christians, or suited to the important purpose of religious worship. Such were the moderation and wisdom of our Reformers, that they did not think it necessary to abolish rites, merely because they were used by the church of Rome. Though they loudly exclaimed against the antichristian power which it had usurped, and were fully aware of its numerous corruptions, yet they were sensible that it retained some of the fundamental doctrines of the Gospel, and that some of its practices were founded in Scripture and reason, and conformable to the constant usages of the early Christians; and by thus keeping their minds unbiassed by an improper prejudice, they were enabled to make a just discrimination, and to avoid those absurdities and excesses into which some protestant churches unfortunately fell. The ceremonies of our publick offices are grave, simple, and significant, calculated to excite devotion in the mind, while "all things are done decently and in order," 1 Cor. xiv. 40. Bp. Tomline.

[t] XXXV. Of the Homilies.] In this Article, the doctrine contained in the books of Homilies is asserted, in opposition to the Romanists, who have condemned them as heretical; and the reading of them in churches is approved of, in opposition to the Puritans, who have contended that nothing ought to be publickly read in churches besides the Scriptures. Archdeacon Welchman.

contain a godly and wholesome Doctrine[x], and necessary for these times[y], as doth the former Book of Homilies, which were set forth in the time of Edward the Sixth; and therefore we judge them to be read in Churches by the Ministers, diligently and distinctly, that they may be understanded of the people.

Of the Names of the Homilies[z].

1. Of the right Use of the Church.
2. Against peril of Idolatry.

[u] The second Book of Homilies, &c.] Concerning the statement in this Article, the reader is referred to page 294, note l.

[x] — doth contain a godly and wholesome Doctrine,] By this approbation of the two books of Homilies it is not meant that every passage of Scripture, or argument, that is made use of in them, is always convincing; or that every expression is so severely worded, that it may not need a little correction or explanation: all that we profess about them is only that they "contain a godly and wholesome doctrine." This rather relates to the main importance and design of them, than to every passage in them. Though this may be said concerning them, that considering the age wherein they were written, the imperfection of our language, and some inferior defects, they are two very extraordinary books. Some of them are better writ than others, and are equal to any thing that has been writ upon those subjects since that time. Upon the whole matter every one, who subscribes the Articles, ought to read them, otherwise he subscribes a blank, he approves a book implicitly, and binds himself to read it, as he may be required, without knowing any thing concerning it. This approbation is not to be stretched so far, as to carry in it a special assent to every particular in that whole volume: but a man must be persuaded of the main of the doctrine that is taught in them. Bp. Burnet.

The Church requires our assent and approbation to the Articles, and so in like manner to the Rubrick, to be expressed in a different degree and manner from that in which we express our assent to the Homilies and the Canons: the same degree of preference being given to the Articles of religion before the Homilies in point of doctrine, and to the Rubrick before the body of Canons in point of practice.

The Thirty-nine Articles for instance being the capital rule of our doctrine, as we are teachers in this Church; (they being this Church's interpretation of the word of God in Scripture, so far as they go;) and designed as a bulwark against popery and fanaticism; we are bound to a very full and explicit acknowledgment under our hands, that we do deliberately, and advisedly, and ex animo, assent to every part and proposition contained in them. For this every body knows to be the meaning of clerical subscriptions, both before ordination, and as often as the three Articles of the thirty-sixth canon are subscribed by us.

In the like manner the rubrick being the standard of uniformity of worship in our communion; the adding to which tends towards opening a gap to popish superstitions, and the increase of human inventions in the service of God; and the subtracting from which tends towards paving a way to a fanatical disuse and contempt of rites and ceremonies; therefore we are obliged not only to declare our ex animo approbation, assent, and consent, to the matter of the rubrick, but are laid under religious promises, that we will in every particular, prescribed in and by it, conform ourselves to it as the rule of our ministration.

And indeed considering that both the Articles and the Rubrick are statute as well as canon law, and have equally the sanction and authority both of the temporal and spiritual legislatures; and considering the condition upon which we are admitted to minister in this established Church, which is our solemn reception of them both as our rule; I do not see how any man can with a good conscience continue acting as a minister of our Church, who can allow himself either to depart from her doctrine, as expressed in her Articles, or from her rites and ceremonies as prescribed in the service-book. Wherefore it is not without reason, that the thirty-eighth canon, which is entitled "Revolters after subscription censured," expressly denounces, "that if any minister after having subscribed the three Articles of the thirty-sixth canon shall omit to use any of the orders and ceremonies prescribed in the Communion-book, he shall be suspended; and if after one month he reform not, he shall be excommunicated; and if after the space of another month he submit not himself, he shall be deposed from the ministry."

But the case of Homilies and Canons is different from that of the Articles and Rubrick. They are indeed equally set forth by authority. The one is as truly the doctrine, and the other is as truly the law, of the Church. But still the regard that we are supposed to pay to them is not equally the same. For, though we subscribe to the Homilies, yet this subscription amounts to no more than our acknowledgment, that "they contain a godly and wholesome doctrine, necessary for the times they were written in, and fitting to be publickly taught unto the people;" and not that we will maintain every particular doctrine, or argument, or assertion, contained in them.

In like manner we say as to the Canons. We receive them in general as a good body of ecclesiastical laws. We acknowledge the wholesomeness and fitness of them all for discipline, and order, and edification, and proper in every respect for the times in which they were drawn up. But we do not look upon every particular thereby injoined, as absolutely and indispensably requisite to be practised now by us in the manner it is injoined, any more than we hold our approbation of every sentence or expression in the Book of Homilies to be necessary. Archdeacon Sharp.

[y] — necessary for these times.] By "necessary for these times" is not to be meant, that this was a book fit to serve a turn; but only that this book was necessary at that time, to instruct the nation aright, and so was of great use then: but though the doctrine in it, if once true, must be always true, yet it will not be always of the same necessity to the people. As for instance; there are many discourses in the epistles of the apostles, that relate to the controversies then on foot with the Judaizers, to the engagements the Christians then lived in with the heathens, and to those corrupters of Christianity that were in those days. Those doctrines were necessary for that time: but, though they are now as true as they were then, yet since we have no commerce either with Jews or Gentiles, we cannot say that it is as necessary for the present time to dwell much on those matters, as it was for that time to explain them once well. If the nation should come to be quite out of the danger of falling back into popery, it would not be so necessary to insist upon many of the subjects of the Homilies, as it was when they were first prepared. Bp. Burnet.

[z] Of the Names of the Homilies.] It is remarkable

3. Of repairing and keeping clean of Churches.
4. Of good Works: first of Fasting.
5. Against Gluttony and Drunkenness.
6. Against Excess of Apparel.
7. Of Prayer.
8. Of the Place and Time of Prayer.
9. That Common Prayers and Sacraments ought to be administered in a known tongue.
10. Of the reverend estimation of God's Word.
11. Of Alms-doing.
12. Of the Nativity of Christ.
13. Of the Passion of Christ.
14. Of the Resurrection of Christ.
15. Of the worthy receiving of the Sacrament of the Body and Blood of Christ.
16. Of the Gifts of the Holy Ghost.
17. For the Rogation-days.
18. Of the state of Matrimony.
19. Of Repentance.
20. Against Idleness.
21. Against Rebellion.

XXXVI. Of Consecration of Bishops and Ministers[a].

THE Book of Consecration[b] of Archbishops and Bishops, and Ordering of Priests and Deacons, lately set forth in the time of Edward the Sixth, and confirmed at the same time by authority of Parliament, doth contain all things necessary to such Consecration and Ordering; neither hath it any thing, that of itself is superstitious and ungodly. And therefore whosoever are consecrated[c] or ordered according to the Rites of that Book, since the second year of the forenamed King Edward unto this time, or hereafter shall be consecrated or ordered according to the same Rites; we decree all such to that the titles of the Homilies, as enumerated in this Article, are not precisely the same as the titles prefixed in the book of Homilies. Bp. Tomline.

---

[a] XXXVI. Of Consecration of Bishops and Ministers.] In the Act for Uniformity of Publick Prayers passed in the fourteenth year of King Charles the Second, it is enacted, with respect to the Thirty-nine Articles, "That all subscriptions hereafter to be had or made unto the said Articles——shall be construed and taken to extend, and shall be applied, for and touching the six and thirtieth Article, unto the book containing the form and manner of making, ordaining, and consecrating of bishops, priests, and deacons, in this Act mentioned, in such sort and manner as the same did heretofore extend unto the book set forth in the time of King Edward, mentioned in the said six and thirtieth Article." The proposition therefore in the beginning of the Article is now to be taken thus: The book of consecration &c.——lately set forth in the time of Edward the Sixth, and confirmed at the same time by authority of parliament, and afterwards altered in the fourteenth year of King Charles the Second, doth contain all things necessary, &c. Dr. Bennet. The alterations, here alluded to, were but few, and of no great importance. Bp. Tomline.

[b] The Book of Consecration &c.] If any thing be wanting in the ordinations of the Church of England, the form of which is prescribed in the book here referred to, it must be either with respect to the ordainers; but these are bishops: or to the manner of ordaining; but this is the imposition of hands, with proper prayers: or to the persons, who are to be ordained; but these are examined and approved as to their faith, manners, and knowledge; and on these is conferred the power of doing all things which belong to their offices. There is therefore nothing wanted to make these ordinations just and complete. The forms, which the primitive Christians used in consecrating the clergy, are not now extant. But according to the most ancient ones that are now to be met with, nothing is omitted by our Church, which was formerly required to make an ordination complete. Archdeacon Welchman.

This book not only contains every thing, which is necessary for the appointment of persons to the several ministerial functions, without being liable in any one respect to the imputation of superstition or ungodliness; but whoever reads it will be convinced, that it is drawn up with the utmost caution, and with every possible attention to propriety; it guards against the admission of unworthy persons into the order of deacons and priests, by injoining previous examination into their moral and literary character, and also into their religious knowledge and principles; it requires at the time, both of ordination and consecration, an explicit declaration and solemn promise relative to the great points of faith and practice; the prayers are devout and appropriate; and all the ceremonial parts of these offices are simple, and grave, and admirably adapted to their respective occasions. The service for the ordination of priests is indeed so solemn and impressive, and contains such an excellent summary of the duties of ministers of the Gospel, and such earnest exhortations to the discharge of those duties; that every clergyman, whatever may be his age or station in the Church, would do well to read it carefully and attentively at least once every year. Bp. Tomline.

[c] —And therefore whosoever are consecrated &c.] This latter part of the Article has a retrospective view, and the reason of adding it was this; a new form of ordination was composed by the bishops, and approved by King Edward the Sixth, in the third year of his reign; and two years afterwards it was confirmed by Act of Parliament, together with the Book of Common Prayer, of which the form of ordination was declared to be a part. In Queen Mary's reign this Act was repealed; and the Book of Common Prayer, and the Book of Ordination were by name condemned. When Elizabeth came to the throne, Queen Mary's Act was repealed, and King Edward's Prayer Book was again authorized; but the Book of Ordination was not expressly named, because it had been a part of the Common Prayer Book; and therefore it was no more thought necessary to specify the office of ordination, than any other office of the Common Prayer Book. But Bishop Bonner contended, that as the Book of Ordination had been by name condemned in Queen Mary's reign, and had not been since revived by name, it was still condemned in law; and consequently, that all ordinations, conferred according to that form, were illegal and invalid. To obviate this objection, it was declared in a subsequent session of Parliament, that the Office of Ordination was considered as a part of the Common Prayer Book; and it was farther declared, that all ordinations, which had been performed accord-be rightly, orderly, and lawfully consecrated and ordered.

XXXVII. Of the Civil Magistrates[d].

THE Queen's Majesty hath the chief power[e] in this Realm of England, and other her Dominions, unto whom the chief Government of all Estates of this Realm, whether they be Ecclesiastical or Civil, in all causes doth appertain, and is not, nor ought to be, subject to any foreign Jurisdiction.

Where we attribute to the Queen's Majesty[f] the chief government, by which Titles we understand the minds of some slanderous folks[g] to be offended; we give not to our Princes the ministering either of God's Word, or of the Sacraments, the which thing the Injunctions also lately set forth by Elizabeth our Queen do most plainly testify; but that only prerogative, which we see to have been given always to all godly Princes in holy Scriptures by God himself; that is, that they should rule all states and degrees committed to their charge by God, whether they be Ecclesiastical or Temporal, and restrain with the civil sword the stubborn and evil-doers.

2 Chron. xxvi. 16—18.

Rom. xiii. 1. 1 Pet. ii. 13. 1 Kings ii. 26, 27. Luke xx. 25.

---

ing to that office, were valid; and upon the same principle a similar clause was inserted in this Article. Bp. Tomline.

[d] XXXVII. Of the Civil Magistrates.] This Article was shorter, as it was published in King Edward's time, and did run thus: "The King of England is supreme head in earth, next under Christ, of the Church of England and Ireland." Then followed the paragraph against the pope's jurisdiction, worded as it is now: to which these words were subjoined, "The civil magistrate is ordained and allowed of God; wherefore we must obey him, not only for fear of punishment, but also for conscience sake." In Queen Elizabeth's time it was thought fitting to take away those prejudices, that the papists were generally infusing into the minds of the people, against the term "head;" which seemed to be the more incongruous, because a woman did then reign; therefore that was left out, and instead of it the words "chief power" and "chief government" were made use of, which do signify the same thing.

The Queen did also by her Injunctions offer an explanation of this matter: for whereas it was given out by those, who had complied with every thing that had been done both in her father's and in her brother's time, but who resolved now to set themselves in opposition to her, that she was assuming a much greater authority than they had pretended to; she upon that ordered the explanation, which is referred to in the Article, and which is in these words: "For certainly her Majesty neither doth nor ever will challenge any authority, other than that was challenged and lately used by the said noble Kings of famous memory, King Henry the Eighth, and King Edward the Sixth, which is and was of ancient time due to the imperial crown of this realm that is, under God to have the sovereignty and rule over all manner of persons born within these her realms, dominions, and countries, of what estate, either ecclesiastical or civil, soever they be; so as no other foreign power shall or ought to have any superiority over them. And if any person, that hath conceived any other sense of the said oath, shall accept the same oath with this interpretation, sense, or meaning, her Majesty is well pleased to accept every such in that behalf, as her good and obedient subjects: and shall acquit them of all manner of penalties, contained in the said Act, against such as shall peremptorily and obstinately refuse to take the same oath." Bp. Burnet.

[e] The Queen's Majesty hath the chief power &c.] The reader is requested to refer to page 684, note l.

In addition to what is there said, it may be remarked, that the church for the three first centuries had no prince, but such as either persecuted, or at least neglected her; and therefore that she was then forced to take care of her own affairs without them. But as soon as the emperors became Christian, the affairs of the church depended upon their management. From henceforth they began to call councils, and to receive appeals from them, and to take cognizance of ecclesiastical causes, &c. In a word, it is abundantly manifest, that whatever power the Church ascribes to her kings, the same was made use of by the Christian emperors. Archdeacon Welchman.

It is evident, that both according to Scripture, and the practice of all ages and countries, the princes of Christendom have an authority over their subjects in matters ecclesiastical. The reason of things makes also for this. For, if any rank of men are exempted from their jurisdiction, they must thereby cease to be subjects: and, if any sort of causes, spiritual ones in particular, were put out of their authority, it were an easy thing to reduce almost every thing to such a relation to spirituals, that, if this principle were once received, their authority would be very precarious and feeble. Nothing could give princes stronger and juster prejudices against the Christian religion, than if they saw that the effect of their receiving it must be the withdrawing of so great a part of their subjects from their authority; and the putting of so many checks upon it, as those, that had the management of this religion, should think fit to restrain it by. In a word, all mankind must be under one obedience and one authority. Bp. Burnet.

[f] Where we attribute to the Queen's Majesty &c.] The reader is referred to page 684, note l: also to the note introductory to this Article, above, note d.

As for ministering either the word or sacraments, it belongs no more to princes, than the burning of incense did to King Uzziah; who, for attempting it, was judicially smitten with leprosy, and so excluded for ever after, not only from all sacred, but even civil society. A plain argument that the sacerdotal is not included in the regal office, nor derived from thence; but is of a distinct nature and institution. 2 Chron. xxvi. 16, &c. Veneer.

[g] — some slanderous folks] These words referred to the Puritans, who denied the right of the civil magistrate to interfere in any ecclesiastical matters. The Injunctions here mentioned were published in the year 1559, soon after Queen Elizabeth succeeded to the crown; they related to the affairs of the Church, and began with asserting the Queen's supremacy. Bp. Tomline.

The Bishop of Rome hath no jurisdiction in this Realm of England[h].

The Laws of the Realm may punish Christian men with death[i], for heinous and grievous offences.

Rom. xiii. 4. Acts xxv. 11.

It is lawful for Christian men[k], at the commandment of the Magistrate, to wear weapons, and serve in the wars.

Luke iii. 14. Acts x. 1, 2.

XXXVIII. Of Christian men's Goods, which are not common[l].

THE Riches and Goods of Christians are not common[m], as touch-

Acts v. 4. Rom. xiii. 7. 2 Thess. iii. 12.

[h] The Bishop of Rome hath no jurisdiction in this Realm of England.] By what right should the bishop of Rome have any jurisdiction in this realm? Does it proceed from his being St. Peter's successor? I answer, that all the apostles were equal in authority; and farther, that St. Paul was the apostle of the Gentiles, and that he was not afraid to reprove St. Peter himself, Gal. ii. 9. 14. Or does this claim depend on his right as a patriarch? I answer, that England was not within the patriarchate of Rome. Or is it derived from Constantine's donation? This is too ridiculous an imposture to be seriously refuted. Or does it proceed from his having been concerned in converting England to the Christian faith? Now according to this way of reasoning, all churches, not excepting that of Rome, are subject to the church of Jerusalem: but none to that of Rome, unless it received the Christian faith from her. But the Britons were converted to the faith, long before Augustine, the pope's legate, came amongst them. From all which it follows, that, when the pope concerns himself with our affairs, he is one of those who are reprehended in 1 Pet. iv. 15, as "a busy-body in other men's matters." Archdeacon Welchman.

[i] The Laws of the Realm may punish Christian men with death, &c.] This paragraph is concerning the lawfulness of capital punishments in Christian societies. It has an appearance of compassion and charity, to think that men ought not to be put to death for their crimes; but to be kept alive, that they may repent of them. Some, both ancients and moderns, have thought that there was a cruelty in all capital punishments, which was inconsistent with the gentleness of the Gospel: but when we consider, that God, in that law, which He Himself delivered to the Jews by the hand of Moses, did appoint so many capital punishments, even for offences against positive precepts, we cannot think that these are contrary to justice or true goodness; since they were dictated by God Himself, who is eternally the same, unalterable in his perfections. This shews that God, who knows most perfectly our frame and disposition, knows that the love of life is planted so deep in our nature, and that it has such a root there, that nothing can work so powerfully on us, to govern, and restrain us, as the fear of death. And therefore, since the main thing, that is to be considered in government, is the good of the whole body; and since a feeble indulgence and impunity may set mankind loose into great disorders, from which the terror of severer laws, together with such examples as are made on the incorrigible, will naturally restrain them; it seems necessary for the preservation of mankind and of society, to have recourse sometimes to capital punishments.

The precedent, which God set in the Mosaical law, seems a full justification of such punishments under the Gospel. The charity, which the Gospel prescribes, does not take away the rules of justice and equity, by which we may maintain our possessions, or recover them out of the hands of violent aggressors: only it obliges us to do that in a soft and gentle manner, without rigour or resentment. The same charity, though it obliges us, as Christians, not to keep up hatred or anger in our hearts, but to pardon, as to our own parts, the wrongs that are done us; yet does not oblige us to throw up the order and peace of mankind, and abandon it to the injustice and violence of wicked men.

Under the Gospel, as under the Law, the magistrate is "the minister of God," and has the sword put in his hand, which "he beareth not in vain," for he is appointed to be "a revenger, to execute wrath on him that doeth evil," Rom. xiii. 4. The natural signification of his bearing the sword is, that he has an authority for punishing capitally; since it is upon those occasions only that he can be said to use the sword as a revenger. Nor can Christian charity oblige a man, whom the law has made to be the avenger of blood, or of other crimes, to refuse to comply with that obligation, which is laid upon him by the constitution under which he is born. He can only forgive that, of which he is the master; but the other is a debt which he owes the society: and his private forgiving of the wrong done to himself does not reach to that other obligation, which is not in his own power to give away. Bp. Burnet.

[k] It is lawful for Christian men, &c.] This is apparent from Luke iii. 14; where we see, that when the soldiers came to St. John the Baptist to know their duty, his advice to them was only this, "Do violence to no man, neither accuse any falsely, and be content with your wages." There is not the least hint that their employment was unlawful. And in Acts x. 2, Cornelius, a centurion, that is, the commander of an hundred soldiers, is called a devout man; nor was he, when baptized, commanded to leave his profession. And it appears from Tertullian, that Christians served in the wars, even under heathen emperors. Veneer.

It may here also be observed, that the injunctions in the New Testament to obey the civil magistrate are general, and therefore they extend to the case of serving in the wars: and it is manifest that no nation could maintain its independence, if it did not resist by force the aggressions of its ambitious neighbours.

But though these reasons and authorities may convince us, that in the present state of things "it is lawful for Christian men, at the commandment of the magistrate, to wear weapons and serve in the wars;" yet every one will acknowledge, that if the mild and benevolent religion of Jesus had a general and complete influence, not only private quarrels and dissensions, but publick wars also, would cease throughout the world. Bp. Tomline.

[l] XXXVIII. Of Christian men's Goods, which are not common.] This Article consists of two parts: the former declares that private property is not inconsistent with the profession of the Gospel; and the latter asserts the Christian duty of charity to the poor. Bp. Tomline.

[m] The Riches and Goods of Christians are not common, &c.] The whole charge that is given in the Scripture for charity and almsgiving; all the rules that are given to the rich and to masters, to whom their servants were then properties and slaves; do clearly demonstrate that the Gospel was not designed to introduce a community of goods. And even that fellowship or community, which was practised in the first beginnings of it, was the effect of particular men's charity, and not of any ing the right, title, and possession of the same, as certain Anabaptists do falsely boast[n]. Notwithstanding, every man ought[o], of such things as he possesseth, liberally to give alms to the poor, according to his ability.

1 Tim. vi. 17, 18.

XXXIX. Of a Christian man's Oath[p].

AS we confess that vain and rash Swearing[q] is forbidden Christian men by our Lord Jesus Christ, and James his Apostle, so we judge, that Christian Religion[r] doth not Matt. v. 34. James v. 12.

Matt. xxvi. 63, 64.

law that was laid on them. "Barnabas, having land, sold it, and laid the price of it at the apostles' feet," Acts iv. 36, 37. And when St. Peter chid Ananias for having vowed to give in the whole price of his land to that distribution, and then withdrawing a part of it, and by a lie pretending that he had brought it all in; he affirmed that the right was still in him, till he by a vow had put it out of his power.

It never can be thought a just and equitable thing, that the sober and industrious should be bound to share the fruits of their labour with the idle and luxurious. This would be such an encouragement to those, whom all wise governments ought to discourage; and would so discourage those, who ought to be encouraged; that all the order of the world must be dissolved, if so extravagant a conceit should be entertained. Both the rich and the poor have rules given them, and there are virtues suitable to each state of life. The rich ought to be sober and thankful, modest and humble, bountiful and charitable, out of the abundance that God has given them, and not to set their hearts upon uncertain riches, but to trust in the living God, and to make the best use of them that they can. The poor ought to be patient and industrious, to submit to the providence of God, and to study to make sure of a better portion in another state, than God has thought fit to give them in this world. Bp. Burnet.

[n] — as certain Anabaptists do falsely boast.] It is evident that private property is essential to the very existence of civil society: and it is not to be believed that the Gospel which "has the promise of this life as well as of that which is to come," would destroy or in any respect weaken, a principle which is the foundation of every social comfort: and indeed none of the early sectaries ever thought of maintaining such an opinion. But in the beginning of the sixteenth century the Anabaptists of Germany, among other absurd and dangerous tenets, contended for the necessity of a community of goods among Christians. This doctrine was warmly and successfully opposed by the most enlightened part of the Reformers upon the continent: it made but very little progress in this country: and our present Anabaptists intirely reject it. Bp. Tomline.

[o] — Notwithstanding, every man ought, &c.] We see what particular care God took of the poor in the old dispensation, and what variety of provision was made for them: all which must certainly be carried as much higher among Christians, as the laws of love and charity are raised to a higher degree in the Gospel. Christ represents the essay, that He gives of the day of judgment, in this article of charity, and expresses it in the most emphatical words possible; as if what is given to the poor were to be reckoned for, as if it had been given personally to Christ Himself: and in a great variety of other passages this matter is so oft insisted on, that no man can resist it who reads them, and acknowledges the authority of the New Testament. Bp. Burnet.

No specifick rule is laid down in Scripture concerning the proportion, which a man is bound to give of his property in acts of benevolence: but the great importance, annexed to the performance of this duty by Christ and his apostles, makes it highly incumbent upon every one to practise it to the utmost of his means. Bp. Tomline.

[p] XXXIX. Of a Christian man's Oath.] An oath is an appeal to God, either upon a testimony that is given, or a promise that is made, confirming the truth of the one, and the fidelity of the other. It is an appeal to God, who knows all things, and will judge all men: so it is an act that acknowledges both his omniscience and his being the Governour of this world, who will judge all at the last day according to their deeds, and must be supposed to have a more immediate regard to such acts, in which men make Him a party. Bp. Burnet.

[q] As we confess that vain and rash Swearing &c.] The passages here referred to, are in our Saviour's Sermon on the Mount, Matt. v. 34, &c.; and in the Epistle of St. James, v. 12. The Jews in the time of our Saviour were very much addicted to the use of oaths of various sorts in common conversation, and the above passages were directed against that practice: this appears from the expression, "Let your communication be Yea, yea; Nay, nay;" which words plainly allude to the ordinary intercourse of social life, and are not applicable to the solemnity of judicial proceedings. And this also is evident from the enumeration of things not to be sworn by; namely, "heaven, earth, Jerusalem, and the head;" none of which oaths were ever used before magistrates: and the general precepts, "Swear not at all," and "Swear not by any other oath," must be considered as prohibiting only all such oaths, as are like those which are particularly specified; that is, every kind of "vain and rash swearing," but not oaths administered by proper authority, and upon proper occasions. Bp. Tomline.

[r] — so we judge, that Christian Religion &c.] All decisions in courts of judicature, and proceedings before magistrates, must be founded upon evidence; and therefore whatever promotes the veracity of witnesses, contributes to the preservation of justice and order in the world. The strongest obligation to truth, which can operate upon the minds of men, is a solemn appeal to God; and upon that principle oaths have been constantly used in the administration of municipal and criminal law. These oaths are not forbidden in Scripture: and therefore magistrates are at liberty to require them, in the execution of their office, as the best means of attaining the great ends of civil government. The Article says, "in a cause of faith and charity;" that is, when faith or truth is to be established, and charity or good will can be promoted, by putting an end to strife, "for an oath for confirmation is an end of all controversy," Heb. vi. 16; which words admit the lawfulness of an oath, when applied to the settlement of points in litigation. St. Paul in his Epistles frequently calls God to witness the truth of what he asserts; Rom. i. 9; ix. 1; 2 Cor. i. 18; Gal. i. 20; which proves that all oaths are not unlawful in Christians.

Profane swearing is forbidden by the third Commandment: but that prohibition was evidently not

Lev. v. 1. prohibit, but that a man may swear when the Magistrate requireth, in a cause of faith and charity, so it be done according to the Prophet's teaching[s], in justice, judgement, and truth. Jer. iv. 2.

THE RATIFICATION.

THIS Book of Articles before rehearsed, is again approved, and allowed to be holden and executed within the Realm, by the assent and consent of our Sovereign Lady ELIZABETH, by the grace of God, of England, France, and Ireland, Queen, Defender of the Faith, &c. Which Articles were deliberately read, and confirmed again by the subscription of the hands of the Archbishops and Bishops of the Upper-house, and by the subscription of the whole Clergy of the Nether-house in their Convocation, in the Year of our Lord 1571.

---

designed to extend to every use of oaths; for Moses expressly says, "Thou shalt fear the Lord thy God, and serve him, and shalt swear by his name," Deut. vi. 13. And, under the Jewish dispensation, judges had a power to adjure in the name of God, either to draw a confession from an accused person, or a faithful testimony from a witness: "If a soul sin, and hear the voice of swearing," or adjuration, "and is a witness whether he hath seen or known it; if he do not utter it, then he shall bear his iniquity," Lev. v. 1. And thus our Saviour Himself, in obedience to this law of Moses, although He had before been silent, answered the high priest when he "adjured him by the living God," Matt. xxvi. 63; that is, called upon Him to answer upon oath. The form of administering oaths among us is different from that formerly practised among the Jews; but the obligation they carry with them, and the principle upon which they rest, are precisely the same. Bp. Tomline.

[s] — according to the Prophet's teaching, &c.] The New Testament supplies authorities beyond exception, to justify the use of an oath upon a great occasion, or before a competent authority; according to that prophecy quoted in the Article, which is thought to relate to the times of the Messiah: "And thou shalt swear, The Lord liveth, in truth, in judgment, and in righteousness; and the nations shall bless themselves in him, and in him shall they glory," Jer. iv. 2. These last words seem evidently to relate to the days of the Messiah: so here an oath, religiously taken, is represented as a part of that worship, which all nations shall offer up to God under the new dispensation. Bp. Burnet.

BEFORE these notes are concluded, it may be desirable to state what is the use of the Thirty-nine Articles, and the importance of the subscriptions of the clergy to them.

Some have thought that they are only Articles of union and peace; that they are a standard of doctrine, not to be contradicted or disputed; that the sons of the Church are only bound to acquiesce silently to them; and that the subscription binds only to a general compromise upon those Articles, that so there may be no disputing or wrangling about them. By this means they reckon, that though a man should differ in his opinion from that which appears to be the clear sense of any of the Articles; yet he may with a good conscience subscribe them, if the Article appears to him to be of such a nature, that though he thinks it wrong, yet it seems not to be of that consequence, but that it may be borne with and not contradicted.

Now as to the laity, and the whole body of the people, certainly to them these are only the Articles of Church communion: so that every person, who does not think that there is some proposition in them, that is erroneous to so high a degree, that he cannot hold communion with such as hold it, may, and is obliged to, continue in our communion; for certainly there may be many opinions held in matters of religion, which a man may believe to be false, and yet may esteem them to be of so little importance to the chief design of religion, that he may well hold communion with those whom he thinks to be so mistaken.

But what the clergy are bound to by their subscriptions is much more than this. The meaning of every subscription is to be taken from the design of the imposer, and from the words of the subscription itself. The title of the Articles bears that they were agreed upon in convocation, "for the avoiding of diversities of opinions, and for the establishing of consent touching true religion." Where it is evident, that "a consent in opinion" is designed. If we in the next place consider the declarations, that the Church has made in the Canons, we shall find that though by the fifth Canon, which relates to the whole body of people, such only are declared to be excommunicated ipso facto, who shall affirm any of the Articles to be erroneous, or such as he may not with a good conscience subscribe to; yet the 36th Canon is express for the clergy, requiring them to subscribe "willingly and ex animo," and "acknowledge all and every Article to be agreeable to the word of God:" upon which canon it is, that the form of the subscription runs in these words, which seem expressly to declare a man's own opinion, and not a bare assent to an article of peace, or an engagement to silence and submission. The statute of the 13th of Queen Elizabeth, chap. 12, which gives the legal authority to our requiring subscriptions, in order to a man's being capable of a benefice, requires that every clergyman should read the Articles in the church, with a declaration of his unfeigned assent to them. These things make it appear very plain that the subscriptions of the clergy must be considered as a declaration of their own opinion, and not as a bare obligation to silence. Bp. Burnet.

It therefore behoves every one, before he offers himself a candidate for holy orders, to peruse carefully the Articles of our Church, and to compare them with the written word of God. If, upon mature examination, he believes them to be authorized by Scripture, he may conscientiously subscribe them: but if, on the contrary, he thinks that he sees reason to dissent from any of the doctrines asserted in them, no hope of emolument or honour, no dread of inconvenience or disappointment, should induce him to express his

A TABLE OF THE ARTICLES.

1. Of Faith in the Holy Trinity.
2. Of Christ the Son of God.
3. Of his going down into Hell.
4. Of his Resurrection.
5. Of the Holy Ghost.
6. Of the Sufficiency of the Scripture.
7. Of the Old Testament.
8. Of the three Creeds.
9. Of Original or Birth-sin.
10. Of Free-Will.
11. Of Justification.
12. Of Good Works.
13. Of Works before Justification.
14. Of Works of Supererogation.
15. Of Christ alone without Sin.
16. Of Sin after Baptism.
17. Of Predestination and Election.
18. Of obtaining Salvation by Christ.
19. Of the Church.
20. Of the Authority of the Church.
21. Of the Authority of General Councils.
22. Of Purgatory.
23. Of Ministering in the Congregation.
24. Of Speaking in the Congregation.
25. Of the Sacraments.
26. Of the Unworthiness of Ministers.
27. Of Baptism.
28. Of the Lord's Supper.
29. Of the Wicked which eat not the Body of Christ.
30. Of both kinds.
31. Of Christ's one Oblation.
32. Of the Marriage of Priests.
33. Of Excommunicate Persons.
34. Of the Traditions of the Church.
35. Of the Homilies.
36. Of Consecrating of Ministers.
37. Of Civil Magistrates.
38. Of Christian men's Goods.
39. Of a Christian man's Oath.

The Ratification.

---

solemn assent to propositions, which in fact he does not believe. It is not indeed necessary, that he should approve every word or expression, but he ought to believe all the fundamental doctrines, of the Articles; all those tenets, in which our Church differs from other churches, or from other sects of Christians. He ought to feel that he can from his own conviction maintain the purity of our established religion; and sincerely and zealously enforce those points of faith and practice which our Church declares to be the revealed will of God. This appears to me the only just ground of conscientious subscription to the Articles: and let it ever be remembered, that, in a business of this serious and important nature, no species whatever of evasion, subterfuge, or reserve, is to be allowed, or can be practised without imminent danger of incurring the wrath of God. The Articles are to be subscribed in their plain and obvious sense, and assent is to be given to them simply and unequivocally. Thus only can a person offer himself at the table of the Lord as his minister with safety; thus only can he expect to receive the divine blessing upon that course of life, to which he then solemnly devotes himself. Bp. Tomline.

A TABLE[1] OF KINDRED AND AFFINITY,

WHEREIN WHOSOEVER ARE RELATED ARE FORBIDDEN IN SCRIPTURE AND OUR LAWS TO MARRY TOGETHER.

A Man may not marry his	A Woman may not marry with her
1 GRANDMOTHER,	1 GRANDFATHER,
2 Grandfather's Wife,	2 Grandmother's Husband,
3 Wife's Grandmother.	3 Husband's Grandfather.
4 Father's Sister,	4 Father's Brother,
5 Mother's Sister,	5 Mother's Brother,
6 Father's Brother's Wife.	6 Father's Sister's Husband.
7 Mother's Brother's Wife,	7 Mother's Sister's Husband,
8 Wife's Father's Sister,	8 Husband's Father's Brother,
9 Wife's Mother's Sister.	9 Husband's Mother's Brother.
10 Mother,	10 Father,
11 Step-Mother,	11 Step-Father,
12 Wife's Mother.	12 Husband's Father.
13 Daughter,	13 Son,
14 Wife's Daughter,	14 Husband's Son,
15 Son's Wife.	15 Daughter's Husband.
16 Sister,	16 Brother,
17 Wife's Sister,	17 Husband's Brother,
18 Brother's Wife.	18 Sister's Husband.
19 Son's Daughter,	19 Son's Son,
20 Daughter's Daughter,	20 Daughter's Son,
21 Son's Son's Wife.	21 Son's Daughter's Husband.
22 Daughter's Son's Wife,	22 Daughter's Daughter's Husband,
23 Wife's Son's Daughter,	23 Husband's Son's Son.
24 Wife's Daughter's Daughter.	24 Husband's Daughter's Son.
25 Brother's Daughter,	25 Brother's Son,
26 Sister's Daughter,	26 Sister's Son,
27 Brother's Son's Wife.	27 Brother's Daughter's Husband.
28 Sister's Son's Wife,	28 Sister's Daughter's Husband,
29 Wife's Brother's Daughter,	29 Husband's Brother's Son,
30 Wife's Sister's Daughter.	30 Husband's Sister's Son.

[1] A Table &c.] This table, which is according to several previous statutes, was set forth in the year 1563. The degrees specified in the said statutes are particularly set forth in the eighteenth chapter of Leviticus, whereby not only degrees of kindred and consanguinity, but degrees of affinity and alliance, do hinder matrimony. Dr. Burn.

Here ends the Book of Common Prayer, truly so called, being composed by the publick spirit, and prescribed by the publick authority of the Church, for the publick service and worship of God; to be offered up to Him, in the name and spirit of the Church, by those who are ordained for men in things pertaining to God; to which every person of the Church may, according to St. Paul, say "Amen" with understanding, because he knows beforehand to what he is to say Amen.

"Come altogether to the same prayer; let there be one common prayer, one and the same mind and spirit." (Ignatius.) SOLI DEO GLORIA. "I will pray with the spirit, and I will pray with the understanding also." Bp. Sparrow,

CONSTITUTIONS AND CANONS

ECCLESIASTICAL.

Treated upon by the Bishop of London, President of the Convocation for the Province of Canterbury, and the rest of the Bishops and Clergy of the said Province; and agreed upon with the King's Majesty's Licence, in their Synod begun at London, Anno Domini 1603, and in the Year of the Reign of our Sovereign Lord JAMES, by the Grace of God, King of England, France, and Ireland, the First, and of Scotland the Thirty-seventh: and now published for the due observation of them, by his Majesty's authority under the Great Seal of England.

JAMES, by the grace of God, King of England, Scotland, France, and Ireland, Defender of the Faith, &c. to all to whom these presents shall come, greeting: Whereas our Bishops, Deans of our Cathedral Churches, Archdeacons, Chapters, and Colleges, and the other Clergy of every Diocese within the Province of Canterbury, being summoned and called by virtue of our Writ directed to the Most Reverend Father in God, John, late Archbishop of Canterbury, and bearing date the one and thirtieth day of January, in the first year of our reign of England, France, and Ireland, and of Scotland the thirty-seventh, to have appeared before him in our Cathedral Church of St. Paul in London, the twentieth day of March then next ensuing, or elsewhere, as he should have thought it most convenient, to treat, consent, and conclude upon certain difficult and urgent affairs mentioned in the said Writ; did thereupon, at the time appointed, and within the Cathedral Church of St. Paul aforesaid, assemble themselves, and appear in Convocation for that purpose, according to our said Writ, before the Right Reverend Father in God, Richard Bishop of London, duly (upon a second Writ of ours dated the ninth day of March aforesaid) authorized, appointed, and constituted, by reason of the said Archbishop of Canterbury his death, President of the said Convocation, to execute those things, which, by virtue of our first Writ, did appertain to him the said Archbishop to have executed, if he had lived: We, for divers urgent and weighty causes and considerations us thereunto especially moving, of our especial grace, certain knowledge, and mere motion, did, by virtue of our Prerogative Royal, and Supreme Authority in Causes Ecclesiastical, give and grant by our several Letters Patent under our Great Seal of England, the one dated the twelfth day of April last past, and the other the twenty-fifth day of June then next following, full, free, and lawful liberty, licence, power, and authority unto the said Bishop of London, President of the said Convocation, and to the other Bishops, Deans, Archdeacons, Chapters, and Colleges, and the rest of the Clergy before mentioned, of the said Province, that they, from time to time, during our first Parliament now prorogued, might confer, treat, debate, consider, consult, and agree of and upon such Canons, Orders, Ordinances, and Constitutions, as they should think necessary, fit, and convenient, for the honour and service of Almighty God, the good and quiet of the Church, and the better government thereof, to be from time to time observed, performed, fulfilled, and kept, as well by the Archbishops of Canterbury, the Bishops, and their Successors, and the rest of the whole Clergy of the said Province of Canterbury, in their several callings, offices, functions, ministries, degrees, and administrations; as also by all and every Dean of the Arches, and other Judge of the said Archbishop's Courts, Guardians of Spiritualities, Chancellors, Deans and Chapters, Archdeacons, Commissaries, Officials, Registrars, and all and every other Ecclesiastical Officers, and their inferior Ministers, whatsoever, of the same Province of Canterbury, in their and every of their distinct Courts, and in the order and manner of their and every of their Proceedings; and by all other Persons within this realm, as far as lawfully, being members of the Church, it may concern them, as in our said Letters Patent amongst other clauses more at large doth appear. Forasmuch as the Bishop of London, President of the said Convocation, and others, the said Bishops, Deans, Archdeacons, Chapters, and Colleges, with the rest of the Clergy, having met together, at the time and place before mentioned, and then and there, by virtue of our said authority granted unto them, treated of, concluded, and agreed upon certain Canons, Orders, Ordinances, and Constitutions, to the end and purpose by us limited and prescribed unto them; and have thereupon offered and presented the same unto us, most humbly desiring us to give our royal assent unto their said Canons, Orders, Ordinances, and Constitutions, according to the form of a certain Statute or Act of Parliament, made in that behalf in the twenty-fifth year of the reign of King Henry the Eighth, and by our said Prerogative Royal and Supreme Authority in Causes Ecclesiastical, to ratify by our Letters Patent under our Great Seal of England, and to confirm the same, the title and tenor of them being word for word as ensueth:

Of the Church of England.

1. The King's Supremacy over the Church of England, in Causes Ecclesiastical, to be maintained.

AS our duty to the King's most excellent Majesty requireth, we first decree and ordain, That the Archbishop of Canterbury, (from time to time,) all Bishops of this Province, all Deans, Archdeacons, Parsons, Vicars, and all other Ecclesiastical Persons, shall faithfully keep and observe, and (as much as in them lieth) shall cause to be observed and kept of others, all and singular laws and statutes, made for restoring to the Crown of this kingdom the ancient jurisdiction over the State Ecclesiastical, and abolishing of all foreign power repugnant to the same. Furthermore, all Ecclesiastical Persons having cure of souls, and all other Preachers, and Readers of Divinity Lectures, shall, to the uttermost of their wit, knowledge, and learning, purely and sincerely, without any colour or dissimulation, teach, manifest, open, and declare, four times every year at the least, in their sermons and other collations and lectures, that all usurped and foreign power (forasmuch as the same hath no establishment nor ground by the law of God) is for most just causes taken away and abolished: and that therefore no manner of obedience, or subjection, within his Majesty's realms and dominions, is due unto any such foreign power, but that the King's power, within his realms of England, Scotland, and Ireland, and all other his dominions and countries, is the highest power under God; to whom all men, as well inhabitants, as born within the same, do by God's law owe most loyalty and obedience, afore and above all other powers and potentates in the earth.

2. Impugners of the King's Supremacy censured.

WHOSOEVER shall hereafter affirm, That the King's Majesty hath not the same authority in Causes Ecclesiastical, that the godly Kings had amongst the Jews and Christian Emperors of the primitive Church; or impeach any part of his regal supremacy in the said causes restored to the Crown, and by the laws of this realm therein established; let him be excommunicated ipso facto, and not restored, but only by the Archbishop, after his repentance, and public revocation of those his wicked errors.

3. The Church of England, a true and Apostolical Church.

WHOSOEVER shall hereafter affirm, That the Church of England, by law established under the King's Majesty, is not a true and Apostolical Church, teaching and maintaining the doctrine of the Apostles; let him be excommunicated ipso facto, and not restored, but only by the Archbishop, after his repentance, and public revocation of this his wicked error.

4. Impugners of the public Worship of God, established in the Church of England, censured.

WHOSOEVER shall hereafter affirm, That the form of God's worship in the Church of England, established by law, and contained in the Book of Common Prayer and Administration of Sacraments, is a corrupt, superstitious, or unlawful worship of God, or containeth any thing in it that is repugnant to the Scriptures; let him be excommunicated ipso facto, and not restored, but by the Bishop of the place, or Archbishop, after his repentance, and public revocation of such his wicked errors.

5. Impugners of the Articles of Religion, established in the Church of England, censured.

WHOSOEVER shall hereafter affirm, That any of the nine and thirty Articles agreed upon by the Archbishops and Bishops of both provinces, and the whole Clergy, in the Convocation holden at London, in the year of our Lord God one thousand five hundred sixty-two, for avoiding diversities of opinions, and for the establishing of consent touching true Religion, are in any part superstitious or erroneous, or such as he may not with a good conscience subscribe unto; let him be excommunicated ipso facto, and not restored, but only by the Archbishop, after his repentance, and public revocation of such his wicked errors.

6. Impugners of the Rites and Ceremonies, established in the Church of England, censured.

WHOSOEVER shall hereafter affirm, That the Rites and Ceremonies of the Church of England by law established are wicked, antichristian, or superstitious, or such as, being commanded by lawful authority, men, who are zealously and godly affected, may not with any good conscience approve them, use them, or, as occasion requireth, subscribe unto them; let him be excommunicated ipso facto, and not restored until he repent, and publicly revoke such his wicked errors.

7. Impugners of the Government of the Church of England by Archbishops, Bishops, &c. censured.

WHOSOEVER shall hereafter affirm, That the government of the Church of England under his Majesty by Archbishops, Bishops, Deans, Archdeacons, and the rest that bear office in the same, is antichristian, and repugnant to the Word of God; let him be excommunicated ipso facto, and so continue until he repent, and publicly revoke such his wicked errors.

8. Impugners of the Form of consecrating and ordering Archbishops, Bishops, &c. in the Church of England, censured.

WHOSOEVER shall hereafter affirm or teach, That the form and manner of making and consecrating Bishops, Priests, and Deacons, containeth any thing in it that is repugnant to the Word of God, or that they who are made Bishops, Priests, or Deacons, in that form, are not lawfully made, nor ought to be accounted, either by themselves or others, to be truly either Bishops, Priests, or Deacons, until they have some other calling to those divine offices; let him be excommunicated ipso facto, not to be restored until he repent, and publicly revoke such his wicked errors.

9. Authors of Schism in the Church of England censured.

WHOSOEVER shall hereafter separate themselves from the Communion of Saints, as it is approved by the Apostles' Rules, in the Church of England, and combine themselves together in a new brotherhood, accounting the Christians, who are conformable to the doctrine, government, rites and ceremonies of the Church of England, to be profane, and unmeet for them to join with in Christian profession; let them be excommunicated ipso facto, and not restored but by the Archbishop, after their repentance, and public revocation of such their wicked errors.

10. Maintainers of Schismatics in the Church of England censured.

WHOSOEVER shall hereafter affirm, That such Ministers as refuse to subscribe to the form and manner of God's worship in the Church of England, prescribed in the Communion Book, and their adherents, may truly take unto them the name of another Church not established by law, and dare presume to publish it, That this their pretended Church hath of long time groaned under the burden of certain grievances imposed upon it, and upon the members thereof before mentioned, by the Church of England, and the Orders and Constitutions therein by law established; let them be excommunicated, and not restored until they repent, and publicly revoke such their wicked errors.

11. Maintainers of Conventicles censured.

WHOSOEVER shall hereafter affirm or maintain, That there are within this realm other meetings, assemblies, or congregations of the King's born subjects, than such as by the laws of this land are held and allowed, which may rightly challenge to themselves the name of True and Lawful Churches; let him be excommunicated, and not restored, but by the Archbishop, after his repentance, and public revocation of such his wicked errors.

12. Maintainers of Constitutions made in Conventicles censured.

WHOSOEVER shall hereafter affirm, That it is lawful for any sort of Ministers and Lay-persons, or of either of them, to join together, and make rules, orders, or constitutions, in Causes Ecclesiastical, without the King's authority, and shall submit themselves to be ruled and governed by them; let them be excommunicated ipso facto, and not be restored until they repent, and publicly revoke those their wicked and Anabaptistical errors.

Of Divine Service, and Administration of the Sacraments.

13. Due Celebration of Sundays and Holy-days.

ALL manner of persons within the Church of England shall from henceforth celebrate and keep the Lord's Day, commonly called Sunday, and other Holydays, according to God's holy will and pleasure, and the orders of the Church of England prescribed in that behalf; that is, in hearing the Word of God read and taught; in private and public prayers; in acknowledging their offences to God, and amendment of the same; in reconciling themselves charitably to their neighbours, where displeasure hath been; in oftentimes receiving the Communion of the body and blood of Christ; in visiting of the poor and sick; using all godly and sober conversation.

14. The prescript Form of Divine Service to be used on Sundays and Holy-days.

THE Common Prayer shall be said or sung distinctly and reverently upon such days as are appointed to be kept holy by the Book of Common Prayer, and their eves, and at convenient and usual times of those days, and in such place of every Church as the Bishop of the diocese, or Ecclesiastical Ordinary of the place, shall think meet for the largeness or straitness of the same, so as the people may be most edified. All Ministers likewise shall observe the Orders, Rites, and Ceremonies prescribed in the Book of Common Prayer, as well in reading the holy Scriptures, and saying of Prayers, as in administration of the Sacraments, without either diminishing in regard of preaching, or in any other respect, or adding any thing in the matter or form thereof.

15. The Litany to be read on Wednesdays and Fridays.

THE Litany shall be said or sung when, and as it is set down in the Book of Common Prayer, by the Parsons, Vicars, Ministers, or Curates, in all Cathedral, Collegiate, Parish Churches, and Chapels, in some convenient place, according to the discretion of the Bishop of the diocese, or Ecclesiastical Ordinary of the place. And that we may speak more particularly, upon Wednesdays and Fridays weekly, though they be not Holy-days, the Minister, at the accustomed hours of service, shall resort to the Church or Chapel, and, warning being given to the people by tolling of a bell, shall say the Litany prescribed in the Book of Common Prayer: whereunto we wish every householder dwelling within half a mile of the Church to come, or send one at the least of his household, fit to join with the Minister in prayers.

16. Colleges to use the prescript Form of Divine Service.

IN the whole Divine Service, and administration of the holy Communion, in all Colleges and Halls in both Universities, the Order, Form, and Ceremonies shall be duly observed, as they are set down and prescribed in the Book of Common Prayer, without any omission or alteration.

17. Students in Colleges to wear Surplices in time of Divine Service.

ALL Masters and Fellows of Colleges or Halls, and all the Scholars and Students in either of the Universities, shall, in their Churches and Chapels, upon all Sundays, Holy-days, and their eves, at the time of Divine Service, wear Surplices, according to the order of the Church of England: and such as are Graduates shall agreeably wear with their Surplices such Hoods as do severally appertain unto their degrees.

18. A reverence and attention to be used within the Church in time of Divine Service.

IN the time of Divine Service, and of every part thereof, all due reverence is to be used; for it is according to the Apostle's rule, Let all things be done decently, and according to order; answerably to which decency and order, we judge these our directions following: No man shall cover his head in the Church or Chapel in the time of Divine Service, except he have some infirmity; in which case let him wear a night-cap or coif. All manner of persons then present shall reverently kneel upon their knees, when the general Confession, Litany, and other prayers are read; and shall stand up at the saying of the Belief, according to the rules in that behalf prescribed in the Book of Common Prayer: and likewise when in time of Divine Service the Lord Jesus shall be mentioned, due and lowly reverence shall be done by all persons present, as it hath been accustomed; testifying by these outward ceremonies and gestures, their inward humility, Christian resolution, and due acknowledgment that the Lord Jesus Christ, the true eternal Son of God, is the only Saviour of the world, in whom alone all the mercies, graces, and promises of God to mankind, for this life, and the life to come, are fully and wholly comprised. None, either man, woman, or child, of what calling soever, shall be otherwise at such times busied in the Church, than in quiet attendance to hear, mark, and understand that which is read, preached, or ministered; saying in their due places audibly with the Minister, the Confession, the Lord's Prayer, and the Creed; and making such other answers to the public prayers, as are appointed in the Book of Common Prayer: neither shall they disturb the Service or Sermon, by walking or talking, or any other way; nor depart out of the Church during the time of Service or Sermon, without some urgent or reasonable cause.

19. Loiterers not to be suffered near the Church in time of Divine Service.

THE Church-wardens or Quest-men, and their assistants, shall not suffer any idle persons to abide either in the Church-yard, or Church-porch, during the time of Divine Service, or Preaching; but shall cause them either to come in, or to depart.

20. Bread and Wine to be provided against every Communion.

THE Church-wardens of every parish, against the time of every Communion, shall at the charge of the parish, with the advice and direction of the Minister, provide a sufficient quantity of fine white Bread, and of good and wholesome Wine, for the number of Communicants that shall from time to time receive there: which Wine we require to be brought to the Communion-table in a clean and sweet standing pot or stoop of pewter, if not of purer metal.

21. The Communion to be Thrice a Year received.

IN every Parish Church and Chapel, where Sacraments are to be administered within this realm, the holy Communion shall be ministered by the Parson, Vicar, or Minister, so often, and at such times, as every parishioner may communicate at the least thrice in the year, (whereof the feast of Easter to be one,) according as they are appointed by the Book of Common Prayer. Provided, That every Minister, as oft as he administereth the Communion, shall first receive that Sacrament himself. Furthermore, no Bread or Wine newly brought shall be used; but first the words of Institution shall be rehearsed, when the said Bread and Wine be present upon the Communion-table. Likewise the Minister shall deliver both the Bread and the Wine to every Communicant severally.

22. Warning to be given beforehand for the Communion.

WHEREAS every Lay-person is bound to receive the holy Communion thrice every year, and many notwithstanding do not receive that Sacrament once in a year; we do require every Minister to give warning to his parishioners publicly in the Church at Morning Prayer, the Sunday before every time of his administering that holy Sacrament, for their better preparation of themselves; which said warning we enjoin the said parishioners to accept and obey, under the penalty and danger of the law.

23. Students in Colleges to receive the Communion Four Times a Year.

IN all Colleges and Halls within both the Universities, the Masters and Fellows, such especially as have any pupils, shall be careful that all their said pupils, and the rest that remain amongst them, be well brought up, and thoroughly instructed in points of religion, and that they do diligently frequent public Service and Sermons, and receive the holy Communion; which we ordain to be administered in all such Colleges and Halls the first or second Sunday of every month, requiring all the said Masters, Fellows, and Scholars, and all the rest of the Students, Officers, and all other the Servants there, so to be ordered, that every one of them shall communicate four times in the year at the least, kneeling reverently and decently upon their knees, according to the order of the Communion Book prescribed in that behalf.

24. Copes to be worn in Cathedral Churches by those that administer the Communion.

IN all Cathedral and Collegiate Churches, the holy Communion shall be administered upon principal feast-days, sometimes by the Bishop, if he be present, and sometimes by the Dean, and at sometimes by a Canon or Prebendary, the principal Minister using a decent Cope, and being assisted with the Gospeller and Epistler agreeably, according to the Advertisements published Anno 7 Eliz. The said Communion to be administered at such times, and with such limitations, as is specified in the Book of Common Prayer. Provided, That no such limitation by any construction shall be allowed of, but that all Deans, Wardens, Masters, or Heads of Cathedral and Collegiate Churches, Prebendaries, Canons, Vicars, Petty Canons, Singing Men, and all others of the foundation, shall receive the Communion four times yearly at the least.

25. Surplices and Hoods to be worn in Cathedral Churches, when there is no Communion.

IN the time of Divine Service and Prayers, in all Cathedral and Collegiate Churches, when there is no Communion, it shall be sufficient to wear Surplices; saving that all Deans, Masters, and Heads of Collegiate Churches, Canons, and Prebendaries, being Graduates, shall daily, at the times both of Prayer and Preaching, wear with their Surplices such Hoods as are agreeable to their degrees.

26. Notorious Offenders not to be admitted to the Communion.

NO Minister shall in any wise admit to the receiving of the holy Communion, any of his cure or flock, which be openly known to live in sin notorious, without repentance; nor any who have maliciously and openly contended with their neighbours, until they shall be reconciled; nor any Church-wardens or Side-men, who having taken their oaths to present to their Ordinaries all such public offences as they are particularly charged to inquire of in their several parishes, shall (notwithstanding their said oaths, and that their faithful discharging of them is the chief means whereby public sins and offences may be reformed and punished) wittingly and willingly, desperately and irreligiously, incur the horrible crime of perjury, either in neglecting or in refusing to present such of the said enormities and public offences, as they know themselves to be committed in their said parishes, or are notoriously offensive to the congregation there; although they be urged by some of their neighbours, or by their Minister, or by their Ordinary himself, to discharge their consciences by presenting of them, and not to incur so desperately the said horrible sin of perjury.

27. Schismatics not to be admitted to the Communion.

NO Minister, when he celebrateth the Communion, shall wittingly administer the same to any but to such as kneel, under pain of suspension, nor under the like pain to any that refuse to be present at public Prayers, according to the Orders of the Church of England; nor to any that are common and notorious depravers of the Book of Common Prayer and Administration of the Sacraments, and of the Orders, Rites, and Ceremonies therein prescribed, or of any thing that is contained in any of the Articles agreed upon in the Convocation, one thousand five hundred sixty and two, or of any thing contained in the Book of ordering the Priests and Bishops; or to any that have spoken against and depraved his Majesty's sovereign authority in Causes Ecclesiastical; except every such person shall first acknowledge to the Minister, before the Church-wardens, his repentance for the same, and promise by word (if he cannot write) that he will do so no more; and except (if he can write) he shall first do the same under his hand-writing, to be delivered to the Minister, and by him sent to the Bishop of the diocese, or Ordinary of the place. Provided, That every Minister so repelling any, as is specified either in this or in the next precedent constitution, shall, upon complaint, or being required by the Ordinary, signify the cause thereof unto him, and therein obey his order and direction.

28. Strangers not to be admitted to the Communion.

THE Church-wardens or Quest-men, and their assistants, shall mark, as well as the Minister, whether all and every of the Parishioners come so often every year to the holy Communion, as the Laws and our Constitutions do require; and whether any Strangers come often and commonly from other parishes to their Church; and shall shew their Minister of them, lest perhaps they be admitted to the Lord's Table amongst others, which they shall forbid; and remit such home to their own Parish Churches and Ministers, there to receive the Communion with the rest of their own neighbours.

29. Fathers not to be Godfathers in Baptism, and Children not Communicants.

NO Parent shall be urged to be present, nor be admitted to answer as Godfather for his own Child; nor any Godfather or Godmother shall be suffered to make any other answer or speech, than by the Book of Common Prayer is prescribed in that behalf: neither shall any person be admitted Godfather or Godmother to any Child at Christening or Confirmation, before the said person so undertaking hath received the holy Communion.

30. The lawful Use of the Cross in Baptism explained.

WE are sorry that his Majesty's most princely care and pains taken in the Conference at Hampton-Court, amongst many other points, touching this one of the Cross in Baptism, hath taken no better effect with many, but that still the use of it in Baptism is so greatly stuck at and impugned. For the further declaration therefore of the true use of this ceremony, and for the removing of all such scruple, as might any ways trouble the consciences of them who are indeed rightly religious, following the royal steps of our most worthy King, because he therein followeth the rules of the Scriptures, and the practice of the primitive Church; we do commend to all the true members of the Church of England these our directions and observations ensuing.

First, it is to be observed, that although the Jews and Ethnicks derided both the Apostles and the rest of the Christians, for preaching and believing in Him who was crucified upon the Cross; yet all, both Apostles and Christians, were so far from being discouraged from their profession by the ignominy of the Cross, as they rather rejoiced and triumphed in it. Yea, the Holy Ghost by the mouths of the Apostles did honour the name of the Cross (being hateful among the Jews) so far, that under it he comprehended not only Christ crucified, but the force, effects, and merits of his Death and Passion, with all the comforts, fruits, and promises, which we receive or expect thereby.

Secondly, the honour and dignity of the name of the Cross begat a reverend estimation even in the Apostles' times (for ought that is known to the contrary) of the Sign of the Cross, which the Christians shortly after used in all their actions: thereby making an outward shew and profession, even to the astonishment of the Jews, that they were not ashamed to acknowledge Him for their Lord and Saviour, who died for them upon the Cross. And this sign they did not only use themselves with a kind of glory, when they met with any Jews, but signed therewith their children when they were christened, to dedicate them by that badge to his service, whose benefits bestowed upon them in Baptism the name of the Cross did represent. And this use of the Sign of the Cross in Baptism was held in the primitive Church, as well by the Greeks as the Latins, with one consent and great applause. At what time, if any had opposed themselves against it, they would certainly have been censured as enemies of the name of the Cross, and consequently of Christ's merits, the Sign whereof they could no better endure. This continual and general use of the Sign of the Cross is evident by many testimonies of the ancient Fathers.

Thirdly, it must be confessed, that in process of time the Sign of the Cross was greatly abused in the Church of Rome, especially after that corruption of Popery had once possessed it. But the abuse of a thing doth not take away the lawful use of it. Nay, so far was it from the purpose of the Church of England to forsake and reject the Churches of Italy, France, Spain, Germany, or any such like Churches, in all things which they held and practised, that, as the Apology of the Church of England confesseth, it doth with reverence retain those ceremonies, which do neither endamage the Church of God, nor offend the minds of sober men; and only departed from them in those particular points, wherein they were fallen both from themselves in their ancient integrity, and from the Apostolical Churches, which were their first founders. In which respect, amongst some other very ancient ceremonies, the Sign of the Cross in Baptism hath been retained in this Church, both by the judgment and practice of those reverend Fathers and great Divines in the days of King Edward the Sixth, of whom some constantly suffered for the profession of the truth; and others being exiled in the time of Queen Mary, did after their return, in the beginning of the reign of our late dread Sovereign, continually defend and use the same. This resolution and practice of our Church hath been allowed and approved by the censure upon the Communion-book in King Edward the Sixth his days, and by the harmony of Confessions of later years: because indeed the use of this Sign in Baptism was ever accompanied here with such sufficient cautions and exceptions against all Popish superstition and error, as in the like cases are either fit or convenient.

First, the Church of England, since the abolishing of Popery, hath ever held and taught, and so doth hold and teach still, that the Sign of the Cross used in Baptism is no part of the substance of that Sacrament: for when the Minister, dipping the infant in water, or laying water upon the face of it, (as the manner also is,) hath pronounced these words, I baptize thee in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost, the infant is fully and perfectly baptized. So as the Sign of the Cross being afterwards used, doth neither add any thing to the virtue and perfection of Baptism, nor being omitted doth detract any thing from the effect and substance of it.

Secondly, it is apparent in the Communion-book, that the infant baptized is, by virtue of Baptism, before it be signed with the Sign of the Cross, received into the congregation of Christ's flock, as a perfect member thereof, and not by any power ascribed unto the Sign of the Cross. So that for the very remembrance of the Cross, which is very precious to all them that rightly believe in Jesus Christ, and in the other respects mentioned, the Church of England hath retained still the Sign of it in Baptism: following therein the primitive and apostolical Churches, and accounting it a lawful outward ceremony and honourable badge, whereby the infant is dedicated to the service of Him that died upon the Cross, as by the words used in the Book of Common Prayer it may appear.

Lastly, the use of the Sign of the Cross in Baptism, being thus purged from all Popish superstition and error, and reduced in the Church of England to the primary institution of it, upon those true rules of doctrine concerning things indifferent, which are consonant to the Word of God and the judgment of all the ancient Fathers, we hold it the part of every private man, both Minister and other, reverently to retain the true use of it prescribed by public authority; considering that things of themselves indifferent do in some sort alter their natures, when they are either commanded or forbidden by a lawful magistrate; and may not be omitted at every man's pleasure, contrary to the law, when they be commanded, nor used when they are prohibited.

Ministers, their Ordination, Function, and Charge.

31. Four solemn Times appointed for the making of Ministers.

FORASMUCH as the ancient Fathers of the Church, led by example of the Apostles, appointed prayers and fasts to be used at the solemn ordering of Ministers; and to that purpose allotted certain times, in which only Sacred Orders might be given or conferred: we, following their holy and religious example, do constitute and decree that no Deacons or Ministers be made and ordained, but only upon the Sundays immediately following Jejunia quatuor temporum, commonly called Ember Weeks, appointed in ancient time for prayer and fasting, (purposely for this cause at their first institution,) and so continued at this day in the Church of England: and that this be done in the Cathedral, or Parish-church where the Bishop resideth, and in the time of Divine Service, in the presence not only of the Archdeacon, but of the Dean and two Prebendaries at the least, or (if they shall happen by any lawful cause to be let or hindered) in the presence of four other grave persons, being Masters of Arts at the least, and allowed for public Preachers.

32. None to be made Deacon and Minister both in one Day.

THE office of Deacon being a step or degree to the Ministry, according to the judgment of the ancient Fathers, and the practice of the primitive Church; we do ordain and appoint, that hereafter no Bishop shall make any person, of what qualities or gifts soever, a Deacon and a Minister both together upon one day; but that the order in that behalf prescribed in the Book of making and consecrating Bishops, Priests, and Deacons, be strictly observed. Not that always every Deacon should be kept from the Ministry for a whole year, when the Bishop shall find good cause to the contrary; but that there being now four times appointed in every year for the Ordination of Deacons and Ministers, there may ever be some time of trial of their behaviour in the office of Deacon, before they be admitted to the order of Priesthood.

33. The Titles of such as are to be made Ministers.

IT hath been long since provided by many decrees of the ancient Fathers, that none should be admitted either Deacon or Priest, who had not first some certain place where he might use his function. According to which examples we do ordain, that henceforth no person shall be admitted into Sacred Orders, except he shall at that time exhibit to the Bishop, of whom he desireth imposition of hands, a presentation of himself to some Ecclesiastical Preferment then void in that diocese; or shall bring to the said Bishop a true and undoubted Certificate, that either he is provided of some Church within the said diocese, where he may attend the cure of souls, or of some Minister's place vacant, either in the Cathedral Church of that diocese, or in some other Collegiate Church therein also situate, where he may execute his ministry; or that he is a Fellow, or in right as a Fellow, or to be a Conduct or Chaplain in some College in Cambridge or Oxford; or except he be a Master of Arts of five years' standing, that liveth of his own charge in either of the Universities; or except by the Bishop himself, that doth ordain him Minister, he be shortly after to be admitted either to some Benefice or Curateship then void. And if any Bishop shall admit any person into the ministry, that hath none of these titles as is aforesaid, then he shall keep and maintain him with all things necessary, till he do prefer him to some Ecclesiastical Living. And if the said Bishop shall refuse so to do, he shall be suspended by the Archbishop, being assisted with another Bishop, from giving of Orders by the space of a year.

34. The Quality of such as are to be made Ministers.

NO Bishop shall henceforth admit any person into Sacred Orders, which is not of his own diocese, except he be either of one of the Universities of this realm, or except he shall bring Letters Dimissory (so termed) from the Bishop of whose diocese he is; and desiring to be a Deacon, is three and twenty years old; and to be a Priest, four and twenty years complete; and hath taken some degree of school in either of the said Universities; or at the least, except he be able to yield an account of his faith in Latin, according to the Articles of Religion approved in the Synod of the Bishops and Clergy of this realm, one thousand five hundred sixty and two, and to confirm the same by sufficient testimonies out of the holy Scriptures; and except moreover he shall then exhibit Letters Testimonial of his good life and conversation, under the seal of some College of Cambridge or Oxford, where before he remained, or of three or four grave Ministers, together with the subscription and testimony of other credible persons, who have known his life and behaviour by the space of three years next before.

35. The Examination of such as are to be made Ministers.

THE Bishop, before he admit any person to holy Orders, shall diligently examine him in the presence of those Ministers that shall assist him at the imposition of hands: and if the said Bishop have any lawful impediment, he shall cause the said Ministers carefully to examine every such person so to be ordered. Provided, that they who shall assist the Bishop in examining and laying on of hands, shall be of his Cathedral Church, if they may conveniently be had, or other sufficient Preachers of the same diocese, to the number of three at the least: and if any Bishop or Suffragan shall admit any to Sacred Orders who is not so qualified and examined, as before we have ordained, the Archbishop of his province, having notice thereof, and being assisted therein by one Bishop, shall suspend the said Bishop or Suffragan so offending, from making either Deacons or Priests for the space of two years.

36. Subscription required of such as are to be made Ministers.

NO person shall hereafter be received into the Ministry, nor either by institution or collation admitted to any Ecclesiastical Living, nor suffered to preach, to catechize, or to be a Lecturer or Reader of Divinity in either University, or in any Cathedral or Collegiate Church, City, or Market-town, Parish-church, Chapel, or in any other place within this realm, except he be licensed either by the Archbishop, or by the Bishop of the diocese, where he is to be placed, under their hands and seals, or by one of the two Universities under their seal likewise; and except he shall first subscribe to these three articles following, in such manner and sort as we have here appointed.

I. That the King's Majesty, under God, is the only supreme Governor of this realm, and of all other his Highness's dominions and countries, as well in all Spiritual or Ecclesiastical things or causes, as Temporal; and that no foreign prince, person, prelate, state, or potentate hath, or ought to have, any jurisdiction, power, superiority, pre-eminence, or authority, Ecclesiastical or Spiritual, within his Majesty's said realms, dominions, and countries.

II. That the Book of Common Prayer, and of ordering of Bishops, Priests, and Deacons, containeth in it nothing contrary to the Word of God, and that it may lawfully so be used; and that he himself will use the form in the said Book prescribed, in public Prayer, and administration of the Sacraments, and none other.

III. That he alloweth the Book of Articles of Religion agreed upon by the Archbishops and Bishops of both provinces, and the whole Clergy in the Convocation holden at London in the year of our Lord God one thousand five hundred sixty and two; and that he acknowledgeth all and every the Articles therein contained, being in number nine and thirty, besides the Ratification, to be agreeable to the Word of God.

To these three Articles whosoever will subscribe, he shall, for the avoiding of all ambiguities, subscribe in this order and form of words, setting down both his Christian and Surname, viz.: I, N. N. do willingly and ex animo subscribe to these three Articles above mentioned, and to all things that are contained in them. And if any Bishop shall ordain, admit, or license any, as is aforesaid, except he first have subscribed in manner and form as here we have appointed, he shall be suspended from giving of orders and licences to preach, for the space of twelve months. But if either of the Universities shall offend therein, we leave them to the danger of the law, and his Majesty's censure.

37. Subscription before the Diocesan.

NONE licensed, as is aforesaid, to preach, read lecture, or catechize, coming to reside in any diocese, shall be permitted there to preach, read lecture, catechize, or minister the Sacraments, or to execute any other Ecclesiastical function, by what authority soever he be thereunto admitted, unless he first consent and subscribe to the three Articles before mentioned, in the presence of the Bishop of the diocese, wherein he is to preach, read lecture, catechize, or administer the Sacraments, as aforesaid.

38. Revolters after Subscription censured.

IF any Minister, after he hath once subscribed to the said three Articles shall omit to use the form of Prayer, or any of the Orders or Ceremonies prescribed in the Communion-book, let him be suspended; and if after a month he do not reform and submit himself, let him be excommunicated; and then if he shall not submit himself within the space of another month, let him be deposed from the ministry.

39. Cautions for Institution of Ministers into Benefices.

NO Bishop shall institute any to a Benefice, who hath been ordained by any other Bishop, except he first shew unto him his Letters of Orders, and bring him a sufficient testimony of his former good life and behaviour, if the Bishop shall require it; and lastly, shall appear, upon due examination, to be worthy of his ministry.

40. An Oath against Simony at Institution into Benefices.

TO avoid the detestable sin of Simony, because buying and selling of Spiritual and Ecclesiastical functions, offices, promotions, dignities, and livings, is execrable before God; therefore the Archbishop, and all and every Bishop or Bishops, or any other person or persons having authority to admit, institute, collate, install, or to confirm the election of any Archbishop, Bishop, or other person or persons, to any Spiritual or Ecclesiastical function, dignity, promotion, title, office, jurisdiction, place, or benefice with cure or without cure, or to any Ecclesiastical living whatsoever, shall, before every such admission, institution, collation, installation, or confirmation of election, respectively minister to every person hereafter to be admitted, instituted, collated, installed, or confirmed in or to any Archbishopric, Bishopric, or other Spiritual or Ecclesiastical function, dignity, promotion, title, office, jurisdiction, place, or benefice with cure or without cure, or in or to any Ecclesiastical living whatsoever, this oath, in manner and form following, the same to be taken by every one whom it concerneth in his own person, and not by a Proctor: I, N. N. do swear, That I have made no Simoniacal payment, contract, or promise, directly or indirectly, by myself, or by any other, to my knowledge, or with my consent, to any person or persons whatsoever, for or concerning the procuring and obtaining of this Ecclesiastical dignity, place, preferment, office, or living, (respectively and particularly naming the same whereunto he is to be admitted, instituted, collated, installed, or confirmed), nor will at any time hereafter perform or satisfy any such kind of payment, contract, or promise made by any other without my knowledge or consent: So help me God, through Jesus Christ.

41. Licences for Plurality of Benefices limited, and Residence enjoined.

NO Licence or Dispensation for the keeping of more Benefices with Cure than one, shall be granted to any but such only as shall be thought very well worthy for his learning, and very well able and sufficient to discharge his duty; that is, who shall have taken the degree of a Master of Arts at the least in one of the Universities of this realm, and be a public and sufficient Preacher licensed. Provided always, that he be by a good and sufficient caution bound to make his personal residence in each his said Benefices for some reasonable time in every year; and that the said Benefices be not more than thirty miles distant asunder; and lastly, that he have under him in the Benefice, where he doth not reside, a Preacher lawfully allowed, that is able sufficiently to teach and instruct the people.

42. Residence of Deans in their Churches.

EVERY Dean, Master, or Warden, or chief Governor of any Cathedral or Collegiate Church, shall be resident in his said Cathedral or Collegiate Church fourscore and ten days conjunctim or divisim in every year at the least, and then shall continue there in preaching the Word of God, and keeping good hospitality, except he shall be otherwise let with weighty and urgent causes, to be approved by the Bishop of the diocese, or in any other lawful sort dispensed with. And when he is present, he, with the rest of the Canons or Prebendaries resident, shall take special care that the statutes and laudable customs of their Church, (not being contrary to the Word of God, or Prerogative Royal,) the statutes of this realm being in force concerning Ecclesiastical Order, and all other Constitutions now set forth and confirmed by his Majesty's authority, and such as shall be lawfully enjoined by the Bishop of the diocese in his Visitation, according to the statutes and customs of the same Church, or the Ecclesiastical laws of this realm, be diligently observed; and that the Petty Canons, Vicars Choral, and other Ministers of their Church, be urged to the study of the holy Scriptures; and every one of them to have the New Testament not only in English, but also in Latin.

43. Deans and Prebendaries to preach during their Residence.

THE Dean, Master, Warden, or chief Governor, Prebendaries, and Canons, in every Cathedral and Collegiate Church, shall not only preach there in their own persons so often as they are bound by law, statute, ordinance, or custom, but shall likewise preach in other Churches of the same diocese where they are resident, and especially in those places whence they or their Church receive any yearly rents or profits. And in case they themselves be sick, or lawfully absent, they shall substitute such licensed Preachers to supply their turns, as by the Bishop of the diocese shall be thought meet to preach in Cathedral Churches. And if any otherwise neglect or omit to supply his course, as is aforesaid, the offender shall be punished by the Bishop, or by him or them to whom the jurisdiction of that Church appertaineth, according to the quality of the offence.

44. Prebendaries to be resident upon their Benefices.

NO Prebendaries nor Canons in Cathedral or Collegiate Churches having one or more Benefices with Cure, (and not being Residentiaries in the same Cathedral or Collegiate Churches,) shall, under colour of their said Prebends, absent themselves from their Benefices with Cure above the space of one month in the year, unless it be for some urgent cause, and certain time to be allowed by the Bishop of the diocese. And such of the said Canons and Prebendaries, as by the ordinances of the Cathedral or Collegiate Churches do stand bound to be resident in the same, shall so among themselves sort and proportion the times of the year, concerning residency to be kept in the said Churches, as that some of them always shall be personally resident there; and that all those who be, or shall be Residentiaries in any Cathedral or Collegiate Church, shall, after the days of their residency appointed by their local statutes or customs expired, presently repair to their Benefices, or some one of them, or to some other charge where the law requireth their presence, there to discharge their duties according to the laws in that case provided. And the Bishop of the diocese shall see the same to be duly performed and put in execution.

45. Beneficed Preachers, being resident upon their Livings, to preach every Sunday.

EVERY beneficed man allowed to be a Preacher, and residing on his Benefice, having no lawful impediment, shall in his own Cure, or in some other Church or Chapel, where he may conveniently, near adjoining, (where no Preacher is,) preach one Sermon every Sunday of the year; wherein he shall soberly and sincerely divide the word of truth, to the glory of God, and to the best edification of the people.

46. Beneficed Men, not Preachers, to procure Monthly Sermons.

EVERY beneficed man, not allowed to be a Preacher, shall procure Sermons to be preached in his Cure once in every month at the least, by Preachers lawfully licensed, if his living, in the judgment of the Ordinary, will be able to bear it. And upon every Sunday, when there shall not be a Sermon preached in his Cure, he or his Curate shall read some one of the Homilies prescribed or to be prescribed by authority, to the intents aforesaid.

47. Absence of Beneficed Men to be supplied by Curates that are allowed Preachers.

EVERY beneficed man, licensed by the laws of this realm, upon urgent occasions of other service not to reside upon his Benefice, shall cause his Cure to be supplied by a Curate that is a sufficient and licensed Preacher, if the worth of the Benefice will bear it. But whosoever hath two Benefices shall maintain a Preacher licensed in the Benefice where he doth not reside, except he preach himself at both of them usually.

48. None to be Curates but allowed by the Bishop.

NO Curate or Minister shall be permitted to serve in any place, without examination and admission of the Bishop of the diocese, or Ordinary of the place, having episcopal jurisdiction, in writing under his hand and seal, having respect to the greatness of the Cure, and meetness of the Party. And the said Curates and Ministers, if they remove from one diocese to another, shall not be by any means admitted to serve without testimony of the Bishop of the diocese, or Ordinary of the place as aforesaid, whence they came, in writing, of their honesty, ability, and conformity to the Ecclesiastical Laws of the Church of England. Nor shall any serve more than one Church or Chapel upon one day, except that Chapel be a member of the Parish Church, or united thereunto; and unless the said Church or Chapel, where such a Minister shall serve in two places, be not able, in the judgment of the Bishop or Ordinary, as aforesaid, to maintain a Curate.

49. Ministers, not allowed Preachers, may not expound.

NO person whatsoever not examined and approved by the Bishop of the diocese, or not licensed, as is aforesaid, for a sufficient or convenient Preacher, shall take upon him to expound in his own Cure, or elsewhere, any Scripture or matter of Doctrine; but shall only study to read plainly and aptly (without glossing or adding) the Homilies already set forth, or hereafter to be published by lawful authority, for the confirmation of the true faith, and for the good instruction and edification of the people.

50. Strangers not admitted to preach without shewing their Licence.

NEITHER the Minister, Churchwardens, nor any other Officers of the Church, shall suffer any man to preach within their Churches or Chapels, but such as by shewing their Licence to preach, shall appear unto them to be sufficiently authorized thereunto, as is aforesaid.

51. Strangers not admitted to preach in Cathedral Churches without sufficient Authority.

THE Deans, Presidents, and Residentiaries of any Cathedral or Collegiate Church, shall suffer no Stranger to preach unto the people in their Churches, except they be allowed by the Archbishop of the province, or by the Bishop of the same diocese, or by either of the Universities. And if any in his Sermon shall publish any doctrine, either strange, or disagreeing from the Word of God, or from any of the Articles of Religion agreed upon in the Convocation-house, Anno 1562, or from the Book of Common Prayer; the Dean or the Residents shall, by their letters subscribed with some of their hands that heard him, as soon as may be, give notice of the same to the Bishop of the diocese, that he may determine the matter, and take such order therein, as he shall think convenient.

52. The Names of strange Preachers to be noted in a Book.

THAT the Bishop may understand (if occasion so require) what Sermons are made in every Church of his diocese, and who presume to preach without Licence, the Church-wardens and Side-men shall see that the Names of all Preachers, which come to their Church from any other place, be noted in a Book, which they shall have ready for that purpose; wherein every Preacher shall subscribe his Name, the Day when he preached, and the Name of the Bishop of whom he had Licence to preach.

53. No public Opposition between Preachers.

IF any Preacher shall in the Pulpit particularly, or namely of purpose, impugn or confute any doctrine delivered by any other Preacher in the same Church, or in any Church near adjoining, before he hath acquainted the Bishop of the diocese therewith, and received order from him what to do in that case, because upon such public dissenting and contradicting there may grow much offence and disquietness unto the people; the Church-wardens, or party grieved, shall forthwith signify the same to the said Bishop, and not suffer the said Preacher any more to occupy that place which he hath once abused, except he faithfully promise to forbear all such matter of contention in the Church, until the Bishop hath taken further order therein; who shall with all convenient speed so proceed therein, that public satisfaction may be made in the congregation where the offence was given. Provided, that if either of the parties offending do appeal, he shall not be suffered to preach pendente lite.

54. The Licences of Preachers refusing Conformity to be void.

IF any man licensed heretofore to preach, by any Archbishop, Bishop, or by either of the Universities, shall at any time from henceforth refuse to conform himself to the Laws, Ordinances, and Rites Ecclesiastical, established in the Church of England, he shall be admonished by the Bishop of the diocese, or Ordinary of the place, to submit himself to the use and due exercise of the same. And if, after such admonition, he do not conform himself within the space of one month, we determine and decree, That the Licence of every such Preacher shall thereupon be utterly void, and of none effect.

55. The Form of a Prayer to be used by all Preachers before their Sermons.

BEFORE all Sermons, Lectures, and Homilies, the Preachers and Ministers shall move the people to join with them in Prayer in this form, or to this effect, as briefly as conveniently they may: Ye shall pray for Christ's holy Catholic Church, that is, for the whole congregation of Christian people dispersed throughout the whole world, and especially for the Churches of England, Scotland, and Ireland: and herein I require you most especially to pray for the King's most excellent Majesty; our Sovereign Lord JAMES, King of England, Scotland, France, and Ireland, Defender of the Faith, and Supreme Governor in these his realms, and all other his dominions and countries, over all persons, in all causes, as well Ecclesiastical as Temporal: ye shall also pray for our gracious Queen ANNE, the noble Prince HENRY, and the rest of the King and Queen's royal issue: ye shall also pray for the Ministers of God's holy Word and Sacraments, as well Archbishops and Bishops, as other Pastors and Curates: ye shall also pray for the King's most honourable Council, and for all the Nobility and Magistrates of this realm; that all and every of these, in their several callings, may serve truly and painfully to the glory of God, and the edifying and well governing of his people, remembering the account that they must make: also ye shall pray for the whole Commons of this realm, that they may live in the true faith and fear of God, in humble obedience to the King, and brotherly charity one to another. Finally, let us praise God for all those which are departed out of this life in the faith of Christ, and pray unto God, that we may have grace to direct our lives after their good example; that, this life ended, we may be made partakers with them of the glorious resurrection in the life everlasting; always concluding with the Lord's Prayer.

56. Preachers and Lecturers to read Divine Service, and administer the Sacraments twice a Year at the least.

EVERY Minister, being possessed of a Benefice that hath cure and charge of souls, although he chiefly attend to preaching, and hath a Curate under him to execute the other duties which are to be performed for him in the Church, and likewise every other stipendiary Preacher that readeth any Lecture, or catechizeth, or preacheth in any Church or Chapel, shall twice at the least every year read himself the Divine Service upon two several Sundays publicly, and at the usual times, both in the forenoon and afternoon, in the Church which he so possesseth, or where he readeth, catechizeth, or preacheth, as is aforesaid; and shall likewise as often in every year administer the Sacraments of Baptism, if there be any to be baptized, and of the Lord's Supper in such manner and form, and with the observation of all such rites and ceremonies as are prescribed by the Book of Common Prayer in that behalf; which if he do not accordingly perform, then shall he that is possessed of a Benefice (as before) be suspended: and he that is but a Reader, Preacher, or Catechizer, be removed from his place by the Bishop of the diocese, until he or they shall submit themselves to perform all the said duties, in such manner and sort as before is prescribed.

57. The Sacraments not to be refused at the Hands of unpreaching Ministers.

WHEREAS divers persons, seduced by false teachers, do refuse to have their children baptized by a Minister that is no Preacher, and to receive the holy Communion at his hands in the same respect, as though the virtue of those Sacraments did depend upon his ability to preach: forasmuch as the doctrine both of Baptism and of the Lord's Supper is so sufficiently set down in the Book of Common Prayer to be used at the administration of the said Sacraments, as nothing can be added unto it that is material and necessary; we do require and charge every such person, seduced as aforesaid, to reform that their wilfulness, and to submit himself to the order of the Church in that behalf; both the said Sacraments being equally effectual whether they be ministered by a Minister that is no Preacher, or by one that is a Preacher. And if any hereafter shall offend herein, or leave their own Parish Churches in that respect, and communicate, or cause their children to be baptized, in other parishes abroad, and will not be moved thereby to reform that their error and unlawful course; let them be presented to the Ordinary of the place by the Minister, Churchwardens, and Side-men, or Quest-men of the parishes where they dwell, and there receive such punishment by Ecclesiastical censures, as such obstinacy doth worthily deserve; that is, let them (persisting in their wilfulness) be suspended, and then, after a month's further obstinacy, excommunicated. And likewise if any Parson, Vicar, or Curate, shall, after the publishing hereof, either receive to the Communion any such persons which are not of his own church and parish, or shall baptize any of their children, thereby strengthening them in their said errors; let him be suspended, and not released thereof, until he do faithfully promise that he will not afterwards offend therein.

58. Ministers reading Divine Service, and administering the Sacraments, to wear Surplices, and Graduates therewithal Hoods.

EVERY Minister saying the public Prayers, or ministering the Sacrament, or other Rites of the Church, shall wear a decent and comely Surplice with sleeves, to be provided at the charge of the parish. And if any question arise touching the matter, decency, or comeliness thereof, the same shall be decided by the discretion of the Ordinary. Furthermore, such Ministers as are graduates shall wear upon their Surplices, at such times, such Hoods as by the orders of the Universities are agreeable to their degrees, which no Minister shall wear (being no Graduate) under pain of suspension. Notwithstanding it shall be lawful for such Ministers as are not Graduates to wear upon their Surplices, instead of Hoods, some decent Tippet of black, so it be not silk.

59. Ministers to Catechize every Sunday.

EVERY Parson, Vicar, or Curate, upon every Sunday and Holy-day, before Evening Prayer, shall, for half an hour or more, examine and instruct the youth and ignorant persons of his parish, in the Ten Commandments, the Articles of the Belief, and in the Lord's Prayer; and shall diligently hear, instruct, and teach them the Catechism set forth in the Book of Common Prayer. And all fathers, mothers, masters, and mistresses, shall cause their children, servants, and apprentices, which have not learned the Catechism, to come to the Church at the time appointed, obediently to hear, and to be ordered by the Minister, until they have learned the same. And if any Minister neglect his duty herein, let him be sharply reproved upon the first complaint, and true notice thereof given to the Bishop or Ordinary of the place. If, after submitting himself, he shall willingly offend therein again, let him be suspended; if so the third time, there being little hope that he will be therein reformed, then excommunicated, and so remain until he will be reformed. And likewise if any of the said fathers, mothers, masters, or mistresses, children, servants, or apprentices, shall neglect their duties, as the one sort in not causing them to come, and the other in refusing to learn, as aforesaid; let them be suspended by their Ordinaries, (if they be not children,) and if they so persist by the space of a month, then let them be excommunicated.

60. Confirmation to be performed once in three Years.

FORASMUCH as it hath been a solemn, ancient, and laudable custom in the Church of God, continued from the Apostles' times, that all Bishops should lay their hands upon children baptized and instructed in the Catechism of Christian Religion, praying over them, and blessing them, which we commonly call Confirmation; and that this holy action hath been accustomed in the Church in former ages, to be performed in the Bishop's visitation every third year; we will and appoint, That every Bishop or his Suffragan, in his accustomed visitation, do in his own person carefully observe the said custom. And if in that year, by reason of some infirmity, he be not able personally to visit, then he shall not omit the execution of that duty of Confirmation the next year after, as he may conveniently.

61. Ministers to prepare Children for Confirmation.

EVERY Minister, that hath cure and charge of souls, for the better accomplishing of the orders prescribed in the Book of Common Prayer concerning Confirmation, shall take especial care that none shall be presented to the Bishop for him to lay his hands upon, but such as can render an account of their faith according to the Catechism in the said book contained. And when the Bishop shall assign any time for the performance of that part of his duty, every such Minister shall use his best endeavour to prepare and make able, and likewise to procure as many as he can to be then brought, and by the Bishop to be confirmed.

62. Ministers not to marry any Persons without Banns, or Licence.

NO Minister, upon pain of suspension per triennium ipso facto, shall celebrate Matrimony between any persons, without a faculty or licence granted by some of the persons in these our Constitutions expressed, except the Banns of Matrimony have been first published three several Sundays, or Holy-days, in the time of Divine Service, in the Parish Churches and Chapels where the said parties dwell, according to the Book of Common Prayer. Neither shall any Minister, upon the like pain, under any pretence whatsoever, join any persons so licensed in marriage at any unseasonable times, but only between the hours of eight and twelve in the forenoon, nor in any private place, but either in the said Churches or Chapels where one of them dwelleth, and likewise in time of Divine Service; nor when Banns are thrice asked, and no licence in that respect necessary, before the parents or governors of the parties to be married, being under the age of twenty and one years, shall either personally, or by sufficient testimony, signify to him their consents given to the said Marriage.

63. Ministers of exempt Churches not to marry without Banns, or Licence.

EVERY Minister, who shall hereafter celebrate Marriage between any persons contrary to our said Constitutions, or any part of them, under colour of any peculiar liberty or privilege claimed to appertain to certain Churches and Chapels, shall be suspended per triennium by the Ordinary of the place where the offence shall be committed. And if any such Minister shall afterwards remove from the place where he hath committed that fault, before he be suspended, as is aforesaid, then shall the Bishop of the diocese, or Ordinary of the place where he remaineth, upon certificate under the hand and seal of the other Ordinary, from whose jurisdiction he removed, execute that censure upon him.

64. Ministers solemnly to bid Holy-days.

EVERY Parson, Vicar, or Curate, shall in his several charge declare to the people, every Sunday at the time appointed in the Communion-book, whether there be any Holy-days or Fasting-days the week following. And if any do hereafter wittingly offend herein, and being once admonished thereof by his Ordinary, shall again omit that duty, let him be censured according to law, until he submit himself to the due performance of it.

65. Ministers solemnly to denounce Recusants and Excommunicates.

ALL Ordinaries shall, in their several jurisdictions, carefully see and give order, that as well those who for obstinate refusing to frequent Divine Service established by public authority within this realm of England, as those also (especially of the better sort and condition) who for notorious contumacy, or other notable crimes, stand lawfully excommunicate, (unless within three months immediately after the said sentence of Excommunication pronounced against them, they reform themselves, and obtain the benefit of absolution), be every six months ensuing, as well in the Parish Church, as in the Cathedral Church of the diocese in which they remain, by the Minister openly in time of Divine Service, upon some Sunday, denounced and declared excommunicate, that others may be thereby both admonished to refrain their company and society, and excited the rather to procure out a writ De excommunicato capiendo, thereby to bring and reduce them into due order and obedience. Likewise the Registrar of every Ecclesiastical Court shall yearly between Michaelmas and Christmas duly certify the Archbishop of the province of all and singular the premises aforesaid.

66. Ministers to confer with Recusants.

EVERY Minister being a Preacher, and having any Popish Recusant or Recusants in his parish, and thought fit by the Bishop of the diocese, shall labour diligently with them from time to time, thereby to reclaim them from their errors. And if he be no Preacher, or not such a Preacher, then he shall procure, if he can possibly, some that are Preachers so qualified, to take pains with them for that purpose. If he can procure none, then he shall inform the Bishop of the diocese thereof, who shall not only appoint some neighbour Preacher or Preachers adjoining to take that labour upon them, but himself also, as his important affairs will permit him, shall use his best endeavour, by instruction, persuasion, and all good means he can devise, to reclaim both them and all other within his diocese so affected.

67. Ministers to visit the Sick.

WHEN any person is dangerously sick in any parish, the Minister, or Curate, having knowledge thereof, shall resort unto him or her, (if the disease be not known, or probably suspected, to be infectious,) to instruct and comfort them in their distress, according to the order of the Communion-book, if he be no Preacher; or if he be a Preacher, then as he shall think most needful and convenient. And when any is passing out of this life, a bell shall be tolled, and the Minister shall not then slack to do his last duty. And after the party's death, if it so fall out, there shall be rung no more than one short peal, and one other before the burial, and one other after the burial.

68. Ministers not to refuse to christen or bury.

NO Minister shall refuse or delay to christen any child according to the form of the Book of Common Prayer, that is brought to the Church to him upon Sundays or Holy-days to be christened, or to bury any corpse that is brought to the Church or Church-yard, convenient warning being given him thereof before, in such manner and form as is prescribed in the said Book of Common Prayer. And if he shall refuse to christen the one, or bury the other, (except the party deceased were denounced excommunicated majori excommunicatione, for some grievous and notorious crime, and no man able to testify of his repentance,) he shall be suspended by the Bishop of the diocese from his ministry by the space of three months.

69. Ministers not to defer christening, if the Child be in danger.

IF any Minister, being duly, without any manner of collusion, informed of the weakness and danger of death of any infant unbaptized in his parish, and thereupon desired to go or come to the place where the said infant remaineth, to baptize the same, shall either wilfully refuse so to do, or of purpose, or of gross negligence shall so defer the time, as, when he might conveniently have resorted to the place, and have baptized the said infant, it dieth, through such his default, unbaptized; the said Minister shall be suspended for three months; and before his restitution shall acknowledge his fault, and promise before his Ordinary, that he will not wittingly incur the like again. Provided, that where there is a Curate, or a Substitute, this Constitution shall not extend to the Parson or Vicar himself, but to the Curate or Substitute present.

70. Ministers to keep a Register of Christenings, Weddings, and Burials.

IN every Parish Church and Chapel within this realm, shall be provided one parchment book at the charge of the parish, wherein shall be written the day and year of every Christening, Wedding, and Burial, which have been in that parish since the time that the law was first made in that behalf, so far as the ancient books thereof can be procured, but especially since the beginning of the reign of the late Queen. And for the safe keeping of the said book, the Church-wardens, at the charge of the parish, shall provide one sure coffer, with three locks and keys: whereof the one to remain with the Minister, and the other two with the Church-wardens, severally; so that neither the Minister without the two Church-wardens, nor the Church-wardens without the Minister, shall at any time take that book out of the said coffer. And henceforth upon every Sabbath-day, immediately after Morning or Evening Prayer, the Minister and Church-wardens shall take the said parchment book out of the said coffer, and the Minister, in the presence of the Church-wardens, shall write and record in the said book the names of all persons christened, together with the names and surnames of their parents, and also the names of all persons married and buried in that parish in the week before, and the day and year of every such Christening, Marriage, and Burial; and, that done, they shall lay up that book in the coffer, as before, and the Minister and Church-wardens unto every page of that book, when it shall be filled with such inscriptions, shall subscribe their names. And the Church-wardens shall once every year, within one month after the five and twentieth day of March, transmit unto the Bishop of the diocese, or his Chancellor, a true copy of the names of all persons christened, married, or buried in their parish in the year before, ended the said five and twentieth day of March, and the certain days and months in which every such Christening, Marriage, and Burial was had, to be subscribed with the hands of the said Minister and Church-wardens, to the end the same may faithfully be preserved in the Registry of the said Bishop: which certificate shall be received without fee. And if the Minister or Church-wardens shall be negligent in performance of any thing herein contained, it shall be lawful for the Bishop, or his Chancellor, to convent them, and proceed against every of them as contemners of this our Constitution.

71. Ministers not to preach, or administer the Communion, in private Houses.

NO Minister shall preach, or administer the holy Communion in any private house, except it be in times of necessity, when any being either so impotent as he cannot go to the Church, or very dangerously sick, are desirous to be partakers of the holy Sacrament, upon pain of suspension for the first offence, and excommunication for the second. Provided, that houses are here reputed for private houses, wherein are no Chapels dedicated and allowed by the Ecclesiastical Laws of this realm. And provided also, under the pains before expressed, that no Chaplains do preach or administer the Communion in any other places, but in the Chapels of the said houses; and that also they do the same very seldom upon Sundays and Holy-days; so that both the lords and masters of the said houses, and their families, shall at other times resort to their own Parish Churches, and there receive the holy Communion at the least once every year.

72. Ministers not to appoint public or private Fasts or Prophecies, or to exercise but by authority.

NO Minister or Ministers shall, without the licence and direction of the Bishop of the diocese first obtained, and had under his hand and seal, appoint or keep any solemn Fasts, either publicly or in any private houses, other than such as by law are, or by public authority shall be appointed, nor shall be wittingly present at any of them, under pain of suspension for the first fault, of excommunication for the second, and of deposition from the ministry for the third. Neither shall any Minister not licensed, as is aforesaid, presume to appoint or hold any meetings for Sermons, commonly termed by some Prophecies or Exorcises, in market-towns, or other places, under the said pains: nor, without such licence, to attempt upon any pretence whatsoever, either of possession or obsession, by fasting and prayer, to cast out any Devil or Devils, under pain of the imputation of imposture or cosenage, and deposition from the ministry.

73. Ministers not to hold private Conventicles.

FORASMUCH as all conventicles, and secret meetings of Priests and Ministers, have been ever justly accounted very hurtful to the state of the Church wherein they live; we do now ordain and constitute, That no Priests, or Ministers of the Word of God, or any other persons, shall meet together in any private house, or elsewhere, to consult upon any matter or course to be taken by them, or upon their motion or direction by any other, which may any way tend to the impeaching or depraving of the doctrine of the Church of England, or of the Book of Common Prayer, or of any part of the government and discipline now established in the Church of England, under pain of excommunication ipso facto.

74. Decency in Apparel enjoined to Ministers.

THE true, ancient, and flourishing Churches of Christ, being ever desirous that their Prelacy and Clergy might be had as well in outward reverence, as otherwise regarded for the worthiness of their ministry, did think it fit, by a prescript form of decent and comely apparel, to have them known to the people, and thereby to receive the honour and estimation due to the especial Messengers and Ministers of Almighty God: we therefore, following their grave judgment, and the ancient custom of the Church of England, and hoping that in time newfangleness of apparel in some factious persons will die of itself, do constitute and appoint, That the Archbishops and Bishops shall not intermit to use the accustomed apparel of their degrees. Likewise all Deans, Masters of Colleges, Archdeacons, and Prebendaries, in Cathedral and Collegiate Churches, (being Priests or Deacons,) Doctors in Divinity, Law, and Physic, Bachelors in Divinity, Masters of Arts, and Bachelors of Law, having any Ecclesiastical Living, shall usually wear Gowns with standing Collars and Sleeves strait at the hands, or wide Sleeves, as is used in the Universities, with Hoods or Tippets of silk or sarcenet, and square Caps. And that all other Ministers admitted or to be admitted into that function shall also usually wear the like apparel as is aforesaid, except Tippets only. We do further in like manner ordain, That all the said Ecclesiastical Persons above mentioned shall usually wear in their journeys Cloaks with Sleeves, commonly called Priest's Cloaks, without guards, welts, long buttons, or cuts. And no Ecclesiastical Persons shall wear any Coif or wrought Night-cap, but only plain Night-caps of black silk, satin, or velvet. In all which particulars concerning the apparel here prescribed, our meaning is not to attribute any holiness or special worthiness to the said garments, but for decency, gravity, and order, as is before specified. In private houses, and in their studies, the said Persons Ecclesiastical may use any comely and scholar-like apparel, provided that it be not cut or pinkt; and that in public they go not in their Doublet and Hose, without Coats or Cassocks; and that they wear not any light-coloured Stockings. Likewise poor beneficed Men and Curates (not being able to provide themselves long Gowns) may go in short Gowns of the fashion aforesaid.

75. Sober conversation required in Ministers.

NO Ecclesiastical Person shall at any time, other than for their honest necessities, resort to any taverns or alehouses, neither shall they board or lodge in any such places. Furthermore, they shall not give themselves to any base or servile labour, or to drinking or riot, spending their time idly by day or by night, playing at dice, cards, or tables, or any other unlawful games: but at all times convenient they shall hear or read somewhat of the holy Scriptures, or shall occupy themselves with some other honest study or exercise, always doing the things which shall appertain to honesty, and endeavouring to profit the Church of God; having always in mind, that they ought to excel all others in purity of life, and should be examples to the people to live well and Christianly, under pain of Ecclesiastical censures, to be inflicted with severity, according to the qualities of their offences.

76. Ministers at no time to forsake their Calling.

NO man being admitted a Deacon or Minister shall from thenceforth voluntarily relinquish the same, nor afterward use himself in the course of his life as a Layman, upon pain of excommunication. And the Names of all such men, so forsaking their calling, the Church-wardens of the parish where they dwell shall present to the Bishop of the diocese, or to the Ordinary of the place, having episcopal jurisdiction.

Schoolmasters.

77. None to teach School without Licence.

NO man shall teach either in public school or private house, but such as shall be allowed by the Bishop of the diocese, or Ordinary of the place, under his hand and seal, being found meet as well for his learning and dexterity in teaching, as for sober and honest conversation, and also for right understanding of God's true religion; and also except he shall first subscribe to the first and third Articles afore-mentioned simply, and to the two first clauses of the second Article.

78. Curates desirous to teach to be licensed before others.

IN what Parish Church or Chapel soever there is a Curate, which is a Master of Arts, or Bachelor of Arts, or is otherwise well able to teach youth, and will willingly so do, for the better increase of his living, and training up of children in principles of true religion; we will and ordain, That a licence to teach youth of the parish where he serveth be granted to none by the Ordinary of that place, but only to the said Curate. Provided always, that this Constitution shall not extend to any Parish or Chapel in country towns, where there is a public school founded already; in which case we think it not meet to allow any to teach grammar, but only him that is allowed for the said public school.

79. The Duty of Schoolmasters.

ALL Schoolmasters shall teach in English or Latin, as the children are able to bear, the larger or shorter Catechism heretofore by public authority set forth. And as often as any Sermon shall be upon holy and festival days within the parish where they teach, they shall bring their scholars to the Church where such Sermon shall be made, and there see them quietly and soberly behave themselves; and shall examine them at times convenient, after their return, what they have borne away of such Sermon. Upon other days, and at other times, they shall train them up with such sentences of holy Scripture, as shall be most expedient to induce them to all godliness; and they shall teach the Grammar set forth by King Henry the Eighth, and continued in the times of King Edward the Sixth, and Queen Elizabeth of noble memory, and none other. And if any Schoolmaster, being licensed, and having subscribed as aforesaid, shall offend in any of the premises, or either speak, write, or teach against any thing whereunto he hath formerly subscribed, (if upon admonition by the Ordinary he do not amend and reform himself,) let him be suspended from teaching School any longer.

Things appertaining to Churches.

80. The great Bible, and Book of Common Prayer, to be had in every Church.

THE Church-wardens or Quest-men of every Church and Chapel shall, at the charge of the parish, provide the Book of Common Prayer, lately explained in some few points, by his Majesty's authority, according to the laws and his Highness's prerogative in that behalf, and that with all convenient speed, but at the furthest within two months after the publishing of these our Constitutions. And if any parishes be yet unfurnished of the Bible of the largest volume, or of the Books of Homilies allowed by authority, the said Church-wardens shall within convenient time provide the same at the like charge of the parish.

81. A Font of Stone for Baptism in every Church.

ACCORDING to a former Constitution, too much neglected in many places, we appoint, that there shall be a Font of Stone in every Church and Chapel where Baptism is to be ministered; the same to be set in the ancient usual places; in which only Font the Minister shall baptize publicly.

82. A decent Communion-table in every Church.

WHEREAS we have no doubt, but that in all Churches within the realm of England, convenient and decent Tables are provided and placed for the celebration of the holy Communion, we appoint, that the same Tables shall from time to time be kept and repaired in sufficient and seemly manner, and covered, in time of Divine Service, with a carpet of silk or other decent stuff, thought meet by the Ordinary of the place, if any question be made of it, and with a fair linen cloth at the time of the Ministration, as becometh that Table, and so stand, saving when the said holy Communion is to be administered: at which time the same shall be placed in so good sort within the Church or Chancel, as thereby the Minister may be more conveniently heard of the Communicants in his Prayer and Ministration, and the Communicants also more conveniently and in more number, may communicate with the said Minister; and that the Ten Commandments be set up on the East end of every Church and Chapel, where the people may best see and read the same, and other chosen sentences written upon the walls of the said Churches and Chapels, in places convenient; and likewise that a convenient seat be made for the Minister to read service in. All these to be done at the charge of the parish.

83. A Pulpit to be provided in every Church.

THE Church-wardens or Quest-men, at the common charge of the Parishioners in every Church, shall provide a comely and decent Pulpit to be set in a convenient place within the same, by the discretion of the Ordinary of the place, if any question do arise, and to be there seemly kept for the preaching of God's Word.

84. A Chest for Alms in every Church.

THE Church-wardens shall provide and have, within three months after the publishing of these Constitutions, a strong Chest, with a hole in the upper part thereof, to be provided at the charge of the parish, (if there be none such already provided,) having three keys; of which one shall remain in the custody of the Parson, Vicar, or Curate, and the other two in the custody of the Church-wardens for the time being: which Chest they shall set and fasten in the most convenient place, to the intent the Parishioners may put into it their alms for their poor neighbours. And the Parson, Vicar, or Curate shall diligently, from time to time, and especially when men make their testaments, call upon, exhort, and move their neighbours to confer and give, as they may well spare, to the said Chest; declaring unto them, that whereas heretofore they have been diligent to bestow much substance otherwise than God commanded, upon superstitious uses, now they ought at this time to be much more ready to help the poor and needy, knowing that to relieve the poor is a sacrifice which pleaseth God; and that also whatsoever is given for their comfort is given to Christ Himself, and is so accepted of Him, that He will mercifully reward the same. The which alms and devotion of the people, the keepers of the keys shall yearly, quarterly, or oftener, (as need requireth,) take out of the Chest, and distribute the same in the presence of most of the parish, or six of the chief of them, to be truly and faithfully delivered to their most poor and needy neighbours.

85. Churches to be kept in sufficient Reparations.

THE Church-wardens or Quest-men shall take care and provide that the Churches be well and sufficiently repaired, and so from time to time kept and maintained, that the windows be well glazed, and that the floors be kept paved, plain, and even, and all things there in such an orderly and decent sort, without dust, or any thing that may be either noisome or unseemly, as best becometh the House of God, and is prescribed in an Homily to that effect. The like care they shall take, that the Church-yards be well and sufficiently repaired, feneed, and maintained with walls, rails, or pales, as have been in each place accustomed, at their charges unto whom by law the same appertaineth: but especially they shall see that in every meeting of the congregation peace be well kept; and that all persons excommunicated, and so denounced, be kept out of the Church.

86. Churches to be surveyed, and the decays certified to the high Commissioners.

EVERY Dean, Dean and Chapter, Archdeacon, and others which have authority to hold Ecclesiastical Visitations by composition, law, or prescription, shall survey the Churches of his or their jurisdiction once in every three years in his own person, or cause the same to be done; and shall from time to time within the said three years certify the high Commissioners for Causes Ecclesiastical, every year, of such defects in any the said Churches, as he or they do find to remain unrepaired, and the names and surnames of the parties faulty therein. Upon which certificate, we desire that the said high Commissioners will ex officio mero send for such parties, and compel them to obey the just and lawful decrees of such Ecclesiastical Ordinaries making such certificates.

87. A Terrier of Glebe-lands, and other Possessions belonging to Churches.

WE ordain, that the Archbishops, and all Bishops within their several dioceses, shall procure (as much as in them lieth) that a true note and terrier of all the glebes, lands, meadows, gardens, orchards, houses, stocks, implements, tenements, and portions of tithes lying out of their parishes (which belong to any Parsonage, or Vicarage, or rural Prebend) be taken by the view of honest men in every parish, by the appointment of the Bishop, (whereof the Minister to be one,) and be laid up in the Bishop's Registry, there to be for a perpetual memory thereof.

88. Churches not to be profaned.

THE Church-wardens or Quest-men, and their Assistants, shall suffer no plays, feasts, banquets, suppers, church-ales, drinkings, temporal courts, or leets, lay-juries, musters, or any other profane usage, to be kept in the Church, Chapel, or Church-yard, neither the bells to be rung superstitiously upon Holy-days or Eves abrogated by the Book of Common Prayer, nor at any other times, without good cause to be allowed by the Minister of the place, and by themselves.

Church-wardens or Quest-men, and Side-men or Assistants.

89. The Choice of Church-wardens, and their Account.

ALL Church-wardens or Quest-men in every parish shall be chosen by the joint consent of the Minister and the Parishioners, if it may be; but if they cannot agree upon such a choice, then the Minister shall choose one, and the Parishioners another: and without such a joint or several choice none shall take upon them to be Church-wardens: neither shall they continue any longer than one year in that office, except perhaps they be chosen again in like manner. And all Church-wardens at the end of their year, or within a month after at the most, shall before the Minister and the Parishioners give up a just account of such money as they have received, and also what particularly they have bestowed in reparations, and otherwise, for the use of the Church. And last of all, going out of their office, they shall truly deliver up to the Parishioners whatsoever money or other things of right belonging to the Church or Parish, which remaineth in their hands, that it may be delivered over by them to the next Church-wardens by bill indented.

90. The choice of Side-men, and their joint Office with Church-wardens.

THE Church-wardens or Quest-men of every parish, and two or three or more discreet persons in every parish, to be chosen for Side-men or Assistants by the Minister and Parishioners, if they can agree, (otherwise to be appointed by the Ordinary of the diocese,) shall diligently see that all the Parishioners duly resort to their Church upon all Sundays and Holy-days, and there continue the whole time of Divine Service; and none to walk or to stand idle or talking in the Church, or in the Church-yard, or the Church-porch, during that time. And all such as shall be found slack or negligent in resorting to the Church (having no great or urgent cause of absence) they shall earnestly call upon them; and after due monition (if they amend not) they shall present them to the Ordinary of the place. The choice of which persons, viz. Church-wardens or Quest-men, Side-men or Assistants, shall be yearly made in Easter-week.

Parish-Clerks.

91. Parish-Clerks to be chosen by the Minister.

NO Parish-Clerk upon any vacation shall be chosen, within the city of London, or elsewhere within the province of Canterbury, but by the Parson or Vicar; or, where there is no Parson or Vicar, by the Minister of that place for the time being: which choice shall be signified by the said Minister, Vicar, or Parson, to the Parishioners the next Sunday following, in the time of Divine Service. And the said Clerk shall be of twenty years of age at the least, and known to the said Parson, Vicar, or Minister, to be of honest conversation, and sufficient for his reading, writing, and also for his competent skill in singing, if it may be. And the said Clerks so chosen shall have and receive their ancient wages, without fraud or diminution, either at the hands of the Church-wardens, at such times as hath been accustomed, or by their own collection, according to the most ancient custom of every parish.

Ecclesiastical Courts belonging to the Archbishop's Jurisdiction.

92. None to be cited into divers Courts for Probate of the same Will.

FORASMUCH as many heretofore have been by Apparitors both of inferior courts, and of the courts of the Archbishop's Prerogative, much distracted, and diversely called and summoned for probate of wills or to take administrations of the goods of persons dying intestate, and are thereby vexed and grieved with many causeless and unnecessary troubles, molestations, and expences; we constitute and appoint, That all Chancellors, Commissaries, or Officials, or any other exercising ecclesiastical jurisdiction whatsoever, shall at the first charge with an oath all persons called or voluntarily appearing before them for the probate of any will, or the administration of any goods, whether they know, or (moved by any special inducement) do firmly believe, that the party deceased, whose testament or goods depend now in question, had at the time of his or her death any goods or good debts in any other diocese or dioceses, or peculiar jurisdiction within that province, than in that wherein the said party died, amounting to the value of five pounds. And if the said person cited, or voluntarily appearing before him, shall upon his oath affirm, that he knoweth, or (as aforesaid) firmly believeth, that the said party deceased had goods or good debts in any other diocese or dioceses, or peculiar jurisdiction within the said province, to the value aforesaid, and particularly specify and declare the same; then shall he presently dismiss him, not presuming to intermeddle with the probate of the said will, or to grant administration of the goods of the party so dying intestate; neither shall he require or exact any other charges of the said parties, more than such only as are due for the citation, and other process had and used against the said parties upon their further contumacy; but shall openly and plainly declare and profess, that the said cause belongeth to the Prerogative of the Archbishop of that province; willing and admonishing the party to prove the said will, or require administration of the said goods in the court of the said Prerogative, and to exhibit before him the said Judge the probate or administration under the seal of the Prerogative, within forty days next following. And if any Chancellor, Commissary, Official, or other exercising ecclesiastical jurisdiction whatsoever, or any their Registrar, shall offend herein, let him be ipso facto suspended from the execution of his office, not to be absolved or released, until he have restored to the party all expences by him laid out contrary to the tenor of the premises; and every such probate of any testament, or administration of goods so granted, shall be held void and frustrate to all effects of the law whatsoever.

Furthermore, we charge and enjoin, That the Registrar of every inferior Judge do, without all difficulty or delay, certify and inform the Apparitor of the Prerogative Court, repairing unto him once a month, and no oftener, what executors or administrators have been by his said Judge, for the incompetency of his own jurisdiction, dismissed, to the said Prerogative Court within the month next before, under pain of a month's suspension from the exercise of his office for every default therein. Provided, that this Canon, or any thing therein contained, be not prejudicial to any composition between the Archbishop and any Bishop or other Ordinary, nor to any inferior Judge that shall grant any probate of testament, or administration of goods, to any party that shall voluntarily desire it, both out of the said inferior court, and also out of the Prerogative. Provided likewise, that if any man die in itinere, the goods that he hath about him at that present shall not cause his testament or administration to be liable unto the Prerogative Court.

93. The Rate of Bona notabilia liable to the Prerogative Court.

FURTHERMORE, we decree and ordain, That no Judge of the Archbishop's Prerogative shall henceforward cite, or cause to be cited, ex officio, any person whatsoever to any of the aforesaid intents, unless he have knowledge that the party deceased was at the time of his death possessed of goods and chattels in some other diocese or dioceses, or peculiar jurisdiction within that province, than in that wherein he died, amounting to the value of five pounds at the least; decreeing and declaring, that whoso hath not goods in divers dioceses to the said sum or value shall not be accounted to have Bona notabilia. Always provided, That this clause, here and in the former Constitution mentioned, shall not prejudice those dioceses, where by composition or custom Bona notabilia are rated at a greater sum. And if any Judge of the Prerogative Court, or any his Surrogate, or his Registrar or Apparitor, shall cite, or cause any person to be cited into his court, contrary to the tenor of the premises, he shall restore to the party so cited all his costs and charges, and the acts and proceedings in that behalf shall be held void and frustrate. Which expences, if the said Judge, or Registrar, or Apparitor, shall refuse accordingly to pay, he shall be suspended from the exercise of his office, until he yield to the performance thereof.

94. None to be cited into the Arches or Audience, but Dwellers within the Archbishop's Diocese, or Peculiars.

NO Dean of the Arches, nor Official of the Archbishop's Consistory, nor any Judge of the Audience, shall henceforward in his own name, or in the name of the Archbishop, either ex officio, or at the instance of any party, originally cite, summon, or any way compel, or procure to be cited, summoned, or compelled, any person which dwelleth not within the particular diocese or peculiar of the said Archbishop, to appear before him or any of them, for any cause or matter whatsoever belonging to ecclesiastical cognizance, without the licence of the Diocesan first had and obtained in that behalf, other than in such particular cases only as are expressly excepted and reserved in and by a statute Anno 23 H. VIII. cap. 9. And if any of the said Judges shall offend herein, he shall for every such offence be suspended from the exercise of his office for the space of three whole months.

95. The Restraint of double Quarrels.

ALBEIT by former Constitutions of the Church of England, every Bishop hath had two months' space to inquire and inform himself of the sufficiency and qualities of every Minister, after he hath been presented unto him to be instituted into any benefice; yet, for the avoiding of some inconveniences, we do now abridge and reduce the said two months unto eight and twenty days only. In respect of which abridgment we do ordain and appoint, that no double quarrel shall hereafter be granted out of any of the Archbishop's courts at the suit of any Minister whosoever, except he shall first take his personal oath that the said eight and twenty days at the least are expired, after he first tendered his presentation to the Bishop, and that he refused to grant him institution thereupon; or shall enter bonds with sufficient sureties to prove the same to be true; under pain of suspension of the granter thereof from the execution of his office for half a year toties quoties, (to be denounced by the said Archbishop,) and nullity of the double quarrel aforesaid, so unduly procured, to all intents and purposes whatsoever. Always provided, that within the said eight and twenty days the Bishop shall not institute any other to the prejudice of the said party before presented, sub pœna nullitatis.

96. Inhibitions not to be granted without the subscription of an Advocate.

THAT the jurisdictions of Bishops may be preserved (as near as may be) entire and free from prejudice, and that for the behoof of the subjects of this land better provision be made that henceforward they be not grieved with frivolous and wrongful suits and molestations; it is ordained and provided, That no inhibition shall be granted out of any court belonging to the Archbishop of Canterbury, at the instance of any party, unless it be subscribed by an Advocate practising in the said court: which the said Advocate shall do freely, not taking any fee for the same, except the party prosecuting the suit do voluntarily bestow some gratuity upon him for his counsel and advice in the said cause. The like course shall be used in granting forth any inhibition, at the instance of any party, by the Bishop or his Chancellor, against the Archdeacon, or any other person exercising ecclesiastical jurisdiction: and if in the court or consistory of any Bishop there be no Advocate at all, then shall the subscription of a Proctor practising in the same court be held sufficient.

97. Inhibitions not to be granted until the Appeal be exhibited to the Judge.

IT is further ordered and decreed, that henceforward no inhibition be granted by occasion of any interlocutory decree, or in any cause of correction whatsoever, except under the form aforesaid: and moreover, That before the going out of any such inhibition, the appeal itself, or a copy thereof, (avouched by oath to be just and true,) be exhibited to the Judge, or his lawful Surrogate, whereby he may be fully informed both of the quality of the crime, and of the cause of the grievance, before the granting forth of the said inhibition. And every appellant, or his lawful Proctor, shall, before the obtaining of any such inhibition, shew and exhibit to the Judge, or his Surrogate, in writing, a true copy of those acts wherewith he complaineth himself to be aggrieved, and from which he appealeth; or shall take a corporal oath, that he hath performed his diligence and true endeavour for the obtaining of the same, and could not obtain it at the hands of the Registrar in the country, or his deputy, tendering him his fee. And if any Judge or Registrar shall either procure or permit any inhibition to be sealed, so as is said, contrary to the form and limitation above specified, let him be suspended from the execution of his office for the space of three months: if any Proctor, or other person whatsoever by his appointment, shall offend in any of the premises, either by making or sending out any inhibition, contrary to the tenor of the said premises, let him be removed from the exercise of his office for the space of a whole year, without hope of release or restoring.

98. Inhibitions not to be granted to factious Appellants, unless they first subscribe.

FORASMUCH as they who break the laws cannot in reason claim any benefit or protection by the same; we decree and appoint, That after any Judge Ecclesiastical hath proceeded judicially against obstinate and factious persons and contemners of ceremonies, for not observing the rites and orders of the Church of England, or for contempt of public prayer, no Judge, ad quem, shall admit or allow any his or their appeals, unless, he having first seen the original appeal, the party appellant do first personally promise and avow, that he will faithfully keep and observe all the rites and ceremonies of the Church of England, as also the prescript form of Common Prayer; and do likewise subscribe to the three Articles formerly by us specified and declared.

99. None to marry within the Degrees prohibited.

NO person shall marry within the degrees prohibited by the laws of God, and expressed in a Table set forth by authority in the year of our Lord God 1563. And all marriages so made and contracted shall be adjudged incestuous and unlawful, and consequently shall be dissolved as void from the beginning, and the parties so married shall by course of law be separated. And the aforesaid Table shall be in every Church publicly set up and fixed at the charge of the parish.

100. None to marry under Twenty-one Years, without their parents' consent.

NO children under the age of one and twenty years complete shall contract themselves, or marry, without the consent of their parents, or of their guardians and governors, if their parents be deceased.

101. By whom Licences to marry without Banns shall be granted, and to what sort of Persons.

NO faculty or licence shall be henceforth granted for solemnization of matrimony betwixt any parties, without thrice open publication of the banns, according to the Book of Common Prayer, by any person exercising any ecclesiastical jurisdiction, or claiming any privileges in the right of their Churches; but the same shall be granted only by such as have episcopal authority, or the Commissary for faculties, Vicars-General of the Archbishops and Bishops, sede plena; or, sede vacante, the Guardian of the Spiritualities, or Ordinaries exercising of right episcopal jurisdiction in their several jurisdictions respectively, and unto such persons only, as be of good state and quality, and that upon good caution and security taken.

102. Security to be taken at the granting of such Licences, and under what conditions.

THE security mentioned shall contain these conditions: First, That at the time of the granting every such licence, there is not any impediment of precontract, consanguinity, affinity, or other lawful cause to hinder the said marriage. Secondly, That there is not any controversy or suit depending in any court before any Ecclesiastical Judge, touching any contract or marriage of either of the said parties with any other. Thirdly, That they have obtained thereunto the express consent of their parents, (if they be living,) or otherwise of their guardians or governors. Lastly, That they shall celebrate the said matrimony publicly in the Parish Church or Chapel where one of them dwelleth, and in no other place, and that between the hours of eight and twelve in the forenoon.

103. Oaths to be taken for the Conditions.

FOR the avoiding of all fraud and collusion in the obtaining of such licences and dispensations, we further constitute and appoint, That before any licence for the celebration of matrimony without publication of banns be had or granted, it shall appear to the judge by the oaths of two sufficient witnesses, one of them to be known either to the Judge himself, or to some other person of good reputation then present, and known likewise to the said Judge, that the express consent of the parents, or parent, if one be dead, or guardians or guardian of the parties, is thereunto had and obtained. And furthermore, That one of the parties personally swear, that he believeth there is no let or impediment of precontract, kindred, or alliance, or of any other lawful cause whatsoever, nor any suit commenced in any Ecclesiastical Court, to bar or hinder the proceeding of the said matrimony, according to the tenure of the foresaid licence.

104. An Exception for those that are in Widowhood.

IF both the parties which are to marry being in widowhood do seek a faculty for the forbearing of banns, then the clauses before mentioned, requiring the parents' consent, may be omitted; but the parishes where they dwell, both shall be expressed in the licence, as also the parish named where the marriage shall be celebrated. And if any Commissary for faculties, Vicars-General, or other the said Ordinaries, shall offend in the premises, or any part thereof, he shall, for every time so offending, be suspended from the execution of his office for the space of six months; and every such licence or dispensation shall be held void to all effects and purposes, as if there had never been any such granted; and the parties marrying by virtue thereof shall be subject to the punishments which are appointed for clandestine marriages.

105. No Sentence for Divorce to be given upon the sole Confession of the Parties.

FORASMUCH as matrimonial causes have been always reckoned and reputed among the weightiest, and therefore require the greater caution, when they come to be handled and debated in judgment, especially in causes wherein matrimony, having been in the Church duly solemnized, is required, upon any suggestion or pretext whatsoever, to be dissolved or annulled: we do straitly charge and enjoin, That in all proceedings to divorce, and nullities of matrimony, good circumspection and advice be used, and that the truth may (as far as is possible) be sifted out by the deposition of witnesses, and other lawful proofs and evictions; and that credit be not given to the sole confession of the parties themselves, howsoever taken upon oath, either within or without the court.

106. No Sentence for Divorce to be given but in open Court.

NO sentence shall be given either for separation a thoro et mensa, or for annulling of pretended matrimony, but in open court, and in the seat of justice; and that with the knowledge and consent either of the Archbishop within his province, or of the Bishop within his diocese, or of the Dean of the Arches, the Judge of the Audience of Canterbury, or of the Vicars-General, or other principal Officials, or sede vacante, of the Guardians of the Spiritualities, or other Ordinaries to whom of right it appertaineth, in their several jurisdictions and courts, and concerning them only that are then dwelling under their jurisdictions.

107. In all Sentences for Divorce, Bond to be taken for not marrying during each other's Life.

IN all sentences pronounced only for divorce and separation a thoro et mensa, there shall be a caution and restraint inserted in the act of the said sentence, That the parties so separated shall live chastely and continently; neither shall they, during each other's life, contract matrimony with any other person. And, for the better observation of this last clause, the said sentence of divorce shall not be pronounced, until the party or parties requiring the same have given good and sufficient caution and security into the court, that they will not any way break or transgress the said restraint or prohibition.

108. The Penalty for Judges offending in the premises.

AND if any Judge, giving sentence of divorce or separation, shall not fully keep and observe the premises, he shall be, by the Archbishop of the province, or by the Bishop of the diocese, suspended from the exercise of his office for the space of a whole year; and the sentence of separation, so given contrary to the form aforesaid, shall be held void to all intents and purposes of the law, as if it had not at all been given or pronounced.

Ecclesiastical Courts belonging to the Jurisdictions of Bishops and Archdeacons, and the Proceedings in them.

109. Notorious Crimes and Scandals to be certified into Ecclesiastical Courts by Presentment.

IF any offend their brethren, either by adultery, whoredom, incest, or drunkenness, or by swearing, ribaldry, usury, and any other uncleanness, and wickedness of life, the Church-wardens, or Quest-men, and Side-men, in their next presentments to their Ordinaries, shall faithfully present all and every of the said offenders, to the intent that they, and every of them, may be punished by the severity of the laws, according to their deserts; and such notorious offenders shall not be admitted to the holy Communion, till they be reformed.

110. Schismatics to be presented.

IF the Church-wardens, or Quest-men, or Assistants, do or shall know any man within their parish, or elsewhere, that is a hinderer of the Word of God to be read or sincerely preached, or of the execution of these our Constitutions, or a fautor of any usurped or foreign power, by the laws of this realm justly rejected and taken away, or a defender of Popish and erroneous doctrine; they shall detect and present the same to the Bishop of the diocese, or Ordinary of the place, to be censured and punished according to such Ecclesiastical laws as are prescribed in that behalf.

111. Disturbers of Divine Service to be presented.

IN all visitations of Bishops and Archdeacons, the Church-wardens, or Quest-men, and Side-men, shall truly and personally present the names of all those which behave themselves rudely and disorderly in the Church, or which by untimely ringing of bells, by walking, talking, or other noise, shall hinder the Minister or Preacher.

112. Non-Communicants at Easter to be presented.

THE Minister, Church-wardens, Quest-men, and Assistants of every Parish Church and Chapel, shall yearly, within forty days after Easter, exhibit to the Bishop or his Chancellor the names and surnames of all the Parishioners, as well men as women, which being of the age of sixteen years received not the Communion at Easter before.

113. Ministers may present.

BECAUSE it often cometh to pass, that the Church-wardens, Side-men, Quest-men, and such other persons of the Laity, as are to take care for the suppressing of sin and wickedness in their several parishes, as much as in them lieth, by admonition, reprehension, and denunciation to their Ordinaries, do forbear to discharge their duties therein, either through fear of their superiors, or through negligence, more than were fit, the licentiousness of these times considered, we ordain, That hereafter every Parson and Vicar, or, in the lawful absence of any Parson or Vicar, then their Curates and Substitutes may join in every presentment with the said Church-wardens, Side-men, and the rest above mentioned, at the times hereafter limited, if they, the said Church-wardens and the rest, will present such enormities as are apparent in the parish; or if they will not, then every such Parson and Vicar, or, in their absence, as aforesaid, their Curates may themselves present to their Ordinaries at such times, and when else they think it meet, all such crimes as they have in charge, or otherwise, as by them (being the persons that should have the chief care for the suppressing of sin and impiety in their parishes) shall be thought to require due reformation. Provided always, That if any man confess his secret and hidden sins to the Minister, for the unburdening of his conscience, and to receive spiritual consolation and ease of mind from him; we do not any way bind the said Minister by this our Constitution, but do straitly charge and admonish him, that he do not at any time reveal and make known to any person whatsoever any crime or offence so committed to his trust and secrecy, (except they be such crimes as by the laws of this realm his own life may be called in to question for concealing the same,) under pain of irregularity.

114. Ministers shall present Recusants.

EVERY Parson, Vicar, or Curate, shall carefully inform themselves, every year hereafter, how many Popish Recusants, men, women, and children, above the age of thirteen years, and how many being popishly given (who, though they come to the Church, yet do refuse to receive the Communion) are inhabitants, or make their abode, either as sojourners or common guests, in any of their several parishes; and shall set down their true names in writing, (if they can learn them,) or otherwise such names as for the time they carry, distinguishing the absolute Recusants from half Recusants; and the same, so far as they know or believe, so distinguished and set down under their hands, shall truly present to their Ordinaries before the Feast of the Nativity next ensuing, under pain of suspension to be inflicted upon them by their said Ordinaries; and so every year hereafter, upon the like pain, before the Feast of St. John Baptist. Also we ordain, That all such Ordinaries, Chancellors, Commissaries, Archdeacons, Officials, and all other Ecclesiastical Officers, to whom the said presentments shall be exhibited, shall likewise within one month after the receipt of the same, under pain of suspension by the Bishop from the execution of their offices for the space of half a year, as often as they shall offend therein, deliver them, or cause them to be delivered, to the Bishop respectively; who shall also exhibit them to the Archbishop within six weeks, and the Archbishop to his Majesty within other six weeks after he hath received the said presentments.

115. Ministers and Church-wardens not to be sued for presenting.

WHEREAS for the reformation of criminous persons and disorders in every parish, the Church-wardens, Quest-men, Side-men, and such other Church Officers are sworn, and the Minister charged to present as well the crimes and disorders committed by the said criminous persons, as also the common fame which is spread abroad of them, whereby they are often maligned, and sometimes troubled by the said delinquents, or their friends; we do admonish and exhort all Judges, both Ecclesiastical and Temporal, as they regard and reverence the fearful judgment-seat of the highest Judge, that they admit not in any of their Courts any complaint, plea, suit or suits, against any such Church-wardens, Quest-men, Side-men, or other Church Officers, for making any such presentments, nor against any Minister for any presentment that he shall make; all the said presentments tending to the restraint of shameless impiety, and considering that the rules both of charity and government do presume, that they did nothing therein of malice, but for the discharge of their consciences.

116. Church-wardens not bound to present oftener than twice a Year.

NO Church-wardens, Quest-men, or Side-men of any parish shall be enforced to exhibit their presentments to any having ecclesiastical jurisdiction, above once in every year, where it hath been no oftener used, nor above twice in any diocese whatsoever, except it be at the Bishop's Visitation. For the which presentments of every Parish-church or Chapel, the Registrar of any court, where they are to be exhibited, shall not receive in one year above fourpence, under pain, for every offence therein, of suspension from the execution of his office for the space of a month, toties quoties. Provided always, That, as good occasion shall require, it shall be lawful for every Minister, Church-wardens, and Side-men to present offenders as oft as they shall think meet; and likewise for any godly disposed person, or for any Ecclesiastical Judge, upon knowledge, or notice given unto him or them of any enormous crime within his jurisdiction, to move the Minister, Church-wardens, or Side-men, as they tender the glory of God and reformation of sin, to present the same, if they shall find sufficient cause to induce them thereunto, that it may be in due time punished and reformed. Provided, That for these voluntary presentments there be no fee required or taken of them, under the pain aforesaid.

117. Church-wardens not to be troubled for not presenting oftener than twice a Year.

NO Church-wardens, Quest-men, or Side-men, shall be called or cited, but only at the said time or times before limited, to appear before any Ecclesiastical Judge whosoever, for refusing at other times to present any faults committed in their parishes, and punishable by Ecclesiastical Laws. Neither shall they, nor any of them, after their presentments exhibited at any of those times, be any further troubled for the same, except upon manifest and evident proof it may appear, that they did then willingly and wittingly omit to present some such public crime or crimes as they knew to be committed, or could not be ignorant that there was then a public fame of them; or unless there be very just cause to call them for the explanation of their former presentments. In which case of wilful omission, their Ordinaries shall proceed against them in such sort, as in causes of wilful perjury in a Court Ecclesiastical it is already by law provided.

118. The old Church-wardens to make their Presentments before the new be sworn.

THE office of all Church-wardens and Side-men shall be reputed ever hereafter to continue until the new Church-wardens that shall succeed them be sworn, which shall be the first week after Easter, or some week following, according to the direction of the Ordinary. Which time so appointed shall always be one of the two times in every year, when the Minister, and Church-wardens, and Side-men of every parish shall exhibit to their several Ordinaries the presentments of such enormities as have happened in their parishes since their last presentments. And this duty they shall perform, before the newly chosen Church-wardens and Side-men be sworn, and shall not be suffered to pass over the said presentments to those that are newly come into office, and are by intendment ignorant of such crimes; under pain of those censures which are appointed for the reformation of such dalliers and dispensers with their own consciences and oaths.

119. Convenient time to be assigned for framing Presentments.

FOR the avoiding of such inconveniences as heretofore have happened by the hasty making of bills of presentments upon the days of the Visitation and Synods, it is ordered, That always hereafter every Chancellor, Archdeacon, Commissary, and Official, and every other person having ecclesiastical jurisdiction, at the ordinary time when the Church-wardens are sworn; and the Archbishop and Bishops, when he or they do summon their Visitation, shall deliver, or cause to be delivered, to the Church-wardens, Quest-men, and Side-men of every parish, or to some of them, such books of articles as they, or any of them, shall require, for the year following, the said Church-wardens, Quest-men, and Side-men to ground their presentments upon, at such times as they are to exhibit them. In which book shall be contained the form of the oath, which must be taken immediately before every such presentment; to the intent that, having beforehand time sufficient, not only to peruse and consider what their said oath shall be, but the articles also whereupon they are to ground their presentments, they may frame them at home both advisedly and truly, to the discharge of their own consciences, after they are sworn, as becometh honest and godly men.

120. None to be cited into Ecclesiastical Courts by Process of Quorum Nomina.

NO Bishop, Chancellor, Archdeacon, Official, or other Ecclesiastical Judge, shall suffer any general processes of Quorum Nomina to be sent out of his court; except the names of all such as thereby are to be cited shall be first expressly entered by the hand of the Registrar, or his Deputy, under the said processes, and the said processes and names be first subscribed by the Judge, or his Deputy, and his seal thereto affixed.

121. None to be cited into several Courts for one Crime.

IN places where the Bishop and Archdeacon do by prescription or composition visit at several times in one and the same year, lest for one and the selfsame fault any of his Majesty's subjects should be challenged and molested in divers Ecclesiastical Courts; we order and appoint, That every Archdeacon, or his Official, within one month after the Visitation ended that year, and the presentments received, shall certify under his hand and seal to the Bishop, or his Chancellor, the names and crimes of all such as are detected and presented in his said Visitation, to the end the Chancellor shall thenceforth forbear to convent any person for any crime or cause so detected or presented to the Archdeacon. And the Chancellor within the like time after the Bishop's Visitation ended, and presentments received, shall under his hand and seal signify to the Archdeacon, or his Official, the names and crimes of all such persons which shall be detected or presented unto him in that Visitation, to the same intent as is aforesaid. And if these officers shall not certify each other, as is here prescribed, or after such certificate shall intermeddle with the crimes or persons detected and presented in each other's Visitation; then every of them so offending shall be suspended from all exercise of his jurisdiction by the Bishop of the diocese, until he shall repay the costs and expences which the parties grieved have been at by that vexation.

122. No Sentence of Deprivation or Deposition to be pronounced against a Minister, but by the Bishop.

WHEN any Minister is complained of in any Ecclesiastical Court belonging to any Bishop of his province, for any crime, the Chancellor, Commissary, Official, or any other having ecclesiastical jurisdiction, to whom it shall appertain, shall expedite the cause by processes and other proceedings against him: and upon contumacy, for not appearing, shall first suspend him; and afterward, his contumacy continuing, excommunicate him. But if he appear, and submit himself to the course of law, then the matter being ready for sentence, and the merits of his offence exacting by law either deprivation from his living, or deposition from the ministry, no such sentence shall be pronounced by any person whosoever, but only by the Bishop, with the assistance of his Chancellor, the Dean, (if they may conveniently be had,) and some of the Prebendaries, if the Court be kept near the Cathedral Church, or of the Archdeacon, if he may be had conveniently, and two other at the least grave Ministers and Preachers, to be called by the Bishop, when the court is kept in other places.

123. No Act to be sped but in open Court.

NO Chancellor, Commissary, Archdeacon, Official, or any other person using ecclesiastical jurisdiction whosoever, shall speed any judicial act, either of contentious or voluntary jurisdiction, except he have the ordinary Registrar of that Court, or his lawful Deputy: or if he or they will not, or cannot, be present, then such persons as by law are allowed in that behalf to write or speed the same, under pain of suspension ipso facto.

124. No Court to have more than one Seal.

NO Chancellor, Commissary, Archdeacon, Official, or any other exercising ecclesiastical jurisdiction, shall without the Bishop's consent have any more seals than one, for the sealing of all matters incident to his office; which seal shall always be kept either by himself or by his lawful Substitute exercising jurisdiction for him, and remaining within the jurisdiction of the said Judge, or in the city or principal town of the county. This seal shall contain the title of that jurisdiction, which every of the said Judges or their Deputies do execute.

125. Convenient Places to be chosen for the keeping of Courts.

ALL Chancellors, Commissaries, Archdeacons, Officials, and all other exercising ecclesiastical jurisdiction, shall appoint such meet places for the keeping of their courts, by the assignment or approbation of the Bishop of the diocese, as shall be convenient for entertainment of those that are to make their appearance there, and most indifferent for their travel. And likewise they shall keep and end their courts in such convenient time, as every man may return homewards in as due season as may be.

126. Peculiar and inferior Courts to exhibit the original Copies of Wills into the Bishop's Registry.

WHEREAS Deans, Archdeacons, Prebendaries, Parsons, Vicars, and others, exercising ecclesiastical jurisdiction, claim liberty to prove the last wills and testaments of persons deceased within their several jurisdictions, having no known or certain Registrars, nor public place to keep their records in; by reason whereof many wills, rights, and legacies, upon the death or change of such persons, and their private Notaries, miscarry and cannot be found, to the great prejudice of his Majesty's subjects; we therefore order and enjoin, That all such possessors and exercisers of peculiar jurisdiction shall once in every year exhibit into the public registry of the Bishop of the diocese, or of the Dean and Chapter under whose jurisdiction the said peculiars are, every original testament of every person in that time deceased, and by them proved in their several peculiar jurisdictions, or a true copy of every such testament, examined, subscribed, and sealed by the peculiar Judge and his Notary. Otherwise, if any of them fail so to do, the Bishop of the diocese or Dean and Chapter, unto whom the said jurisdictions do respectively belong, shall suspend the said parties, and every of them, from the exercise of all such peculiar jurisdiction, until they have performed this our Constitution.

Judges Ecclesiastical, and their Surrogates.

127. The Quality and Oath of Judges.

NO man shall hereafter be admitted a Chancellor, Commissary, or Official, to exercise any ecclesiastical jurisdiction, except he be of the full age of six and twenty years at the least, and one that is learned in the Civil and Ecclesiastical Laws, and is at the least a Master of Arts, or Bachelor of Law, and is reasonably well practised in the course thereof, as likewise well affected, and zealously bent to religion, touching whose life and manners no evil example is had; and except, before he enter into or execute any such office, he shall take the oath of the King's supremacy in the presence of the Bishop, or in the open court, and shall subscribe to the Articles of Religion agreed upon in the Convocation in the year one thousand five hundred sixty and two, and shall also swear that he will, to the uttermost of his understanding, deal uprightly and justly in his office, without respect or favour of reward; the said oaths and subscription to be recorded by a Registrar then present. And likewise all Chancellors, Commissaries, Officials, Registrars, and all other that do now possess or execute any places of ecclesiastical jurisdiction, or service, shall before Christmas next, in the presence of the Archbishop, or Bishop, or in open court, under whom or where they exercise their offices, take the same oaths, and subscribe, as before is said; or, upon refusal so to do, shall be suspended from the execution of their offices, until they shall take the said oaths, and subscribe as aforesaid.

128. The Quality of Surrogates.

NO Chancellor, Commissary, Archdeacon, Official, or any other person using ecclesiastical jurisdiction, shall at any time substitute in their absence any to keep any court for them, except he be either a grave Minister and a Graduate, or a licensed public Preacher, and a beneficed man near the place where the courts are kept, or a Bachelor of Law, or a Master of Arts at least, who hath some skill in the Civil and Ecclesiastical Law, and is a favourer of true Religion, and a man of modest and honest conversation; under pain of suspension, for every time that they offend therein, from the execution of their offices, for the space of three months, toties quoties: and he likewise that is deputed, being not qualified as is before expressed, and yet shall presume to be a Substitute to any Judge, and shall keep any court, as is aforesaid, shall undergo the same censure in manner and form as is before expressed.

Proctors.

129. Proctors not to retain Causes without the lawful Assignment of the Parties.

NONE shall procure in any cause whatsoever, unless he be thereunto constituted and appointed by the party himself, either before the Judge, and by act in court, or unless, in the beginning of the suit, he be by a true and sufficient proxy thereunto warranted and enabled. We call that proxy sufficient which is strengthened and confirmed by some authentical seal, the party's approbation, or at least his ratification therewithal concurring. All which proxies shall be forthwith by the said Proctors exhibited into the court, and be safely kept and preserved by the Registrar in the public registry of the said court. And if any Registrar or Proctor shall offend herein, he shall be secluded from the exercise of his office for the space of two months, without hope of release or restoring.

130. Proctors not to retain Causes without the Counsel of an Advocate.

FOR lessening and abridging the multitude of suits and contentions, as also for preventing the complaints of suitors in Courts Ecclesiastical, who many times are overthrown by the oversight and negligence, or by the ignorance and insufficiency of Proctors; and likewise for the furtherance and increase of learning, and the advancement of Civil and Canon Law, following the laudable customs heretofore observed in the courts pertaining to the Archbishop of Canterbury; we will and ordain, that no Proctor exercising in any of them shall entertain any cause whatsoever, and keep and retain the same for two court-days, without the counsel and advice of an Advocate, under pain of a year's suspension from his practice; neither shall the Judge have power to release or mitigate the said penalty, without express mandate and authority from the Archbishop aforesaid.

131. Proctors not to conclude in any Case without the knowledge of an Advocate.

NO Judge in any of the said courts of the Archbishop shall admit any libel, or any other matter, without the advice of an Advocate admitted to practise in the same court, or without his subscription; neither shall any Proctor conclude any cause depending without the knowledge of the Advocate retained and feed in the cause: which if any Proctor shall do, or procure to be done, or shall by any colour whatsoever defraud the Advocate of his duty or fee, or shall be negligent in repairing to the Advocate, and requiring his advice what course is to be taken in the cause, he shall be suspended from all practice for the space of six months, without hope of being thereunto restored before the said term be fully complete.

132. Proctors prohibited the Oath, In animam domini sui.

FORASMUCH as in the probate of testaments and suits for administration of the goods of persons dying intestate, the oath usually taken by Proctors of courts In animam constituentis, is found to be inconvenient; we do therefore decree and ordain, That every executor, or suitor for administration, shall personally repair to the Judge in that behalf, or his Surrogate, and in his own person (and not by Proctor) take the oath accustomed in these cases. But if by reason of sickness, or age, or any other just let or impediment, he be not able to make his personal appearance before the Judge, it shall be lawful for the Judge (there being faith first made by a credible person of the truth of his said hinderance or impediment) to grant a commission to some grave Ecclesiastical Person, abiding near the party aforesaid, whereby he shall give power and authority to the said Ecclesiastical Person in his stead, to minister the accustomed oath above mentioned to the executor, or suitor for such administration, requiring his said substitute, that by a faithful and trusty messenger he certify the said Judge truly and faithfully what he hath done therein. Lastly, we ordain and appoint, That no Judge or Registrar shall in any wise receive for the writing, drawing, or sealing of any such commission, above the sum of six shillings and eight pence; whereof one moiety to be for the Judge, and the other for the Registrar of the said court.

133. Proctors not to be clamorous in Court.

FORASMUCH as it is found by experience, that the loud and confused cries and clamours of Proctors in the courts of the Archbishop are not only troublesome and offensive to the Judges and Advocates, but also give occasion to the standers by, of contempt and calumny toward the court itself; that more respect may be had to the dignity of the Judge than heretofore, and that causes may more easily and commodiously be handled and despatched, we charge and enjoin, That all Proctors in the said courts do especially intend, that the acts be faithfully entered and set down by the Registrar, according to the advice and direction of the Advocate; that the said Proctors refrain loud speech and babbling, and behave themselves quietly and modestly: and that, when either the Judges or Advocates, or any of them, shall happen to speak, they presently be silent, upon pain of silencing for two whole terms then immediately following every such offence of theirs. And if any of them shall the second time offend herein, and after due monition shall not reform himself, let him be for ever removed from his practice.

Registrars.

134. Abuses to be reformed in Registrars.

IF any Registrar, or his Deputy or Substitute whatsoever, shall receive any certificate without the knowledge and consent of the Judge of the court, or willingly omit to cause any person cited to appear upon any court-day, to be called; or unduly put off and defer the examination of witnesses to be examined by a day set and assigned by the Judge; or do not obey and observe the judicial and lawful monition of the said Judge; or omit to write, or cause to be written, such citations and decrees as are to be put in execution, and set forth before the next court-day; or shall not cause all testaments exhibited into his office to be registered within a convenient time; or shall set down or enact, as decreed by the Judge, any thing false or conceited by himself, and not so ordered or decreed by the Judge; or, in the transmission of processes to the Judge ad quem, shall add or insert any falsehood or untruth, or omit any thing therein, either by cunning, or by gross negligence; or in causes of instance, or promoted of office, shall receive any reward in favour of either party; or be of counsel directly or indirectly with either of the parties in suit; or in the execution of their office shall do aught else maliciously or fraudulently, whereby the said Ecclesiastical Judge, or his proceedings, may be slandered or defamed; we will and ordain, That the said Registrar, or his Deputy or Substitute, offending in all or any of the premises, shall by the Bishop of the diocese be suspended from the exercise of his office for the space of one, two, or three months, or more, according to the quality of his offence; and that the said Bishop shall assign some other Public Notary to execute and discharge all things pertaining to his office, during the time of his said suspension.

135. A certain Rate of Fees due to all Ecclesiastical Officers.

NO Bishop, Suffragan, Chancellor, Commissary, Archdeacon, Official, nor any other exercising ecclesiastical jurisdiction whatsoever, nor any Registrar of any Ecclesiastical Courts, nor any Minister belonging to any of the said offices or courts, shall hereafter, for any cause incident to their several offices, take or receive any other or greater fees, than such as were certified to the most reverend Father in God, John late Archbishop of Canterbury, in the year of our Lord God one thousand five hundred ninety and seven, and were by him ratified and approved; under pain, that every such Judge, Officer, or Minister offending herein, shall be suspended from the exercise of their several offices for the space of six months, for every such offence. Always provided, That if any question shall arise concerning the certainty of the said fees, or any of them, then those fees shall be held for lawful, which the Archbishop of Canterbury for the time being shall under his hand approve, except the statutes of this realm before made do in any particular case express some other fees to be due. Provided furthermore, That no fee or money shall be received either by the Archbishop, or any Bishop, or Suffragan, either directly or indirectly, for admitting of any into sacred orders; nor that any other person or persons under the said Archbishop, Bishop, or Suffragan, shall for parchment, writing, wax, sealing, or any other respect thereunto appertaining, take above ten shillings, under such pains as are already by law prescribed.

136. A Table of the Rates and Fees to be set up in Courts and Registries.

WE do likewise constitute and appoint, That the Registrars belonging to every such Ecclesiastical Judge shall place two tables, containing the several rates and sums of all the said fees: one in the usual place or consistory where the court is kept, and the other in his registry; and both of them in such sort, as every man, whom it concerneth, may without difficulty come to the view and perusal thereof, and take a copy of them: the same tables to be set up before the Feast of the Nativity next ensuing. And if any Registrar shall fail to place the said tables according to the tenor hereof, he shall be suspended from the execution of his office, until he cause the same to be accordingly done: and the said tables being once set up, if he shall at any time remove, or suffer the same to be removed, hidden, or any way hindered from sight, contrary to the true meaning of this Constitution, he shall for every such offence be suspended from the exercise of his office for the space of six months.

137. The whole Fees for shewing Letters of Orders, and other Licences, due but once in every Bishop's time.

FORASMUCH as the chief and principal cause and use of Visitation is, that the Bishop, Archdeacon, or other assigned to visit, may get some good knowledge of the state, sufficiency, and ability of the Clergy, and other persons whom they are to visit; we think it convenient, that every Parson, Vicar, Curate, Schoolmaster, or other person licensed whosoever, do at the Bishop's first Visitation, or at the next Visitation after his admission, shew and exhibit unto him his Letters of Orders, Institution, and Induction, and all other his Dispensations, Licences, or Faculties whatsoever, to be by the said Bishop either allowed, or (if there be just cause) disallowed and rejected: and being by him approved, to be, as the custom is, signed by the Registrar; and that the whole fees accustomed to be paid in the Visitations in respect of the premises, be paid only once in the whole time of every Bishop, and afterwards but half of the said accustomed fees in every other Visitation, during the said Bishop's continuance.

Apparitors.

138. The number of Apparitors restrained.

FORASMUCH as we are desirous to redress such abuses and grievances as are said to grow by Somners or Apparitors, we think it meet that the multitude of Apparitors be (as much as is possible) abridged or restrained: wherefore we decree and ordain, That no Bishop or Archdeacon, or their Vicars, or Officials, or other inferior Ordinaries, shall depute or have more Apparitors to serve in their jurisdictions respectively, than either they or their predecessors were accustomed to have thirty years before the publishing of these our present Constitutions. All which Apparitors shall by themselves faithfully execute their offices; neither shall they, by any colour or pretence whatsoever, cause or suffer their mandates to be executed by any Messengers or Substitutes, unless it be upon some good cause to be first known and approved by the Ordinary of the place. Moreover, they shall not take upon them the office of Promoters or Informers for the court, neither shall they exact more or greater fees than are in these our Constitutions formerly prescribed. And if either the number of the Apparitors deputed shall exceed the aforesaid limitation, or any of the said Apparitors shall offend in any of the premises; the persons deputing them, if they be Bishops, shall, upon admonition of their superior, discharge the persons exceeding the number so limited; if inferior Ordinaries, they shall be suspended from the execution of their office, until they have dismissed the Apparitors by them so deputed; and the parties themselves so deputed shall for ever be removed from the office of Apparitors; and if, being so removed, they desist not from the exercise of their said offices, let them be punished by ecclesiastical censures, as persons contumacious. Provided, That if upon experience the number of the said Apparitors be too great in any diocese in the judgment of the Archbishop of Canterbury for the time being, they shall by him be so abridged, as he shall think meet and convenient.

Authority of Synods.

139. A National Synod the Church Representative.

WHOSOEVER shall hereafter affirm, That the sacred Synod of this nation, in the name of Christ and by the King's authority assembled, is not the true Church of England by representation, let him be excommunicated, and not restored until he repent, and publicly revoke that his wicked error.

140. Synods conclude as well the absent as the present.

WHOSOEVER shall affirm, That no manner of person, either of the Clergy or Laity, not being themselves particularly assembled in the said sacred Synod, are to be subject to the decrees thereof in causes ecclesiastical, (made and ratified by the King's Majesty's supreme authority,) as not having given their voices unto them, let him be excommunicated, and not restored until he repent, and publicly revoke that his wicked error.

141. Depravers of the Synod censured.

WHOSOEVER shall hereafter affirm, That the sacred Synod, assembled as aforesaid, was a company of such persons as did conspire together against godly and religious professors of the Gospel; and that therefore both they and their proceedings, in making of Canons and Constitutions in causes ecclesiastical by the King's authority, as aforesaid, ought to be despised and contemned, the same being ratified, confirmed, and enjoined by the said regal power, supremacy, and authority; let them be excommunicated, and not restored until they repent, and publicly revoke that their wicked error.

WE of our princely inclination and royal care for the maintenance of the present estate and government of the Church of England, by the laws of this our Realm now settled and established, having diligently, with great contentment and comfort, read and considered of all these their said Canons, Orders, Ordinances, and Constitutions, agreed upon, as is before expressed; and finding the same such as we are persuaded will be very profitable, not only to our Clergy, but to the whole Church of this our Kingdom, and to all the true Members of it, if they be well observed; have therefore for us, our Heirs, and lawful Successors, of our especial grace, certain knowledge, and mere motion, given, and by these presents do give our royal assent, according to the form of the said Statute, or Act of Parliament aforesaid, to all and every of the said Canons, Orders, Ordinances, and Constitutions, and to all and every thing in them contained, as they are before written.

And furthermore, we do not only by our said Prerogative Royal, and supreme Authority in Causes Ecclesiastical, ratify, confirm, and establish, by these our Letters Patent, the said Canons, Orders, Ordinances, and Constitutions, and all and every thing in them contained, as is aforesaid; but do likewise propound, publish, and straightway enjoin and command by our said Authority, and by these our Letters Patent, the same to be diligently observed, executed, and equally kept by all our loving Subjects of this our Kingdom, both within the Provinces of Canterbury and York, in all points wherein they do or may concern every or any of them, according to this our will and pleasure hereby signified and expressed; and that likewise, for the better observation of them, every Minister, by what name or title soever he be called, shall in the Parish Church or Chapel where he hath charge, read all the said Canons, Orders, Ordinances, and Constitutions, once every year, upon some Sundays or Holy-days, in the Afternoon, before Divine Service, dividing the same in such sort, as that the one half may be read one day, and the other another day: the Book of the said Canons to be provided at the charge of the Parish, betwixt this and the Feast of the Nativity of our Lord God next ensuing: straitly charging and commanding all Archbishops, Bishops, and all other that exercise any Ecclesiastical Jurisdiction within this Realm, every man in his place, to see, and procure (so much as in them lieth) all and every of the same Canons, Orders, Ordinances, and Constitutions, to be in all points duly observed; not sparing to execute the penalties in them severally mentioned, upon any that shall wittingly or wilfully break or neglect to observe the same, as they tender the honour of God, the peace of the Church, the tranquillity of the Kingdom, and their duties and service to us their King and Sovereign.

In witness, &c.

THE TABLE

OF THE

CONSTITUTIONS AND CANONS ECCLESIASTICAL.

Of the Church of England.

1. THE King's Supremacy over the Church of England, in Causes Ecclesiastical, to be maintained.
2. Impugners of the King's Supremacy censured.
3. The Church of England a true and apostolical Church.
4. Impugners of the public Worship of God, established in the Church of England, censured.
5. Impugners of the Articles of Religion established in the Church of England, censured.
6. Impugners of the Rites and Ceremonies, established in the Church of England, censured.
7. Impugners of the Government of the Church of England by Archbishops, Bishops, &c. censured.
8. Impugners of the Form of consecrating and ordering Archbishops, Bishops, &c. in the Church of England, censured.
9. Authors of Schism in the Church of England censured.
10. Maintainers of Schismatics in the Church of England censured.
11. Maintainers of Conventicles censured.
12. Maintainers of Constitutions made in Conventicles censured.

Of Divine Service, and Administration of the Sacraments.

13. Due Celebration of Sundays and Holy-days.
14. The prescript Form of Divine Service to be used on Sundays and Holy-days.
15. The Litany to be read on Wednesdays and Fridays.
16. Colleges to use the prescript Form of Divine Service.
17. Students in Colleges to wear Surplices in time of Divine Service.
18. A reverence and attention to be used within the Church in time of Divine Service.
19. Loiterers not to be suffered near the Church in time of Divine Service.
20. Bread and Wine to be provided against every Communion.
21. The Communion to be thrice a year received.
22. Warning to be given beforehand for the Communion.
23. Students in Colleges to receive the Communion four times a year.
24. Copes to be worn in Cathedral Churches by those that administer the Communion.
25. Surplices and Hoods to be worn in Cathedral Churches, when there is no Communion.
26. Notorious Offenders not to be admitted to the Communion.
27. Schismatics not to be admitted to the Communion.
28. Strangers not to be admitted to the Communion.
29. Fathers not to be Godfathers in Baptism, and Children not Communicants.
30. The lawful Use of the Cross in Baptism explained.

Ministers, their Ordination, Function, and Charge.

31. Four solemn times appointed for the making of Ministers.
32. None to be made Deacon and Minister both in one day.
33. The Title of such as are to be made Ministers.
34. The Quality of such as are to be made Ministers.
35. The Examination of such as are to be made Ministers.
36. Subscription required of such as are to be made Ministers.
    The Articles of Subscription.
    The Form of Subscription.
37. Subscription before the Diocesan.
38. Revolters after Subscription censured.
39. Cautions for Institution of Ministers into Benefices.
40. An Oath against Simony at Institution into Benefices.
41. Licences for Plurality of Benefices limited, and Residence enjoined.
42. Residence of Deans in their Churches.
43. Deans and Prebendaries to preach during their Residence.
44. Prebendaries to be resident upon their Benefices.
45. Beneficed Preachers, being resident upon their Livings, to preach every Sunday.
46. Beneficed Men, not Preachers, to procure monthly Sermons.
47. Absence of Beneficed Men to be supplied by Curates that are allowed Preachers.
48. None to be Curates but allowed by the Bishop.
49. Ministers not allowed Preachers may not expound.
50. Strangers not admitted to preach without shewing their Licence.
51. Strangers not admitted to preach in Cathedral Churches without sufficient Authority.
52. The names of strange Preachers to be noted in a Book.
53. No public Opposition between Preachers.
54. The Licences of Preachers refusing Conformity to be void.
55. The Form of a Prayer to be used by all Preachers before their Sermons.
56. Preachers and Lecturers to read Divine Service, and administer the Sacraments twice a year at the least.

57. The Sacraments not to be refused at the hands of unpreaching Ministers.
58. Ministers reading Divine Service, and administering the Sacraments, to wear Surplices, and Graduates therewithal Hoods.
59. Ministers to catechize every Sunday.
60. Confirmation to be performed once in three Years.
61. Ministers to prepare Children for Confirmation.
62. Ministers not to marry any persons without Banns or Licence.
63. Ministers of exempt Churches not to marry without Banns or Licence.
64. Ministers solemnly to bid Holy-days.
65. Ministers solemnly to denounce Recusants and Excommunicates.
66. Ministers to confer with Recusants.
67. Ministers to visit the Sick.
68. Ministers not to refuse to christen or bury.
69. Ministers not to defer christening, if the Child be in danger.
70. Ministers to keep a Register of Christenings, Weddings, and Burials.
71. Ministers not to preach or administer the Communion in private Houses.
72. Ministers not to appoint public or private Fasts or Prophecies, or to exorcise, but by authority.
73. Ministers not to hold private Conventicles.
74. Decency in Apparel enjoined to Ministers.
75. Sober Conversation required in Ministers.
76. Ministers at no time to forsake their Calling.

Schoolmasters.

77. None to teach School without Licence.
78. Curates desirous to teach, to be licensed before others.
79. The Duty of Schoolmasters.

Things appertaining to Churches.

80. The Great Bible, and Book of Common Prayer to be had in every Church.
81. A Font of Stone for Baptism in every Church.
82. A decent Communion-Table in every Church.
83. A Pulpit to be provided in every Church.
84. A Chest for Alms in every Church.
85. Churches to be kept in sufficient Reparations.
86. Churches to be surveyed, and the Decays certified to the high Commissioners.
87. A Terrier of Glebe-lands, and other Possessions belonging to Churches.
88. Churches not to be profaned.

Church-wardens or Quest-men, and Side-men or Assistants.

89. The choice of Church-wardens, and their Account.
90. The choice of Side-men, and their joint office with Church-wardens.

Parish-Clerks.

91. Parish-Clerks to be chosen by the Minister.

Ecclesiastical Courts belonging to the Archbishop's Jurisdiction.

92. None to be cited into divers Courts for Probate of the same will.
93. The Rate of Bona notabilia liable to the Prerogative Court.
94. None to be cited into the Arches or Audience, but dwellers within the Archbishop's Diocese, or Peculiars.
95. The Restraint of double Quarrels.
96. Inhibitions not to be granted without the Subscription of an Advocate.
97. Inhibitions not to be granted, until the Appeal be exhibited to the Judge.
98. Inhibitions not to be granted to factious Appellants, unless they first subscribe.
99. None to marry within the Degrees prohibited.
100. None to marry under Twenty-one Years, without their Parents' consent.
101. By whom Licences to marry without Banns shall be granted, and to what sort of Persons.
102. Security to be taken at the granting of such Licences, and under what Conditions.
103. Oath to be taken for the Conditions.
104. An exception for those that are in Widowhood.
105. No Sentence for Divorce to be given upon the sole confession of the parties.
106. No Sentence for Divorce to be given but in open Court.
107. In all Sentences for Divorce, Bond to be taken for not marrying during each other's life.
108. The Penalty for Judges offending in the Premises.

Ecclesiastical Courts belonging to the Jurisdiction of Bishops and Archdeacons, and the Proceedings in them.

109. Notorious Crimes and Scandals to be certified into Ecclesiastical Courts by Presentment.
110. Schismatics to be presented.
111. Disturbers of Divine Service to be presented.
112. Non-Communicants at Easter to be presented.
113. Ministers may present.
114. Ministers shall present Recusants.
115. Ministers and Church-wardens not to be sued for presenting.
116. Church-wardens not bound to present oftener than twice a Year.
117. Church-wardens not to be troubled for not presenting oftener than twice a Year.
118. The old Church-wardens to make their Presentments before the new be sworn.
119. Convenient time to be assigned for framing Presentments.
120. None to be cited into Ecclesiastical Courts by Process of Quorum Nomina.
121. None to be cited into several Courts for one Crime.
122. No Sentence of Deprivation or Deposition to be pronounced against a Minister, but by the Bishop.
123. No Act to be sped but in open Court.
124. No Court to have more than one Seal.
125. Convenient places to be chosen for the keeping of open Courts.
126. Peculiar and inferior Courts to exhibit the original Copies of Wills into the Bishop's Registry.

Judges Ecclesiastical, and their Surrogates.

127. The Quality and Oath of Judges.
128. The Quality of Surrogates.

Proctors.

129. Proctors not to retain Causes without the lawful Assignment of the Parties.
130. Proctors not to retain Causes without the counsel of an Advocate.
131. Proctors not to conclude in any Cause without the knowledge of an Advocate.
132. Proctors prohibited the Oath, In animam domini sui.
133. Proctors not to be clamorous in Court.

Registrars.

134. Abuses to be reformed in Registrars.

135. A certain Rate of Fees due to all Ecclesiastical Officers.
136. A Table of the Rates and Fees to be set up in Courts and Registries.
137. The whole Fees for shewing Letters of Orders, and other Licences, due but once in every Bishop's time.

Apparitors.

138. The Number of Apparitors restrained.

Authority of Synods.

139. A National Synod the Church Representative.
140. Synods conclude as well the absent as the present.
141. Depravers of the Synod censured.

INDEX.

INDEX

TO THE PRINCIPAL MATTERS

CONTAINED IN THE NOTES.

ABORTION, human greatness compared to one, 526, o.

ABRAHAM, his rejoicing at the sight of Christ's day, a motive of joy to us, 132, x. who the adopted seed of, 597, m. their duty, ibid. covenant with, when God remembered it, 597, o. God's promise to, when said to be remembered, 599, a. in what ways God's covenant with him fulfilled, 611, m.

ABSALOM, his conduct to David described, 522, c.

Absolution, an act of ministerial authority, 10, e. its efficacy generally acknowledged, ibid. power of pronouncing it not limited to the apostles, ibid. how to be understood, ibid. how to be received by the people, ibid. part of the priest's office, ibid. what it properly is, ibid. fit to be exercised after confession of sins, ibid. form of, not popish, ibid. when composed, ibid. different from the popish absolutions, ibid. use of it, ibid. why said to be pronounced, 10, g. why by the priest alone, ibid. not to be read by a deacon, ibid. much less repeated by the people, ibid. parts of which it consists, 11, h. its apostolical commencement, 11, i. published by the minister in God's name, 12, m. to be understood conditionally, ibid. how to be received, ibid.

Absolution, in the Communion Service, by whom composed, 308, n. structure of it, ibid. authorities on which founded, 308, o. intent and fitness of it, 309, p. why pronounced by the priest or bishop, ibid. shewn by the rubrick to be an act of authority, ibid. used in the primitive times, ibid. its contents, ibid. comprises all that the contrite can desire, ibid. special reasons why it should not be pronounced by the people, ibid.

Absolution, in the Visitation of the Sick, foundation of it, 416, g. how intended by the Church, ibid. its antiquity, ibid. explained and vindicated, ibid. when to be administered, ibid. how to be received, ibid. correction of an improper expression which was formerly in it, 416, h.

Absolution, three several forms of in the Church Service, 309, p. in sense and virtue the same, ibid.

Absolution, private, different views of our Church and of the papists concerning it, 302, 303, o.

Absolution, who are the persons to whom it will be granted, 202, e.

Acceptable time, why and when granted us, 542, m.

Accepted times, necessity of improving them, 125, h.

Accuser, the great, deliverance from him to be prayed for, 485, h.

Actions, different ways of considering them, 767, q.

Actions, virtuous, what the great spring and principle of them, 767, q.

ADAM, effects of his sin what, 761, s. effects of Christ's obedience commensurate with them, ibid.

Advent, why so called, 85, e. time of its institution, ibid. its solemnity how marked formerly, ibid. why the beginning of the ecclesiastical year, ibid. and of the Church in her services at this season, ibid.

Adversary, our spiritual, his rage and subtilty figuratively represented, 637, f.

Adversity, how it serves the ends of religion, 264, t. a trial of our continuing with Christ, ibid. the punishment and remedy of sin, 625, y. See Afflictions.

Affability and condescension recommended by our Saviour's example, 214, a.

Affection, what meant by setting it on things above, 156, z. when we may be said to do so, ibid.

Affections, corrupt, the most inveterate enemies to God and Christ, 451, i.

Afflicted, God's promise for their consolation, 463, i.

Affliction, rod of, how to be endured, 502, g.

Afflictions, virtues particularly necessary under them, 188, c. good effects of them, ibid. uses of them, 460, e. motives to comfort under them, 461, u. God our comfort under them, 481, z. considerations that make the soul cheerful in them, 488, p. conduct to be practised under them, 489, u. a source of comfort and strength under them, 490, a. proper effect of them, 501, f. of the righteous, known unto God, 524, t. their use and necessity, 534, k. not to be regarded as a mark of final desertion by God, 544, m. primary intentions of them, 566, o. what to be prayed for under them, 623, b. proceed from God's goodness, 625, z. uses of them, 625, c. how to satisfy impatience under them, 627, o. use of them to God's faithful servants, 629, f. not uncommon with the righteous, 640, g.

Affusion, directed by the Church where dipping is not practised, 345, o. why to be preferred to sprinkling, ibid. best apology for the present practice of substituting it for dipping, 346, o. significancy of it, 379, x. early use of it, ibid. why now universally chosen, ibid.

After, its sense in old English, 68, d.

AGATHA, account of her, xli.

Age, want of, in what case an impediment to marriage, 396, b. a canon relating to it affected by a subsequent statute, ibid.

AGNES, account of her, xxxix.

Agriculture, an emblem of our present labour and future reward, 639, q.

AHIMELECH, massacre of, compared to the cutting of wood, 652, k.

AHITHOPHEL, circumstances in his history and death alluded to, 522, 523, c. g. i, k.

ALBAN, St., account of him, li.

All conditions of men, prayer for, special provision in it for those who desire it, 74, m. why drawn up, ibid. and by whom, ibid. probably longer at first than it is now, 75, m. use and purport of it, 74, m. founded on the Lord's prayer, ibid.

All Saints, feast of, its antiquity, 274, i. intention of our Reformers in retaining it, ibid.

Almighty and most merciful Father, propriety of the titles, as introductory to prayer, 7, r.

Almighty, safety of those who put themselves under his protection, figuratively described, 579, c, d.

Alms, at the Communion Service, by whom to be collected, 297, r. why to be brought to the priest, &c., ibid.

Alphabet, Hebrew, psalm divided according to the number of its letters, 619, q.
Alphege, account of him, xlvii.
Altar, antiquity of the name for the communion table, 279, s. indifferency of the two names, ibid. particular reference of each, 280, s. lights upon it prescribed by the Rubrick, lxxiv, p
Altar, place of refuge to offenders, 485, e.
Ambrose, St., account of him, xlvii.
Amen, why used at the end of the confession, 9, d. different significations of the word, 12, o. universal practice of the Church to use it, 13, o. not to be neglected by us, ibid. why printed in different characters, ibid. when to be pronounced by the minister, ibid. when by the people only, ibid. distinction in the use of it at the end of different prayers, 281, z. why printed in different characters, ibid.
Amen, mistake concerning the use of it in the Commination Service, 441, y. what it there means, ibid.
Amends, necessary to be made by those who have done an injury to another, 414, a. to what extent required, 414, b.
Anabaptists, their erroneous view of the moral precepts of Moses, 753, c. their doctrine of sin after baptism being unpardonable, 770, c. their rise, 787, q. their tenet of the community of goods, 798, n.
Anathema, formerly used for condemning errors, 774, r. whence derived, ibid.
Andrew, St., why his day is kept first, 230, d. account of him, ibid. form of his cross, 231, d.
Angel of the Lord, what meant by it, 493, e.
Angels, their joy at the conversion of a sinner, 139, d. described as ministers of God, 594, p.
Angels, evil, their fall asserted in Scripture, 268, a. an incentive to watchfulness in us, ibid. a warning against pride, ibid. difference between their condition afterwards, and that of fallen man, a motive to our gratitude, ibid. evil, employed in inflicting the Egyptian plagues, what meant by them, 553, m.
Angels, good, good men under their protection, 269, b. reflection on them an incitement to thankfulness, ibid. an example of loving kindness, ibid. a support in temptation, ibid. a motive to carefulness in our behaviour, ibid. respect for them must be duly tempered, ibid. how far the benefit we derive from them extends, ibid.
Animal world, wisdom of God displayed in it incomprehensible, 660, i.
Animals, force of instinct in them, 595, z.
Anna, reward of her offices of devotion, an encouragement to us, 240, q.
Annunciation, what meant by it, 242, u.
Anne, St., account of her, liii.
Anointed, term applied to Christ and Christians, 531, n.
Anthem, origin and meaning of the word, 18, d.
Antinomians, Article of the Church relating to them, 758, c.
Antioch, great honour done to it by St. Luke, 252, g.
Apocrypha, books of, why read in the Church, 21, l. why used by our Church, xxx, o. ancient example for it, ibid.
Apocryphal books, why so called, 688, q. innovation of the council of Trent concerning them, ibid. why rejected by our Church from the canon, 758, y. distinction between them and the canonical books, ibid. grounds of distinction between them and the canonical, 758, b. use of them, ibid. some parts of them not read by the Church, ibid.
Apostasy, caution against it, 601, l.
Apostles, their commission extended to their successors, 10, e. examples of patience and perseverance, 125, h. their commission renewed after our Lord's resurrection, 162, i. what meant by his sending them, as his Father sent Him, ibid. our duty to be followers of them, 225, s. wherein we are not to imitate them, ibid. wherein we are, ibid. call of them, different from ours, 232, f. wherein their case is a pattern for us, ibid. reflections on the contention for superiority among them, 264, t. their integrity in preaching the Gospel, shewn, by the rules of life they laid down, 266, x. by the motives they alleged, ibid. by their impartiality, ibid. by their lives, ibid. by their sufferings and deaths, ibid.
Apparel of women, what sort of intended by the rubrick before the churching of women, 436, y.
Archbishop, date of the name and jurisdiction, 709, t. counterpart in the Jewish church, ibid. sometimes used promiscuously with metropolitan, 710, t. his early jurisdiction over Bishops, 713, f. oath of due obedience to him, when drawn up, ibid. to whom pledged when the see is vacant, 713, g.
Archdeacon, original of the title and office, 677, q. powers afterwards enlarged, ibid. different names by which called, ibid. remark on the form of words with which he presents candidates for orders, 678, x.
Arians, their attempt to change the orthodox form of worship, 16, x. their heresy condemned in the Athanasian Creed, 53, s. support part of the scriptural doctrine of the Trinity, 53, x. departed from the belief of the Church, 291, a. explain away the meaning of Scripture, 291, b. their forced interpretation of Scripture, ibid.
Arius, his doctrine concerning Christ, 289, t. consequence of it, ibid.
Ark, its going up into the temple described, 513, l. how applied in the Christian Church, ibid. its removal to mount Zion emblematical of our Saviour's resurrection, 536, x. deposited on mount Zion, a symbol of our Lord's ascension, 538, m. rejoicings at the removal of it a prelude to the joy of the Christian Church, 539, r.
Armour of God, exhortation to put it on, an encouragement against danger, 221, m.
Arrows of God, what they are, 499, l. of the ungodly, danger from them how to be guarded against, 462, z.
Arminius, his doctrines the same as those of the 17th Article, 772, i.
Article concerning private baptism, passed by convocation in 1575, whether published or not, 354, 355, g.
Articles, power of every church to compose or alter them, 777, d.
Articles, the thirty-nine, origin and history of them, 749, a. four general divisions of them, ibid. preference given to them by the Church over the Homilies, 794, x. in what sense considered by some persons, 799. what they are to the laity, ibid. and what the clergy are bound to by them, ibid. why the clergy are bound to subscribe their assent to them, 794, x. to be perused carefully by candidates for orders, 799, 800. what the just ground of conscientious subscription to them, ibid.
Articles, the forty-two, the foundation of the thirty-nine, 749, a.
Asaph, who supposed to be, 547, i. psalm composed by, during the captivity, 550, f. on account of some great deliverance, 553, b, during the captivity, 554, k. in declaration of God's dealings with his people, 555, y. on the destruction of Jerusalem, 560, x. 561, d. for feast times, 563, r. on the corruption of wicked magistrates, 564, a. as a complaint against the oppressors of God's people, 565, h.
Ascension, see Christ, his ascension.
Ascension-day, reason and antiquity of observing it, 170, y. suitableness of the service, ibid.
Ash-Wednesday, why the first day of Lent, 123, d. reason of the name, ibid. how observed anciently, ibid. seasonableness of the proper services, ibid. why no selection of proper lessons, ibid.
Asses, wild, an instance of God's providence, 594, s.
Assist, when God is said to assist us in our prayers, 324, s.
Assurance of the Church, on what built, 475, c.
Athanasius, account of him, 50, n. See Creed.
Atheist, his condition at the resurrection, 516, e.
Augustin, Abp. account of him, xlvii.
Augustin, St. account of him, liii. his opposition to the Pelagians, 761, o, p. his doctrine concerning original sin, 761, s. opinion of those who do not agree with him, 762, s. passage cited from him concerning the Lord's Supper, 789, d.
Authors cited, alphabetical list of, xiii, xiv.

B.

Babylon, vengeance of heaven, why predicted upon her, 648, f.
Baca, vale of, opinions concerning it, 567, t.
Banner, to which the worshippers of God might resort, 523, i.

Banns, origin and meaning of the word, 395, z.

Baptism, the ordinary way of salvation, 153, s. to what its efficacy is ascribed, ibid. when commonly administered by the ancients, 157, a. anniversary commemoration of, observed by the ancients, 164, n. in what way the Church draws near to the practice, ibid. necessity of reflecting on the engagement and the end of it, 194, m. instituted by our Saviour to convey regeneration, 329, o. rites used by the primitive Christians agreeable to this notion, ibid. a rite of natural signification, and universally practised, ibid. made a sacrament by our Lord, ibid. how it represents regeneration, ibid. provision of the Church to prevent its being repeated, 334, 335, a. repetition of it contrary to Scripture and antiquity, ibid. a contempt of St. Paul's aphorism, ibid. repetition of it, inconsistent with the spiritual benefits ascribed to it, ibid. so stated in the Nicene Creed, ibid. necessity and efficacy of it, briefly stated from Scripture, 336, c. the only ordinary means of our regeneration, ibid. how shewn to be an holy thing, 337, o. end and design of its being sanctified, ibid. the constant and uniform doctrine of the Church that we are regenerated in it, 349, u. because it puts us into a new estate, ibid. gives us new relations, ibid. and a new nature, ibid. what it is, 378, s. necessary parts of it, ibid. why water a necessary part of it, 378, t. the benefit conferred by it, 379, x. state in which it places us, 379, y. how we continue in that state, ibid. requisites in order to it, 380, z, a; 368, b. duties to which it binds us, 368, f. sin after it not unpardonable, 771, f. remission granted to it on repentance, 771, g. benefits of it to those who receive it rightly, 786, p. a federal admission to Christianity, ibid. assertions of the ancients concerning its spiritual effects, ibid. not to be repeated, 784, h.

Baptism of infants, agreeable to God's institution of circumcision, 330, q. and to the custom of the Jews thereupon, ibid. not excepted against by our Saviour, ibid. nor omitted by the apostles, ibid. why not expressly mentioned by the Scriptures, 331, q. clearly implied by them, ibid. most probably practised from the beginning of Christianity, ibid. proved from the ancient fathers to have been the practice of the very first ages, ibid. origin of the contempt of it, 336, d. that it is agreeable to Christ, concluded by the Church out of Scripture, 338, 339, t. the established faith of the Church, ibid.

Baptism, infants why to be baptized, 330, p. why to be baptized publickly, ibid. in case of weakness the private office provided for them, ibid. to be brought to Church afterwards, ibid. infants who have received it supposed both by Scripture and the Church to be regenerate, 348, u. solution of the doubt whether infants be regenerated in it, 349, u. blessings of it conditional, 349, 350, u. how it appears that children are saved, which sin not after baptism, 351, b.

Baptism, when administered in ancient times, 332, s. prudence of our Church's rule on the subject, ibid. why it ought to be administered on a Sunday, or holy-day, ibid. what meant by unless necessity otherwise require, ibid. ought if possible to be performed during the stated service, ibid. and at the font, ibid. where administered in the earliest times of Christianity, 331, r. provision afterwards made for it, ibid. why appointed by us in the Church, ibid. anciently administered in the presence of the congregation, 334, y.

Baptism, office of, why placed first in order of the occasional offices, 329, o. why not placed before the office of the Communion, 330, o.

Baptism, publick office of, to be administered at the font only, 334, y. absurdity of administering it elsewhere, ibid. remarks on the conduct of those who procure it to be used at home, ibid. contrary to reason and the plain design of the institution, ibid. forbidden in a private house, 354, f. statement of its contents, as it concerns both the child and the sureties, 334, 335, a. why commenced with an exhortation to prayer, 336, b. why a profession of a desire to receive it required before it is administered, 341, y. administration of it following the questions and answers, what it contains, 343, b. statement of the several contents, ibid. summary of the service after administration, 347, t.

Baptism, who authorized to administer it, 333, x. not to be administered by unordained persons, 351, g. opinions of the ancients about it, ibid. reasons of the exclusion, ibid. opinion of our Church and grounds of it, ibid. when the order confining the administration to a lawful minister was made, ibid. history of the proceedings of the Church, and of the rubrick, in this particular, 354, 355, g. presumption in an unordained person to administer it, 355, g. and unjustifiable provision of the church of Rome, ibid. why the pretence of the child's danger not sufficient, ibid. whether valid and effectual if performed by an unordained person, ibid. opinion of our Church, as formed from her publick acts and offices, ibid. what to be done by those who have been so baptized, ibid. may be administered by deacons, 628, z. in the absence of a priest, ibid.

Baptism, form of, essential part instituted by our Saviour, 329, o. rites and circumstances left to the Church, ibid. what meant by that form, 346, p. constant care of the Church not to vary from our Lord's words, ibid. other variations, not affecting those words, ibid. censure of the Church upon such hereticks as presumed to vary, ibid. words essential to it, 356, n. always used by the apostles, ibid. to be administered in the name of the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghost, 379, t. import of the expression, ibid.

Baptism usually administered at first by dipping, 345, m. significancy of that mode, ibid. significancy of affusion, ibid. agreement of the two ceremonies, ibid. implies both dipping and affusion, ibid. indifferently practised by the Jews, ibid. affusion sometimes used by the primitive Christians, ibid. whence it originated, 345, n. when it generally succeeded to dipping, ibid. moderation of our Church in this particular, ibid. either mode sufficient, ibid. why it was the old fashion to dip or sprinkle thrice, ibid. why altered to once, ibid. how we are certified that a child will not endure dipping, 346, o. grace of it significantly pointed out, both by immersion and aspersion, 786, o. See Affusion.

Baptism, vows of, several particulars examined, 341, y. explained, 368, g. their necessity and antiquity, ibid. importance of taking them upon ourselves, 388, d.

Baptism, privileges of, why the beginning of religious instruction, 367, a. properly reduced in the Catechism to three heads, 367, b. explanation of them, 367, 368, c, d, e.

Baptism, private, provision made for it by the Church, if necessary, 334, y; 353, d. her tenderness and maternal love in so doing, ibid. principle on which allowed, ibid. practice of the ancient Church, ibid. duty of parents concerning it, ibid. what a cause of its necessity, 354, e. what office then to be used, 354, f. the sacrament, so administered, 356, k.

Baptism, private, office of, prayer for the consecration of the water should not be omitted, 355, h. why the order for dipping left out, 355, i. how to be used, when applied to more than one child, 357, o. contents of that part of it which is used when the child is brought to church, 357, p. uncertain why the direction concerning confirmation was omitted ibid. what should be done in consequence, ibid.

Baptism, office of, for those of riper years, for whom designed, 330, p. why not inserted in our earlier Liturgies, 360, q. what caused the want of it, ibid. for what persons useful, ibid. by whom supposed to have been composed, ibid. what required of them beforehand, 360, r, useful to be read before confirmation, ibid. differences between it and the office for infants, 360, s.

Baptism with the Holy Ghost, its signification, 337, k.

Baptism, both of water and of the Spirit, necessary, 336, e.

Baptize, meaning of the word, 379, x.

Baptizing in the name of Christ, no exclusion of the other two persons, 356, n. meaning of the expression, ibid.

Barnabas, St. account of him, 251, f. an example of Christian charity, 253, h. his day, when admitted among the holy-days of the Church, lxiii. b. how distinguished from others, ibid.

Bartholomew, St. account of him, 262, r. whether the same as Nathanael, ibid.

Basan, hill of, in what respect Sion may be preferred to it, 538, i.

Baxter, Mr. his assurance with respect to the Liturgy, ix. strictures levelled against the prayers drawn up by him, xxviii, b.

Beasts, a proof of God's providence, 395, b.

Beasts that perish, wherein man is compared to them, 515, x. what sort of men are like them, 516, f.

Beauty of holiness, exemplified in the Morning Service of the Church, 42, c. specially exemplified in the Litany, 70, d.

Bede, Venerable, account of him, xlix.

Belief, Articles of, why in the Christian covenant they come before the rules of obedience, 370, r.

Belief, the ground of practice, 370, r.

Belief in God, in what it consists, 373, e. consequence of it, ibid.

Believe, distinguished from "believe in," 31, o.

Believers, why styled trees of righteousness, 531, p. their zeal and love should increase in proportion to the wickedness of others, 630, a.

Benedicite, why so called, 24, b. a paraphrase of the 148th Psalm, 24, a. antiquity and character of it, ibid. when most fit to be used in the Church, ibid. passages in it explained, ibid.

Benedict, Abbot, account of him, xliii.

Benediction, see Blessing.

Benedictus, for what reason appointed to be read, 26, c. character and purport of it, ibid. passages in it explained, ibid. probably intended for more general use than the 100th Psalm, ibid.

Benefits, necessity of remembering them, 592, c.

Bible, last translation of, when the Epistles and Gospels were taken from it, 84, c. why delivered to priests at their ordination, 707, q. why delivered to bishops at their consecration, 716, o. great English, what and why so called, xxxii, x.

Bidding prayers, antiquity of it, 295, m. used in King Edward Sixth's time, ibid. how altered in process of time, ibid.

Birds, their musick a song of thanksgiving, 595, l. admirable wisdom imparted to them, 595, y.

Birth, spiritual, distinction between it and spiritual life, 156, z.

Bishop, original meaning of the word, 672, c.

Bishop, why, if present, to pronounce the Absolution at the Communion Service, 309, p. why to give the blessing, if present, 322, o. every thing essential to ordination performed by him, 705, m. in whose name he speaks, ibid.

Bishops, order of, offices exercised by them in the apostles' times, 671, b. and in the times following, ibid. duty of the inferior clergy to them acknowledged by all Christians, 672, a. such subordination required by reason, ibid. and supported by Scripture, ibid. and by the primitive general use of Christians, ibid. superiority of bishops to presbyters, 673, f. their authority to ordain ministers on what grounded, ibid. candidates for orders sometimes examined by them, 678, x. why called Fathers and Fathers-in-God, 678, u. why three present at the ordination of a bishop, 705, m. use and necessity of, 709, s. solemnity of their consecration in the earliest times, ibid. forms of, in all churches, ibid. difference between the Roman and ours, ibid. the successors of the apostles, 710, o. what apostolical gifts necessary to them, and permanent, ibid. obliged by the same charge as the apostles, 710, x. why called pastors of Christ's Church, 710, y. manner of their election at different times, 712, c. how regulated in this country, ibid. foundation of prayers for them at consecration, 713, h. questions proposed to them on what grounded, 714, i. difference between those in the Roman church and in ours, ibid. promise required of them to be faithful in ordaining others, 715, k. necessity and obligation of it, ibid. charity and hospitality required of them, 715, l. peculiar petitions for them, 715, m. form of conferring the order wherein different from that used at the admission to priesthood, 716, n. admonition annexed to it, its use, ibid. the administrators of Confirmation, 365, z; 366, a.

Blasius, account of him, xli.

Blaspheme mine honour, meaning of the phrase, 453, b.

Blessed contrasted with the cursed, 493, e. what man may properly be pronounced so, 502, p. who are truly so, 612, q. not to be deprived of their felicity, 612, t.

Blessedness, dispositions prescribed for the attainment of it, 276, m. how to be judged of, 567, x.

Blessing, final, the practice both of the Jewish and the Christian Church, 42, c. no one should go out without it, ibid. people always dismissed with one from the Communion, 322, o. highly esteemed in the primitive times, 322, p. how described in the Old Testament, ibid. application to the times of the Gospel, ibid.

Blessing, St. Paul's form of, why delivered to the Church, 42, c. somewhat altered in our use of it, ibid. what good things we intreat thereby, ibid. how they are conveyed to us, ibid.

Blessing, form of, in the Communion Service, whence taken, 322, p. purport of it, ibid. why in the name of the holy Trinity, ibid. in what light to be considered, ibid. how to be received, ibid. language of St. Paul properly applied in it, 90, r. a distinction generally observed in it, ibid.

Blessing, in the Visitation of the Sick, an ancient form of concluding the office, 417, l. excellence of the forms provided by our Church, ibid. explanation of them, ibid.

Blessing, apostolical, when added to the Burial Service, 434, c. purport of it, ibid.

Blessing, in the Commination, whence taken, 445, d.

Blessing in the Ordination Service, remarks upon it, 702, i.

Blessings, formerly confined to Israel, now extended to all men, 614, o. spiritual, a pledge of God's goodness with respect to temporal, 601, i. temporal, whether the reward of piety, 640, d.

Blood, what meant by God's making inquisition for blood, 459, y.

Blood-hounds, persecutors compared to them, 527, u.

Body and blood of Christ, in what sense the bread and wine become so, 331, i.

Boniface, account of him, li.

Britius, account of him, lxii.

Book of Common Prayer, excellence and beauty of it, 322, 323, p. memorable testimony thereto, ibid. See Common Prayer Book, Liturgy, &c.

Book of the living, meaning of it, 543, x.

Book of life, allusion to it, 572, b.

Bondage, spiritual, deliverance from, represented by that of Israel from temporal, 537, a.

Bones, figurative use of the term, 456, t.

"Bones that thou hast broken shall rejoice," figurative and literal meaning of the phrase, 519, g.

Born again, conduct suitable to those who are so, 165, n, o. of water and the Holy Ghost, what the literal interpretation of the words, 336, c. agreeable to other texts, ibid. the most catholick and best interpretation, ibid. uniformly so expounded by the ancients without an exception, ibid. signification of the clause, 336, g. how this is a new birth, ibid. See Regeneration.

Bottle, human frame in sorrow how compared to one, 626, n.

Bottles, as used at Eastern funerals, allusion to them, 524, t.

Bounty, of God, both in the natural and spiritual world, 647, y.

Bow, useless, impotence of the wicked compared to one, 526, n. broken, Israelites why compared to one, 559, p.

Bowing at the name of Jesus, authority and reasons for the practice, 30, m. foundation of the custom, 290, x. injoined by the Church, ibid. peculiar propriety of it in the Creeds, ibid. such customs harmless and unexceptionable, 297, x.

Bread, breaking, the ancient practice of the Church, 316, l. by whom altered, ibid. vanished from the Romish church, ibid.

Bread and wine, at the communion, how they become the body and blood of Christ, 315, g; 318, u. not changed in substance, 315, g. a pledge of a spiritual grace, ibid. may be distributed but not consecrated by a deacon, 689, r.

Bread and wine, if not consecrated, why assigned by the Church to the curate, 327, h. if any remain after consecration, practice of the ancient Church concerning it, 327, i. why not to be reserved, ibid. prudent provision of our Church, ibid.

Brethren, an apostolical salutation, 3, d.

Brethren, love to them inforced from reflections on Christ's sufferings, 504, z. reward of it, 504, a.

Breviary, how distinguished from Missal and Ritual, 81, b.
Bridemen, an ancient usage, 398, c. left indifferent by the Church, ibid.
Burial, ancient rites of, 425, a. See Burying the dead.
Burial, Christian, what persons not capable of, 423, u. rubrick concerning them, founded on ancient law and usage, 424, u.
Burial, office of, much vitiated before the Reformation, 423, t. principle on which corrected by our Reformers, ibid. character of the present form, ibid. whether to be read over persons unbaptized or sectaries, 424, v. questions relating to the rubrick which speaks of those that have laid violent hands upon themselves, 424, x. for what purpose intended, 426, b. psalms and lessons never to be omitted, ibid. remarks on the rubrick which directs the minister to go either into the church or towards the grave, 426, b. a consolatory office, 426, c. forms of it generally our own, 432, u. description and vindication of the two prayers after interment, 433, 434, u, x, y, z, a, b. general view of its excellence, 434, c. application of it, ibid.
Burgess, Dr., his exposition of the interrogatories at baptism, accepted by King James the First, and approved by the Abp. of Canterbury, 341, y. his sense of the cross in baptism, accepted by King James, and approved by the Abp. of Canterbury, 347, r.
Burying the dead, its antiquity, 422, t. used among the Jews, ibid. and in the Christian Church, ibid. should be performed with decent respect, ibid. reasons for it, 423, t. practice of the primitive Christians, ibid. ancient practice of burying without the walls, 424, z. later provisions with respect to place, ibid. why places for that purpose chosen near the church, ibid. why the deceased is preceded by the minister, and followed by his friends, 425, a. improvement of the impressions naturally made by it, 430, l. the interment an act of piety, 430, n. character of the form of words accompanying it in our service, 430, o. particular passages justified, 431, p. r. See Burial.

C.

Cæsar, what meant by the things that are Cæsar's, 225, 226, t. our duty to render them, ibid.
Calamities, their use to sinners, 490, e. calculated to extinguish envy in considerate beholders, 497, t. which God suffers to fall upon his people, specified, 535, l. figurative expression for them, 542, n. See Adversity, Afflictions, &c.
Calendar, whence the word derived, xxxiii, y. what ours consists of, ibid.
Call to the ministry, two sorts of, 686, o.
Call to the ministry, inward, what meant by it, 686, o. necessity of questions concerning it, ibid. a principal qualification, ibid. in all ages pretended to by impostors, 687, p. means taken by the primitive church to prevent this cheat, ibid. question concerning it why not put to candidates for priest's orders, 698, y.
Call to the ministry, outward, what meant by it, 686, o. what meant by the question concerning it, 687, p. reasons for putting it, ibid.
Called, the, who they are, 220, k. how distinguished from "the chosen," ibid.
Calvin, his definition of being called to the ministry, 687, o.
Canaan, the inheritance of, Christians taught thereby to look to heaven, 513, s. sweets of, held on the same conditions as the blessings of Christians, 564, z. how intended to be regarded by the Israelites, 599, b. application to Christians, ibid.
Canaanites, reflections on their extirpation, 602, q.
Candlemas-day, why so called, 238, o.
Canon thirtieth, upon the use of the sign of the cross in baptism, recited, 352, c. proof how satisfactory it was, 353, c.
Canon, of the New Testament, proofs of it, 756, x. of the Old Testament, proofs of it, ibid.
Canon, origin and meaning of the name, xxi, r. how distinguished from prebendary, ibid.
Canons, on what authority they rest, 700, c. measures of obedience due to them, ibid. rules of direction for observing them, ibid. regard due to them different from that due to the rubricks, 794, x.
Canonical books of Scripture, what meant by them, 756, x. in what sense never doubted of in the Church, 757, y.
Captivity, striking picture of, 562, h. temporal, an emblem of that of sin and death, 603, b.
Captivity of the Israelites, Psalm composed during it, 590, u. lamentation of the Israelites during it, 590, s. Psalm composed during it, 600, c.
Catechism, Church, fitness of such a provision, 365, t. signification of the word, ibid. the practice agreeable to God's injunctions, ibid. and to the practice of the Jews, and of the early Christians, ibid. drawn up according to primitive forms, 365, t. character and description of it, ibid. how first framed, 366, t. form of it, ibid. its contents, ibid. doctrine of the Sacraments, when added to it, ibid. its excellence, ibid. why required to be learned before Confirmation, 366, u.
Catechists, in the primitive church, who they were, 365, t. in some churches distinct officers, 689, y.
Catechizing, Scriptural signification of it, 365, t. provisions of the Church for it, 383, r. remarks on the times of doing it, ibid. its great importance, alleged by early and more modern writers, 384, r. an office of deacons, 689, y.
Catechumens, difference between them in the primitive times and now, 366, u.
Catherine, account of her, lix.
Care, what sort of, forbidden, and what allowed and expected, 210, s. wisdom of religion in making such a distinction, ibid.
Carnival, how celebrated, 122, b.
Catholick Church, meaning of the term, 31, p. what churches are parts of it, ibid. why prayed for in the Liturgy, 74, m. See Church Universal.
Catholick faith, what it is, 31, p. what meant by it in the Athanasian Creed, 51, u. necessary in order to salvation, 52, o. what intended by it, 52, p. what allowances to be made, ibid.
Cavern and overwhelming waters, an image of extreme sufferings, 502, o.
Cecilia, account of her, lix.
Cedars, an especial proof of God's providence, 595, x.
Cemeteries, why so called, 425, z.
Censoriousness, its hostility to Christianity, 191, g. forcible argument against it, ibid.
Centurion, whose servant was healed by our Saviour, why his history appears to have been recorded, 111, e. remarks drawn from a contemplation of his character, ibid.
Ceremonies, preface of, little applicable to our present Common Prayer Book, xxxi.
Chad, Bp. account of him, xliii.
Chair, the Bishop's, how distinguished from his throne, 678, r.
Chalice, different kinds of, 316, n.
Chancel, why so called, lxxiii, o. distinguished from the body of the church, ibid. by what means, ibid.
Chancellor, origin and use of the office, xviii, g. two offices, into which now distinguished, ibid.
Chances of life, an unobjectionable phrase, 324, t.
Chandler, Dr. his admirable exposition of the sixty-eighth Psalm, 536, u.
Chapel, word corresponding to it in other languages, lxxiii, n. its derivation uncertain, ibid.
Charity recommended together with faith, 120, z. and by the noblest example, ibid. St. Paul's description of, proposed as a standard of inquiry, 121, a. mistakes concerning it, ibid. its true nature, ibid. exercised in three different ways in the Communion Service, 295, n. that of relieving the poor inforced, from the Gospel, ibid. and from the practice of the first Christians, 296, n. suitable to this particular occasion, 296, q. mode of expressing it by prayer, 298, t. with all men, a requisite for the Lord's Supper, what meant by it, 383, q. its necessity, ibid. how to be shewn, ibid. fire of, ascends in devotion, 501, a. meditations by which it is fed, ibid.
Charity, who the properest objects of it, 196, q. suggestions for regulating it, ibid. enriches instead of impoverishing, 498, e.
King Charles I. anecdote of him and Bishop Juxon, 724, d.
King Charles II. review of the Liturgy in his time, viii.
Chasten, God intreated to chasten as a father for amendment, 499, k.

Cheek, striking on, what it signifies, 453, y.
Cherubin and Seraphin, what the names denote, 22, s.
Cherubims, what meant by God's sitting upon them, 561, e.
Child new weaned, apt comparison to, 642, r.
Child-birth, necessity of thanksgiving after it, 435, d. why a particular form appointed for this deliverance, ibid.
Children, what they may be taught by the early example of our Saviour, 103, y. why compared to arrows, 639, x. how they contribute to the happiness of their parents, 639, y.
Children of God, in what sense we are made so by baptism, 363, d.
Children of grace, how we are so made, 379, y. how we continue so, ibid. what we understand by it, ibid.
Children of wrath, why we are so called by nature, 379, y.
Chimere, part of the episcopal dress, description of it, 712, d.
Chosen people, to what persons properly applied, 35, e.
CHRIST, divine titles ascribed to Him in Scripture, 24, z. prayer to be directed to God in his name, 36, e. Himself the object of divine worship, ibid. the Prayer of St. Chrysostom addressed to Him, 41, z. the object of worship throughout the deprecations, &c. of the Litany, 62, o; 63, d. different forms of addressing Him, 67, z. divinity of, attested by St. John the Baptist, 91, s. why called the bonourable, true, and only Son of God, 24, x. Collect for St. Stephen's day, why offered up to Him, 94, z. his divinity an argument for the pre-eminence of his religion, 92, x. proof of his divinity and supreme authority, 110, b. his divinity confessed by evil spirits, 113, h. instance of prayer addressed to Him by the Church, 124, 125, g. shews her belief in his divinity, ibid. his being before Abraham a proof of his divinity, 132, x. proof of his omnipotence, 204, i. proved to be more than a prophet, 212, v. inferences from his being a King, 228, a. and the Lord our righteousness, ibid. honour due to Him, as the Lord of life, 228, y. noble confession of his divinity, 235, k. accepted as such by Himself, ibid. in what sense it is said of Him, that "to sit on his right hand and on his left are not his to give," 261, q. no argument against his divinity, ibid. his divinity proved by Scriptures, which ascribe to Him divine names, attributes, works, and worship, 292, f. of the same divine nature with the Father, 371, z. proved by his names, attributes, works, and honour, 372, z. an object of adoration, 452, r. reason why the nations should worship Him, 480, o. prayer to Him for salvation, &c. 486, q. Son of God, one of his distinguished titles, 576, g. adoration due to Him, 586, i. proof of his divinity, 549, z. celebrated as Creator of the world, 593, n.
CHRIST, proof of the truth of his humanity, 103, y. his human nature particularly dwelt on, 101, n. his incarnation, 56, z. his equality and inferiority to the Father, ibid. great importance of considering Him in his twofold nature, 92, 93, x. practical duties that result from the doctrine of his incarnation, 93, y. his incarnation, practical uses of the doctrine, 100, m. proper notion of his nature conveyed in his answer to the Virgin, 103, y. union of the two natures in his person asserted, 216, d. the only way of reconciling the Scriptures, ibid. his incarnation, great importance of the doctrine, 243, x. proof of it, ibid. eminence of the day, whereon we commemorate it, 244, x. a direct prophecy of his incarnation, 502, m; 503, r. remarkable prophecy of Him in his incarnation, 657, p. confidence to be reposed in Him, 657, q. description of the miracles performed by Him, 657, r.
CHRIST, his entry into Jerusalem, why the narrative of it read in Advent, 85, f. impression most useful to be made by it, 87, h. nativity of, celebrated from very early times, 91, t. fitness of the Church's services, ibid. practical uses of the doctrine of his manifestation to the Gentiles, 104, s; 107, x. his flight into Egypt, instruction to be drawn from it, 99, k. circumcision of, why celebrated by the Church, 101, o. its antiquity, ibid. suitableness of the services to the day, ibid. his condition, when found by the shepherds, a lesson of humility to us, 103, q. circumcision of, what we may learn from it, ibid. nativity of, notice of it given to all men in their two grand divisions, 105, t. an example how we may increase in favour with God and man, 108, y. early stages of his life answerable to his spotless character, ibid. uses to be made of his example in early years, ibid. his warning to his disciples concerning his approaching death, seasonable and kind to them, 122, b. beneficial to Christians, ibid. temptation of, different designs of it, 126, i. advantage of following the example thus set us, ibid. an example of humility and patience, 133, z. necessity and encouragement for imitating them, ibid. divine mixture of compassion and zeal in his conduct, 200, z. his conduct towards the Pharisees, instruction to be derived from it, 214, a. his presentation in the temple, its conformity to the law, 238, o. antiquity of observing it in the church, 239, o. practical inferences from it, 239, p; 240, q. his entrance into Jerusalem a prelude to his ascension, 618, u. his example in affliction recommended to his followers, 642, r, s.
CHRIST, his miracles testify the divinity of his doctrine, 212, v. his manner of working them different from that of inferior agents, ibid. his miracles, a subject of thanksgiving to God, 219, g. his miracles prove Him to be the Messiah, 229, b. by their number, ibid. and their quality, ibid. his miracles, reasons why He sometimes forbade the divulging of them, 204, i. his first miracle at Cana of Galilee, practical reflections on it, 109, 110, b. why appointed for a Gospel in the time of Epiphany, 110, b. reflections on his miracles of healing the leper and the centurion's servant, 111, e. reflections on his miracles of stilling the sea, and casting out devils, 113, h. his miracle in healing the blind man near Jericho, reflections on it, 122, b. encouragement to faith and thankfulness, ibid. his miracle in favour of the woman of Canaan, reflections on it, 127, m. his miracles in casting out devils, reflections on them, 129, p. his miracle of feeding the five thousand, reflections on it, 130, s. a proof of his omnipotency, ibid. his miracle of feeding the four thousand, instruction derived from it, 196, q. his miracle of healing the deaf and dumb man, reflections arising from it, 204, i. his miracle of healing the lepers, significant sense of it, 208, p. general application of it, 208, 209, p. his miracle of raising the dead man at Nain, lessons drawn from it, 212, v. his miracle of healing the paralytick, reflections on it, 218, g. his miracle in healing the nobleman's son, remarkable particulars in it explained, 222, n. practical application of it, ibid. his miracles of healing the bloody issue, and raising Jairus's daughter, reflections on them, 227, 228, y. his miracle at Cana of Galilee, inference from it with respect to marriage, 398, h.
CHRIST, his sufferings, comprehensive sense in which the Church regards them, 131, t. his sufferings his own voluntary act, 132, x. our duty from that consideration, ibid. exact agreement between the prediction and the narrative of his sufferings, 140, e. his sufferings, pious and useful exercise to meditate on them, 140, f. expedience of his undergoing them, ibid. his murderers, reflections on their disappointment and guilt, 141, g. his death an illustration of different divine attributes, 142, g. death of, practical lessons derived from it, 150, o. his death, voluntary, 152, p. and therefore meritorious, ibid. his last words on the cross, reflections on them, ibid. an example for our imitation, ibid. his death, in what sense we are said to be baptized into it, 153, r. his death, how to be regarded as a sacrifice, oblation, and satisfaction, 314, 315, e. his death and sacrifice, commemorated at the Communion, 316, m. his supplication to the Father for deliverance, 466, i. method taken by Him as man to support Himself in trouble, 467, p. source of joy and thanksgiving, 467, q. his passion typified by the sufferings of David, 470, m. his distress and supplications, 470, n. figurative description of his sufferings and deliverance, 471, t. his sufferings, &c. foretold by the prophets, sometimes typically, sometimes primarily and properly, 477, r. his sufferings a source of comfort to his disciples, 477, s. lowness of the state to which He descended, 478, y. prophecy concerning Him on the cross literally fulfilled, 478, z. description of his sufferings, both figurative and literal, 478, b. particular phrases descriptive of his passion, 478, c; 479, e. prophecy eminently fulfilled at his crucifixion, 479, d. f. his sufferings and their acceptance the greatest subject of the Church's praise, 479, l. words of David literally used by Him on the cross, 488, o. circumstances in his passion pointed at, 489, r, s, t. eminent prophecy of Him on the cross, 493, l. circumstances in his passion foreshewn, 494, 495, t, u, x, y. and after his resurrection, 495, z. his passion literally foretold, 499, i. comfort derived from the remembrance of his sufferings, 500, q. his proclamation of the inefficacy of the law, and his readiness to do his Father's will, 503, r. speaks of Himself as suffering in his mystical body, 503, t; 504, x. calumnies directed against his person, continued against his Church, &c., 504, c. treachery and taunts of his enemies prophetically pointed out, 504, 505, d, e, f. also his resurrection and their desolation, 505, g. his afflictions in the day of his suffering, 522, d, e. strength and furiousness of his enemies, 525, b. his passion foreshewn, 540, 541, d, e, f, g. our iniquities, laid on Him, how spoken of, 541, h. his disciples not to be scandalized on account of his sufferings, 541, i. return made to Him for his humiliation, 541, l. prophecy concerning his passion literally fulfilled, 542, o. denied and forsaken by his disciples, 573, k; 574, p. his sufferings, under what image represented, 572, i. his unexampled sufferings treated of, 572, d. importunity of his prayers under them, 572, e, f; 573, l. disgrace to which He submitted, 572, g. his whole life one continued passion, 573, o. his sufferings, what effect they produced on beholders, 577, m. various instances of persecution of Him, 606, l. his petition for deliverance and his sufferings, 608, n. the stone rejected by the builders, 618, l. his sufferings foretold in the Old Testament, 753, l. fulfilment of the prophecies, ibid. universal acknowledgment and particular history of them, ibid. his death, in what sense our sacrifice, 753, n. reconciliation made by it conditional, ibid. offering of, not repeated, 790, h.

Christ, his burial, how the consideration of it should affect us, 153, s. his burial, circumstantially related by the Evangelists, and why, 154, t. why inserted into our Creeds, ibid.

Christ, his resurrection, firm foundation of our belief of it, 156, a. use to be made of this article, ibid. sufficiency of the evidence of it, 158, c. how effected, 153, s. our salvation rightfully ascribed to it, ibid. effect the belief of it should have on us, 153, s. duties consequent on a belief of it enforced, 156, z. his death and resurrection, when we may reasonably expect benefit from them, 194, m. how to be contemplated, 235, k. his resurrection, &c. prophetically represented, 466, i. his animal frame was not to see corruption, 467, s. the promise how far ours, ibid. parts of the sixteenth Psalm completely fulfilled only in his resurrection, ibid. his return from the grave, and exaltation, beautifully described, 467, t. application to Christians, 468, t. manifestation of divine power at his resurrection, 470, o. should remind us of what will happen at the last day, ibid. his resurrection prophetically celebrated, 476, g. his crown of glory, how represented, 476, h. prays to God for deliverance, 479, h. his hymn of triumph at the resurrection, 479, i. his resurrection and exaltation an assurance of ours, 486, p. thanksgiving for his suffering and rising again, 487, c, d, e. his resurrection mystically predicted, 536, u. effects of his resurrection on the nations, 609, x. his resurrection the most glorious of God's works, 611, k. triumphant hymn on occasion of his resurrection and exaltation, 617, c.

Christ, his ascension and sitting at the right hand of God, what meant by it, 171, z. practical uses of the doctrine, 171, a. his depression and exaltation, 458, n, o. how to be celebrated, 458, p. an eternal life granted Him after his resurrection, 476, i. invested with inexpressible glory upon his ascension, 476, k. his ascension typified, and prophesied of, 481, b. his glory at his ascension, 482, g. festival of his exaltation celebrated, 512, p. why his ascension celebrated, 512, q. his ascension prefigured by the ark going up into the temple, 513, t. joy of contemplating it, 513, u. his triumphal ascension into heaven, 536, l. and its consequences, 538, m. his ascension a pledge of the exaltation of the Church, 539, q. predictions and proofs of it, 754, q.

Christ, represented under the image of a conqueror returning bloody from battle, 135, b. humility and thankfulness due to Him thereupon, 136, c. his power over his enemies, figuratively signified, 452, o. his victory over the host of darkness, 471, z. his vengeance upon the Jews described, 472, c. his deliverance and exaltation, 472, f. and conquest of the nations, 472, g. his victory and inthronization typified in David, 473, h, i. different states of his enemies, and of those who believe in Him, 476, e. his victories typified and celebrated by the Church, 476, f. his exaltation over sin and death, the continual prayer of the Church, 477, q. his victory and exaltation celebrated by the Church, 495, e. his victories, an argument for confidence to Christians, 507, b. to be acknowledged, as the cause of our salvation, 507, c. description of his person, and his doctrine, 509, q. of his power, 509, r. and of his victories, 509, 510, s, t, v. of his throne and sceptre, and divinity, 510, u. of his inauguration, 510, x. his robes and palaces, 510, y. victory consequent on his ascension, 512, r. his victory over death expressed in remarkable terms, 529, n. his vengeance on his enemies predicted, 539, o, p. psalm predictive of his victory, 579, b. prediction of destruction to his enemies, 606, k. description of the vengeance He should take on his adversaries, 610, f. means by which He should obtain his kingdom and priesthood, 610, g. his superiority over the heathens and their idols, 612, z. his mercy to the lowly, 613, a.

Christ, the king of Sion foretold by Zechariah, 86, h. eternity of his kingdom, in what sense to be understood, 291, a. his kingdom prophesied of in the second Psalm, 451, g. his subjects, their fears in persecution groundless, 465, a. his kingdom pointed at under that of David, 469, k. the end of his exaltation, 513, x. his comprehensive kingdom, 513, y. his everlasting kingdom foretold, 630, u. we are bound to give thanks for it, 530, x. consequences of his exaltation, 532, m. erection of his kingdom an occasion of joy to the nations, 535, r. the blessings of it, 536, s, t. his exaltation as Redeemer of his people, 536, y. justice of his government, 546, t. perpetuity of his kingdom, 546, u. the true King of righteousness and of peace, 546, y. extent of his empire, 546, z. his dominion universal, 547, c. his merciful administration, 547, d. praises to be offered Him daily, 547, e. the blessings of his kingdom, 547, f. righteous administration of his kingdom, 552, t, u. to be contemplated as the true David, 576, d. divine promises verified to Him, 576, e. extent of his empire, 576, f. his kingdom prophesied of, 581, s. a new and spiritual kingdom erected by Him, 581, t. proclamation of his kingdom injoined on his apostles, 585, b. an occasion of joy to the whole creation, 585, c. his power exerted in righteousness, 588, y. description of his throne and majesty, 593, k. his praises celebrated, 593, l. prophecy concerning the extension, power, and duration of his kingdom, 609, b. prophecy of, under the type of Solomon, 643, a. mystical description of his kingdom, 643, c. destruction of his enemies, 643, d.

Christ, his coming, how we may be qualified for it, 86, g. magnificent prophecy of his union with his church, 509, n. different times of his coming foretold in Scripture, 517, k. his advent prayed for by the Israelitish church, 535, o, p. comforts of looking forward to his advent in affliction, 562, n. his coming why prayed for, 565, g. four divine attributes met again at his birth, 569, f. wonderful effects of his former and future manifestations, 533, x. his coming twofold, 585, d. his advent, subject of general joy, 587, t. his appearance constantly prayed for by believers, 591, t.

Christ, the favours of God granted to us in Him, 9, c. why called our Advocate, 41, x. why our Mediator, ibid. his honour to be sought in our petitions, ibid. necessity of casting ourselves upon Him for salvation, 97, d. our duty relating to Him as Mediator of the New Testament, 131, u. his sacrifice contrasted with the legal sacrifices, 143, h. its efficiency, ibid. duties incumbent upon us in consequence, 144, h. the way to know and enjoy Him, 159, d. why called the Shepherd of our souls, 164, m. duties arising to us, from his bearing that character, ibid. his word, the efficacy of it, 204, i. instance of his great love to mankind, 218, g. necessity of our praying with confidence in his merits and mediation, 250, e. our only Mediator and Advocate, 300, b. his promise, that if we ask we shall have, properly urged by the Church, 338, s. what referred to by the ancients, ibid. how He is to the Church what the head is to the body, 367, c. blessedness of trusting in Him, 452, r. supplications heard by God through Him, 453, u.

what the characteristicks of his enemies, 454, m. character of those who oppose his Gospel, 464, t. his character figured under that of an Israelitish priest, 465, e. must be imitated by his disciples, ibid. imitation of his virtues and graces, the way to heaven, 466, h. his righteousness as man not an addition to the divine happiness, 466, k. praises of Him, their efficacy, 466, l. the only Saviour, ibid. his preference of his spiritual kingdom before all the kingdoms of the world, 467, m. his all-perfect righteousness dehneated, 471, u. why compared in Scripture to the sun, 474, q, r. the fountain of all blessings to his people, 476, l. his throne, as man, established by trust in the Father, 477, m. his vow to build to Jehovah a spiritual temple, how fulfilled, 479, l. efficacy of his word and sacraments, 480, m. who were to constitute his church and family, 480, q. their employment and its consequences, 489, r. prophecy of Him as the Shepherd of our souls, 490, s. manner in which He acts as such, 481, x, y, z, a. the salvation of his followers, 499, h. described in his priestly and prophetical characters, 503, s. his sufficiency for the Christian soldier, 529, o. power of his voice exemplified, 540, a. blessings derived from Him, 547, g. to be blessed by all nations, 547, h. God intreated to have mercy on us for his sake, 567, u. the light and protection of his people, 567, y. their trust, 568, z. why his praise to be celebrated by Christians, 583, m. at all times the Mediator of his people, 588, z. his praises the end of the Church's petition, 602, 603, t, u. the perpetual Advocate of his people, 609, z. his sacerdotal office foretold, 610, e. his conversation and preaching of peace how received, 635, i. prayer why offered in his name, 642, z. relations in which He stands to his church, 656, g. his greatness and praises unbounded, 656, h. his character as the King and Saviour of men, 656, l, m; 657, n. the Divine favour procured for us by his death, 753, m. plain representation in Scripture concerning it, ibid. all spiritual benefits conferred by and for Him, 763, x. extent of his merits, ibid. his freedom from sin, 769, z. perfectly sinless, though He had the appetites and aversions of human nature, ibid.

CHRIST, meaning of being guilty of his body and blood, 305, y. his body and blood have a common efficacy, 313, c. his oblation of Himself once offered, to what errors opposed, 315, e. his body and blood, in what sense we partake of them, 315, g. his blood, in what sense said to be shed for many, 316, o. See Body and Blood of Christ.

"CHRIST his sake," an erroneous expression, corrected, 75, n.

Christian, his comfort under affliction, 505, h. his absence from the heavenly Jerusalem illustrated by David's from Sion, 505, m. short but complete rule of life for him, 569, f. petition fit for a devout one, 600, e. by what rule his engagements must be interpreted, 623, d. his confidence in danger, 635, l. commended, 635, m.

Christian faith, articles of, why belief in them proposed at baptism, 340, y. first precedent for the practice, ibid. how the profession was anciently made, 342, a.

Christian name, why conferred upon us at baptism, 252, g. obligations which follow upon it, ibid.

Christian religion, what sort of evidence it stands upon, 89, o. why not received by all persons, ibid.

Christians, how distinguished from the professors of other religions, 53, r. the graces that most become them, 114, k. several virtues fit to be cultivated by them, recommended, 133, c. manner in which the name was first taken by the disciples of Christ, 252, g. how they had been previously called, 251, g. in what their duty and happiness consist, 467, m. their source of comfort in affliction, 467, q. what manner of persons they ought to be, 481, 482, e. the one thing to be desired of them, 485, d. gratitude they owe for redemption, 553, i. admonished by an epitome of the Israelitish history, 555, z. their obligation to make known God's mercies, 597, l. what is their true wealth, 612, s. names and characters that belong to them, 660, n. how called on to rejoice, ibid.

Christians, primitive, their use of the songs of Moses, David, and the Prophets, 540, z.

Christians, nominal and pharisaical, judgment on them, 517, 518, n, o, p, q.

Christianity, practical, how summed up by the apostle, and the Church, 9, d. insufficiency of the bare name of it, 197, t.

Christmas, why so called, 91, u. what we then commemorate, ibid.

Christmas-day, how called by the ancients, 104, r.

Choir, psalms sung by the two parts of it, 646, s.

Church, origin and meaning of the word, lxxiii, m. different significations of the term, 259, n. word used in the New Testament in a more or less extended sense, 776, x.

Church, why called apostolic, 293, f.

Church universal, of whom composed, 430, n. See Catholick.

Church, excellent description of it, 40, t. power necessary to make it, ibid. her ministers and people, their duty, 614, u. its blessing diffused to its members, 640, e. why called a witness and keeper of holy writ, 778, g. governors of, their authority proved from Scripture, 777, b. in ritual matters, 777, c. and in delivering judgment concerning controverted points, 777, 778, d. how far to be submitted to, ibid. limitation of their authority, 778, e, f. their authority to be reverenced and obeyed, 792, r. consequences of opposing it, ibid. laws of, may be altered, according to circumstances, 793, s. but not without good cause, or full deliberation, ibid. her power in decreeing any thing limited by Scripture, 778, h.

Church, consideration of our Saviour's promise that the gates of hell shall not prevail against it, 259, n. her address to her King in the day of his trouble, 475, a. beauty of holiness in it, the most amiable object on earth, 484, y. the blessedness of, not duly esteemed, 492, u. her hope always in Messiah, 492, b. her comfort under affliction, 504, x. her pitiable state under persecution described, 508, e. the spouse of the Lamb, description of her, 510, z. address to her from God, 510, a. accession of Gentiles to her, 511, b. her denominations and beauty, 511, c. her attire, and attendants, 511, d. joy attending her union with Christ, 511, e. fruits of it, 511, f. her confidence in God, 511, i. ground of it, 511, k. praises of her Founder, 513, a. her beauty, 513, b. power of her enemies, 514, c. how defeated, 514, d. figurative representation of their defeat, 514, e. her confidence in God founded on the fulfilment of prophecies, 514, f. divine power manifested against her enemies, ground of joy to her, 514, i. rejected or favoured by God according to her conduct, 528, g. power engaged for her preservation, 533, y. her joy in the works of God, figuratively expressed, 534, c. her duty and delight to celebrate the truth of God, 545, p. enemies of, their punishment, 560, y. in captivity, her expectation of being restored, 561, g. her enemies why the enemies of God, 565, i. their union against her, 565, k. how called in prophetical language, 565, l. her dependence upon God for succour, 566, m. her expostulation and prayer to God, 577, n, o. fruit brought forth in, redounds to God's glory, 581, r. preserved to bless God, 615, p. may rest secure in the protection of God, 659, a. Christ's promise to it how to be understood, 776, x.

Church, Israelitish, her desire for the advent of Messiah, 535, p. her good wish not confined to herself, 535, q. her complaint of desertion, 550, i. and prayer for deliverance, 550, k.

Church, Gentile, her fruitfulness foretold, 613, b.

Church of Christ, in what its character lies, 259, n. not totally exempt from error, ibid. what makes a true church, ibid. comfort to it in dangerous days, ibid. why baptized persons are declared to be members of it, 346, q. scriptural precedents for the declaration, ibid.

Church of Christ, visible, how distinguished from the invisible, 776, n. used in a more limited sense, ibid. what things essential to it, 776, x.

Church of Christ, militant, how distinguished from triumphant, 299, w. an introduction of us to the Church triumphant, 529, s.

Church of Christ, militant, prayer for, by what things recommended, 298, t. contents of it, 298, 299, t, u. antiquity of its form, 299, u. how called in the Greek liturgies, ibid. its excellence, and arrangement, 299, w. remarkable alteration in the introduction to it, ibid. remark on its concluding "for Jesus Christ's sake," 300, b.

Church, Christian, its pre-eminence over all things, 538, k. flocking of the nations into her foreshewn, 539, t. assurance of God's provision for her security, 540, u. her state in the days of Constantine, 540, z. her duty to bless God for his mercies, 540, c. her privileges intimated under Jewish terms, 543, b. her continuation predicted, 543, c. has succeeded to the privileges of the Israelites, 553, c. admonished by the example of Israel, 562, m. built and beloved by God, 571, u. her extension predicted, 571, y. her stability, 571, a. her excellence and benefits, 572, c. divine power shewn towards her, 575, a. God reigns in it, as in the Jewish temple, 583, x. all men invited into it, 589, f. God's judgments manifested in the establishment of it, 597, u. called on to celebrate God's goodness and mercy, 617, d. in consequence of her redemption, 617, e. her triumph over her enemies, 617, g. her praises of God for it, 617, h. blessing of those who contribute to its prosperity, 636, u. prayer for its union and happiness, 636, x. motives for promoting its prosperity, 636, y. building up of it under the Gospel, 658, t. emphatical terms to express her sense of redemption, 648, h.

Church, Greek, a custom of it at Easter, 154, v. ancient custom in it at the Communion, 304, s.

Church of Rome, an useful and old practice laid aside by her, 6, o. her absolutions erroneous, 10, e. her practice in the Lord's Prayer corrected, 14, q. her erroneous practices with respect to the reading of the Scriptures, 20, k. her practice of reading the Scriptures and mixing them with legendary stories condemned, xxix, e, f. her practice of locking up the Scriptures and having common prayer in an unknown tongue how corrected, xxx, r. evil consequence of her praying in an unknown tongue, 15, u. her profane additions to the Christian faith, 27, g. deficiency of her practice in saying the Creed, 29, h. not the catholick church, 31, p. her presumption in calling herself so, ibid. her impiety and profaneness in worshipping the blessed Virgin, 45, e. her invocation of saints in the Litany, 60, e; 61, g. an ancient prayer corrupted by her, 69, d. her business during the Carnival, 122, b. her adoption of the story of the assumption of the blessed Virgin condemned, 243, u. her prayers for the dead an unwarranted addition to the Communion office, 300, a. her intercession through the merits of the Virgin and other saints, 300, b. her deceitful practice at the consecration of the elements, 313, d. her superstitious additions to the prayer of consecration, 314, c. her false doctrine about the sacrificing of Christ, ibid. her elevation of the elements idolatrous, 315, 316, k. a novel practice, ibid. her superstitious use of the wafer at the Communion, 316, l. her corrupt practice of administering the Communion, 317, r. a great defect in her mass book, 319, d. her practice of solitary masses, disallowed by the Church of England, 326, e. not agreeable to primitive practice, ibid. her innovation with respect to the use of wafers in the Communion, 327, g. her reservation of the elements superstitious and profane, 327, i. her excommunication of us for not reserving them, ibid. reformation of her superstitious practices at baptism, 343, c; 344, h. her error in supposing the impossibility of salvation without baptism, 354, g. her unjustifiable practice thereupon, 355, g. her neglect of religious instruction, 366, t. her doctrine of the seven sacraments examined, 376, l. her uncharitable judgment of those who differ from her about them, 376, l. her practices with respect to the water in baptism, 378, t. her erroneous belief of the bodily presence of Christ in the Sacrament, 381, i. and her idolatrous practice founded on it, ibid. and unchristian cruelty, ibid. her complaint of the mischief done by Protestant Catechisms, 383, r. departs from the apostolical form of Confirmation, 386, a. omits the apostolical ceremony of administering Confirmation, and introduces others of her own, 392, m. her error about extreme unction, 409, l. her erroneous forms for examining the faith of the sick, 413, x. her doctrine of meriting heaven by almsgiving, 415, e. her injunctions with respect to auricular confession, 415, f. and her condemnation of those who differ from her about it, ibid. her corruptions with respect to the absolution of the sick, 416, g. and her uncharitable declaration on the subject, ibid. and her arrogance, ibid. her vain and ridiculous ceremonies at funerals, 430, l. unreasonable in her to commend the souls of the deceased to God, 431, p. objections to her form of burial of the dead, 432, u. her corrupt abuse of the ancient discipline of the Church, 439, r. her positive absolution to all in a mixed assembly, 444, b. her inconvenient use of the Psalms, 448. maintains seven distinct orders of ministers, 671, a. her ordinations allowed by the Church of England, 674, g. her pride and uncharitableness in rejecting our orders, ibid. her bold and novel declaration concerning the Apocrypha, 688, q. her substitution of legends for Scripture, 688, r. gave the cup to the people till of late time, 689, v. her practice with respect to celibacy contrary to Scripture and primitive usages, 690, e. places the Scriptures on a level with traditions, 696, a. her frivolous and superstitious ceremonies in the consecration of bishops, 709, s. her improper innovations in the consecration service, 714, i. her opinion of the insufficiency of Scripture, 755, s. her admission of articles of faith which are not founded on Scripture erroneous and tyrannical, 756, u. main ground of justifying our separation from her, ibid. receives into the canon the Apocryphal books, 757, y. her admission of the Apocrypha into the canon a main point of difference with the Church of England, 758, b. her doctrine concerning original sin contrary to Scripture, 762, t. her arrogant doctrine of the merit of good works, 764, f. its novelty, ibid. opposed to Scripture and antiquity, ibid. her opinion concerning the goodness of works, 765, m. her calumny against the protestants at the Reformation, 766, n. her doctrine of merit of congruity unscriptural, 767, r. her doctrine of works of supererogation not Scriptural, 768, u. her arrogance and impiety in maintaining it, 768, x. her unscriptural distinction between mortal and venial sins, 770, d. considers herself the only Christian Church, 776, x. her claim to infallibility denied, 776, y. proofs that she has erred both in manner of living and in matters of faith, 776, z. her monstrous doctrine of infallibility why reprobated, ibid. her fallibility, 779, l. her formal decree concerning purgatory, &c. when made, 779, n. her doctrine concerning purgatory stated and refuted, 779, o. what her doctrine concerning indulgences is, 780, p. her doctrine concerning the worshipping of images, 781, q. and of relicks, 781, r. her doctrine and practice concerning the invocation of saints, 782, s. her manner of performing divine service indefensible, 783, a. her doctrine of the seven sacraments refuted, 784, e, f. her practice of elevating the host condemned, 784, g. her erroneous doctrine concerning the partaking of the Lord's Supper, 785, i. offence given by the vices of her clergy at the Reformation, 785, l. her doctrine of transubstantiation condemned, 787, t. her superstitious practices with respect to the sacramental elements, 788, x. a. her opinions concerning the mechanical operation of the Communion adverted to, 789, b. contrary to Scripture, 789, c. her practice of denying the cup to the laity, a presumptuous departure from Christ's ordinance, 790, e. her doctrine and practice with respect to the sacrifices of masses, 791, i, k. why called blasphemous fables and dangerous deceits, 791, k. her ceremonies inconsistent with Christian simplicity and superstitious, 793, s.

Church of England, her wisdom and piety in selecting proper titles of God, 7, r. her wisdom and moderation with respect to the remission of sins, 10, e. a peculiar privilege granted by her to the people, 15, u. reads more of Scripture than any other congregation, 21, l. her wisdom with respect to articles of faith, 27, g. her opinion of ceremonies agreeable to that of the ancient and of Protestant churches, xxxii. u. a sound member of the catholick church, 31, p. order and variety of the principal parts of her daily service, 33, s. her service not popish, 37, f. famous for her loyalty, 39, p. does not recommend aggrandizement and conquest, 40, r. manner in which she borrows from the church of Rome, 69, d. why not expressly mentioned in our prayers, 74, m. her care in providing what is necessary to men's salvation, 84, c. her services, calculated to infuse religious joy, 86, h. her seasonable and wise use of a passage from St. Paul in the blessing in the Communion service, 90, r. singular privilege allowed to her lay-members, 201, b. excellence of her publick formularies, ibid. her departure from a superstitious form of the papists, 314, c. her scriptural reformation of a popish false doctrine, ibid. her rejection of an idolatrous custom of the Roman Catholicks, 315, 316, k. her care in the composition of all her services, 336, c. her care for the religious education of children, 340, x. her moderation in the direction she gives about the way of administering baptism, 345, n. her attachment to primitive antiquity, united to fear of superstition, 347, r. her law and opinion concerning lay baptism, 354, g. her caution and temper in the framing of the Catechism, 366, l. her care in understanding the true doctrine of Scripture about the Sacrament, 381, i. her care for the instruction of her members, 387, c. her prudence in restoring the primitive ceremony of Confirmation, 392, m. her wisdom and piety in preventing unlawful marriages, 399, i. how she differs from the Romish church about confession, 415, f. her wisdom and moderation with respect to the absolution of the sick, 416, g. how she differs therein from the Romanists, ibid. agrees with the ancient church in making the Burial service eucharistical, 428, i. rejects the ridiculous ceremonies prescribed by the Roman office at funerals, 430, l. as also prayers for the dead, 430, m. her peculiar care in instructing and assisting us in our duty, 436, k. her orders of ministers, explained and justified, 671, a, b. her happiness in having a true canonical ministry, 674, f. her ministers generally well qualified for their office, 678, y. an integral part of the constitution, 685, l. her care to prevent improper persons from entering into holy orders, 685, n. validity of her orders, 687, p. her appointment of stationary ministers valuable, 688, s. her admirable moderation with respect to Scripture and tradition, 699, a. her extraordinary care for the goodness and fidelity of her clergy, 702, h. in what things she has left the church of Rome, 714, i. her moderation with respect to some prevailing disputes, 765, i. those who rebel against her guilty of schism, 783, y. instance of her eminent moderation, 787, q. has restored the Lord's supper to its primitive simplicity, 789, a. how far she retains the ceremonies of the church of Rome, 793, s.

Church, persons should come thither in good time, 2, b. necessity of our being humble and fervent there, 5, i. irreverence of coming late thither, 7, p. reasons for coming thither in good time, 14, p. how we should behave in it, considering it as the house of God, 201, b. how as the house of prayer, ibid. a prayer proper to be said on coming into it, 325, z.

Church musick, ancient rules for it in England, xxx. p. want of regulations concerning it, ibid.

Church and State indissolubly united by the constitution of the realm, 73, i. proof of it, ibid.

Church yards, when first made, 425, z. who are intitled to burial there, ibid.

Church porch, honour to be buried there in ancient times, 425, z.

Churches, Greek and Latin, schism between them, the cause of it, 292, e.

Churches, foreign, without bishops, remarks on their condition, 673, f.

Churches, national, their independent authority maintained, 793, s. examples of the exercise of it, ibid.

Churches, patriarchal, three several ones specified as such, 776, x. neither of them free from error, ibid.

Churches and kingdoms, from what sources their calamities flow, 528, h.

Churches, bodies when first suffered to be buried in them, 425, z. early provisions on the subject, ibid. general law as to burying there, ibid. exceptions to it. ibid.

Churching of women, grounds of it, 435, d. original of it, ibid. its universality and antiquity in the Church, ibid. how practised in the East, ibid.

Churching of women, office of it, its former title, why altered, 435, d. when to be performed, 435, 436, e. why to be performed in the church, 436, f. absurdity of it in a private house, ibid. disobedient to the Church, and affronting to God, ibid. in what part of the church to be performed, 436, h; 438, q. parts of which it consists, 436, i. modelled by St. Paul's rule, 437, o.

Circumcision, what represented as necessary, by this rite, 102, p. by whom the spiritual intent of the law concerning it is fulfilled, ibid.

Circumspection, necessity and excellency of it, 219, i.

Clement, St., account of him, lix.

Clergy, the vilifying of them a sure mark of profligacy, 162, i. to be respected on account of their office, 163, i.

Clergy, rules by which they may govern themselves, 690, d. what they are obliged to perform and avoid, ibid. rules relating to their families, 690, e. not obliged to a single life, ibid. their right to marry much canvassed at the Reformation, 791, l. when first forbidden, ibid. bad effects of the prohibition, ibid. Scriptural arguments for the right, ibid. what they are bound to by subscribing the Thirty-nine Articles, 799. See Minister.

Clergy, their want of learning, at and soon after the Reformation, 205, l.

Clerk, parish, but once mentioned in the Common Prayer Book, 34, y; 402, x. a customary office, intent of it, 402, x. not meant to supersede the congregation, ibid.

Clerks, what persons meant by the term, 34, y. who meant by them, 402, x. their situation before the Reformation, ibid.

Collect, second at Morning Prayer, whence taken, 37, h. exposition of it, ibid.

Collect, third at Morning Prayer, whence taken, 38, l. purport of it, 38, k. propriety of its commencement, 38, l.

Collect, second at Evening Prayer, whence taken, 48, k, exposition of it, ibid.

Collect, third at Evening Prayer, peculiar and proper to the evening, 48, l. whence taken, 49, l. exposition of it, ibid.

Collect, for the day, only one ought to be used, lxiv. d. exceptions specified, ibid.

Collect, for Easter Even, grammatical inaccuracy in it, 153, r.

Collect, for 12th Sunday after Trinity, particular expression in it explained and justified, 203, g.

Collect, for St. John Baptist's day, inaccuracy in the wording of it, 254, i.

Collect, at the Communion Service, fitness of its situation, 281, a. its antiquity, ibid. exposition of it, ibid. propriety of its commencement, 282, b.

Collect, for safety in all worldly changes, 323, q. what we beg of God in it, ibid.

Collect, for the preservation of our souls and bodies, 323, q. upon what ground, 324, u. when to be fitly used, ibid.

Collect, for a blessing on God's word, 323, q. when to be most fitly used, 324, x. what it prays for, ibid.

Collect, for excusing the defects of our former prayers, 323, q. whence taken, 325, z. when most proper to be used, ibid. expressions in it explained, 325, a, b.

Collect, for direction and success in all our undertakings, 323, q. what it teaches us to pray for, 325, y. when especially seasonable, ibid. its excellent exposition of two controverted doctrines, ibid.

Collect, for the acceptance of all the rest of our supplications, 323, q. its contents, 325, c. when properly used, ibid.

Collect, first at Baptism, parts of which it consists, 337, m. exposition of them, ibid.

Collect, second at Baptism, what we request in it, 338, p. its solemn invocation, ibid. expressions in it explained, 338, q, r, s.

Collect, in the Confirmation service, whence taken, 390, h. what it prays for, ibid. principle on which composed, ibid. a commemoration of past mercy, and petition for increase of it, 390, i.

Collect, towards the end of the Confirmation service, its excellence and import, 393, r.

Collect, after the Absolution in the Visitation of the Sick, its purport, 416, i. and antiquity, ibid.

Collect, in the Burial service, why so called, 433, y. peculiar design and excellence of it, ibid. its contents, ibid.

Collect, in the Churching of Women, an improvement on the old Western form, 437, p.

Collect, at the conclusion of the Ordering of Priests, its contents and suitableness, 707, r.

Collect, in the Ordering of Deacons, remarks on it, 683, f, g, h.

Collect, in the Consecration service, its propriety and contents, 716, 717, p.

Collects, why so called, 36, e. general form of them, ibid. their use, ibid. their authors and antiquity, ibid. the object of them, ibid. their form and proportion, ibid. the matter of them, ibid. propriety of their prefaces, 37, i. and of their conclusions, ibid.

Collects, for peace and grace, what they comprise, 38, m. why they formerly closed the service, ibid. should be used by all persons every day, 38, m.

Collects, for Evening Prayer, their resemblance to those in the Morning, 48, i.
Collects, the first for the day, usual subject of them, 36, f. institution of them, 37, f. whence derived, ibid. general character of them, 80, b. their antiquity, ibid. how altered in our Liturgy, ibid. table of them, noting their origin, &c., 80, 81, b. reduced under their proper heads, 80—82, b.
Collects, for the Sundays after Trinity, general view of them, 184, s.
Collects, for the King, in the Communion service, agreeable to St. Paul's command, 286, h. and to the primitive practice, ibid. their convenient situation, ibid. exposition of the former one, ibid. reasons for preferring the former of the two, 287, u. vindication of it against an objection, ibid. propriety of the petitions in the latter, ibid.
Collects, at the end of the Communion service, why added, 323, q. their plainness and comprehensiveness, ibid. on what occasions they may be used, ibid. what meant by the direction that they are to be said after the Offertory, 324, r.
Collects, in the office of Baptism, after the interrogatories, their subjects stated, 343, c. their requests and mutual connexion, 343, d.
Collects, in the Visitation of the Sick, account of them, 411, p, q, r, s.
Collects, in the Commination, by whom to be said, 444, b. their fitness, ibid.; 444, c.
Collects, at the end of the Ordering of Deacons, agreeable to ancient offices, 693, o.
Collect, Epistle, and Gospel, for a Sunday, why appointed to serve all the week after, xxxv. c.
Comber, Dean, his character of the Liturgy, xi. xii.
Comforter, conditions requisite for our receiving Him, 168, t. three senses of the original word, 173, d.
Comfort, a source of, in days of heresy and profaneness, 259, n.
Comforts, heavenly, supply the want of earthly ones, 485, g.
Commandment, the sixth, extent of it, 194, u.
Commandments, the two great, both necessary to be observed, 216, d. motives for observing them, ibid.
Commandments, Ten, when first introduced into our service, 282, e. their obligation upon Christians, ibid. their comprehensiveness, ibid. the reading of them considered with respect to the Holy Communion, ibid. and to their general use, ibid. why we pray to God after each of them, 283, e. how to be received, 283, f. fitness of the prayer for mercy accompanying them, ibid. serious attention due to this part of the office, ibid. propriety of the order for inserting them in our Liturgy, ibid. and of the place which they occupy, ibid. paraphrase on them, 283, g. binding on all mankind, 372, b. obligation of them carried farther by the Gospel, ibid. rules for fully comprehending them, ibid. their comprehensiveness, ibid. reasons why the Jews were required to observe them, 373, c. more forcible in their application to Christians, ibid. why divided into two tables, 373, d. so divided by our Saviour, ibid.
Commandments of God, obedience to, why required to be promised at baptism, 340, 341, y. all of them to be observed, 619, u. we must persevere in the way of them, 622, q. all of them observed by his children, 631, y.
Commemorations, what meant by them, xxix. i.
Commination, reason of appointing this office, 439, r. why appointed to be read on other days besides Ash-Wednesday, ibid. what those days formerly were, ibid. parts of it sometimes directed to be used, 440, r. in what place to be read, 440, s. preface to it, its import, 440, t. improperly traduced and derided, 441, y. founded on God's command, ibid. a declaration of assent to the truth of God's word, ibid. character of the sins enumerated in it, ibid.
Commissary, his office, xviii. h. how it differs from that of Chancellor, ibid.
Common prayer, Christ's promise to be present at it, 41, b. practical inference therefrom, ibid.
Common Prayer, Book of, its original, v. advances made towards it in King Henry the Eighth's time, ibid. compiled in King Edward the Sixth's, vi. alterations subsequently made in that reign, ibid. abolished by Queen Mary, vii. revived by Elizabeth, ibid. persons employed in compiling and reviewing it, vi.—ix. additions made in it, in King James's time, viii. reviewed in King Charles the Second's time, ibid. authority on which it stands, x. two excellent and just characters of it, x.—xii. libels written against it illegal, xvii. d. why so called, 36, e; 41, a. how it began in King Edward's first book, 2, a. unjustly found fault with for using the word "regeneration" in its ancient sense, 349, n. See Book of Common Prayer.
Common Prayer, Scotch Book of, alterations made in it, viii.
Common supplications, meaning of the phrase, 41, a.
Communion, frequency of its administration in the primitive times, 277, n. evidence of the wish of our Church on the subject, ibid. different forms of administering it, ibid. fitness of the names by which the Church describes it, 278, o. anxiety of the Church for its frequent administration, ibid. why persons are to signify their names to the minister, before partaking, 278, p. what persons unqualified to partake, ibid. discipline of the Church at different times concerning it, 278, q. difference in the rubricks requiring notice to be given of it, 293, h. occasion of the difference, ibid. utility of giving warning of it, 300, e. prudence and necessity of the exhortations, ibid. their suitableness, ibid. previous preparation anciently inculcated, 302, l. not to be received by obstinate sinners, 302, m. care of the ancient Church as well as of our own in this respect, ibid. its excellency and danger, 301, g. result of considering both, ibid. duties consequent thereupon, 301, 302, i. why not to be received till after baptism, 301, f. why requisite ever after, ibid. testimony of the ancients to its good effects, 301, g. benefits of it explained, 305, u. asserted by our Saviour and St. Paul, ibid. primitive testimony to them, ibid. sin and danger of neglecting it, 304, r. means of remedying them, ibid. danger of it considered and stated, 305, x. how incurred, ibid. how to be avoided, ibid. judgment of ourselves not to be deferred till then, 306, z. why thankfulness particularly required at it, 306, a. grounds and character of the thankfulness required, ibid. its efficacy in uniting sincere communicants to their Lord, 306, b. to be celebrated with thanksgiving, 310, t. not received by primitive Christians on days of humiliation, ibid. meditations after receiving it recommended, 318, u. and subjects of prayer suggested, 318, y. attention paid to it in the primitive church, 325, d. why ordered by ancient canons to be received three times a year, ibid. care of our Church for its frequent administrations, 326, d; 326, f. why three at least required to receive it with the priest, 326, e. the receiving of it not to be restricted to three times a year, 327, k. why persons who have not received it, not allowed to answer for children at baptism, 333, l. why to be received by new married persons, 407, k. practice of all churches to celebrate it at ordinations, 692, n. propriety of it, ibid. See Lord's Supper.
Communion, character and description of the form in our Church, 277, n. acknowledgment of our unworthiness to partake in it, 313, c. form taken from ancient liturgies, ibid. excellence of it, ibid. duty of attending to it, ibid. passage in it vindicated, ibid. not said in what form of words the minister is to receive it, 316, p. common to the people with the priest, 317, q. why to be delivered by the minister to each communicant, 316, p. and to the clergy first, ibid. primitive custom of delivering it into the hands of the people, 317, r. restored at the Reformation, ibid. propriety of receiving it kneeling, 317, s. form of words in which it is administered, of what particulars it consists, 317, t. whence taken, ibid. variations in our different Common Prayer Books, 318, t.
Communion service, always, if practicable, to be read from the table, 280, y. why so ordered by the Church, ibid. should always be read in the chancel, lxxiii. l. admirable contrivance and beautiful order of it, 323, p. reasons of the order for reading part of it, though there be no communion, 326, d. extremely proper at ordinations, 683, d.
Communion of the Sick, origin of the office, 420, q. reasons for the use of it, ibid. provisions of the Church in it, ibid. doctrine of the Church when the sick are prevented from receiving it, 421, s.
Communion, ecclesiastical and lay, difference between them, 316, p.
Communion of saints, not to be forsaken, 625, s.

Communions, more than one formerly on Christmas-day, 91, n. and on Easter-day, 155, r.
Council of Trent, dates of its meetings, 778. k.
Councils, general, what they are, 778, i. why they cannot be called together without permission of princes, 778, k. time of the four first general ones, ibid. number of general councils not agreed on, ibid. proofs of their fallibility, 778, l. four first, why received by our Church, 779, m. what they decided, ibid.
Community of goods, not required by the Gospel, 797, m. not just and equitable, 798, m. when first maintained, 798, n.
Comparisons, different ways in which introduced by the sacred writers, 514, e.
Complaints, frequently intermixed in the Psalms with thanksgivings, 452, t.
Conception of the blessed Virgin Mary, account of day, lxi.
Consecration and ordination, book of, remark on the wording of the Article that relates to it, 795, a.
Concupiscence, remarks on its being said to have the nature of sin, 762, v.
"Conies," what animal intended by them, 594, z.
Confession of sins, its necessity inforced in Scripture, 3, e. a duty to God, ibid. why it should be practised, 4, f. with what frame of heart, ibid. ineffectual without reformation, ibid. frequency with which it should be practised, 4, h. benefits of it, ibid. why all persons invited to join in it, 5, l. the proper introduction to prayer, 6, n. practice of it in the primitive church, ibid. and among Christians in general, ibid. the condition on which we pray for forgiveness, 8, a. not a meritorious title to it, ibid. sincerity of, how to be judged of, 9, d. a proper introduction to divine worship, ibid. its antiquity and utility, 415, f. provisions of our Church and of the church of Rome concerning it, ibid. advantages of it, 490, d. g. its utility and fitness, 494, u.
Confession, general, why so called, 6, n. its comprehensiveness, ibid. better than if it had been more particular, ibid. parts of which it consists, ibid. why to be said by the whole congregation, 6, o. caution to the minister and congregation about it, 6, 7, p. revived in our Church at the Reformation, 6, o. why repeated by every worshipper, 231, z.
Confession, general, at the Communion service, humility of gesture and voice especially proper in it, 307, f. agreeable to the practice of the ancient church, 307, g. reasonableness of it, ibid. fitness of the attributes with which it addresses God, 303, i. remarks on several expressions in it, 303, k—m. its excellence, 303, n. by whom composed, ibid.
Confession of Christ, to be added to faith in Him, 231, e.
Confessions of faith, why published by the churches which separated from that of Rome, 749, a.
Confidence, wherein to be reposed, 476, d.
Confirmation, nature of the rite, 178, m. accompanied with prayer and imposition of hands, 179, m. persons concerned in it, ibid. blessings conveyed by it, ibid. to be greatly esteemed and valued, ibid. instruction in the principles of religion necessary before it, 366, u. different opinions of it by the Churches of England and of Rome, 376, l. what meant by it, 384, t. what the competent age for it, ibid. what required in order to it, ibid. why a surety required to attend it, 384, u. when persons should be confirmed, 384, x. advantages of its being duly administered, 384, y. derived from the practice of the apostles, 385, z. why reserved to bishops, ibid. the custom of the primitive church, 386, a. and of other episcopal churches, ibid. at what age formerly allowed, 387, b. present restriction, ibid. previous instruction requisite to it, 387, c. children not to be brought to it too early, ibid. whether to be ministered to those who have received the Lord's supper without it, ibid. not to be repeated, ibid. so called on two accounts, 389, f. a ratification of the baptismal vow, 388, d. why persons are then called on to ratify it, ibid. importance of their taking it on themselves, ibid. fitness and utility of taking it as the office prescribes, 388, d. necessity of the persons confirmed doing their own part, 389, e. exposition of the answer made by them, ibid. duties to which it pledges them, ibid. its solemnity, ibid. anciently called "the laying on of hands," 391, m. on what the continuance of the blessing pronounced in it depends, 393, t. admonition thereupon, ibid. anciently required to precede the eucharist, 394, u. when persons are ready for it, 394, x.
Confirmation, order of, its contents, 386, a. persons engaged in it, ibid. their several parts, ibid. exhortation to the due administration and reception of it, 387, a. preface to it why so used, instead of being left as a rubrick, 387, c. uses of it, ibid. duty of the confirmed persons during the ceremony, 392, n. restored to its primitive simplicity by our Reformers, 392, p. contents of the concluding part of it, 392, q.
Congregation, prayers of, why desired at the ordering of priests, 703, j. their duty thereupon, 703, k.
Congregation, the great, to what opposed, 503, s.
Consanguinity, or affinity, when an impediment to marriage, 796, b. table of, on what founded, ibid.
Conscience, joys of it, preferable to worldly advantages, 633, u.
Consecration, prayer of, in the Communion service, where to be said, 313, d. why to be said standing, ibid. special propriety of it, 314, e. usual in all churches, ibid. suitableness of our form, ibid. parts of which it consists, ibid. antiquity and plainness of it, ibid. explanation of a phrase in it, ibid. words of our Saviour's institution, why introduced into it, 315, h.
Consecration of the elements, to what words to be ascribed, 314, e.
Constantine the Great, singular honour shewn him at his death, 425, z. state of the church in his days, 540, z.
Contemplation, noblest subjects of, 512, l.
Consubstantiation, doctrine of, its origin, 787, t. by whom maintained, ibid. opinions of different Reformers about it, 788, t.
Conversion or repentance, not the same as regeneration, 338, r.
Coroners, whether their warrant be decisive for reading the Burial service over persons who died by their own hands, 424, x. strictures on their practice in that particular, ibid. mistaken views on which they act, ibid.
Capital punishments, precedents for, in the Mosaick law, 797, i. not superseded under the Gospel, ibid. recognized by it, ibid.
Corporal, meaning of the name, 318, a. its institution and design, ibid.
Corruption, original, an article in the confession of sin, 8, l. in what the guilt of it consists, ibid. how set forth, 464, s. truth and practical use of the doctrine, 519, c.
Country, God introduces changes into one for reward or punishment, 605, e. an image of changes in the Church, ibid.
Covenant between the Father and Christ, several parts of which it consisted, how fulfilled, 451, m.
Covenant of God with Israel, why strictly it imported temporal blessings only, 759, f. higher blessings understood under it, ibid.
Covenant of grace, constant reliance of the Church upon it, 551, q. a motive to thanksgiving, 584, q.
Covenant, Christian, blessings of, why they cannot be had by nature, 337, i.
Covenant, vengeance no less than salvation, a part of it, 584, t.
Covenants, legal and evangelical, difference between them, 129, r.
Covenants made by God with Abraham, David, &c., in what founded, 574, s.
Covetousness, its danger exemplified, 135, a.
Cranmer, Archbishop, his concern in the English Reformation, vi. his efforts to correct the service of the Church, xxxi. r. supposed author of the first book of Homilies, 294, l. quoted, 764, c.
Created things, consequence of a true sense of their vanity, 501, e.
Creation, inanimate, called upon to praise God, 587, s.
Creator, to consider God as such, an argument of trust and obedience, 626, f. all creation called upon to glorify Him, 659, c.
Creatures, lifeless, passions and actions figuratively ascribed to them, 534, b. dependence of all upon God, 596, f.

Creed, what meant by it, 760, h.
Creed, Apostles', why placed, as it is, in the daily service, 27, g. why so called, ibid. probably not framed by the apostles, ibid. in what respect it deserves the name, ibid. agreeable to a more ancient form, ibid. composure of it gradual, ibid. veneration with which it has been received in all ages, ibid. fitness of its place in the Liturgy, ibid. benefits to be received by the daily use of it, 28, g. rules to be observed in the use of it, ibid. why repeated standing, 29, i. why omitted when the Athanasian Creed is read, 29, k. paraphrase on it, 29, 30, l. principle on which it proceeds, 31, o. its connexion with practice, 32, r. sum of its sixth article, 171, z. general parts of which it consists, 370, r. their mutual connexion, 371, s, t, u. x. a good rule of faith for the examination of the sick, 413, x. ancient testimonies to it, ibid. its use among foreign Protestants, ibid.
Creed of St. Athanasius, why appointed to be said on the days named in the rubrick, 50, m. whence framed and by whom, 50, n. its antiquity and use in the Church, ibid. design of the author of it, ibid. a standard of the true faith, 50, n. heresies condemned by it, ibid. on what authority received, 51, n. its early and general reception, ibid. rule for examining the doctrine of it, ibid. its doctrines frequently asserted in the Common Prayer Book, ibid. approved by dissenters, ibid. the doctrine of it the doctrine of the Gospel and of the universal church, ibid. expressions in it not properly excepted against, ibid. several of them explained, ibid. condemnation contained in it compared with our Saviour's words, and interpreted, 51, 52, n. both reasonable and Scriptural, ibid. use of retaining such clauses, and the duty of retaining them, ibid. why in the damnatory clauses it does not notice cases of exception, 52, p. in what respect it differs from other creeds, 54, t. the several repetitions in it justified, ibid. and its statements as to the substance and Persons of the Godhead, 54, t. its doctrine agreeable to the plain and literal sense of Scripture, ibid. several sentences in it have a view to some error or heresy, 55, x. general inference from those sentences, ibid. to what the condemnatory clauses belong, ibid. its doctrine supported by the several heresies in their turn, 55, 56, x. why it states at large the doctrine of the incarnation, 56, z. exposition of its doctrine in that respect, ibid. more practical articles of it, 57, b. its utility to the unlearned, 58, c. to the publick at large, ibid. and to the ministry, ibid. value in which it should be held, ibid. ought not to be surrendered, ibid. necessary to be retained, 59, c.
Creed, Nicene, why so called, 289, t. why called also Constantinopolitan, 289, u. when established in the Church, ibid. why placed after the Gospel, ibid. and before the Communion, ibid. the repetition of it a confession of faith in the Holy Trinity, 290, v. and a solemn act of worship, ibid. paraphrase on it, 290, y. why it asserts belief "in one God," 291, z. why "in one Lord, Jesus Christ," 291, a. wherein fuller than the Apostles', ibid. why additional articles were introduced into it, ibid. proofs of the doctrine alleged in it concerning Christ, 291, b. ascribes the making of all things to the Son, 292, c. its meaning in this respect sometimes mistaken, ibid. article concerning the eternity of Christ's kingdom, when and why added, 292, d. scriptural authority for its doctrine concerning the Holy Ghost, 292, e. and explanation of it, ibid. account of the clause concerning the procession of the Holy Ghost, ibid. remark on the articles, one Catholick and Apostolic Church, 293, f. and one Baptism, ibid.
Creeds, their use and origin, 27, g. how denominated in Scripture, ibid. meaning of the name, ibid. ancient, their form and substance, ibid. probably derived from the apostles, ibid. on what authority they rest, ibid. why drawn up and published, 50, n. why terms not strictly Scriptural introduced into them, ibid. damnatory clauses in, in what light to be considered, 57, c. their utility, 58, c. in what light to be regarded, 239, t. origin of, 749, a. their design, ibid. respect, on what account due to them, 760, m. guilt of those who do not believe them, yet subscribe the Articles, ibid. principles upon which framed, 778, d.
Creeds, the three used in our Church, agreement among them, 289, t. why used as respectively appointed, ibid.
Crispin, account of him, lvii.
Cross, sign of, why baptized persons signed with it, 346, r. an ancient practice, ibid. the sacrament perfect without it, ibid. care of the Church to avoid any superstitious understanding of it, 347, r. the practice analogous to other ancient rites, ibid. true sense and intention of the Church in appointing it, ibid. why assumed by the ancient Christians, 347, s. and why retained by us, ibid. an inoffensive ceremony, and free from all just objection, ibid.
Cup, at the Lord's supper, how administered when more than one minister are present, 318, x.
Cup, why withheld by the Romanists from the laity, 317, r. given by the apostles to the laity, 381, g. practice of denying it to the laity, its origin, 789, e. gradually established, ibid. and when, 790, e. a departure from the primitive command of Christ, ibid. established in the church of Rome, 789, e. corrected by all the reformed churches, ibid. provisions of our Church about it, ibid. special reasons against it, 790, f. its visible contrariety to the Gospel, and injury to the church of Rome, ibid.
Cup, figurative use of, in Scripture, 462, d.
"Cup, portion of," what meant by it, 467, n.
"Cup of salvation," among the Jews twofold, 616, u. applied to Christians, ibid.
Curate, ambiguity of the word, 689, c.
Curates, how the word is used in the Liturgy, 40, t. why so called with respect to bishops, 300, y.
Curses, the practice of publickly repeating them, a divine institution, 440, x. fitness and utility of so doing, ibid. why the people required to answer "Amen" to them, 440, y.
Cyprian, St., account of him, lv.

D.

Dalmanutha, parts of, answer to coasts of Magdala, 195, o.
Damnation, what the word means in St. Paul, and in the Communion Service, 305, x. remarks on the use of the expression in the Communion Service, 785, k.
Damnation, eternal, all impenitent sinners to expect it, whether they come to the Communion or not, 305, x.
Dangers, examples to encourage us under, 652, n. "of the enemy," explanation of the phrase, 411, r. God our defence in them, 481, y.
Daniel in Babylon, his example recommended, 554, n. effects of his devotion, 523, l.
Daughter, signification of the word applied to a city or nation, 459, a.
David, his exaltation typical of Christ's, 451, g. his forlorn condition typical of Christ's, 452, s. in what sense his claims to righteousness to be understood, 471, u. his patience under reproaches a type of Christ, 500, s. inspired by the Divine Spirit to declare the tidings of salvation, 509, o. history of, lessons that it teaches, 520, m. his gratitude for deliverance from danger an example to Christians, 522, b. his exultation on the fulfilment of a previous prophecy concerning him, 529, k. his dominion over the tribes of Israel, 529, l. his reduction of the neighbouring nations, how expressed, 529, m. victories promised to him, figurative of Christ's, 539, p. why he requests to be preserved in his old age, 545, n. what his call to a throne teacheth us, 560, u. what we learn from his conduct after, ibid. glorious things spoken of him prophetical of Messiah, 574, q. God's covenant with him how fulfilled, 574, s. covenant with him how most eminently completed, 575, c. how God kept his covenant with him, 576, h. surety of it, 576, i, k. his solicitude for the tabernacle and service of God, 642, u.
David, Psalm composed by him when seated on the throne of Israel, 451, g. when he fled from Absalom, 452, s; 453, a. in persecution, 454, i. in some special humiliation, 455, s. under the malicious aspersions of a slanderer, 456, y. in commemoration of God's goodness, 457, i. to celebrate his victories, 458, q. under oppression, 460, f. under Saul's persecutions, 462, x. on the malice of men and truth of God, 562, f. in great distress, 463, n. in Absalom's rebellion, 464, t. on his restitution to the ark and tabernacle, 465, d. in the person of our Lord, 466, i. under Saul's persecution, 468, n. on his deliverance from Saul, 469, k. to be used on occasions of danger, 475, z. after his victories, which were typical of Christ's, 476, f. when the ark was brought to the house of Obed Edom, 481, b. in distress, 482, h. in vindication of his integrity, 483, r. in distress, when excluded from God's publick service, 484, a. in distress, 486, m. after some extraordinary tempest, 486, r. on revisiting the sanctuary after sickness, 487, b. on occasion of some special benefit, 491, m. in thanksgiving for some signal deliverance, 492, c. under affliction, 494, o. in reflection on his sincerity during distress, 496, f. with a design of persuading men to submit to God's dispensations, 496, n. under great affliction, 499, i. in sickness or trouble, 501, y. when driven by Absalom from Jerusalem, 505, i. when driven by Absalom's rebellion from Jerusalem, 506, u. by him or Solomon, on some occasion of removing the ark, 512, o. by him on removing the ark, 516, g. after his guilt in the affair of Uriah, 518, y. on occasion of his persecution by Doeg, the Edomite, 520, q. after coming to the throne, and when reducing the adjacent countries, 528, f. on occasion of escaping from his house, when watched by Saul, 527, r. in contemplation of Saul and his evil counsellors, 526, h. on escaping from Saul at Engedi, 525, y. in danger with the Philistines, 524, 525, q. when betrayed by the Ziphites, 521, y. on occasion of Absalom's rebellion, 522, c. when driven into exile, 529, q. in the wilderness of Judah, 531, f. complaining of his enemies, and foretelling God's judgments upon them, 532, n. in commemoration of divine Providence, 533, s. in commemoration of the deliverance of the Israelites, and destruction of their enemies, 530, u. in some season of extreme danger, 530, d. in old age, under distress from the rebellion of Absalom, 544, e. in contemplation of Solomon's reign, 546, q. when he had entered on his kingdom, 551, 552, s, t. in great distress, 570, i. on bringing the ark to Jerusalem, 583, l. on occasion of temporal blessings, prefiguring spiritual ones, 585, u. on his re-establishment in his kingdom, 586, e. on some great deliverance as an earnest of future blessings, 587, n. on his quiet establishment on the throne, 588, u. on recovery from sickness, 592, b. on placing the ark in Sion, 597, k. when newly settled in his kingdom, 616, e. in praise of the word of God, 619, q. on the going up of the people to Jerusalem, 636, p. before his flight to Achish, 651, e. in the cave of Adullam, 652, m. soon after his accession to the throne, 654, a. when God had given him rest from his enemies, 659, d.

David, Abp., account of him, xliii.

Day, beginning of, how to be understood, 38, m.

Day of final retribution, its different results to the righteous and the wicked, 450, 451, f. of judgment figuratively described in bright and strong colours, 471, s.

Day and night, why represented as transmitting to each other the task of praising God, 474, n.

Deacon, word used in all Christian languages, 672, c. its origin, ibid. what the name imports, 688, 689, u. signification of the Greek word, 677, o.

Deacons, origin of the order, 677, o. duties performed by them in early times, ibid. may not read the Absolution, 10, g. what they are to do, when they come to it, 11, g. not to deliver the bread at the Communion, 318, x. remarks on the age of their admission, 671, h, i. candidates for the order of, questions proposed to them how distributed, 688, r. certain offices which they are used to perform, though not expressly authorized, 689, a. not capable of any benefice, ibid. security for their personal duties and private conversation, 690, d. why God's favour may be expected upon them, 683, g. particular qualifications entreated for them, 683, h. duties belonging to them, why set out, 688, l. much the same from the primitive time downwards as now, ibid. exposition of them, 689, u—c. from whom they receive their office, 692, k. advice to them on their ordination, 693, o. how long they should continue in that office, 693, p.

Dead, fitness of a decent disposal of their bodies, 422, l. how considered by the heathens, ibid. antiquity of burying them, ibid. why sometimes burned, ibid. practice of the Jews, ibid. and of Christians, ibid. burial of, antiquity and universality of religious solemnities among Christians, 432, n. buried by the ancients with hymns of triumph, 426, c. corresponding provision of our Church, ibid. what meant by committing their bodies to the ground, 431, r. charitable to hope that they are saved, 433, a. such a declaration warrantable, ibid. the Church vindicated for expressing it, ibid. no encouragement thereby afforded to the wicked, 433, a. danger and presumption of setting bounds to God's mercy with respect to individuals, 433, a. in what sense cut off from God's hand, 572, h.

Dead, prayers for, excluded from the Liturgy, 299, w. why rejected by the Church, 300, a. her substitution for them, ibid. why we do not pray for them, 431, s.

Dead, offerings of, what intended, 601, o.

Deadly sin, what we mean by praying against it, 63, p.

Dean, origin and subsequent use of the word, xxi, q. how used in collegiate churches, &c., ibid.

Death, why called the wages of sin, 195, p. called a sleep in Scripture, 464, q. state of a suffering church compared to it, 503, h. under the image of a wolf, 516, z. the effect of God's decree, 578, s. proper words for one in danger of, 654, y.

Death of friends, with what feelings it should be regarded, 432, u.

Death of a sinner not desired by God, 11, k. practical use of the doctrine, 12, m.

Death unto sin, what to be understood by it, 379, x. practice to which it refers, ibid.

Debtors to the flesh, inference from our not being so, 197, s. and from our being debtors to the Spirit, ibid.

Declaration prefixed to the Thirty-nine Articles, by what king made, 750, b.

"Deep," how said to be "laid up as in a treasure house," 491, s.

"Deliver," in what sense "no man can deliver his brother," 515, q, r. the inability matter of daily experience, 515, s, t.

Deliverance from sickness, Psalm applicable to it, 615, q. of the redeemed, its certainty, an occasion of joy, 524, x.

Deliverances, return to be made for them, 637, g. the effect of divine power, 523, m.

Delight in God contrasted with delight in the creature, 497, q.

Denys, St., account of him, lvii.

"Depart," old sense of the word, 401, r. unreasonable objection to it in the former office of Matrimony, ibid.

Departed, a spiritual and proper phrase for the dead, 431, q.

"Destroyer," explanation of the phrase, "I have kept me from the ways of the destroyer," 468, z.

Destruction of the wicked exemplified, 520, s. use made of it by the righteous, 521, t.

Deuteronomy, perusal of the twenth-eighth chapter recommended, 607, m.

Devil, meaning of the name in Scripture, 369, i. what meant by renouncing him, ibid. figures under which he is described, 479, h. his sophistry in the temptation detected and exposed, 580, g. See Enemy.

"Devil, the world, and the flesh," why renounced at baptism, 241, y. comparison between our practice in this particular, and that of the primitive church, ibid. and objection to this stipulation answered, 342, a.

Devil, works of, what meant by them generally, 369, i. specification of them, ibid.

Devotion, prevailing power of, how shewn, 464, r. the proper fruit of meditation, 502, k. how to be exercised, 611, i.

Devotions, other, of the people, how distinguished from alms for the poor, 296, p.

Difficulties, warning to prepare for them, 259, n.

Diligence in spiritual concerns recommended and inforced, 199, y. a principal part of the pastoral office, 699, c. parts into which it is divided, ibid.

Disease, men troubled with, through God's displeasure, 578, u.

Dispensation, the old, language of it transferred to the new, 597, o.

Dissenters, their departure from a primitive usage of the Church, 15, u. their consent to subscribe to the Athanasian Creed, 51, n. their inconsistency in a charge laid by them against the Church of England, 317, s. an exception taken by them to the Common Prayer Book, 401, r. their device to prevent the disorder arising from their want of episcopal government, 672, b.

Distrust of God's providence, remedy for it, 497, o.

Divine service may be performed by a deacon with exception, 689, u; 689, a.

Doctrines not to be rejected, because we cannot explain them, 57, a.
Dogs, their number in the East, 527, x.
Dolben, Abp., his charge to his clergy about testimonial, 675, k.
Dove, taken in a snare, an emblem of the soul entangled by the world, 538, o. Eastern, its beautiful plumage, comparison of the Church to it, 538, g.
Doxology before the Psalms, caution to the minister concerning it, 17, z.
Doxologies, mixture of them with complaints, both reasonable and common, 69, d.
Dross, how the ungodly are compared to it, 630, p.
Dunstan, Abp., account of him, xlvii.
Duties, practical, two sorts of, 372, b. how treated of in the Catechism, ibid. 376, i. to God, distinction between natural and preceptive, ibid.
Duty towards God, statement of the particulars into which the Catechism divides it, 373, e. to our neighbour, comprehensive statement of it, 374, f. why branched out in the Commandments, ibid. comprehensive branches of it, 466 h. its importance, ibid.
Dwelling, "out of their dwelling," explained, 516, a.

E.

Earth, why said to be "founded on the seas," 481, d. an instance of divine wisdom and power, 594, q. in what sense it "cannot be moved," ibid. its fertility owing to God, 595, u.
East, turning towards, in repeating the Creed, reason of the custom, 29, i. not necessary, but becoming, ibid. antiquity of the custom, 290, x. foundation of it, ibid.
Easter, why all persons required to receive the Lord's supper at that time, 326, f; 327, l. how to be observed, 619, o.
Easter Even, how celebrated in the ancient church, 152, q. provision of our Church for it, 153, q.
Easter-day, how called anciently, 154, u. antiquity of observing, it, ibid. dignity of the feast, ibid. origin of the word, 154, u. why the Church uses Anthems proper for the day, 154, v. fitness of the proper services, 155, v. baptism solemnly administered on it in the primitive church, 156, z. alluded to in Collect for the day, ibid. why then administered, 157, a. duty of observing it, 525, g. peculiarly consecrated to Christ, 618, m. rule for finding it, on what occasion framed, lxii., a. canons at the Council of Nice concerning it, ibid. rule of our Church agreeable to them, ibid. sanctioned by Act of Parliament, ibid.
Easter week, why more solemnly observed by the ancients, 157, a. two first days in it, why set apart by the Church, 157, b.
Easter Monday, description of its services, 157, b.
Easter Tuesday, description of its services, 159, e.
Easter, first Sunday after, names by which it was anciently called, 161, g. custom that prevailed on it, ibid. alluded to in the Epistle, ibid.
Eating ashes, what it intimates, 590, r.
Ecclesiastical duties, what intended by them, 327, m.
Ecclesiastical writers, alphabetical index of, xiv.
Edification, not speculative, but practical, 246, a. not confined to the private advantage of an individual, ibid. what is true Christian edification, ibid. application to ministers and people, ibid. necessity of it, 247, b.
Edmund, K. and M., account of him, lix.
Edomites, their unnatural behaviour to the Israelites, 647, e. reflections on it, ibid.
Edward VI. K., religious improvements in his reign, vi. his first book, ibid. his second book vii. his first and second books, regulations in them concerning the place of divine service, lxxii, l. provision in them for catechising, 383, r. rubrick in them concerning private baptism, on what founded, 354, g. afterwards amended, 354, 355, g.
Edward VI., his first book, how it began, 2, a. beginning of it, why altered, 14, p. it injoined the "Glory be to thee, O Lord," 283, r. provision in it at the consecration of the elements, 316, k. form of administering the Communion in it, 318, t. how altered in his second book, ibid. order in it concerning the cup, 318, x. place of the angelical hymn in it, 321, i. its order concerning the Communion Service, 326, d. its direction as to putting the questions at baptism, 348, y. broke the queries at baptism into eight, ibid. prayer in the Confirmation office appointed by it, why altered, 392, p. an expression in its office of Matrimony altered, 401, r. provision in it respecting the interment of the dead, 430, n. its provision for the Communion at a burial, 433, y.
Edward VI., his second book first contained the Absolution at daily prayer, 10, e. the Commandments first used in it, 282, e. excluded prayers for the dead, 299, w. protestation concerning kneeling at the Communion first added in it, 328, n.
Edward VI., his forms of ordination an improvement on the Roman ordinal, 678, x; 680, c. remark on his ordinal of priests, 685, t.
Edward, K. of West Saxons, account of him, xliii. translation of, account of the day, xlix.
Egypt, miracles wrought in, their intent, 558, l. what to be learnt from them, ibid. consternation in, at the death of the first-born, 558, 559, u. plagues of, illustrative of the divine power and goodness, 521, y.
Egyptians, how the Lord looked upon and troubled them, &c., 555, l. their destruction spiritually applied, ibid. why spoiled by the Israelites, 599, y.
"Elect," what persons called so by Scripture, 432, x.
Elements, God's ministers, 594, p. why devotion paid to them in old times, 645, n. God's power over them asserted, ibid. and demonstrated, 645, o. how they glorify God, 660, h.
Elevation of the host condemned, 784, g.
Elizabeth, Queen, alterations in the Liturgy in her reign, vii. by whom the alterations in the Liturgy in her reign were made, xvi, c. her endeavour to unite the nation in one faith, 318, t. her injunctions, 796, d. g. rule in her injunctions about the mode of singing common prayer, xxx. p.
Ember, uncertain derivation of the word, 72, g.
Ember fast, a fit introduction for it, 179, n.
Ember weeks, what weeks so called, 72, g. prayers for them, when added, ibid. on what days to be read, ibid. distinction between the two prayers, ibid. importance of using them, 73, g.
Empires, their rise and fall, a striking image of, 499, g.
"End of all things," what to be understood by it, 172, c. preparation necessary for it, ibid.
Enemies, appeal to God from their oppression, 506, 507, x. both without and within to beset us, 651, y. devices of, turned upon themselves, 652, l.
Enemies of God, their punishment, 532, l.
Enemies, spiritual, their multitude and quality, an incitement to watchfulness and action, 221, m. necessity of praying against them, 544, h. their venom figuratively pourtrayed, 580, h. God our protection against them, 637, d.
Enemy, spiritual, his taunts an aggravation of sorrow to the afflicted soul, 505, l. his unrelenting malice, 653, l. how we are rescued from the effects of it, ibid.
Entertainments, not condemned by Scripture, 109, b.
Enurchus, account of, lv.
Ephraim, children of, used for the Israelites, 556, c.
Ephraim, Benjamin, and Manasses, why specified by the Psalmist, 561, f.
Ephrata, the place where the angel directed David to build an altar, 642, x. and where the angel announced the incarnation to the shepherds, ibid.
Epiphany, meaning of the word, 104, r. how applied at first, ibid.
Epiphany, feast of, why celebrated by the Church, 104, r. antiquity of it, ibid. called by two other titles in ancient times, ibid. how solemnized, ibid. in Latin called by the plural noun, because we celebrate three manifestations, ibid. peculiarity in the service, ibid. the design of the Church in her services, before and after it, 107, u.
Epistle, why so called, 287, q. why the words, "The portion of Scripture &c." were inserted in the rubrick, ibid. when those words are to be said, ibid.
Epistle for the eighteenth Sunday after Trinity, why it deviates from the general course, 215, b; 184, s.
Epistle for the twenty-fifth Sunday after Trinity, why it varies from the order of the rest, 228, z.

Epistle in the Ordering of Deacons, fitness of the portions selected for it, 683, 684, i, k.
Epistle in the Ordering of Priests, why chosen, 695, s.
Epistles, why so called, 83, c.
Epistles and Gospels, antiquity of the use of them, 83, c. their fitness for the days they belong to, ibid. appointed with special relation to the time of reading them, ibid. general character of them, 84, c. excellency and usefulness of the selections, ibid. long used on the same days as now, ibid. when taken from the last translation of the Bible, ibid. variations made in them, ibid. the reading of them agreeable to the practice of the Jews, 287, o. and of the primitive Christians, ibid. antiquity of the selection, ibid. 288, q. why the Epistle first and then the Gospel, 287, o.
Epistles and Gospels, between Easter and Whitsuntide, principal subjects of them, 166, q.
Epistles and Gospels, general view of them for the Sundays after Trinity, 183, 184, s.
Epistles in the Consecration service, fitness and contents of them, 710, 711, z, a.
Erring and straying, distinction between them, 7, s.
Esdras, books of Ezra and Nehemiah why so called, 757, z.
Espousals, how different from marriage, 409, m.
Etheldreda, account of her, lvii.
Eternity, nothingness of every thing worldly in comparison of it, 501, c, d.
Eucharist, why so called, 310, t. sacrifice of, what meant by it, 319, d. when offered, ibid. form of offering it, ibid. distinguished from the sacrifice of Christ, 319, 320, e. fitness of calling it so, 320, e.
Evangelist, early signification of the term, how limited, 270, c.
Ever, in what sense we pray that the Lord will not be angry with us for ever, 63, o.
Evil, petition to be purified from it, 650, u.
Evils, how to be prevented, 490, i.
Evil spirits, superiority of Christ over them, 113, h. inferences therefrom, ibid.
Examination, in order to the Lord's Supper, directions concerning it, 382, l, m. its especial necessity, 383, q.
Examination of the sick, how conducted before the Reformation, 413, x. necessity of it, ibid. goodness of the rule appointed by our Church, ibid.
Example of those who have conquered, an encouragement to others, 626, g.
Expectation week, why so called, 172, b.
Excommunicates, why not allowed Christian burial, 423, u.
Excommunication, when practised in the Church, 791, u. two sorts of, described, ibid. perverted by the popes to the worst purposes, ibid. power of, asserted by the reformed churches, ibid. a necessary and equitable authority, 792, o. does not discharge from the performance of relative duties, ibid. how to be remitted, 792, p.
Exhortation in the daily service, a comment on the Sentences, 2, c. connects the Sentences and Confession, 3, d. a proof of the prudence and piety of our reformers, ibid. attention due to it, ibid. its apostolical and affectionate commencement, ibid. summary of its contents, ibid. remarks on its several parts, 3—5, e—l. general character of it, 5, l. its Scriptural conclusion, ibid. its general excellence, ibid. not to be repeated by the people, ibid.
Exhortation, giving warning of the Communion, the first, contents of it, 300, e.
Exhortation, giving warning of the Communion, the second, use of it, 303, p. its necessity, 303, q. and contents, ibid. recommendation to a serious consideration of it, 304, r.
Exhortation, at the time of the Communion, purpose of it, 304, s. its contents, ibid. its excellence, and the great care of the Church in providing it, 306, b.
Exhortation, at the end of the office of Matrimony, agreeable to Scripture and antiquity, 406, i.
Exhortation, in the Visitation of the Sick, grounds of it, 411, t. character and contents of it, ibid. 412, u.
Exhortation, in the Churching of Women, short but suitable, 436, k.
Exhortation, in the Commination, grounds of it, 442, z. parts of which it consists, ibid.
Exorcism, practised in early times, 343, c. prudent substitution made for it by our Church, ibid.
Extreme unction, why accounted a sacrament by the papists, 376, l. not really such, but a piece of superstition in their practice, 377, l.
Eyes, when said to be lightened, 464, p.
Ezra, Psalm composed by him at the return from captivity, 640, f.

F.

Fabian, account of him, xxxix.
Face, when God is said to turn away his face, 519, h.
Faculty, for the admission of ministers, remarks on it, 674, i.
Faith, useless unless it influence to a holy life, 57, c. what that is by which Christians overcome the world, 162, h. success of it in early times, ibid. the power of it exemplified, and recommended to imitation, 227, y. union of other Christian graces with it, ibid. should prompt us to seek to God for spiritual succour, ibid. a qualification for baptism, 330, b. a requisite for the Lord's supper, 382, o. how to be judged of, ibid. why called a lively faith, ibid. rule of judging of our faith, ibid. how to be accompanied, 382, p. its cheering and animating effects, 456, u. the remedy for a fainting soul, 485, k. power of it, 496, m. a cordial for despondency, 506, n. a security against our enemies, 524, u. finds a way opened through the difficulties of the Christian course, 600, h. the support of the soul in affliction, 615, t. its reliance on obtaining God's mercy, 654, z. what it stands generally for in the New Testament, 764, g. not the cause but the condition of justification, ibid. what meant by faith only, 765, h. how the word is used in our Articles, ibid.
Faith and distrust, controversy between them related, 554, o, p.
Faith, the, what meant by the exhortation to contend earnestly for it, 273, g. with what weapons we are to contend, ibid.
Faith, V. and M., account of her, lvii.
Faithful, how their partaking of the sacrament differs from that of the unworthy communicant, 381, i. their persuasion of the providence of God, 461, q.
Fall off from God, explanation of the prayer that we may not do so, 430, m.
Fall of man, consequences of it, 763, u. how remedied, ibid.
False Christs and false prophets, instruction to be derived from our Lord's warning concerning them, 116, q.
False teachers, warning against listening to them, 119, x.
False prophets, their pretences of extraordinary sanctity, 197, t. best method of judging of them, 198, t.
Famine personified, 593, q. worst sort of famine, ibid.
Fasting, use of it, lxv, e. examples of it in the Old Testament, ibid. and in the New, ibid. practice of the primitive Christians about it, ibid. and of the Church of England, ibid. instructions in the right manner of doing so, 124, f. ought to be considered more seriously than it often is, ibid.
Fasts, distinction between private and publick, 124, e. the ground of different injunctions, ibid.
"Father of our Lord Jesus Christ," why God so called in the Absolution, 11, i.
Father to the fatherless, when God became so in the fullest sense, 536, z.
Favour of God, value of it, 498, z.
Favours of heaven, depend on men's fidelity, 605, f.
Fear of God, what sort of, fit to be entertained, 212, v. foundation of it, 373, e. wickedness proceedeth from the absence of it, 496, g. recommended in opposition to that of the world, 516, c. how the beginning of wisdom, 611, o. happy effect of it, 612, q. effects and necessity of it, 630, q. blessings which attend it, 640, b.
Fear of the Lord, blessings consequent on it, 483, l. privileges of it, 483, m. reward of it, ibid.
Fear the Lord, advice to those who do so, 493, h.
Feasts, otherwise called holy-days, lxiii, b. immoveable, why placed by themselves in the order of the Calendar, 230, c.
Felicity, on what it depends, 490, c. earthly, what composed of, 655, e. on what terms promised to the Israelites, ibid. more precious promises given to God's faithful servants, ibid.
Fellowship with the Father and the Son, great privilege of it, 97, d. duties resulting from it, ibid.
Festivals of the Church, of two sorts, 83, c. appropriateness of the services to both, ibid. their aptness for infusing all necessary Christian knowledge, ibid. necessity of retaining them, ibid. why the primitive Christians were so exact in observing them, ibid. how to be celebrated, 563, s, t. memorials of God's wonders, 611, l. joy of celebrating them, 636, q.

Festivals, principal, their greater solemnity how marked by the Church, 85, e. the memory of them continued some days after, 100, l. greater, proper forms of worship provided for them, 312, a. why lengthened out for several days, ibid. why the number of days eight, ibid. what the festivals are, ibid.
Festivals, Christian, substituted by the Church, for Jewish ones, xxxiii, b. set apart in the infancy of Christianity, xxxiv. b. universal observance of them, ibid.
Festivals, yearly, why set apart by the Church, xxxiii. b. in honour of the apostles, &c., xxxiv. reason of those retained in our Church at the Reformation, ibid. subsequent provisions concerning them, ibid.
Fidelity to God, necessary for producing fidelity to man, 471, x.
Fire, an emblem of God's indignation and vengeance, 470, p.
"First shall be last, and last shall be first," the former a warning to the well-instructed, 238, n. what sort of penitents fall under the latter, ibid.
Flesh, sinful lusts of, what meant by them, 369, l.
Floods, for whom figuratively used, 582, u. fury of the wicked compared to them, 637, e. the Jews returning from captivity compared to them, 638, p.
Followers of Christ, in what sense the apostles were so, 193, k. how far we may be the same, ibid.
Folly, evil consequences of, prepare men for advice, 652, i.
Fool, why he saith in his heart, There is no God, 464, u.
Fools, wicked men why so called, 464, t.
Foolish, wicked men why so called, 454, l.
Fonts, why so called, 333, u. their ancient situation, ibid. only fit place for administering publick baptism, 334, y.
Forefathers, their offences, how they affect their children, 62, o.
Forgiveness of sins, assurance of, given on the terms of the Gospel, 390, i. joy and comfort inspired by it, 519, g.
Forgiveness of injuries, its necessity, 413, 414, a. duty of, illustrated, 224, q. strongly bound upon us, ibid.
Form of giving praise, a highly proper one, 646, s.
Forms of prayer, occasional, their suitableness, 718, a.
Foundations of a state, what they are, 462, a. fallacious arguments concerning them, ibid.
Fowler, a sinner compared to one, 461, n. subtle enemies compared to one, 651, a.
Frailty, human, exemplified, 139, d. a support under it, ibid.
Free-will, moderation of our Church in speaking of it, 763, x.
Friday, why kept as a fast day, lxv. i.
Friends, apt to forsake us in distress, 500, r.
Frugality, not inconsistent with charity, 131, s.
Fruitfulness, natural, emblematical of spiritual blessings, 547, f. religious blessings set forth under images borrowed from it, 569, g.
Funeral rites, different in different countries, 422, t.
Funerals, singing of Psalms at them usual among the first Christians, 427, h. unconcernedness of those who attend them reproved, 423, l.
Funerals, dumb, their unchristian character, 434, c. contrasted with the Burial service of the Church, ibid.
Future state, belief of the Jews concerning it, 759, f.

G.

Gates, ancient use of them, 459, z.
Gates of righteousness, in what sense believers desire that they may be opened, 618, k.
Genesis, book of, why begun on Septuagesima Sunday, 21, m.
Gentiles, intimation of their readiness to flow into the church, 472, g. prophecy of their glorifying God for the Gospel, 473, h. kings of, prophecy of their accession to the church, 513, y. description of the calling of them, 516, g. divine care manifested in calling them home, 537, a. their conversion foretold, 546, a. offering of their first fruits, and their accession to the faith, 546, b. their accession to the church, 571, y, z. promise of salvation, when declared to them, 587, q. called upon to praise the Lord, 616, b. reason of the call, ibid. their call to the Gospel foretold, 648, i.
Gelasius, collects arranged by him, 80, b.
George, St., account of him, xlv.
Gergesenes, their unworthy conduct, 113, k. how to be converted to our profit, ibid.
Gifts, spiritual, St. Paul's advice concerning them, not confined to any ages of Christianity, 200, a. nor to any particular persons, ibid. intent of the Church in propounding it, ibid.
"Gifts of grace," meaning of the phrase, 391, l.
Giles, account of him, lv.
"Glory," peculiar sense of the phrase, that "Jesus manifested forth his glory," 110, b.
Glory, future, of Christians, its superiority to their present sufferings, 190, f. what knowledge we have of it, ibid. a powerful argument for constancy, ibid. why called the inheritance of the saints in light, 226, x. how we may be made partakers of it, ibid.
"Glory," the tongue why so called, 476, r.
"Glory be to the Father," &c., a paraphrase of Scripture, 16, x. use of it in the Christian church, ibid. serves as a creed and a hymn of praise, ibid. why used after every Psalm, 20, h. peculiarly fitted to that place, ibid. its conformity to other religious offices, ibid.
"Glory be to thee, O Lord," ancient practice of the Church to say so before the Gospel, 288, r. retained in our earliest Liturgy, ibid. not authorized now, but unobjectionable, ibid.
"Glory be to God on high," &c., reason of singing this hymn at the Communion, 321, i. ancient use of it, ibid. addition to it, when made, ibid. where used in different churches, ibid. properly placed in our own, ibid. better to be sung, if practicable, ibid. statement of its general purport, ibid. and remarks on several passages in it, 321, 322, k—n.
God, his counsels not to be estimated by the designs of men, 159, d. his wisdom and goodness in providing for our redemption, 205, l. goodness of, exemplified, 212, v. his providence in all his dispensations, 227, y. solemn invocation of Him by all those attributes which express his power and mercy, 338, p. appropriate description of Him by his works and attributes, 403, e. counsels of, vanity of attempting to frustrate them, 451, h. laws of, true grounds of opposition to them, 451, i. not to be defeated, 453, c. effects of his grace and love, 453, g. for what to be admired and magnified, 457, k. his providence shewn in the destruction of the wicked, 459, b. his power over wickedness asserted, 461, r, s. his love and regard to the humble, 461, t. righteousness of his words, 463, k. character of them, ibid. his fidelity in keeping his words and preserving his servants, 463, l. exquisite imagery under which his providence is represented, 468, b. his justice in rendering to every one according to his works, 471, x. his attributes undoubtedly proved from his works, 473, m. equity of his way, and security of his promises, 472, a. his readiness to confer blessings on his children, who ask for them, 476, h. his hand equally powerful to save and to destroy, 477, u. knows what is proper for Him and for us, 478, x. his power and perpetual duration, 478, z. what we are to expect from Him, 478, a. the wisdom of his providence, 491, t. his providential care over all the inhabitants of the earth, 492, x. no victory to be gained without Him, 492, y. his attributes the ground of our comfort, 496, h. extent of his good providence, 496, i. his omniscience, when more particularly necessary to be impressed on our minds, 508, i. effect of contemplation on his wondrous works, 514, g. the only object of worship, 514, l. the helper of his faithful servants, 521, a. manifestations of his power celebrated, 534, f. his fidelity to his word, 544, g. always good and merciful to his faithful people, 548, k. his prerogative to exalt or suppress, 552, y. effect of his appearing in defence of his people, 553, d. his praise advanced by the fierceness of his enemies, 553, h. rebellion against Him will surely be punished, 559, q. acts the part of a father under our sufferings, 560, s. his attributes vindicated by the punishment of his enemies, 561, z. weakness of those who despise Him, 561, a. wherein great and wonderful, 570, o. his mercies the theme of the Church's praise, 574, r. his title to the praises of all his creatures, 574, u. his power exerted in subserviency to his other attributes, 575, b. his unchangeable nature a comfort in distress, 576, r. comfortable promises to his children, 580, i. his works and dispensations lost on brutish men, 581, m. the only protector and deliverer of the church, 583, g. our security under his protection, 583, k. rectitude of all his proceedings to be adored, 588, b. his attributes celebrated, 589, g. his eternity and immutability a constant source of comfort, 591, z. his word standeth sure, 592, a. his goodness both to the bodies and souls of men, 592, f. his mercy and goodness represented under three striking similitudes, 592, h. variety and magnificence of his works, 595, d. his miracles and grace, ibid. his glory to be perpetually celebrated, ibid. his mercy perpetual and unchangeable, 600, d. his unwillingness to give up his people, 616, x. his faithfulness and truth, 627, p. reason for trusting in Him, 627, q. his truth and loving-kindness dwelt on with delight, 633, s. his righteousness celebrated, 631, f. beautiful description of his omnipresence and omniscience, consideration of them a restraint from sin and an encouragement to righteousness and patience, 649, p. his omniscience and omnipresence proved by his all-directing providence, 650, s. his care for his people, 651, b. confidence to be placed in his wisdom, power, and goodness, 653, o. comfort suggested by his works of love and mercy, 653, u. his knowledge of and power over all men, 658, x. the ends of all his dispensations, 658, y.

God, all our blessings to be ascribed to Him, 166, r. comfortable inference, from his past liberality, 215, e. implying conditions on our part, 216, e. glory due to Him for all his mercies, 219, g. what things are the things of God, 225, t. our duty to render them, ibid. our sins against Him how to be estimated, 324, q. contrasted with the offences of our brethren against us, ibid. when we are accounted to "love him perfectly," 282, e. when to "magnify him worthily," ibid. what persons He will accept, 454, n. happiness of those who trust in Him, 457, e. victory over our enemies to be ascribed to Him, 451, s. remembrance of Him a criterion of our state, 459, e. reward of it, 460, d. the proper refuge in distress, 462, y. trust in, fitness and propriety of it, 462, b. trust in his mercy, privilege of it, 464, r. his justice and holiness to be acknowledged in all events, 473, n. our only support in affliction, 478, a. confidence to be placed in Him as our Redeemer and Preserver, 480, t. acknowledgments due to Him for our creation and redemption, 481, e. necessity of waiting patiently on Him, 493, l. his glory should be sung by the redeemed, 488, k. safety of those who trust in Him, 488, m. his saving power a subject of joy, 489, z. for what He is to be praised, 491, h. how He often conducts Himself to those who love Him best, 495, c. prayer for a continuance of his loving-kindness, 496, l. duty and difficulty of waiting patiently for Him, 497, s. examples of his praises being sung in adversity, 506, s. our trust under afflictions, 506, p. the glory of our salvation to be ascribed to Him, 508, d. his command that we acknowledge his power and sovereignty, 512, m. his protection to be sought in life and death, 525, z. examples of procuring it, 525, a. our Saviour, meditation on, a defence against spiritual enemies, 529, r. his salvation to be patiently waited for, 530, z. meditation on his power and mercy recommended, 531, e. to be praised for his mercy in hearing us, 535, u. the kingdom, the power, and the glory to be ascribed to Him, 540, a, b. the proper object of our faith and love, 549, z. delight and profit of drawing near to Him, 549, a. his superiority to be acknowledged throughout the earth, 570, u. what source of comfort, if men fall away from Him, ibid. importance of being taught his way, 570, p. why to be blessed in distress, 578, p. his presence to be regarded with an holy fear, 613, g. his praises a most delightful part of the service of his church, 612, y. results of the relation which we bear to Him, 627, t. to be sought as a refuge and protector, 629, m. different relations in which He stands to his people, 633, p. promise of protection to his people, 636, o. his superiority to every other object of man's affections, 645, r. to be praised for his attributes and for the exertion of them, 646, t. where and why to be praised, 661, q. his noble and mighty acts, how displayed, 661, r.

God, how passages are to be understood, in which human parts and passions are attributed to Him, 189, d. in what sense said to rejoice over a penitent sinner, ibid. why spoken of in Scripture as having human passions, 451, k. language attributed to Him explained, 451, l. when said not to hear, 454, k. why intreated to display his righteous judgment, 456, c. Epicurean notions of, when they prevail, 461, p. when said to forget men, 463, o. his indignation and displeasure figuratively described, 470, 471, p, q, r. his supporting and protecting power figuratively described, 469, l. meaning of remembrance and forgetfulness being attributed to Him, 483, k. in what sense our light, strength, and salvation, 484, b. in what sense He made the world by his Word, &c., 491, q. supplicated to vindicate the cause of the afflicted, 494, p. his protecting mercy and vengeance figuratively described, 494, q. consequences of his so appearing foretold, 494, r. why called on by the Psalmist to arise, 506, l. how and when exalted, 525, c. why all flesh should come unto Him, 533, u. his salvation and righteousness how made known to the heathen, 587, p. two consequences of his alternate display of mercy and judgment, 605, g. his blessing must accompany man's labour, 639, s.

God, name of, in the plural number with a verb singular, intimation of the Trinity, 182, r. speaking in consultation, intimation of the Trinity, ibid. named in the same sentence as sustaining several capacities, intimation of the Trinity, ibid. what constitutes his unity, 291, z. unity of, asserted, 371, a. three persons in the unity, 372, a. being of, from what things manifest, 751, d. his unity, ibid. proof of other attributes ascribed to Him, ibid.

God the Father, why to be called on for the grace of baptism, 336, h. why through our Lord Jesus Christ, ibid.

Gods, who so called, 564, c. what meant by the Lord's superiority over them, 584, o.

Godhead, unity of, most expressly taught in Scripture, 182, r. consistently with the Trinity of persons, ibid. persons in, scriptural doctrine concerning them, 751, e.

Godhead, identified with love, 185, u.

Godfathers and Godmothers, their number when limited, 333, t. why parents not admitted, ibid. why not persons before they have received the Communion, ibid. use of them whence derived, 333, t. antiquity and reasonableness of the practice, ibid.; 335, a. by whom objected against, 333, t. why so called, ibid.; 335, a. original of them, 340, x. antiquity in the Christian church, ibid. benefits of them, ibid. their duty, ibid. security given by them for infants no new or strange thing, 340, x. analogous practices alleged, ibid. considerations on the form in which they stipulate for infants, 340, 341, y. their duty in answering to the several queries put to them, 341, z. when they may be considered as having discharged the trust reposed in them, 342, a. antiquity and reasonableness of the form of interrogating them, ibid. not absolutely necessary, 342, a. reason of the exhortation to them, 350, z. their duty to consider and practise it, ibid. reflections on the office being undertaken by improper persons, ibid. or from improper motives, ibid. evil consequences of such customs, ibid. admonition to them from giving the Christian name, 367, y. why required by the Church, 367, z. why preferred for sureties to parents, ibid. why we are bound by their promise for us, 370, m. remarks on the manner in which the Church teaches children to avow their obligation, 370, n. why required to attend the confirmation of a young person, 384, u. why they must have received the holy Communion, ibid.

Godfathers and Godmothers, why appointed at the baptism of adults, 360, s.

Good, opportunities of doing it not to be omitted, 212, r. our Saviour's forwardness in doing it, ibid. brought by God out of evil, 477, p.

Good-Friday, why so called, 149, n. doubtful meaning of its Saxon name, ibid. antiquity of observing it, ibid. appropriateness of the service, ibid.

Good cheer, what our Saviour meant by calling on his disciples to be of good cheer, 196, x. mistakes concerning it corrected, ibid.

Good men, considerations to support them in their duty, 187, z. their offences could not bear to be accurately noted, 641, m. measures provided for preserving them, 641, n. their rebukes salutary, 652, h.

Goodness, already vouchsafed, gives assurance of its being continued, 181, a.

Goodness, progressive, happiness of, 581, q.
Good works, their necessity asserted together with justification by faith alone, in one of our collects, 325, y. improperly so called before the grace of Christ, 763, a. Article of them, why added, 765, k. what meant by them, 765, l. how considered by God, 765, m. proofs that though not meritorious they are pleasing to God, 766, n. necessity of them why asserted by protestants in their confessions, ibid. the doctrine of Scripture and the ancient church, ibid. the natural produce of a lively faith, 766, o. how considered by our Church and by Scripture, ibid.
Gospel, a privilege allowed by it to the people, 5, l. its excellence proved from the divine nature of its Founder, 92, x. exhortation not to receive it in vain, 125, h. why sometimes rejected and despised, 177, l. different entertainment of it when first published, 133, a. a lively image of the reception which it met with in the world, 208, p. liberty of it wherein it consists, 209, r. caution not to strain it too far, ibid. duties connected with it, ibid. inestimable blessing of it, 215, c. corresponding duties belonging to us, ibid. necessity and benefits of it, 217, 218, f. change wrought upon persons converted to it, 218. f. the professors of it must live up to its principles, 220, k. success of, a proof of the power, wisdom, and goodness of God, 271, e. its success foretold, 474, r. encomium on it, ibid. not valued as it deserves, 475, s. testimony to its excellence, 475, t. general promulgation of it prophetically described, 517, h. effects and extent of its publication, 533, z. propagation of it foretold, 609, c. and its blessed effects, 610, d. character of its professors, ibid. belief in it necessary to salvation, 774, s.
Gospel, slanderous misrepresentation of the ministers of the Church for not preaching it, 276, m.
Gospel of the day, no direction at the end of it, 288, s.
Gospel, for Twenty-fifth Sunday after Trinity, why repeated from a former Sunday, 228, z; 229, b.
Gospel, for St. Bartholomew's day, remark on the fitness of it, 262, r.
Gospel, in the Ordering of Deacons, why set immediately after the Ordination, 692, m. appropriateness of it, ibid.
Gospels, whence taken, 83, c. why read and heard standing, ibid. peculiar marks of honour shewn to them in the ancient church, and continued in our own, 288, r. abrupt beginning of some of them, 426, e.
Gospels, in the Ordering of Priests, their fitness, 695, t.
Gospels, in the Consecration service, their pertinence, 711, b.
Gospellers, Article against them, 774, p.
Governors, their authority, how to be exerted, 552, a.
Grace, divine, necessity of it, 589, k. its concurrence with free will, the question concerning it excellently stated in one of the collects, 325, y. why joined with peace as the subject of our prayers, 38, k.
Grace, illuminating and assisting, prayer for it, 454, o.
Grace, preventing, what intended by it, 324, y.
Grace, preventing and assisting, different opinions concerning, 763, z. necessity of, proved by Scripture, 763, c. an essential doctrine of Christianity, ibid. its importance in the opinion of the compilers of our Liturgy, 764, c. not inconsistent with man's free agency, ibid. caution on the subject, ibid.
Grace of God, what meant by it, 370, q. necessity of it, ibid. why necessary to be prayed for, 629, o. necessary both to enlighten and strengthen, 622, t.
Grace, means of, not to be neglected, 336, e.
Grace, works of, praise due to God for them, 646, x.
Grass, common comparison to it carried still farther, 641, i.
Grave, its different relation to the righteous and the wicked, 516, b.
Great Bible, Epistles and Gospels formerly taken from it, 84, c. what so called, and why, xxxii, x.
Gregory the Great, account of him, xliii. his Litany, 60, e. collects contained in his Sacramentary, 80, b. when and how he compiled it, 81, b.
Grief, the cause of wakefulness, 554, m. its effects on the human frame, 590, o, p.
Griffith, Bp., supposed author of the office of Baptism for Persons of Riper Years, 360, q.
Grotius, his opinion of the English Liturgy, xi.
Guest, Bp., his concern in restoring the Liturgy, vii.
Gunning, Bp., a prayer said to be written by him, 75, m.

H.

Haggai, Psalm used by him at the rebuilding of the temple, 648, g.
Half-christened, folly and absurdity of the expression, 356, k.
Hallelujah, meaning of the word, 16, x. use of it in the Psalms, ibid. and among the ancient Christians, ibid. how used in our Church, ibid. its fitness, 17, x.
Hammond, Dr. his paraphrase on the Psalms recommended, 447.
Hampton Court Conference, account of, viii. the Thirtieth Canon explaining the use of the sign of the cross in baptism, the product of it, 352, e. order restricting the administration of private baptism to a lawful minister made after it, 354, 355, g. addition made after it to the rubrick certifying private baptism, 356, l.
Hand of God, how distinguished from his Spirit, 393, r.
Handmaid of the Lord, the church so described, 571, r.
Happiness not to be estimated by fortune or station, 186, x. how to be procured, 450, c. in what we should place it, 469, i. to whom it belongeth, 639, a.
Hart, thirst experienced by it, compared to the soul's desire after eternal comfort, 505, k.
Hatred of the servants of God, desolation in a high degree follows it, 493, m.
Head, wounding of, what it denotes, 539, o.
Health and sickness, indifferently applied to both soul and body, 499, m.
Health, want of, how to be understood spiritually, 8, y. by whom to be supplied, ibid.
Heart, God's word to be laid up in it, 620, b. why God entreated to incline it, 622, u. fatness of, what it implies, 625, b. soundness of, what meant by it, 626, k. inclination of, how produced, 629, k. its importance as a rule of judgment, ibid.
Heart, the true of, their character and reward, 636, l.
Heart, the broken in, when healed, 653, u.
Heathen, what things especially declared among them, by the apostles, 585, y.
Heathens, their splendid actions deficient in a right principle, 766, q.
Heathenism, its overthrow by the Gospel, fitly compared to the wreck of a fleet of ships, 514, e.
Heaven, a glimpse of the future joys of it, 98, i. qualifications for being received into it, 99, i. every good gift cometh thence, 204, i. character of it, 226, x. way of attaining to it, ibid. holiness a necessary qualification for it, 434, b. would not be a heaven to a wicked man, ibid. the only place which can satisfy an immortal soul, 496, k. the throne of God's sovereignty, 614, k.
Heaven and earth, how called to be witness of God's judgments, 517, l, m. evidences of divine wisdom and power, 575, z. how they celebrated God's praises, 574, t.
Heavens, in what sense said to "cry to God," 23, t. contemplation of them, its effect, 458, m. an especial proof of the divine power and goodness, 473, l. how they bear their testimony, 473, 474, o. how they "declare the glory of God," 659, f.
Heavenly bodies, divine wisdom manifested in them, 595, a.
"Heaviness turned into joy," in whom verified, 488, i.
Hedge, "broken hedge," what meant by the comparison of the wicked to one, 530, a, b.
Heels, "iniquity of my heels," explained, 515, p.
Hell, signification of the word, 30, n. meaning of the assertion, that Jesus Christ descended into hell, ibid. foundation of the assertion, ibid. Christ's descent into, when and why introduced into creeds, 754, o.
Hell, that is, the grave, "they lie in the hell like sheep," explained, 516, z.
Henry VIII. King, improvements in liturgical matters in his reign, v. vi. right in rejecting the power of the pope, 684, l. his sense of supremacy, ibid.
Hermon, hill of, why called "little," 506, q.
Herod, warning to be drawn from his slaughter of the Innocents, 99, 100, k.
Herod, reflections on his tyranny in slaying St. James, and imprisoning St. Peter, 258, m.

Hilary, account of him, xxxix.
Hireling, proper meaning of the word, 695, l.
History, how it should be read, 491, 492, t.
History, sacred, benefits to be derived from it, 507, a.
Holiness, by God's will necessary to happiness, 12, l. in what sense it may be pleaded by Christians, 570, k. the proper ornament of Christians, 582, x. the way to happiness, 619, s.
Holy, Holy, Holy, a form of praising the three persons in one Godhead, 23, u. derived from Scripture, ibid. why fit for us to sing on earth, ibid.
Holy-cross day, account of it, lv.
Holy Ghost, scriptural testimony concerning Him, 175, h. proofs that He is a person, ibid. a divine person, 176, h. and that He proceeds from the Father and the Son, ibid. scriptural proof that He is the Lord, 336, e. and the Giver of life, ibid. two different attributes, ibid. in what sense his procession from the Father and the Son to be understood, ibid. hath a real subsistence, distinct both from the Father and the Son, 372, a. scriptural proofs that He is God, ibid. his procession and divinity proved, 755, r. in what manner He is a guide to us, 167, s. acts by the instrumentality of the Word, ibid. in what sense He is a Comforter or Paraclete, 172, d. our duties respectively consequent thereon, 173, d. why particularly addressed before ordination, 703, l.
Holy Ghost, grace of, why to be desired, 219, i. his influence in the generation of all things, and in the regeneration of a Christian, compared, 390, y. in what ways received, 390, h. his sevenfold grace, in what sense it may be distinctly understood, 391, k. distinction between his extraordinary and ordinary graces, 686, o. when it may be said that a person is moved by Him to the office of the ministry, ibid. why necessary to be enquired of, 686, o. on what ground it may be trusted that He is so, ibid. what meant by receiving Him, 705, m.
Holy Ghost, mission of, great importance of the event, 174, g. effects produced by it, ibid.
Holy Ghost, sin against, in what it consists, 129, p.
Holy Ghost, typified by water, 329, o.
Holy life, necessary to happiness, 466, f.
Holydays in the Church of England, provisions concerning them, by Edward the Sixth and his successors, lxiii. b. concurrence of two together, question what service to be used, xxxiv. why to be declared by the curate at the beginning of every week, 293, g. reason for keeping up the rubrick, ibid.
Holydays, popish, why resumed into the Calendar, xxxiii. y. why not intended to be kept holy, ibid. character of the account of them, ibid.
Homily of justification, what supposed to be meant by it, 765, i. why so called, ibid.
Homilies, two books of, account of them, 294, l. agreeable to ancient practice, ibid. their original use and design, 295, l. character of them, ibid. how they may be now used to advantage, ibid. in what sense subscribed to by the clergy, 295, m. may be read by a deacon, 689, x. their doctrine, and the publick reading of them, asserted, 793, 794, t. how far the approbation of them in the Articles goes, ibid. their character, ibid. ought to be read by all persons before they subscribe the Articles, ibid. regard due to them different from that due to the Thirty-nine Articles, 794, x. particularly necessary when written, 794, y. their titles in the Thirty-nine Articles not exactly the same as in the book, 795, z.
Honour to the name and word of God, in what it consists, 374, e.
Horn, an emblem of strength and power, 552, x. why said to bud, 643, c.
Hope, different degrees of, 433, a. a twofold hope, ibid. applied to a passage in the Burial service, ibid.
Hope in the Lord, reason for it under affliction, 499, f.
Hopes of God's mercy, by what rule to be measured, 222, n.
Hosannah, its signification, 16, z. how used in the Church, ibid. meaning of the word, 618, n.
Hounds, comparison of the wicked to them, 468, d.
House of God, obligation of going thither, and the offerings to be made there, 535, m.
Hugh, Bp., account of him, lix.
Human nature, its early propensity to sin, 526, k. fallen state of, an argument for divine mercy, 653, s.
Humble, their joy in the glad tidings of salvation, 543, a.
Humiliation, necessity of it, 509, m.
Humility, the way to glory, 648, k.
Hymn, angelical, what hymn so called, 321, i. cherubical, what hymn so called, 313, b.
Hymns, use of them in the primitive church, 22, q. corresponding practice in our Church, ibid. why said or sung standing, ibid. few used in the Church of man's composing, 25 b. after the lessons, probable intention of the Church as to the use of them, 26, e.
Hyssop, sprinkling with, what it foreshewed, 519, f.

I.

Idolatry, deliverance from it by the Gospel, 570, m. many not free from it, ibid. its overthrow by the Gospel, an occasion of rejoicing, 586, k.
Idols, contrasted with the God of Israel, 614, l.
Ignatius, notice of his martyrdom, 94, z.
Ignorance not an excuse for embracing heresy, 56, x.
Illiterate persons, not to be admitted to the ministry, 675, m.
Images, worshipping of, its origin, 781, q. how defended by those who practise it, ibid. unscriptural, ibid.
Immanuel, how this name belongs to our Saviour, 243, 244, x. the Ruler of the universe, and Saviour of his people, 512, n.
Immersion, the more ancient way of baptizing, 378, x. alluded to by St. Paul, ibid.
Imperative verbs often put for future, 497, p.
Imposition of hands, why appointed at Ordination, 673, f. an essential part of Ordination, 691, h. whence derived, ibid. that of the bishop's only required on a deacon, ibid. See Laying on of Hands.
Imprecations, in the Psalms, how to be understood, 447; 455, q. practical use of them, ibid. objection to them removed, 486, o. to be understood as predictions, 542, p; 607, m.
Incarnation, meaning of the word, 56, z. statement of the doctrine, ibid. and proof of it, ibid.
Incense, devotion of the heart compared to it, 651, f.
Incomprehensible, meaning of the word in the Athanasian Creed, 54, u.
Independents, remark on the modern use of the name, 51, n.
Infallibility, question whether supposed to be vested in popes or in general councils, 776, z. monstrousness of the doctrine in either case, ibid.
Infants, baptism of, scriptural authority for, 786, 787, q. not controverted in the ancient church, ibid. when first objected to, ibid. supposed to return the answers to the questions at baptism, 340, y. why obliged by the promise of their sureties, 380, c. their admission into the Christian covenant by baptism agreeable to God's provision for the Jews, ibid. unbaptized, why not admitted to Christian burial, 424, v. See Baptism.
Infidelity, caution against it, 231, 232, e. its sinfulness, 274, h. and danger, ibid.
Infidels, why they do not choose to have their families such, 463, g. their defiance of all authority, 463, h. their rage against the church, 550, h. their custom of insulting the faithful, 647, c. comfort under it, ibid.
Inheritance, promised by God, danger of despising it, 601, n.
Inheritors of the kingdom of heaven, how we are so made by baptism, 368, e.
Iniquity, measure of, consequence of its being filled up, 630, u.
Injustice, absurdity of supposing that God doth not behold it, 582, c.
Innocence, how far we may appeal to God to judge of it, 456, a. how we may comfort ourselves in the consciousness of it, 456, b. calumniated, appeal to God in behalf of it, 484, s. how far such appeal may be made, 484, r. how far it may be pleaded before God, 630, r.
Innocent, what meant by not taking reward against them, 466, g.
Innocents, why their festival is kept immediately after Christmas, 93, z. in what sense said to glorify God by their deaths, 98, h. how the Epistle for their day is applicable to them in particular, 99, i. their case a demonstration of the vanity of all the attempts of God's enemies, ibid. improvement of the circumstances of their festival, 99, 100, k.

Instruction, religious, extension of it the glory of Christianity, 365, t. neglected by the papists, 366, t. revival of it, first step to the Reformation, ibid. necessary before confirmation, 366, u.
Integrity, how far we may appeal to God as a judge of it, 463, y. proper object of our desires, 463, p. whence procured, ibid. happiness of those who hold it fast, 503, h.
Invention of the Cross, account of it, xlvii.
Invitation, in the Communion service, fitness of its situation, 307, c. contents of it, ibid. similar ones in ancient Liturgies, ibid. remark on the previous rubrick, ibid. in what sense the communicants are invited to draw near, 307, e.
Invitatories, why so called, xxx, n.
Invitatory, what it was, 17, b. why omitted by our Reformers, 18, b.
Invitatory Psalm, what Psalm so called, 17, b. and why, ibid. utility of such an one, 18, b. fitness of the one used for the purpose, ibid. what it contains, ibid. why called an anthem, 18, d. used in this way by the whole Christian church, 19, d.
Isaac and Rebecca, why specified in the Matrimonial office, 403, c.
Isaiah, book of, why read before Christmas, 21, k. a passage in him paraphrased in the Te Deum, 23, u. his description of Christ under the image of a victorious deliverer, 136, b. his exact description of our Saviour's indignities, 140, e. a solemn prophecy of his concerning our Saviour explained and applied, 243, x. his prophecy concerning John the Baptist, its coincidence with that of Zacharias, 254, k. exposition of the two, ibid. hymn heard by him adopted into the Communion service, 311, z. his enumeration of the sevenfold gifts of the Holy Spirit, 390, 391, h. k. and ascription of them to our Saviour, 391, k. his prophecy of the coming in of the Gentiles, 528, i. and of Christ's victory over death, 529, n. his prediction of the destruction of Babylon, 647, 648, f.
Isles of the Gentiles, the exaltation of Christ a matter of joy to them, 586, f.
Israel, Israelites, their disobedience and punishment a warning to Christians, 198, 199, x. strengthened by events that have already happened, ibid. their baptism in the sea a figure of Christian baptism, 337, n. captivity of, Psalm composed with a view to it, 507, z. miracles wrought for them have their counterpart in the Christian church, 534, h. considered as one body continued through succeeding generations, 534, i. wonders wrought for, commemorated as figures of the redemption of the Christian church, 537, b. their conquests over their enemies compared with those over our spiritual enemies by the Gospel, 537, e. corresponding benefits of the several victories, 537, f. in the wilderness, miracles wrought for them, figurative of Christian blessings, 551, n. rebellions of, picture of human nature, 556, e. cause and effects of them, 557, f. why not exterminated in the wilderness, 558, k. their redemption, less to be prized than that of Christians, 563, 564, x. reflections on their passage out of Egypt, 599, y. and through the wilderness, 599, z. various circumstances in their history applied to general practice, 600—602. deliverance of, from Egypt, an emblem of our redemption, 613, d. passage of, through the Red Sea and Jordan applied to Christians, 613, e. return of from Babylon, what it represents, 638, m. joy occasioned by it, 638, n. how celebrated, 638, o. how comforted under the fatigue of it, 638, q. Psalm composed soon after their return from captivity, 647, z. celebration of their return from Babylon, 658, s. defended in the wilderness, the good man compared to, 635, n. in Babylon, pathetick description of their situation, 647, a, b.
Israel, church of, description of her under oppression, 577, l, m.
Israel, God of, his superiority over gods of the heathen shewn by the miracles of Moses, 645, o. and by the victories of Israel in their passage to Canaan, 645, p. difference between him and idols, 645, q.
Israel, law of, comprehends the Gospel, 556, b.

J.

Jackson, Dr., his reflections on the history of the Jews recommended to every Christian's perusal, 603, q.
James I. King, attention paid to the Liturgy in his reign, viii.
James, St., the Great, account of him, 260, o. notion of the Spaniards concerning him, ibid. fulfilment of our Saviour's prediction to him, 261, q.
James, St., the Less, account of him, 248, c.
James, St., explanation of his direction about anointing the sick with oil, 376, l. explanation of his directions about the sick, 409, l.
January thirtieth, fast why not to be kept on a Sunday, 723, c. account of the office for it, 723, d.
Jeremiah, prophecy of the Messiah by him, 228, z. why appointed for an epistle, ibid. use to be made of it, 228, a.
Jerom, St., account of, lv. supposed author of the collects, 80, b. quotation from him concerning the Apocrypha, 753, a.
Jerusalem, a type of God's church, 511, k. hymn in honour of it, 513, z. a type of the church Christian, ibid. structure of, an occasion for thinking of the heavenly Jerusalem, 514, k. strength and beauty of it, 571, u. glorious things by which distinguished, 571, x. beauty of, an emblem of spiritual union, 636, r. why the Israelites periodically resorted thither, 636, t. an emblem of the stability of the church, 637, i.
Jerusalem, destruction of, a type of the destruction of the world, 88, k. a warning to sinners, 115, q. a parallel to it, 495, d. a figure of the general judgment, 516, g. an admonition to Christians, 518, u.
Jerusalem, prediction accomplished in its subversion, 528, c. its punishment an admonition against its sin, 532, p. effects of its desolation on beholders, 532, q. counterpart to our Saviour's complaint over it, 564, y.
Jesus, honour due to the name, 101, n. a source of happiness to those who properly consider it, ibid. lesson to be learned from the name, 103, q. See Christ.
Jew, the unbelieving, expostulation with him, 513, s.
Jews, their obstinacy and punishment a warning to all sinners, 95, b. their actions towards Christ prophesied of, 464, y. sublime description of the vengeance inflicted on them, 472, c. lively portrait of their desperate state, 472, d. judgment executed on them accurately delineated under two striking images, 472, e. their punishment for their malice against Christ, 477, p. their desolation foretold, 503, u. how reproved and convinced by God, 518, t. their singular punishment predicted, 527, a. causes of their dispersion, 527, b. their punishment a mark of their crime, 528, d. their imprecations fell on them and on their children, 533, p. their present state like that of their predecessors in the wilderness, 537, a. grounds of their enmity to our Saviour, 541, k. prediction of the judgments inflicted on them, 542, p. their present state, 542, q. extreme indignation poured out on them, 542, r. their exclusion from Jerusalem, 543, s. cause of the calamities inflicted on them, 543, t. permitted to go on in their wickedness, 543, u. how blotted out of the book of the living, 543, x. their dissolution a dreadful display of divine vengeance, 586, h. their sin and punishment for rebellion against the Son of God, 602, s. prayed for their conversion, ibid. their treatment of our Lord, and their punishment, 606, k. their wretched state foretold, 607, n. dispossessed of their office as the church of God, 607, o. the desolation of their country, their wanderings and covetousness, 607, p. their sufferings from other nations, 607, q. excision of their posterity, 608, r. contempt cast upon their memory, ibid. their crime plainly pointed out, 608, s. their continual infatuation and misery, 608, t. their hardness of heart, 609, x, y.
Jewish dispensation, peculiarities of, how to be applied to the Christians, 447.
Jewel, Bishop, probably the author of the second book of Homilies, 295, l.
Job, book of, why esteemed of much use in the Burial office, 526, f. old translation of the sentence from it commended, ibid.
John, St., the Baptist, his conduct wherein an example for ministers of the Gospel, 90, o. his record an example of true humility, 91, s. a clear intimation of our Lord's divine nature, ibid. why the Church celebrates his birth, 253, i. her commemoration of him not confined to that, ibid. account of him, ibid. how he prepared the way of the Lord, by his preaching, 254, k. by his baptism, 255, k. by his birth, ibid. manner of life, ibid. and death, ibid. his distinction between his own baptism and that of Christ, explained, 378, t.

John, St., the Evangelist, account of him, 96, c. why his festival accompanies that of our Lord's Nativity, ibid; 93, z. reflections on our Lord's words to St. Peter concerning him, 97, e. and on his own declaration concerning the truth of his Gospel, 98, e. why the Gospel for Good Friday taken from him, 149, n. fulfilment of our Saviour's prediction to him, 261, q.

John, St., application of a Psalm by him to the Messiah, 495, a. his application of a verse in the forty-first Psalm to our Saviour, 504, y.

John, St., Evang. ante Port. Lat. account of the day, xlvii.

Johnson, Mr., his paraphrase on the Psalms recommended, 447.

Jordan, our Saviour's baptism there, what it shews, 337, o.

Joseph, resemblance between his history and that of Jesus, 593, r, s.

Joseph and Mary, instruction to be derived from their observance of the passover, 108, y.

Joy, in what that of the church and of individuals consists, 475, b. what the fountain of it, 491, n. at the downfal of the enemies of man's salvation, source of it, 526, 527, q. the privilege of the righteous, 532, r. for the accomplishment of God's promises, every creature called upon to express it, 587, r. spiritual, Christians should be earnest in the pursuit of it, 166, p. in the Lord, what sort of, prescribed in Scripture, 452, q.

Jubilate, why so called, 27, f. character of it, ibid. when introduced into our Common Prayer Book, ibid. why used more frequently than the Benedictus, ibid.

Jubilee trumpet, allusion to it, 533, e.

Judas, lessons to be drawn from his history, 135, a. an example of the danger of wilful sins, ibid. of covetousness, ibid. of false notions of repentance, ibid. reflections on St. Peter's discourse concerning him, 250, s. meaning of the allusion to him in the Exhortation giving warning of the Communion, 302, n. his treachery foretold, 504, 505, d. f. his sin and fate, 522, 523, g. i, k. the sin and punishment of the Jews pourtrayed in his person, 543, s. his treachery and punishment foretold, 697, n, o.

Judah, tribe of, why the ark was removed thither, 560, t.

Jude, St., account of him, 272, f. his other names, ibid.

Judgment, day of, duly considered by few persons, 456, d.

Judgments, necessity of being instructed by them, 579, y.

Judgments of God, the Scriptures why so called, 620, x. remembrance of them how a remedy against temptation, 623, i. consequence of meditating on them, 624, k.

Just men, their actions well pleasing to God, 498, d.

Justification in St. Paul's sense, different from final justification, 129, 130, r. the right way and method of it, 205, l. how we may be qualified for it, ibid. where to be sought, 228, 229, a. what it signifies in Scripture, 764, d.

Justified, cause for which men are so, 764, e. different doctrines of our Church and the church of Rome upon it, 764, f.

K.

Kadesh, wilderness of, its situation, 487, x.

Kedar, the son of Ishmael, comparison to his descendants, 626, h.

Kneeling, why prescribed during prayer, 7, q. examples for the practice, ibid. a natural posture, ibid. under what circumstances not required, ibid. not to be wilfully neglected, ibid. why prescribed to the people during the Absolution, 10, g. a posture of religious worship with holy men in Scripture, 14, r. and of the church in heaven, ibid. at prayer, reasonableness of the posture, 33, t. why a fit posture for the Litany, 61, g. why prescribed to the people whilst the Commandments are rehearsed, 282, d; 283, f; 287, p. improperly neglected, 287, p. especial propriety of it at the general Confession in the Communion service, 307, f. not proper in the previous Exhortation, ibid.

Kneeling, only three times prescribed to the minister during the Communion service, 398, k.

Kneeling at the Communion, propriety of it, 317, s. no just scruple against it, ibid. sense of the Church upon it, ibid. antiquity and universality of it, ibid. history of the protestation concerning it, 328, n. why prescribed by our Church, 440, i.

Kneeling, why enjoined on persons when ordained, 692, l.

Keys of death and the grave, meaning of the phrase, 539, n.

King, heavenly, different images under which he is represented, 586, g. magnificent description of him, 594, o.

King, his piety a great national blessing, 286, k. obedience to him a source of national happiness, 286, l. and a religious duty, ibid. how to be practised, 286, m. on what principle his right to the appointment of bishops is established, 712, c. his mandate demanded instead of the pope's, 713, e.

King's supremacy, declaration of its extent, 684, l. acknowledged in Scripture, ibid. does not include the possession or conferring of the office of priesthood, ibid. Article concerning it, account of some alterations in it by Queen Elizabeth, 796, d. doctrine of the Church concerning it agreeable to the practice under the first Christian emperors, 796, e.

King's supremacy, oath of, necessity of it, 684, l. its reasonableness, ibid. ought not to be taken by any who doubt its propriety, ibid. vindicated, 685, m.

King's Primer, account of it, v.

Kings, why all mankind have agreed to pray for them, 39, p. their hearts under God's governance, 287, u. exhortation to them to submit to Christ, 452, p. on what grounded, 452, r. what conduct to be observed before them, 623, a. their duty in the day of conquest, 654, b.

Kings of the Gentiles, their oblations at the temple of Jerusalem a figure of their accession to the church of Christ, 540, x.

"Kingdom of God," what meant by "not entering into it," 336, e. why we pray God to "hasten" it, 432, x.

Kiss, a sign of adoration, 452, r.

Knowledge of the true God, description of those who reject it, 614, m.

Korah, his destruction an emblem of future punishment, 523, k.

L.

Labour, when successful, 639, t. why undergone, 639, u.

Lamb, paschal, in what respect the type of Christ, 769, a.

Lambert, Bishop, account of, lv.

Lammas-day, account of, liii.

Lamp, emblem of a change from affliction to honour, 471, y.

Language, virulent, even against profligate and wicked persons, not to be indulged in, 241, s.

Lantern, in what respects God's word compared to one, 628, d.

Last-day, particulars in the judgment of it, 517, l, m, n. judgment of, will solve all difficulties, 549, u. sensations which will be felt at it, 553, g.

Latin, learning in, why required for candidates for orders, 675, m. why the language long used in the church, 783, a. still retained by the Romanists, ibid. its long continuance in the English publick worship, xxxi. r.

Latin service, many ancient forms retained in it mixed with many errors, xxix, d.

Laurence, St., account of, liii.

Law of God, why better than riches, 625, d. how distinguished from human laws, 632, i. how the wondrous things of it are to be discerned, 620, g.

Law, obedience to it, why performed by our Saviour, 102, p.

Law, preached by Christ, what it denotes, 452, n.

Laws of England, import of a particular phrase in them, 496, g.

Laws of God, why the breach of them to be confessed with shame and sorrow, 8, u. in what the breaches of them consist, 8, x.

Laying on of hands, an ancient form of blessing, 391, m. instances of it, ibid. thence continued by the apostles in confirmation, ibid. why accompanied with prayer, ibid. import of the accompanying prayer, ibid. highly esteemed in the Church, ibid. what it naturally expresses, ibid. its further intention here, ibid. prayer accompanying it when said by the bishop, 392, o. See Imposition of Hands.

Learning, want of, how supplied in the apostles, 675, m.

required under the law, ibid. and in the primitive church, ibid.
LEBANON, what famous for, 486, u.
Lectionaries, what they were, 688, r.
Lecturers, what they were in popish times, xxi. s. what they are now, xxii. s.
"Led by the Spirit," why we should pray to be so, 454, o.
Legends, practice of reading them in the Roman service, xxix. f.
Lent, early observation of it, 122, c. whence it took its rise, 123, c. why forty days fixed for it, ibid. whence it takes its name, ibid. utility of the appointment, ibid. preparatory to Easter, ibid. how the forty days are to be reckoned, 123, d. discipline formerly inflicted in it, 439, r. how it degenerated afterwards, ibid. how supplied by our Church, ibid.
LEONARD, account of him, lix.
Leprosy, the healing of it a strong proof of our Saviour's power, 111, e. as also his manner of healing it, ibid.
Lesson, second at Evening Prayer, instance of one from the Gospels, 104, r.
Lesson, for the Burial service, its fitness, 429, k. its contents, ibid.
Lessons conveniently placed in the daily service, 21, k. why to be announced by the minister, 22, r. remark on the form of words in which they are to be announced, ibid. in what manner we should hear them, 26, d. why taken from both Testaments, ibid.
Lessons, proper, remarks on the course of them, 21, m. table of, uncertainty in the use of it, xxxiii. a. observations thereupon, ibid.
"Let us pray," an ancient form of exciting to prayer, 33, u. utility of it, ibid. sometimes has a more particular sense, ibid. why sometimes used immediately after other prayers, 68, d.
Leviathan, for whom intended, 551, m. meaning of the name in Scripture, 596, e.
Levites, Psalm sung by them on shutting the gates of the temple, 644, h.
Liberties of a questionable nature, mode of satisfying doubts and scruples concerning them, 218, f.
Liberty, Christian, how to be obtained, 623, c.
Life, why to be desired, 488, h. shortness of it, what sense of it to be prayed for, 501, b. until what time we should pray God to spare it, 502, l. its shortness, reflections on, 578, 579, x. a great blessing, but not the greatest, 531, h. compared to a dream, 549, t. depends on the presence of God, 596, g. breath of, to be used in the service of the Giver, 661, t.
Life, in a double sense, the consequence of Christ's resurrection, 618, i. twofold, should be employed in praising God, 634, c.
Life, a good one, redounds to God's honour, 9, d.
Life, eternal, awarded to good men, why called the gift of God, 195, p.
Life, amendment of, necessary to forgiveness, 9, d. the end of God's mercy in Christ Jesus, ibid. why asked in Christ's name, ibid.
"Lift up thy feet," meaning of the phrase, 550, d.
Light, what it signifies in Scripture, 48, l.
"Light of light," what the phrase was intended to intimate, 291, a, b.
Lightnings and thunders, instruments of the divine vengeance, 471, r.
"Like unto Christ," in what sense we pray that we may be so, 115, o.
Lion, David's fear of one how to be understood, 456, z. application to Christians, ibid. sinners compared to one, 461, n. David's enemies, why compared to one, 468, 469, e. application to Christians, ibid.
Lions, the wicked compared to them, 526, m.
Lips of man to be employed in God's service, 620, c. lying, how we may be delivered from them, 634, f. their punishment, 635, g.
Litany, meaning of the word, 60, e. form of ours derived from the primitive age, ibid. comes near to that of Gregory the Great, ibid. why used on particular days of the week, 60, f, g. formerly a distinct service, 60, d. still to be so considered, 61, g. how it resembles those of other churches, ibid. in what posture to be repeated, ibid. the sum of it contained in the invocations, 61, i. remarks on its address to each Person of the blessed Trinity, 61, 62, k, l, m. parts into which it is divided, 62, n. the invocation, both a creed and a confession of sin, ibid. why the deprecations succeed the invocation, 62, o. method in which they are arranged, ibid. addressed to our Redeemer, ibid. connexion between the parts pronounced by the minister, and those by the people, 62, o. should be carefully observed in repeating it, ibid. particulars from which we pray to be delivered in it, 63, 64, p, q, r. vehemence of devotion in the deprecations, 64, s. manner in which we intreat the Lord to deliver us, agreeable to Scripture, ibid. why we specify several times in which we pray to be delivered, 64, u. character of the intercessions in it, 64, x. propriety with which they are introduced, ibid. connected view of them, ibid. devotion that prevails in the intercessions, 66, y. advantage of its interchangeable way of worship, ibid. exact order of it, and the excellence of its composition, ibid. expressiveness of the short sentences after the intercession, 66, z. their scriptural character, ibid. and antiquity, ibid. exposition of them, ibid. their influence, on devotion, ibid. propriety of recurring to an address to the whole Trinity, 67, a. excellence of the conclusion, ibid. supplications in it, what and whence taken, 68, b. fit preparation for the Lord's Prayer, 68, c. in what respect the remainder of it differs from what went before, 68, d. when first introduced, ibid. exposition of it, ibid. peculiar excellence and beauty of the office, 70, d.
Litany, why part of it used in the Visitation of the Sick, 410, m.
Litany, proper to be used in the Ordination service, 679, 680, c. fitness of the clause then introduced into it, 680, c.
Litany of the Greek church, remarkable insertion in it, 64, t.
Litany, the short, what it is, 33, v. its antiquity, ibid. its resemblance to the larger Litany, ibid. a fit preparation for the Lord's Prayer, 34, v. what the Church intimates by prefixing it to the Lord's Prayer, ibid. the last versicle in it, when to be, and when not to be, repeated by the people, ibid. remark on the second versicle being in Italicks, 34, x.
Litany, short, proper petition for miserable persons, 410, n.
Litany, short, propriety of it in the Burial service, 432, t.
Litanies, their use in the ancient church, 60, e.
Liturgy, English, character of, before the Reformation, v. prudence of the compilers of it, 38, l. agreeable to a declaration of our Lord, 247, b. contains a qualification prescribed by our Saviour, 259, e.
Liturgy, compilers of, their care in selecting from old offices, 403, c.
Liturgy, Scotch, some account of it, vi. provision of it with respect to the Communion Table, 280, t. a provision of it with respect to the Lord's Supper commended, 298, s. its order to the minister during the time of consecration of the elements, 313, d. its provision of a form of words for administering the Communion, 318, t. a convenient provision of it, about the bread and wine at the Communion, 327, i. word presbyter, why substituted in it for priest, 694, q.
Liturgies, ancient, contain forms of confession of sin, 6, n. their constant use of the Lord's Prayer, 13, p. the model of ours in the responses before the Psalms, 16, x. their use of the invitatory Psalm, 17, b. used the same form of exciting to prayer as ours does, 33, u. used short forms of prayer, 36, e. collects taken from them, 80, 81, b. origin and description of them, 277, n.
"Look down from heaven," a scriptural phrase, 411, q.
Lord's Prayer, intended chiefly for publick assemblies, 13, p. whence taken, ibid. its excellence, ibid. why it ought to be united to all our offices, ibid. frequent use of it in the Church, not to be objected to, ibid. the use of it a duty to Jesus Christ, 13, p. and pleasing to God, ibid. its propriety at the beginning or close of any office, ibid. plain and general direction concerning the repetition of it, 14, p. why to be said by the minister with an audible voice, 15, q. how recited by the church of Rome, ibid. how by the ancient church, ibid. preparation requisite for it, 34, r. the object of our worship in it, ibid. why catechumens in the ancient church not allowed to be present at it, ibid. frequent use of it by the ancients, 68, c. a form to repeat and a pattern for imitation, 375, g. not originally difficult, 375, h. why not always properly apprehended, ibid. necessity of endeavouring to understand it, ibid.
Lord's Prayer, parts of which it consists, 14, s. paraphrase on it, ibid. practical use of it, 15, s. a petition in it paraphrased in the Litany, 62, o. doxology at the end of it, why sometimes used, and sometimes omitted, 15, t.

Lord's Prayer, propriety of its place in the daily service, 13, p. designed by our Lord, as a form of prayer, ibid. used in all the primitive Liturgies, ibid. with confession, &c. a kind of distinct office, 14, p. why most proper after the Confession, &c. ibid. why the people are always to repeat it, ibid.
Lord's Prayer, why repeated after the Apostles' Creed, 35, z. the frequent use of it not reasonably objected to, ibid.
Lord's Prayer, why used as the preface to the Communion service, 281, z. to be repeated by the people, ibid. reason of this appointment, ibid.
Lord's Prayer, its fitness after the Communion, 319, b. why the doxology added, ibid. antiquity of the institution, ibid. why to be repeated by all the communicants, 319, c.
Lord's Prayer, its reasonableness and propriety after a child is baptized, 350, v. why called by the ancients the prayer of the regenerate, ibid.
Lord's Prayer, particularly applicable to the state of the sick, 410, o.
Lord's Prayer, appropriate meaning of its petitions in the Burial service, 432, t.
Lord's Supper, scriptural and ancient name of the sacrament, 273, o. why objected to by the papists, ibid. purpose of it, 330, d. why so called, ibid. design of our Saviour in its institution, 330, e. why said to be for a continual remembrance, ibid. how it strengthens and refreshes our souls, 381, k. qualifications for, properly reduced to three, 382, l. how to be judged of, 382, n, o, p. assertions of Scripture concerning it, how to be understood, 381, i. care of the Church to understand them aright, ibid. agreement among the different accounts of its institution, 787, r. its adoption amongst Christians almost universal, ibid. character of it, 787, s. benefits of it, ibid. sacrament of, doctrine of the Romanists concerning it especially dear to them, 791, k. our neglect of the same, ibid. wicked partake not of Christ in it, 789, c. See Communion.
Lord's Supper, why commanded to be communicated in at Easter, 145, i. two mistaken notions about receiving it, corrected, 146, l. what preparation requisite for it, ibid. a requisite qualification of it not mentioned in the Catechism, 384, l. no opportunity of receiving it should be omitted, 784, h.
Lord's Supper, instituted by our Lord in both kinds, 381, g. necessary to be so received, 381, g; 789, e.
Lords, spiritual, why not mentioned in the Act of Uniformity in Elizabeth's time, xvi. b.
Lots, deciding by them, instituted by God's command, 242, t. resorted to by the apostles in a case of great exigence, ibid.
Love, that perfection in which God appears particularly to delight, 185, u. imitation of it, the duty and mark of Christians, ibid.
Love of God, importance of it, 216, d. how to be practised, ibid. foundation of it, 374, e.
Love to our neighbour, persons to whom it ought to extend, 206, m. instances whereby it should be expressed, ibid. meaning of the Gospel precept concerning it, 207, m. importance of it, 216, d. not excused by love of God, ibid. a distinction of Christ's disciples, 274, h. the hatred of the world does not discharge us from it, ibid.
Love of our neighbour to be shewn after the example of our Saviour, 252, h. by suiting the expressions of it to the circumstances of others, ibid. by acts of kindness to their souls, ibid. and at the expense of our temporal inconvenience, ibid.
Low Sunday, what Sunday so called, and why, 161, g.
Lucian, account of him, xxxix.
Lucy, V. and M. account of her, lxi.
Luke, St., account of him, 269, 270, c. author of the Acts of the Apostles, ibid. his Gospel, ibid. his constancy commended, 270, 271, d. the sincerity of his friendship, ibid. and his diligence in the ministry, ibid.
Lusts, to glory in them a symptom of a reprobate mind, 460, h.
Luther, his testimony to the Athanasian Creed, 51, n. his change of transubstantiation into consubstantiation, 788, t.
Lying, way of, how opposed to the way of truth, 621, o.

M.

Machutus, account of him, lix.
Magdala, coasts of, opinions concerning the name, 195, o.
Magistrate, in what sense said to bear the sword, 797, i.
Magistrates, their authority and responsibility, 564, b. charge given to them, 564, d. the well-being of the community depends on them, 565, e. their dignity and future condition, 565, f.
Magnificat, why generally used in the Christian Church, 44, d. properly placed in the service, ibid. reason of the name, ibid. occasion of the hymn, ibid. exposition of it, ibid.
Malachi, a prophecy of his accomplished in our Saviour, 239, p. lessons suggested by a consideration of it, ibid.
Malice, difficulty of finding shelter from it figuratively described, 523, f.
Mamercus, inventor, or restorer, of the Rogations, 169, x.
Man, duty of, in what it consists, 372, b. the end of, how to be attained, 450, b. Scripture account of, in his natural state, 464, x. his greatest happiness in this world, 483, n. his mortal state, vanity of it, 501, d. his continuance in this world, shewn by comparison, 515, u. his presumption contrasted with the long-suffering of his Maker, 534, s. should neither presume nor despair, 593, i. provision for the convenient performance of his duties, 595, c. formation of, an astonishing proof of God's knowledge and power, 649, q. comparison illustrative of the process, 650, r. and of the singular ability of the divine Workmaster, ibid. especially his duty to praise God for his works, 660, k. great things done for him by his Redeemer, 654, c. his power in a state of nature, 768, l.
Mankind, in general, their conduct reflected in that of the nine lepers, 203, p. depravity of, described, 455, p. their duty to praise God, 660, k. several reasons belonging to every degree, sex, and age, ibid.
Manna, in the wilderness, descent of the Spirit on the church compared to it, 537, c. largeness of the provision in both cases, 537, d. what it was intended to represent, 557, f.
Mantles, custom of carrying things in them, 561, b.
Margaret, St., account of her, li.
Mariners in a storm, preservation of, an image of God's goodness in our salvation, 604. d.
Mark, St., whether the John, surnamed Mark, mentioned in the Acts, 245, z. account of him, 246, z. passage from his Gospel in the office of Baptism, impertinently censured by some, 338, t. propriety of it shewn, ibid. for what reason the Church propounds, it, ibid.
Marriage, graced by our Saviour's first miracle, 109, b. reflections thereon, 110, b.
Marriage, banns of, alteration in the time of publishing them, 293, i; 296, z. antiquity of their being published, 396, a. at what part of the service to be published, ibid. design of the Church in publishing them, ibid. reasons of the alterations in the time of publishing, 396, b. form when added, ibid. notice to be given in writing, &c. ibid. licence no more than a substitute for them, 396, a.
Marriage, licence for, its efficacy, 396, a.
Marriage, special licence for, supersedes the general rules about time and place, 397, d. as well as some other provisions, 398, d.
Marriage, in what place to be solemnized, 397, c. and at what time, 397, d. why performed in the body of the church, 398, e. where performed formerly, ibid. place of solemnizing, statute of George II. concerning it, 398, d. not to be solemnized without banns or licence, ibid. exceptions to the rule, ibid. why solemnized in the presence of friends and neighbours, 398, e. question what meant by friends, ibid. how many witnesses required, ibid. See Matrimony.
Marriages, Psalm sung at, 639, z.
Marriages, clandestine, orders of the Church to prevent them, 395, y.
Martin, St., account of him, lix. translation of, li.
Martyrs, early commemoration of them, xxxiv. days of their deaths why called their birth-days, ibid. abuse in celebrating them how corrected at the Reformation, ibid. why commemorated after Christmas, 93, z. three kinds of martyrs, ibid. early commemoration of them in the church, 94, z. abuse of it, ibid. corrected at the Reformation, ibid. their sufferings and resistance to their persecutors, 503, k.
Mary Magdalene, St., account of her, li.

Mass, why the Communion service was so called, 288, q. and when, 791, i. false doctrine relating to it, 315, e. an idolatrous practice, 315, 316, k.
Mass, how used in composition, 91, u.
Masses, solitary, origin of them, 790, g. disallowed by our Church, 326, e. contrary to the practice of the primitive church, ibid.
Matrimony, why always entered into with religious rites, 395, y. provisions of our Church for the solemn celebration of it, ibid. what are the impediments to it in England, 396, b. formerly celebrated in publick, 398, 399, h. innocent festivity not unsuitable on the occasion, ibid. religious solemnities of old usual at it, 407, k. utility of them, 408, k. happiness of a wedlock religiously contracted, ibid. See Marriage.
Matrimony, mistake of the papists in esteeming it a sacrament, 377, l.
Matrimony, office of, made by our Reformers like that of the primitive church, 395, y. its contents, ibid. purpose of the preface, 398, g. its solemn charge to the contracting parties, 399, i. importance of the mutual stipulation, 401, q. excellence of the form of stipulation, ibid. why the consent of the parties asked, 399, k. the duties enumerated in it explained, ibid. difference in the duties of the two parties, 400, k. solemn obligation laid on the parties by the answer, "I will," 400, l. remarks on the mutual stipulation, 400, m. remarks on the giving of a ring, 401, t. and of the form of words accompanying it, 402, y, z: 403, a, b. appropriateness of the benedictory prayer, 403, c. whence the prayer was taken, ibid. remarks on the Ratification, 404, d. concluding benediction agreeable to ancient example, ibid. why finished with hymns, &c. 404, e. remarks upon them, 405, 406, f, g, h.
Matthew, St., account of him, 264, u. reflection on his call, 265, u. his Gospel, ibid. his alacrity in obeying our Saviour's call, 266, y. his motive for doing so, ibid. his constancy unto death, 267, y.
Matthias, St., account of him, 241, r. manner of his appointment to be an apostle, remarked on and explained, 242, l.
Mattins and Evensong, how generally called, xxxiii. z.
Maundy Thursday, what day so called, and why, 145, k.
Mauritius the emperor, anecdote of him, 631, f.
May twenty-ninth, special rubrick relating to the observance of it explained, 730, e. account of the service, 731, f.
Meals, duty of rendering acknowledgments to God at them, 130, s.
Means of grace, what so called, 247, b.
Means, diligence in the use of them our duty, when in our power, 253, m.
Mediator, Christ the only one, 759, e. what meant by his being so, ibid. proofs that He is so, ibid.
Meditations, David's prayer for the acceptance of them, 475, y.
Meek, how said to possess the earth, 497, u.
Member of Christ, explanation of the phrase, 367, c. propriety of it, ibid. much used in Scripture, ibid. duties suggested by it, ibid.
Memory, used for a memorial, 315, f.
Men, the best only comparatively good, 769, b. their failings why represented in Scripture, ibid.
Mercies, former, recollection of them a comfort in distress, 482, i. and a motive to confidence, 531, k. a ground of confidence in God, 544, i. an antidote against despair, 554, u. gratitude for, will obtain a continuance of them, 570, q. particular, should remind us of the universal blessing of redemption, 592, g. reflection on, a motive for thanksgiving, 625, u. an argument for trust in God under affliction, 648, m.
Mercy, misery the proper object of it, 8, z. former a ground of hope for the future, 550, c. to be prayed for after punishment, 626, h.
Mercy and judgment, the theme of David's song, what meant by them, 589, i.
Mercy-seat, how used with relation to oracle, 436, n.
Merit, in our works and services, why the thought of it to be renounced, 517, p.
Merit, twofold, spoken of by the Schoolmen, how distinguished, 767, r. not acknowledged in Scripture, ibid.
Messiah, by what peculiar characters to be known from all other prophets, 229, b. See Christ.
Metropolitan, how distinguished by the Greeks from an Archbishop, 710, t.
Michael, St., and all Angels, why this festival is celebrated by the Church, 267, z.
Midlent Sunday, what Sunday so called, 129, q. other name for it, ibid.
Mind, errors and evil dispositions of, why reckoned amongst the works of the flesh, 208, o.
Minister, his duty in reading the Sentences, 2, b. recommendation to him after the Exhortation, 6, m. caution to him in saying the general Confession, 6, p. why to stand whilst reading the Lessons, 21, n. why directed to turn himself, &c. 21, o. caution to him before the Lesson begins, 21, p. his duty in giving notice of the Lessons, 22, r. caution to him after the Lessons, 23, s. caution to him in repeating the Creed, 29, h. caution to him about the manner of repeating the latter part of the Apostles' Creed, 31, o. caution to him after the Apostles' Creed, 33, s. why directed sometimes to kneel, and sometimes to stand, 35, a. his duty with respect to reading the Athanasian Creed, 58, c. should explain and defend the Athanasian Creed, ibid. caution to him in reading the Litany, 65, x; 63, o; 67, z; advice to him about the choice of psalms for singing, 79.
Minister, his duty with respect to repelling persons from the Communion considered, 279, q, r. in what cases he is to say the Amen at the end of a prayer, 281, z. why to turn to the people, in rehearsing the Commandments, 282, d. advice to him with respect to reading the Commandments, 283, f. how to stand when he reads the Collect for the king in the Communion Service, 286, i. reason of his change of direction, ibid. must proceed after the Gospel immediately to the Nicene Creed, 288, s. his duty as to placing the bread and wine on the Communion table, 293, s. caution to him before the prayer for Christ's Church Militant, 299, u. caution to him with respect to the Exhortation giving warning of the Communion, 300, c, e. his duty inforced when the people are negligent to come to the Communion, 303, p. advice to him about reading the Exhortation in the Communion service, 304, s. attitude prescribed to him in the Communion service, 308, h. caution to him about the sentences after the Absolution in the Communion service, 310, r. caution to him about the Prayer of Consecration in the Communion service, 315, h. to kneel when he receives the Communion, 317, s. admonition to him about the times of administering the Communion, 327, k.
Minister, consideration of his duty as to the days of administering baptism, 332, 333, s. caution to him about the place of administering the office of Publick Baptism, 333, s. forbidden by the rubrick to use the form of Publick Baptism except at the font, 334, y. and by the very office itself, ibid. question concerning his posture at the prayers in the offices of Baptism, 337, l. caution to him after the interrogatories at baptism, 343, c. manner in which the Church directs him to baptize, 345, o. bound to observe the direction, 346, o. what may be considered his certificate that a child is too weak to be dipped, ibid. questions concerning his duty as it relates to private baptism, 353, d. a positive part of the institution of baptism, 355, g. question concerning his manner of certifying a private baptism, administered by himself, 357, m. punctuality required of him in putting the interrogatories relating to private baptism, 356, n. advice concerning the manner of using the office of Private Baptism, in certain cases, 357, o. and concerning the direction about Confirmation at the end of it, 357, p.
Minister, his duty to prepare persons for Confirmation, 384, y. not to bring children to be confirmed too soon, 387, c.
Minister, his duty to visit the sick, 409, l. discretion allowed him in the visitation of the sick, 412, u. general rules to guide him, 413, y. his duty with respect to the sick, 413, z. caution to him concerning the absolution of the sick, 416, g. why he should persuade sick persons to receive the sacrament of the Lord's Supper, 420, q.
Minister, whether bound by the Coroner's warrant in cases of self-murder, 424, x. not required to attend at the house of the deceased before burial, 424, y. intitled to convenient warning, ibid. his powers with respect to places of burial, 425, z.

Minister, not to perform the office of the Churching of Women in private, 436, f.
Minister, his obligation to abide by his engagement, 698, x. his duty to adhere to the doctrine of the Thirty-nine Articles, and to the rites and ceremonies of the rubrick, 794, x.
Minister, equivocal signification of the word, xx. p.
Ministers of the Gospel, why called "stewards of God's mysteries," 88, m. attention and respect due to them, 89, n. and to their preaching, ibid. their duty in preparing for Christ's coming, 90, o. a regular appointment of them by our Lord, 162, i. promise to them of God's providence, ibid. how they should be esteemed, ibid. should have the prayers of their people, 221, m. regular commission requisite for them, 231, e. nature of their calling, 271, e. distinction to be made between the true and the self-commissioned, ibid. their success depends on God's blessing, 272, e.
Ministers, orders of, three in the primitive and reformed churches, 671, a. seven in the church of Rome, ibid. description of them, ibid. origin of those in the Church of England, ibid.
Ministers, regard due to their office, 672, d. entrance to their office should be well guarded, 673, e. provisions in Scripture and in the primitive church for preventing unqualified persons from being admitted, ibid. provisions of our Church concerning the same, 673, f. authority for admitting them, ibid. recommended to read the Ordination services, 674, g. testimonials required for their admission, 674, k. their qualification with respect to conduct, 675, l. and learning, 675, m. injunctions of ancient church and of our canons concerning their dress, 678, t. their dress not matter of indifference, ibid. why appointed each to a particular church, 688, s. necessity of due subordination among them, 690, f. orders of distinction between the primitive and the Roman modes of conferring orders on them, 691, h. their duty limited by the laws and canons, 699, c. folly and presumption of departing from that rule, ibid. their duty to drive away both error and vice, 701, d. advice relating to it, ibid. why they must not assume authority to themselves, 782, u. who may be judged lawful ministers, 782, y. on what the efficacy of their ministrations depends, 785, m.
Ministers, opinion that their personal sins invalidated their sacred functions, whence derived, 785, t. and by whom maintained, ibid. distinction to be made between their actions, as private Christians, and publick officers, 785, m. their personal faults not a justification of Christians for absenting themselves from publick worship, ibid.
Ministers, evil, to be punished for misconduct, 786, n. how visited by the discipline of the primitive church, ibid. injurious consequences of their vices, ibid.
Ministry, importance of its establishment in the church, 704, m. prayer founded thereon, ibid.
Miracles, evidence afforded by them to the Christian religion, 89, o. proper season for them, ibid. the ground of Christian faith, 110, b. those of Christ believed by men of rank and character, 111, c. what peculiar ones were to distinguish the Messiah, 229, b. use of them to establish new discoveries of God's will, 263, s. an authentick and indisputable testimony of a divine mission, ibid. See Christ.
Mischief, vanity of the wicked in boasting they can do it, 520, r.
Moloch, impiety of offering children to him, 602, r. reflection on it, ibid.
Money, in what way not to be given upon usury, 466, g.
Monster, in what sense the Psalmist was so, 544, k.
Moravian Anabaptists said to omit part of the Lord's Prayer, and why, 770, c.
Morning, a proper season for devotion, 632, m. duty of prayer each morning, 531, g.
Morning Prayer, formerly done betimes, 60, d.
Morning watch, who intended by the phrase, 641, o.
Morning and Evening Prayer, why required to be said daily by the clergy, xxxi. s.
Mosaick dispensation, three parts of which it consisted, 760, g. how far binding upon Christians, ibid.
Moses, Psalm composed by him in the wilderness, 578, q. points of resemblance between him and Christ, 598, n. his disinterested intercession, 601, m. exceeded by that of Christ, ibid. reflections on his offence, 602, p. what shewn by his miracles, 645, o.
Most Highest, peculiarity and propriety of the phrase, 458, r.
Moth fretting a garment, sin justly and affectingly compared to it, 502, i.
Mother-Church, what church so called, and why, 333, u.
Mountain, David's kingdom why so called, 488, g.
Musical instruments, lawful in Christian worship, 46, f.
Musick, its antiquity in psalmody, 19, g. its uses, ibid. its utility in praising God, 491, o. why sometimes used by the Psalmist, 515, o. sacred arguments for the use of it, 661, s.
Musick, Hebrew instruments of, impossible to be distinguished, 661, s.
Mysteries, not confined to the Christian revelation, 54, t. not a sufficient ground of unbelief, ibid.
Mysteries of God, what they are, 88, m.
Mystery, how distinguished from Sacrament, 302, k.
Mystical body, meaning of it, 274, k.

N.

Name, Christian, why taken at baptism, 344, k. what it reminds us of, ibid. a similar practice among the Greeks and Romans, ibid. and among the Jews, ibid. prevalent among the Christians from the earliest ages, ibid. why dictated by the Godfathers and Godmothers, 345, l. how distinguished from our parental name, ibid. not a necessary part of baptism, 366, x. why then given, ibid. usefulness of the practice, ibid. advantage of its being given by sureties, 367, y. why given by sureties, 367, z.
Name of God, what meant by knowing it, 459, u. his actions answerable to it, 514, h. prayer that it should not be blasphemed among the nations, 550, f. holy and terrible, 611, n. what it reveals to us, 624, m.
Name of Jesus, account of the day, liii.
Names, new, why given in baptism, 334, a.
Nativity of V. Mary, account of the day, lv.
Nature, human, its exaltation in Messiah celebrated, 457, i. how we should acknowledge its disorders, 504, b. in what way confessed by our Saviour, ibid. its impotence to be confessed, 529, p. imperfection of, acknowledged by the most pious men, 765, m. enters into all that men do, ibid. See Human Nature.
Nature, order of, lessons which it points out to us, 627, s.
Nature, wonders of, represent the miracles of grace, 659, b.
Necessary doctrine and erudition for any Christian man, account of that work, v. quotation from it, 763, c.
Net, figuratively used, 488, n. comparison to a bird hunted into one, 525, d.
New moons, how observed by the Jews, 563, t. particular regard to the September new moon, ibid.
New Testament, why delivered to deacons at their ordination, 692, l.
Nicomede, account of him, xlix.
Nicholas, Bp., account of him, lxi.
Nicholls, Dr., his paraphrase on the Psalms recommended, 447.
Night, how to be understood, 38, m. a fit season for religious meditation, 531, i.
Noah, his deliverance in the ark a figure of Christian baptism, 337, n.
Nobleman of Capernaum, an example to us in his own belief, and in his conduct to his family, 222, n.
Nocturn, portion of Psalms why so called, xxix. l.
Notorious evil livers, what persons to be so considered, 278, 279, q.
November Fifth, form of prayer for, accounts of its contents, 713, b.
Number, singular or plural, used indifferently by the Church, 508, g.
"Numbering our days," what meant by it, 579, z. utility of it, ibid.
"Nunc dimittis," author and occasion of it, 46, g. universal use of it among Christians, ibid. why so called, ibid. its fitness for our use, ibid. properly placed in the service, ibid. caution about repeating it, ibid.

O.

"O God, whose nature and property &c.," excellence of the prayer so beginning, 73, h. ancient use of it, ibid. when added to our Liturgy, ibid. its proper place in the Liturgy, ibid.

O Sapientia, account of the day, lxi.
Oath, what it is, 798, p. duly administered, not forbidden by the Gospel, 798, q. magistrates at liberty to require it, 798, r. arguments for it in the conduct of St. Paul and our Saviour, 799, r. a part of Christian worship, 799, s.
Oath, why God makes use of one, 11, k.
Obedience to God's commandments, not to be limited, 194, n. one act of, the issue and reward of another, 624, n. motives to it, 634, z. plea of it in what sense alleged, ibid.
Obedience, canonical, character of it, 691, f. required by the church in all ages, ibid. and by reason and Scripture, ibid.
Oblations, custom of making them at the Communion, apostolical, 296, o. how distributed in primitive times, ibid. how to be understood in the prayer for Christ's church militant, 298, s.
Ocean, God's power over it an instance of his omnipotence, 575, x. striking proof of the wisdom and power of God, 596, e.
Ocean, and its inhabitants, how they praise God, 660, g.
Ocean, sin and consequent misery compared to it, 641, l.
Octave, practice of the primitive Christians concerning it, 100, l.
Offerings of believers, what they are, 629, g.
Offertory, why so called, 296, o.
Offices, different, different duties corresponding to them, 109, a.
"Old Adam," what meant by the phrase, as contrasted with the "new man," 343, e. what by the burial of the one and the raising up of the other, ibid.
Old age, inference from the weakness incident to it, 544, l.
Old Testament, its agreement with the New, 758, d. concerns itself about eternal salvation, ibid. its method of securing it, ibid.
Old Testament, histories of, their use, 566, m.
Old Testament, precepts of, those which do not oblige Christians and those which do, 760, g.
Olive trees, flourishing children why compared to them, 640, c.
Open, why we pray to God to open our lips, 520, n.
Orders, holy, not properly accounted a sacrament by the papists, 377, l.
Ordinances, religious, established by God, 563, u.
Ordinary, his authority how limited, xxx. q. recourse to be had to him in cases of difficulty, xxxiii. a. who intended by the word, 61, h.
Ordination, when performed formerly, 215, b. what the proper times for, 675, n. why celebrated near the altar, 678, s. course to be pursued if candidates are accused of any great crime, 679, a. that of our ministers complete, 795, b. character of the offices, ibid.
Ordination, candidates for, duty of those who examine them, 678, x, y. why commended to the prayers of the congregation, 679, b. necessity of their considering in private the questions which will be put to them, 685, n. solemn promises they make to God and his church, 691, g.
Ordination, book of, account of some circumstances in its history, 795, c.
Ordination, forms of, various, 692, k. ours owing to our Reformation, ibid. remarks upon them, ibid. their excellence, 674, g. recommended to the perusal of candidates and clergymen, ibid.
Ordination, offices of, reading them over often recommended, 691, g. their excellency, 707, r. application to the ordained, ibid. and to all who are present, ibid.
Ordination, vows of, compared with those of baptism, 691, g.
Organ, may be usefully played after the psalms, 20, i. caution to the performer and the congregation, ibid.
Original guilt, what meant by it, 753, m. how distinguished from actual sin, ibid.
Original righteousness, what understood by it, 761, r.
Original sin, term, of not very early use, 761, o. antiquity of the doctrine, ibid. how expressed by early writers, ibid. the constant doctrine of Scripture, ibid. and of the ancient writers of the church, ibid. argument for it, ibid. two opinions concerning it stated, 761, 762, s. difficulty of the subject, 762, s. difference between them why not very material, ibid. proofs that it remains in all men, ibid. not taken away intirely by baptism, ibid. consequence of its remaining in us, 762, t. by what sects denied, 336, d. evidences of it, ibid. consequence of denying it, ibid.
Ornaments of the church and its ministers, why required, lxxiii. p. consideration of the rubrick concerning them, ibid. what comprising under them, lxxiv. p.
Overcome, meaning of the phrases to be overcome by, and to overcome, evil, 110, d.
Overcome, why God said to have "overcome death through our Saviour," 155, x.
Overall, Bp., wrote the explanation of the Sacraments in the Catechism, 366, t.

P.

Palestine, extent of it, 562, k.
Pall, Archbishop's, account of it, xxxix.
Pall, linen cloth so called, 318, a. antiquity and design of, 319, a.
Palla altaris, distinguished from corporis palla, 230, t.
Palm Sunday, what Sunday so called, 132, y. and why, ibid. manner of observing it formerly, ibid.
Palm-tree, felicity of the righteous compared to it, 581, o.
Parable, what meant by speaking in the way of, 515, o.
Parable of the labourers in the vineyard, explained and applied, 118, t. illustrative of God's kindness, ibid. and of our duty, ibid. a lesson of humility and charity, ibid. caution against perverting it, ibid.
Parable of the sower, most worthy of serious consideration, 120, y. what it teaches, ibid.
Parable of the rich man and Lazarus, instruction given by it, 136, x.
Parable of the man that made a great supper, explained, 137, a. our concern in it, 138, a.
Parable of the unjust steward, intention of it, 199, y. its application, ibid.
Parable of the Pharisee and publican, instruction conveyed by it, 202, e.
Parable of the good Samaritan, application of it to ourselves, 206, m.
Parable concerning the man without a wedding garment, reflexions on it, 220, k.
Parable of the unforgiving servant, application of it, 224, q.
Parables, an instruction in the interpretation of them, 199, y. wherein the history of Israel resembles them, 556, a.
Pardon, excellent form of prayer for, 444, c.
Pardons or indulgences, doctrine of, on what founded, 780, p. what meant by it, ibid. not countenanced by Scripture, ibid. inconsistent with it, ibid.
Parents, why not admitted to be sureties for their children at baptism, 333, t. their duty in providing proper sponsors for their children, 339, 340, x. admonished not to neglect the baptism of their children, 353, d. why not thought so proper for sureties of children as other persons, 367, z. their obligation to send their children to be catechized, how to be understood, 384, s. not to bring children too early to confirmation, 387, c. should pray for their children in sickness, 418, m. the salvation of multitudes may depend on them, 477, o. consequence of their piety to their children, 612, r.
Parliament, prayer for, precedents for it, 73, i. its importance, ibid. on what occasion added to the Liturgy, 74, i. when and by whom composed, 74, k, l. remark on the phraseology of it, 74, l.
Parliament, session of, defined, 74, k.
Parson, proper signification of the word, and cause of it, xx. n.
Passion Sunday, what Sunday so called, 131, t.
Passion week, proper use of its devotions, 152, p.
Past time, why used in prophetical language for future, 485, c.
Paten, meaning of the word, 315, i. different sorts of, used at different times, ibid.
Paths, of God, to what opposed, 468, a. prayer to be held up in the goings of them, explained, ibid.
Patience, why required under ill usage, 500, t.
Patriarchs, their dangers, and preservation, 593, p.
Patrick, Bp., his paraphrase on the Psalms recommended, 447.
Paul, St., conversion of, when admitted among the holydays of the Church, lxiii. b. how distinguished from others, ibid. an example of care and exertion to Christians, 117, s. our example in estimating rightly sufferings for God's cause, 119, x. in charity, ibid. in constancy and diligence, ibid. a correct notion of his preaching afforded, 160, f. virtues of which he is an example, 202, d. why his conversion celebrated by the Church, 235, l. account of him, 236, m. his example a good rule for judging of zeal, 237, m. his conversion a proof of the wisdom of God, ibid. singular weight of his evidence, ibid. how the intention of the Church may be best complied with in commemorating him, 238, n. his probable connexion with Britain, ibid. remarks on his saying "this is a great mystery," 377, l. what he meant by saying that Christ sent him not to baptize, &c., 378, l. his first Epistle to the Corinthians, supplies the fullest account of the resurrection, 429, k. proof from him that David in the eighteenth Psalm is a type of Christ, 473, h. his application of the nineteenth Psalm to the publication of the Gospel, 473, k. 474, p. his quotation from the fortieth Psalm proves it to be a direct prophecy of Christ, 502, m. r. his application of a part of the sixty-eighth Psalm to our Lord's ascension, 538, m. his application of a passage in the sixty-ninth Psalm to our Saviour, 541, k. his application of the ninety-seventh Psalm to our Saviour, 536, e. his assertion that the one hundred and second Psalm is addressed to the Son of God, 590, n.

Peace, meaning of the petition to God for it, 33, d. comprehensiveness of the blessing, 37, h. especially to be prayed for, ibid. the reward of those who love God, 633, y. the promotion of it why made a duty of the clergy, 702, g. how to be performed, ibid.

Peace, literal, an emblem of the days of Messiah, 546, s.

Peace and Grace, why the subject of our daily prayers, 37, g.

Peace, collects for, at morning and evening prayer, how distinguished, 48, k.

"Peace of God," meaning of the phrase, 90, r. why said to keep, ibid. why to keep our hearts and minds, ibid. a blessing specially annexed to prayer, ibid.

Pelagius, account of him and his errors, 761, p.

Pelagians, their arrogant and unscriptural denial of original sin, 336, d. revived in the Socinians and Anabaptists, ibid. why they denied that infants are regenerated in baptism, 349, n. condemned and confuted, ibid. their calumny against the orthodox, 762, s. deny the assisting grace of God, 763, r. their extravagant doctrine that persons after baptism might live without sin, 770, c.

Penance, two significations of the word, 440, u.

Penance, an useful practice in the primitive church, 439, r. abused by the Romish church, ibid. what the church of Rome makes it to consist of, 376, l. not a Sacrament, ibid.

Penance, an ecclesiastical punishment, described, 792, p.

Penitent, his grounds for hope of pardon, 519, z, a, b. d. his occupation, 616, z.

Penitents, good effect of their praying to God in due time, 490, h. their aptness to forget what Christ has done for them, 600, y.

Pentecost, meaning of the name, 173, e. mode of reckoning it, ibid.

People, their duty during the Sentences, Exhortations, &c., 2, b. their previous duty in order thereto, ibid. a privilege allowed to them by the Gospel, 5, l. not to repeat the Exhortation after the minister, ibid. their duty in repeating the general Confession, 6, o. admonition to them thereupon, 7, p. necessity of their coming to church before it, ibid. 13, p. not to repeat the Absolution after the priest, 11, g. how to behave where the minister only is directed to speak, ibid. their duty during the prayers, 13, o. why directed to repeat the Lord's Prayer with the minister, 13, p. a privilege enjoyed by them in the Church of England, 15, u. their duty thereupon, 16, u. their promise to bear a part in the Psalms, &c., 17, y. advantage of their bearing a part as they ought to do, ibid. why the duty is neglected, ibid. their duty whilst the Scriptures are reading, 20, k. devotion with which they should join in the Te Deum, 22, s. why to repeat the Creed after the minister, 28, 29, g, h. why to stand up while they repeat it, ibid; 29, i. by what means they may repeat it as they ought, 29, h. caution to them respecting the short Litany, 34, v. caution to them whilst the minister is reading the Prayers, 36, e. Scripture precedent for their joining vocally in prayer, 61, i. why to repeat the four first verses of the Litany after the minister, 61, i; 62, n. should join in the service of the Church, 201, b. their privilege in being allowed to do so, ibid.

People, to repeat the Lord's Prayer at the Communion service, 231, z. not to repeat the Commandments after the minister, 283, f. ought to kneel during the rehearsal of them, 287, p. advice to them with respect to the Exhortations giving warning of the Communion, 300, e; 303, p; 304, r. t. serious attention required of them to the Exhortation in the Communion service, 306, b. by no means to pronounce the Absolution in the Communion service, 309, 310, p. how to behave during it, ibid. advice to them whilst others are communicating, 318, u. y. how to receive the blessing, 322, p. not to repeat it after the priest, ibid. still less after the bishop, ibid. absurdity of so doing, ibid. advice to them about receiving the Communion frequently, 327, k.

People, devotion recommended to them during the baptismal office, 337, l. admonition to them concerning their conduct during the interrogatories at baptism, 341, y.

People, not excused from joining in the service, by the appointment of a parish clerk, 402, x.

People, to say one of the collects in the Commination after the minister, 444, b, c.

People, why enquired of concerning the worthiness of persons to be ordained, 679, z. not called upon to take part in the Ordination, ibid. their fault if improper persons are ordained, ibid.

People of God, apostrophe to their enemies, 458, t. application of it by the Christian church, 459, t. their peculiar obligation to praise Him, 659, e.

Perambulation of parishes, order concerning it, 170, x.

"Perish everlastingly," meaning of the phrase, 52, q.

Perpetua, account of her, xliii.

Persecution, virtues especially seasonable under it, 192, i. permitted by God as a punishment of sin, 508, h. comfort whence to be drawn under it, 621, k. what it should teach us, 623, a. its use, and proper conduct under it, 633, r.

Persecutors, their doom exemplified, 494, s. examples of deliverance from, an encouragement to us, 653, q.

Perseverance, exhortation to it, 215, c.

Persons of the Trinity, mentioned together with notes of distinction, 182, 183, r. distinguished by their properties, 371, y.

Peter, St., reflections on his denial of Christ, 139, d. a proof of our frailty, ibid. a support under temptations, ibid. caution against misapplying it, ibid. main drift of his first Epistle, 165, u. admonition to comply with it, 165, o. account of him, 256, 257, l. meaning of his words concerning the baptism which saveth us, 378, t. his authority for saying that the one hundred and thirty-second Psalm is a prophecy of Christ, 643, a.

Pharaoh, conduct of the Israelites resembled his, 558, i. destruction of him and the Egyptians an instance of God's power, 574, y.

Pharisees, instruction to be derived from their conduct to our Saviour, 214, a; 218, g.

Philip, St., account of him, 248, c.

Pica letters, in printing, why so called, xxix. m.

Pie, table in the old Roman offices, for what used, xxix. m. meaning of the name, ibid. mistake concerning it, xxix. m.

Pilgrimage, benefit of regarding the soul as in such a state, 624, l.

Plato, a saying of his, 625, a.

Poland, nobles of, an ancient practice of theirs in repeating the Creed, 29, i.

Polycarp, notice of his martyrdom, 94, z.

Poor, comfort and encouragement suggested to them, 186, x. liberality to them, direction of the Church concerning it, 415, e. importance of the duty, ibid. necessary, though not meritorious, 416, e. means formerly in use for their subsistence, 689, b. care taken of them under the old dispensation, 793, o. regard shewn to them under the new, ibid.

Pope Pius V., remark on his sentence declaratory against Queen Elizabeth, 685, m.

Pope has no right to jurisdiction in this country, 797, h.
Popes, their arrogant monopoly of titles, which are common to all bishops, 710, n. their usurpation of the right of calling general councils, 778, k. their extravagant usurpation of authority, 791, n.
Popularity, danger of affecting it, 258, m.
Portion, happiness of those who take the Lord for their portion, 624, p.
Possessions, worldly, advantage of parting with them to gain heaven, 624, q.
Postil, meaning of the term, 293, k.
Pot made hot with thorns, force of the image intended to be conveyed by it, 526, p.
Pots, lying among, a state of affliction, 538, g.
Power, abuse of, example of it, 258, m.
Praise, why due to God, 644, l, m.
Prayer, preparation necessary for it, 1, a. necessity of constantly continuing it, 12, n. result of it when joined to our best endeavours, ibid. how distinguished from supplications, 33, u. encouragement to perseverance in it, 127, m. why not granted immediately, ibid. efficacy of it when fervent and persevering, ibid. when and for whom to be offered, 211, u. to be addressed to God, ibid. with all humility both of body and mind, ibid. direction concerning the matter of our prayers, ibid. to be accompanied with thanksgivings, 212, u. its necessity, 221, m. for whom it should be offered, ibid. manner in which God often grants it, 222, n. should be offered for one another, 223, p. what we should pray for, ibid. its efficacy exemplified, 258, m. not to be relinquished, if not immediately successful, ibid. three qualifications of an acceptable one, 325, c. blessing promised to it, 389, g. especially in Christian assemblies, ibid. and under their teachers and rulers, ibid. an antidote against despondency, 454, f. to be addressed to God with perseverance, 473, t. but without impatience, ibid. humiliation of, should succeed the assurances of faith, 485, f. not to be remitted in long affliction, 495, c. the believer's medicine in distress, 523, l. example of its being heard by God, 530, t. why we are encouraged to offer it, 570, l. examples of its efficacy, 588, a. duty and benefits of it, 621, n. interchanged with thanksgiving, 625, x. blessing to be entreated in it, 634, b. the voice of faith, 654, x.
Prayer and praise, productive of blessing, 644, i.
Prayer, private, recommended, 38, m.
Prayer, publick, scriptural authority for its being in a known tongue, 783, a. custom of the primitive church concerning it, ibid.
Prayer Book, a sum of divinity, 336, c. See Book of Common Prayer.
Prayer, Morning and Evening, why prescribed by the Church, lxxii. k. particular hours left to the minister, ibid. scriptural authority for its being longer on the sabbath, ibid. what meant by the accustomed place for reading it, lxxii. l.
Prayer, Morning and Evening, intended for private families, 11, g. caution of the Church founded thereon, ibid.
Prayer for the Queen, Royal Family, &c., historical notices of them, 39, o. well connected with the preceding collects, ibid. their place till the last review, 41, y.
Prayer for the Queen, when made, 39, p. reasons and meaning of its petitions, ibid. why it names the sovereign, 39, q. its excellence, ibid. misrepresentation of a passage in it corrected, ibid.
Prayer for the Royal Family, conformable to ancient practice, 40, s. reasonableness of it, ibid. duty corresponding to it, ibid.
Prayer for the Clergy and People, agreeable to Scripture and early practice, 40, t. suitableness of the preface, ibid. exposition of it, ibid.
Prayer of St. Chrysostom, used in the Eastern offices, 41, y. judiciously placed in ours, ibid. exposition of it, ibid. when introduced into our Liturgy, ibid. directed immediately to the Son, 41, z.
Prayer, always used at ordination, and why, 683, e.
Prayers and thanksgivings, occasional, examples of them in Scripture and the ancient church, 71, e. when added to the Liturgy, ibid. why several of them are seldom used, 71, e. when properly to be used, ibid.
Prayers must be offered in the name of Christ, 250, e. principal and most proper intent of the expression, ibid. exemplified in the provisions of our Liturgy, ibid.
Preachers, their practice should agree with what they preach, 623, e.
Preaching, not to be valued above divine worship, 294, k. how abused before the great Rebellion, ibid. regulations concerning it at several times since Henry VIII., 295, l. allowed to deacons only by permission, 689, a.
Prebendary, why so called, xxi. r. how distinguished from a canon, ibid. confusion between the words prebend and prebendary, ibid.
Precontract, how far an impediment to marriage, 396, b.
Predestination, two kinds of, noticed in the seventeenth Article, 774, p. description of them, ibid. one condemned by the Church and not the other, ibid. difficulty of the doctrine, 771, h. caution and judgment with which the Article is drawn up, ibid. warning to young men about it, ibid. reflection on the caution with which compilers of the Articles speak of it, ibid.
Predestination, conditional and absolute, different effects of the same doctrine, 773, l. promises of God, as generally set forth in Scripture, to what opposed, 773, 774, o. how to be received and applied, ibid.
Predestination, absolute, not the doctrine of the seventeenth Article, 772, i. irreconcileable with the doctrine of our Church, ibid.
Predestination, conditionate, not condemned by the seventeenth Article, 772, i.
Predestination to life, in what sense reconcileable with the attributes of God and the free agency of man, 771, i. particulars of what the Church states concerning it, 772, k. manifestly built on the doctrine of Scripture, 773, k. manner of God's bringing it to a conclusion universally acknowledged, ibid.
Preface to the Common Prayer Book, account of it, xxvii. u. occasion of the apologetical expressions in it, xxvii. x. pamphlets and other papers alluded to in it, xxvii. y, z.
Preface, general, in the Communion service, purport of it, 311, y. an address to God, ibid.
Prefaces, proper, in the Communion service, occasion of them, 312, a. why to be repeated for several days, ibid. antiquity of them, ibid. why only five retained in our Church, ibid.
Presbyter, why preferable to the word priest, 694, q. ancient use of it in the Church, ibid.
Presbyters have no power to ordain, 673, f.
Presbyterians, their unreasonable exceptions to the Liturgy, ix. compliance with their request about giving notice of the Communion, 293, h. their request concerning Confirmation complied with, 394, x.
Presence, real, of Christ in the Sacrament, our Church's doctrine concerning it, 328, n. different from the doctrine of transubstantiation, ibid. the doctrine of Scripture and the Church, 331, i. distinguished from the bodily presence, ibid. origin of the latter doctrine, ibid. when established in the Romish church, ibid.
Presence, bodily, of Christ, in the Lord's Supper, doctrine of it. See Transubstantiation, Consubstantiation.
Presence of God, what meant by a sentence coming forth from it, 468, x. dreadfulness of being rejected from it, 519, k.
Presence of the Lord, its dwelling-place, 584, n.
"Prevent," what the word signifies in old English, 324, y. use of the word in the Liturgy explained and justified, ibid.
Priest, nearly the same word in all Christian languages, 672, c. its origin, ibid.; 694, q. mistake about the meaning of it, ibid.
Priest, why he alone may pronounce the Absolution, 10, g. proofs that this office was intended to be limited to one in priest's orders, ibid. why to pronounce the Absolution at the Communion service, 309, p.
Priests, order of, how styled, 694, q. in what way formerly employed, ibid. candidates for the order of, excellent exhortation to them, 696, u. necessity of their considering it beforehand, 698, x. remarks on their several engagements, 697—702. why required to promise they will teach no doctrines but those of Scripture, 698, z. purport and extent of the promise, ibid. necessity of their considering the questions to be proposed to them at ordination, 699, b. why ordered to lay their hands on persons to be ordained priests, 705, m.

words used for conferring the order, why the same as those used by our Lord, ibid. fitness of them, ibid. objections against them answered, ibid. what they express, 706, n. their power of retaining or forgiving sin explained, 706, a. their duty of dispensing God's word and sacraments, 706, p. why the Bible delivered to them, 707, q. their office subordinate, ibid. and the exercise of it limited to a particular congregation, ibid.

Priests, Ordering of, questions therein recommended to frequent perusal, 702, h. frequent perusal of the office recommended, 795, b.

Princes, why invested with power, 589, m. earthly, their inability to protect their friends, 657, q. their authority in ecclesiastical matters, scriptural and reasonable, 796, e. have no claim to the sacerdotal office, 796, f.

Principle, defection in, corruption in practice, the consequence of it, 464, t.

Principles, a man's practice according to them, 460, k.

Prisca, account of her, xxxix.

Probation, day of, introductory to a promised rest, 584, q.

Promises of God, condition of, 643, b.

Promises, spiritual and eternal, looked for by the patriarchs, 759, f.

Property, what portion of it to be given in acts of benevolence, 798, o.

Prophecies of the Old Testament, to be understood with an evangelical interpretation, 26, e.

Prophets, assurance with which they speak, 568, e.

Prosperity, its danger, 460, l. danger of abusing it exemplified, 478, b. uncertainty of, 487, f.

Protestants of Germany, an instance of their departure from an ancient practice, 280, y.

Providence of God, thanks due for it, 130, s. its infinite extent, ibid.

Providence, why He permits the crimes of abandoned men, 241, s. reflections thence resulting, ibid. the punishment as well as the crime foreknown, ibid. example of its wisdom and goodness in disappointing the designs of the wicked, 258, m. care of, towards the good, 489, y.

Providence of God justified, 515, m.

Providence, what seems irregular in it will be made up by future dispensations, 563, f. various proofs of it, 594—596, watchful care of, what it teaches us, 658, z.

Providence, eye of, favourable to those who fear God, 492, z. why it sometimes seems to be closed or turned away, 509, l.

Psalm ii, an acknowledged prophecy of Christ, 451, g.

—— viii, prophetical of the exaltation of our nature in Messiah, 457, i.

—— xvi, spoken in the person of Christ, 466, i.

—— xviii, remarkable proof from St. Paul that it has a double sense, 473, h.

—— xix, cited by St. Paul with a view to the publication of the Gospel, 473, k; 474, p.

—— xxii, a direct prophecy of Christ, 477, r.

—— xxxi, a passage in it used by our Saviour on the cross, 488, o.

—— xxxiv, passage in it eminently completed in our Saviour, 493, l.

—— xxxv, passage in it applied by St. John to the Messiah, 495, a.

—— xxxviii, passages in it, literally predictive of Christ's passion, 499, i.

—— xxxix, its propriety in the funeral service, 501, y.

—— xl, a direct prophecy of Christ, and spoken in his character, 502, m.

—— xli, spoken by the prophet in the person of Messiah, 504, y.

—— xlv, a magnificent prophecy of Christ's union with the church, 509, n. present evidence to the truth of it, 511, g.

—— xlvii, a prediction of the establishment of Christ's kingdom, 512, o.

—— xlviii, prophetical of the mercies vouchsafed in the Gospel, 513, z.

—— li, why much esteemed in the Church, 443, a.

—— lxii, a parallel to the song of Simeon, 47, h. suitable for our use, ibid. exposition of it, ibid. properly placed in the Evening Service, ibid. caution about repeating it, 48, h.

—— lxviii, a representation of our Lord's resurrection and ascension, 536, u; 538, m.

Psalm lxix, application of it to our Lord, 540, d.

—— lxxi, why the five last verses of it omitted in the Visitation of the Sick, 417, k.

—— xci, addressed primarily to Messiah, 579, b.

—— xcv, see Invitatory Psalm. Particular phrases in it explained, 19, f.

—— xcv, an address to believers under the Gospel, 583, t.

—— xcviii, its resemblance to the Magnificat, 45, f. exposition of it, 46, f. when properly used instead of the Magnificat, ibid.

—— civ, its singular poetical beauty, 593, m.

—— cx, applied several times in the New Testament as a prophecy of Christ, 609, a.

—— cxviii, repeated application of the twenty-second verse in the New Testament to Christ, 617, c.

—— cxxxix, distinguished for its sentiments and images, 649, n.

—— cxlv, remarkable saying of the ancient Hebrews, 655, f.

Psalms, book of, why so much used by the Church, 19, g. practice of the Jews concerning them, ibid. and of the early Christians, ibid. our duty in the use of them, 20, g.

Psalms, alternate use of, caution concerning it, 15, 16, u. proper posture to be used in uttering them, 17, z; 19, g. why ordered to be said or sung, 17, a. practice of the ancient church, ibid. why said to be pointed as they are to be said or sung in churches, xxxii. x. use of them by way of answering, scriptural authorities for it, 18, d. objections to it removed, ibid.

Psalms, the subjects of them, 446. manner in which they convey instruction, ibid. fulness of the information they contain, ibid. have been always in use with the church, ibid. high idea of them suggested by our Saviour's use of them, ibid. plainly fitted for general use, ibid. regard to be had to the person speaking in them, ibid. explanation of the imprecations contained in them, ibid. Jewish notions in them applicable to Christian times, ibid. assistance for understanding the difficult passages in them recommended, 447. Common Prayer Book translation of them, vindicated, ibid. and the manner in which we use them, 448. table of them, according to their subjects, ibid. vocabulary of old English words in our Common Prayer Book translation of them, ibid. their use in Christian congregations, 484, z. for what designed, and how to be sung, 511, u. use of them in the Church, 619, p. proof of their inspiration, 591, z.

Psalms, why called the Psalms of David, 450, a. many of them predictive of Christ's sufferings, 541, e. frequent change in them from sorrow to joy, 543, y.

Psalms, eucharistick, consideration which makes them pleasing and comfortable, 554, q.

Psalms, mournful, why many of them end with expressions of assurance, 456, x.

Psalms of degrees, meaning of the title, 634, e.

Psalms customary of old at funerals, 427, h. fitness of those appointed for that service by the Church, ibid. why concluded with the doxology, 428, i.

Psalms, in the Churching of Women, their suitableness to the office, 436, 437, m, n. when respectively most fit to be used, ibid.

Psalms in metre, remarks on the Old Version, 78. best mode of selecting them, 79.

Psalmody, second part of publick service, 15, 16, u.

Psalm tunes, remarks on them, 78. suggestion about an orderly way of singing them, 79.

Psalter, why said to follow the division of the Hebrews, xxxii. x.

Publican, nature of the office, 264, 265, n.

Publick worship, ancient and universal, 4, 5, i. enforced by our Saviour, 5, i. to be highly esteemed, ibid. and attended with proper qualifications, ibid. pleasure of seeing a congregation engaged in it, 18, b.

Pulpit, purposes for which it was at first designed, 440, s.

Punishment of sin, its certainty and use, 489, q.

Pure as Christ is pure, in what sense we pray to be so, 115, n.

Purgatory, what meant by the doctrine of, 779, o. its origin and progress, ibid. not grounded on, but repugnant to Scripture, 780, o. connexion between it, and the other doctrines, condemned in the twenty-third Article, 782, t. sources of them, ibid.

Purification, practice of the ancient Christians on this festival, 238, o. when discontinued among us, ibid.
Puritans, their unreasonable demands relative to the Liturgy, viii. objection made by them against sureties at baptism, 333, l. their ineffectual attempt to add a clause at the end of the sixteenth Article, 772, i. their denial of the right of the civil magistrate to interfere in any ecclesiastical matters, 796, y.

Q.

Quakers, their rejection of the Lord's Supper, 787, r.
Question and answer, the ancient form of stipulating at baptism, 340, y. suitableness of those in our office, 340, 341, y. proper way of understanding them, 341, y.
Questions and answers at baptism, not to be joined in by the congregation, 342, y. how they may turn the service to their own use, ibid.
Quinquagesima Sunday, seasonableness of its services, 120, z; 121, a.

R.

Race and combat, every man's life properly compared to one, 117, s. practical inferences therefrom, ibid.
Rain and dew, an image of the blessing of Christ's kingdom, 537, x.
Raise up his power, when God is said to do so, 90, q.
Ready writer, how to be understood, 509, p.
Reason, how misapplied in matters of religion, 54, t.
Rebellion and schism, on what occasion the prayer against them added to the Litany, 64, r.
Rebels and murderers, certainty of God's judgment on them, 524, p.
Receipt of custom described, 265, n.
Rector of a parish, how distinguished from vicar or curate, xx. n.
Red Sea, passage of, prefigured the salvation of the church universal, 471, s. a figure of the waters of baptism, 550, l. waters of, represented as endued with sensibility, 555, s. an emblem of the waters of baptism, ibid. passage through, the dispensations of God like it, 555, u.
"Redeemed of the Lord," who they are, 603, y. their duty, ibid.
Redeemer, praises ascribed to Him by the spiritual Israel, 585, a.
Redemption, Christian, parallel but superior to the deliverance of the Israelites, 555, r. the end of, 563, q. by Christ predicted, 568, a. why spoken of as partly past, and partly to come, 568, b. prayer for the blessings of, 568, c. of man the most glorious work of God, 579, a. purpose for which the history of it is written, 591, u. described by temporal images, 591, x. man capable of a twofold, 592, e. spiritual, represented under four beautiful images, 603, z. promised to Israel, the same as that under the Gospel, 641, p. greatness and number of God's mercies in it, 650, s.
Reformation of others, how to be effected, 520, m.
Reformers, English, their design in the composition of the Liturgy, ix. example of their prudence and piety, 3, d. chose prayers from ancient Liturgies, 41, y. their opinion concerning the corruptions of the church of Rome, 80, b. their judicious conduct in purifying the Roman Missal, 277, n. revived the ancient practice of explaining portions of Scripture, 293, 294, k. their wisdom in laying aside some superstitious practices at baptism, 343, c; 344, h. an error concerning baptism, imbibed by them in the Romish church, 354, g. consequence of it, ibid. their restoration of the office of Confirmation to its original simplicity, 392, p. their prudent correction of the Burial office, 423, l. their correction of the Romish corruptions with respect to church discipline, 439, r. their endeavour to improve it, ibid. their judicious correction of the consecration service, 709, s. their judicious rejection of popish innovations in the consecration service, 714, i. their moderation and wisdom compared with those of some other churches, 793, s.
Reformers, foreign, approve the apostolical ceremony of Confirmation, 392, m.
Reformers, German, a custom on their death-bed, 413, x.
Reformers, the best and wisest, their acknowledgment of the Athanasian Creed, 51, n.
Regeneration, well represented by washing with water, 329, o. notions of the Jews and Greeks about it, ibid. baptism the only ordinary means of it, 336, c. spiritual, what meant by it, 338, r. takes place at baptism, and only then, ibid. bad consequences of applying the term to any other change, ibid. a modern notion of the word, what, 348, u. its different signification in Scripture, ibid. and in the language of the fathers, ibid. various expressions used for it by the Greeks and Latins, ibid. language of the Schools upon it, ibid. and of the most eminent divines of the Reformation, ibid. when it came to be confounded with conversion and repentance, 348, u. sense of the Church concerning it most plain, 349, u. doctrine of it in Scripture, ibid. statement of the particulars wherein it consists, ibid. the Church defended from objection in her use of it, ibid. benefits of it may be lost, 350, y. prayer of the Church thereupon, ibid.
Reinolds, Dr., his protestation concerning the sign of the cross in baptism, as explained in the thirtieth Canon, 352, c.
Reins, what meant by their chastening in the night season, 467, o.
Religion, joys that belong to it, 86, h. no situation of life inconsistent with a sincere profession and practice of it, 112, e. its character and source, 586, 587, l.
Religion, Christian, every part of it to be believed, 775, t. those to whom it is revealed indispensably obliged to obey and follow it, ibid. question concerning those who never heard of it, ibid. solution of the question, ibid. cannot be safely rejected by those to whom it is revealed, ibid.
Religious exercises, example of assiduity in them, 554, l.
Religious, explanation of the epithet as applied to our kings, 74, l. used in the Greek Liturgies, ibid.
Reliques, worshipping of, how and when it arose, 781, r. its absurdity, ibid. unscriptural, ibid.
Remembrance, thankful, of Christ's death, a requisite accompaniment of faith at the Lord's Supper, 382, p. how to be examined, ibid. measure of it whence to be taken, 383, p.
Remigius, account of, lvii.
Remission of sins, explanatory of Absolution, 10, f.
Renounce, why the things, that we are to renounce, put first in our Catechism, 368, h. arrangement of them, ibid. remarks upon them, 369, i, k, l. what we undertake by our renunciation in baptism, 369, l.
Renovation, different from regeneration, 338, r.
Repentance, without it none of the services of religion can be duly performed, 5, k. why we are exhorted to it after absolution, 12, n. true, proofs of it, 13, o. forgiveness promised upon it, 4, g. not the meritorious cause of forgiveness, ibid. mistake concerning it, 135, a. how to be estimated, ibid. danger of delaying it, 149, m. why a qualification for baptism, 330, a. how to be judged of, 382, n. its necessity as a solid ground of comfort, 413, z. motives to it, 442, z. invitation to, and process of, described, 453, d. not to be deferred, 490, h. two ways whereby men are led to it, compared, 491, k. happy effects of it, 491, l. true, upon what founded, 641, n. invitations to it in Scripture addressed to all persons, 770, e.
Reproach of the world, how to comfort ourselves under it, 621, i.
Reproach, what sort of most to be dreaded, 622, x. of the wicked, comforts of God's servants under it, 637, b.
Responds, what they are xxix. g.
Responses, why so called, 15, u. practised in all old Liturgies, ibid. a privilege allowed to the people in the Church of England, 16, u. how they should act thereupon, ibid.
Responses before the Psalms, what they consist of, 16, x. their origin and propriety, ibid.
Responses, after the Creed, agreeable to the primitive practice, 35, b. whence taken, ibid. harmony between them and the following prayers, ibid. caution to the minister and people concerning them, ibid.
Rest, nightly, how we should lay ourselves down to it, 454, h.
Resurrection, in what sense the Church declares a sure and certain hope of, in the Burial service, 431, r. fitness of the declaration, ibid. a full and firm faith in it expressed, 516, b. an evidence to God's glory, 573, m, n.
Resurrection of Christ, morning of, how it should be celebrated, 525, f. how applicable to us, 545, o. foretold, 754, q. supported by the clearest proofs, ibid.

Retribution, day of, will succeed the day of grace, 527, l.
Revelation, consolatory sentence from, in the Burial service, its propriety, 431, s. ancient use of it, ibid. to be considered in a twofold respect, ibid.
Reward of the righteous and the wicked, an argument for faith and patience, 496, n.
Rich men, warning to them, how they use their plenty, 186, x.
Rich, as well as the poor, called on to worship God, 480, p.
Richard, Bishop, account of him, xlv.
Ridley, Bishop, his character, vi.
Right and wrong, necessary distinction between them, 583, h.
Right hand, the advocate's station with respect to his client, 653, p. why the man is placed there at the solemnization of matrimony, 398, f.
Right hands, why joined in marriage, 404, d.
Righteous, contrasted with the ungodly, 450, e. future separation between them, 450, f. how to be preserved from despondency, 454, f. their resolution to wait for the coming of their Lord, 492, a. contrasted with their oppressors, 493, i. and of their afflictions, 493, k. taken in charge by God's providence, 493, l. their redemption from affliction why insisted on, 493, 494, n. why their small possessions better than the riches of the wicked, 498, y. when said to have dominion over their enemies, 516, z. their gratitude and felicity, 528, e. promises to them, how to be understood, 579, e. the destruction of sinners to be beheld by them in safety, 580, f. just judgments predicted on their slanderers and persecutors, 651, e.
Righteousness, enemies of, described, 480, p. evangelical, necessity of it, 457, d. oppression of, a frequent cause of offence, 460, g. how intended to improve us, ibid. why the object of God's love, 462, e. its support and happiness, ibid. the way of Christ and of Christians, 569, h. kingdom of, its establishment must be waited for with patience, 582, a. a great crime in the eyes of the wicked, 583, i.
Righteousness of the scribes and Pharisees, how to be exceeded, 194, n.
Ring, an ancient sign of friendship and confidence, 401, t. reasons of its being used in matrimony, ibid. and of the particular directions concerning it, ibid. a perpetual monitor, ibid. why to be laid on the book, 401, u. improvement in our prayer relating to it upon the old offices, 403, c.
Rites, must vary in different climates and ages, 777, c. such variety allowed to the Jews, ibid. and still more to Christians, ibid.
Rochet, an episcopal habit, ancient use of it, 712, d.
Rock, in the wilderness, spiritual application of it, 613, 614, h.
Rod of the ungodly, why suffered to fall, but not rest, on the righteous, 638, k.
Rogation days, origin of them, 169, 170, x. the Church's intention in appointing them, ibid.
Roman empire, manner in which added to the church of Christ, 540, y.
Royal authority, good effects of its establishment, 552, u.
Rubrick, not to be set aside by private practice or custom, 345, 346, o. peculiar footing on which it stands, 699, e. obligation of the clergy to observe it, 701, e. proviso to which subject, ibid. why the clergy pledged to take it for their rule of ministration, 794, x. preference given to it by the Church over the Canons, ibid.
Rubricks, what, and why so called, xxviii. a. manner in which distinguished in different editions of the Common Prayer Book, ibid. no authority to alter them, where plain and express, xxx. q. observations on them when defective or doubtful, xxxiii. a.

S.

Sabaoth, original and meaning of the word, 22, 23, s.
Sabbath-day, Psalm for, what intended to foretel, 580, k. the celebration of God's praises a duty on it, 580, l.
Sabellians, their heresy condemned in the Athanasian Creed, 53, s. support part of the scriptural doctrine of the Trinity, 56, y.
Sacrament, meaning of the word, 377, m. more confined use of it, ibid. explanation of its two parts, 377, n, o.
Sacraments, necessity of them not superseded by the most liberal effusions of the Holy Spirit, 177, k. what meant by their being rightly and duly administered, 300, z. how it appears that there are two, 376, k. their sufficiency, 376, l. distinguished from other ceremonies, as being ordained by Christ, 377, p. remarks on them as means of grace, ibid. and as pledges to assure us thereof, 378, r. for what purpose ordained, 763, c. their number, 783, d. dispute concerning their number, 784, e. when declared by the Romanists to be seven, ibid. how to be used, 784, h. when beneficial, 785, i. not vitiated by the faults of ministers, 785, m. See Baptism, Communion, &c.
Sacraments, seven, of the papists, improperly so called, 376, l. examination of them, 376, 377, l.
Sacrifice, why the death of Christ so called, 381, f.
Sacrifice of ourselves, offered to God, agreeable to St. Paul's advice, 319, d. a great part of the Communion office, ibid. seasonableness of it, ibid. how distinguished from sacrifices under the law, 320, f. purport of the declaration concerning it, ibid.
Sacrifice of praise, the Communion anciently so called, 319, e. fitness of the term, 320, e. scriptural foundation of it, ibid.
Sacrifices, what sort of, required under the Gospel, 453, e.
Sacrifices, Levitical, their insufficiency to take away sin, 520, o.
Sacrifices of righteousness, when offered, 520, p.
Sacrifices, of the Law and of the Gospel, distance between them, 543, z.
Saints, what meant by the word, 31, q. explanation of the article, Communion of Saints, ibid. practical uses of the doctrine, ibid.
Saints, only the principal of the New Testament commemorated by our Church, 94, z. uses to be made of their faults recorded in Scripture, 234, k. their integrity of use to us in temptation, 275, l. their deliverances an encouragement to us, ibid. their suffering and rewards an incitement to our zeal and perseverance, ibid. their felicity described, 455, r.
Saints, invocation of, its origin, 782, s. no foundation for it in Scripture, ibid.
Saints of God, honour conferred on them, 660, 661, o. when to be completed, ibid.
Saints' days, why generally calculated for the day of their death, 253, i.
Salmon, hill of, the church wherein compared to it, 538, h.
Salutation, Christian form of, 410, m.
Salutation, propriety and antiquity of those used after the Creed, 33, s.
Salvation, to be had from God alone, 453, z. from sin and death, intended by the deliverance of Israel, 465, e. the common, all should pray for it, 483, q. cometh of God only, 500, x. by the Gospel, means and method of, exactly described, 568, b. character of it, 569, d. why God promiseth before He giveth it, 623, g. desire of God's true servants for it, 626, m. though delayed, certain, 630, t. why nigh to the faithful and far from the ungodly, 633, q. things necessary to it, to be prescribed by God only, 756, u.
Salvation, difference between being saved by the law and in the law, 775, t.
Salvation, state of, what meant by it, 370, o. how we may continue in it, ibid. why we are said to be called to it through Jesus Christ, 370, p.
"Sanctify the Lord God in their hearts," why men may be said to do so, 192, i.
Sanctify, what meant by God "sanctifying correction," 411, s.
"Sanctuary," meaning of the term, 475, b. blessed effects of going into it, 549, y. glory of it, 585, z. an image of Christ's spiritual kingdom, ibid.
Sanderson, Bp., probably the author of the Preface to the Common Prayer Book, xxvii. u. a prayer in the Liturgy generally ascribed to him, 74, m. and the general thanksgiving, 75, o.
"Saved," meaning of the word in an evangelical sense, 51, 52, o. those who wish to be saved must pursue it on the terms of the Gospel, ibid.
Saviour, Almighty, the need we have of one, 529, n.
Savoy conference, account of, ix. commission under which it was held, xix. l. ineffectual attempt of the Presbyterian divines at it, 10, g.
Schism, nature and sinfulness of it, 213, z.

Schismaticks and rebels, warning to them, 601, k.
School authors, who meant by the term, and why, 768, s.
Scribes and Pharisees, their crafty conduct towards our Lord, 524, r.
Scriptures, how read in the Roman service, xxix. c. why believed to be written by inspired men, 778, g.
Scriptures, parts of, why not read in the Church, 20, 21, k. remarks on the order of reading them, ibid. how to be rendered profitable, ibid. the reading of them a proper part of divine worship, ibid. practice of the Jews in that particular, ibid. and of the primitive Christians, ibid. of the church of Rome, ibid. and of our Church, ibid. reading them, principal part of divine service with the Jews, 638, r. and with the primitive Christians, ibid. usage restored by the Reformers, ibid.
Scriptures, what parts most useful to be studied, 84, c. how they serve for our instruction, 87, i. how we may judge of our improvement by them, 87, 88, j. delight of studying them, 450, d. good effect of it, 450, e. happiness of being instructed by them, 583, c. relief to be sought from them under affliction, 621, m. duty of meditating on them continually, 628, y. advantages of doing so, 628, z. when our relish for them will be the greatest, 628, a. in what respects wonderful, 631, a. what they shew us, 631, b. consequence of studying them now, 632, k.
Scriptures, canonical, whence they have their name, 687, q. question concerning them necessary to be put for deacon's orders, ibid. what necessary to answer the question, ibid. duty of studying them belonging to the clergy, 701, e.
Scriptures, all necessary truths contained in them, 698, a. constant opinion of the Church on that head, ibid. singular mark of respect paid to them in Christian councils, ibid. difference between the Churches of Rome and England concerning them as a complete rule of faith and practice, 755, s. their sufficiency for salvation proved by Scripture, 755, t. and by reason, ibid. how esteemed by the ancient fathers, ibid.
Scriptures, ancient practice of explaining portions of, revived by our Reformers, 294, k. utility of it, ibid.
Scriptures, in what sense they attribute members to God, 751, d. why they do not much insist upon proving God's being and attributes, 752, d.
Sea, Christ's stilling the tempest in the sea, an emblem of God's dealings with his servants, 113, h. and an intimation of their duty, ibid.
Sea, Forms of Prayer at, when added to the Liturgy, 662, a. design of them, ibid. officers at, publick worship to be performed in their ships, xx. m.
Second Service, Communion service when fitly so called, 278, o.
"Secret of the Lord," what meant by it, 483, n.
Sectaries, modern, description of their teachers, 673, e.
"Seek the Lord," happiness of those who do so, 493, g.
Self-examination, a duty which few practise as they ought, 475, u.
Self-indulgence, its tendency to harden the heart, 468, c.
Self-murder, a guard against temptation to the crime of, 490, d.
Self-murderers, why not allowed Christian burial, 423, u. how treated by the Jews and Romans, ibid. remarkable account of some Milesian virgins, ibid. Christian regulations on the subject, ibid. who to be so considered, 424, x. not necessarily out of their senses, ibid. best rule for judging of their madness, ibid.
"Sellest thy people for nought," meaning of the phrase, 508, f.
Semi-Christians, reflection on them, 113, h.
Semi-Pelagians, denying God's preventing grace, 763, z.
Sennacherib, hymn of thanksgiving on the destruction of his army, 552, b. miraculous destruction of his army, particularly pointed at, 553, f. effect of it, 553, g.
Sentences before Morning Prayer, why used, 1, a. various dispositions to which they are applicable, ibid. wisdom and prudence of the Church in selecting them, ibid. connected view of the import of them, 2, a. use of them before the service begins, ibid. when introduced into the Common Prayer Book, ibid. how to be read and heard, 2, f.
Sentences, in the Communion service, purport of them, 296, p. distinction of them into two sorts, ibid.; 296, q. whether any to be read, when there is no collection of alms, ibid.
Sentences, after the Absolution in the Communion service, why chosen by the Church, 310, q. deliberation with which they should be read, 310, r. application of them to the previous Absolution, 310, s.
Sentences, in the Burial office, subject and intent of them, 426, c. ancient use and propriety of them, 426, 427, d. f, g.
Septuagesima, and two following Sundays, reason for their names, 116, r. antiquity of observing them, ibid. design of them, ibid.
Sermon, form of prayer before, why particularly needful formerly, 295, m. different manners of using it, ibid. frequently shortened into a collect, ibid.
Sermon in the Ordination service, why fixed after Morning Prayer, 677, p. fitness of the subject prescribed for it, ibid.
Sermons, fitness of the place in the service appointed for them, 293, k. antiquity of the custom, ibid. by whom preached, ibid. of what sort in early times, ibid. how regulated by Queen Elizabeth, ibid. excellency of the Church of England in this respect, 294, k. sufficiency of her provision, ibid.
Serpents, allusion to them, 460, m. malice of tormentors compared to them, 508, h. wicked men why compared to them, 526, l. different kinds of, alluded to, ibid.
Servants of God, not to be induced to disbelieve or disobey, 624, h. their dependence for redress upon their Master, 637, a. their comfort under the reproaches of the ungodly, 637, b. why shewn by the Scriptures in different conditions, 640, d.
Service of God, our greatest duty, 374, e. how to be performed, ibid. to be performed with joy, 588, d. character of it, ibid. motives to it, 589, e.
Service of the Church, preface concerning it, when composed, xxix. c. no alteration to be made in it, unless expressly provided for, xxiv. t.
Service, external, insufficient without internal, 518, q. what sort of required by the Gospel, 518, r.
Seven, how used in Scripture, 391, l.
Seventh day, origin and design of sanctifying it, xxxiii. b. why Saturday appointed for the Jews, ibid. not the same day for Christians, ibid.
Sexes, different, distinct places formerly allotted to them in the church, 304, t.
Sheep, God's servants so called in Scripture, 7, s. propriety and fitness of the phrase, ibid. in what sense we may be compared to one, 634, d.
Shepherd, qualifications and duties of a good one, 179, n. corresponding conduct required in the sheep, ibid. proper to be considered both by priest and people, ibid.
Shepherd, God described under the image of one, 480, t.
Shepherds, God's condescension in manifesting his Son to them, 103, q. instruction to be derived from it, ibid. their conduct a pattern of duty to us, ibid. the birth of Christ announced to them as representing the Jews, 105, t.
Shrove-Tuesday, why so called, 122, b. abuses that prevail on it, ibid.
Sick, may be prayed for, if they desire it, 74, m. their duty thereupon, 75, m. duty of visiting them, 409, l. time of performing it, ibid. and the manner, ibid. should be exhorted to communicate, 420, q. why to receive last, 421, r. means of comforting them, ibid. prevented from communicating, 421, s. their duty, ibid. See Visitation.
Sick, why anointed with oil in the primitive times, 409, l.
Sickness, spiritual, we are hardly affected by it, 222, n.
Sickness recovery from, an image of spiritual benefits, 604, c.
Sighed, why our Saviour sighed when he healed the deaf and dumb man, 204, i.
Silvester, Bp., account of him, lxi.
Simeon, author of the "Nunc dimittis," who supposed to be, 46, g. instruction derived from him, 240, q.
Simon, St., why called Zelotes, 272, f. account of him, ibid.
Sin, deliverance from the power of it, how far to be expected, 8, 9, b. state of, compared by St. Paul with one of holiness, 195, p. in the present effect of it, ibid. and in its end, ibid. effectual guard against it, 461, p. destruction of all its fruits certain, 477, o. the wound of the soul, what necessary for its cure, 500, o. effects of it, 500, p. its consequence torment, 516, e. true nature of it how to be discerned, 628, b.

Sin, remission of, the greatest of God's mercies, 592, d.
Sin, confession of, a sure way to favour, 592, f.
Sin, forgiveness of, its proper effect, 615, s.
Sin, entire freedom from, doctrine contrary to Scripture, 770, c. caution with respect to it, ibid.
Sin, against the Holy Ghost, what emphatically styled so, 770, e.
Sin, deadly, in what sense to be understood, 770, e.
Sins of omission and of commission, distinguished, 6, x.
Sins of omission, great danger of them, 218, f.
Sins, negligences, and ignorances, how distinguished from each other, 66, y.
Sins, wilful, example of the great danger of them, 135, a.
Sins, ancient division of them, adopted by our Church, 308, k. founded in Scripture, ibid. in what sense the burden of them may be said to be intolerable, 308, l.
Sins, freedom from future to be prayed for, as well as forgiveness for past, 308, m.
Sins, remission of, two different senses of the words, 338, q.
Sins of presumption, what they are, 475, x. danger of them, ibid.
Sins against men, why sins against God, 519, b.
Sins, the forgiving and retaining them, in what sense conferred on the priesthood, 706, o.
Sinai, Mount, majesty of God's appearance there, 538, l. its tremor a specimen of the power which overthrew idolatry, 613, f.
Singing an early practice in the Church, 33, n. proper place for it, ibid. reasons against choosing another place, ibid. a common branch of publick worship, 78. how practised by the first Christians, and at the Reformation, ibid. reasons and directions for joining in it, ibid. impropriety of interrupting others, 79. proper posture in singing, ibid. a becoming way of expressing spiritual joy, 219, i.
Sinner, his state contrasted with the state of a Christian, 123, o. our duty consequent thereon, ibid. repentant, how it is to be understood that there is joy in heaven over him, 139, d. awakened, exhortation to him to call upon the Lord, 615, r.
Sinners, impenitent, certain marks of God's vengeance, 457, f. connexion between their heart and their mouth, 460, m. their artifices and atrocities, 461, n. caution not to be allured by them, 461, o. exhortation to them to repent in time, 490, j. their future confusion and desolation, 504, u. shall experience the power of God, 596, i.
Sion, why God said to dwell there, 459, x. as the place whence the Gospel issued, contrasted with Sinai, 517, i. the Christian church become so, 533, l. hill of, its superiority to other hills, 538, k.
Sirion, its situation, 486, u.
Sitting, when allowed during divine service, 20, g. during prayer, impropriety of it, 33, t. at the Communion, why practised by the pope, 317, s. and by the Arians, ibid. why not so fit as kneeling, ibid.
Slander, the best answer to it, 625, a.
Slanderers, a generation of vipers, 651, z.
Sleep, how to do so without fear, 453, x.
Snail, transient nature of worldly greatness compared to one, 526, o.
Sobriety, scriptural meaning of the word, 172, c.
Socinians, their opinions concerning Christ, 769, z.
Sodom and Gomorrah, their judgment an image of the last day, 462, c.
Solitude, naturally a refuge for the sorrowful, 590, q.
Solomon, his reign a figure of Christ's kingdom, 545, r. David's request for him, 546, s. his prayer at the dedication of the temple, whence in part derived, 643, y. purport of it, ibid.
Son of God, a person distinct from the Father, 53, s. why his several names repeated by the Church in glorifying Him, 321, l. why said to be only holy, 322, m. why to be only the Lord, 322, n. how described in Scripture, 752, f. union of the two natures in Him, ibid. his unity of essence with the Father, 752, g. his assumption of the human nature, 752, h. why stated to be one person, 752, k. See Christ.
Son of man, phrase for the Messiah, 563, p.
Sons of God, practical uses of the doctrine that we are such, 115, p. how we should behave as such, 197, s. great honour and dignity of being so, ibid.
Song, why we are called to sing a new song, 585, x. new song by what demanded, 587, o.
Songs and dances, usual to meet kings and conquerors with them, 513, u.
Sorrow, immoderate, prohibited by Christianity, 433, z. in moderation, allowed, ibid. mitigation of, when and where to be sought, 502, h.
Soul to have it in one's hand, what it implies, 629, h.
Souls of men, provision made for them described under a very lively image, 480, 481, u. of the dead, why said that God takes them to Himself, 431, p. caution against misunderstanding the phrase, ibid.
Speaking with other tongues, a most evident proof of God's interposition, 174, g.
Spirit, different significations of the word, 207, 208, o. opposed to the flesh and the law, ibid. what meant by walking in the Spirit, ibid. encouragement to do so, ibid.
Spirit, Holy, beautiful image under which his visitation of the church is represented, 533, a. See Holy Ghost.
Spirit of God's grace, meaning of the phrase, 40, u. why called healthful, ibid. necessary for all Christians, ibid. with what view to be asked, 41, x.
Spirit of God, why called his "free Spirit," 519, l.
Spirit of a man, how used in Scripture and in the Liturgy, 33, s. how and when renovated, 519, i.
Standing, why practised when the Sentences are reading, 2, a. at the end. why prescribed to the priest during the Absolution, 10, g. when used in the ancient church, 17, z. why a proper posture for the Psalms, ibid. 19, g. why prescribed to the minister during the Lessons, 21, n. why directed during the Hymns, 22, q. why proper in repeating the Creed, 29, i. the proper posture for singing psalms, 79. why prescribed during the reading of the Gospel, 83, c. why the posture of the priest at the Communion service, 230, x. why prescribed to the minister at the Communion service, 287, p. during the reading of the Gospel, why prescribed by the Church, 288, r. antiquity and universality of the custom, ibid. profitableness of such customs, ibid. the general attitude of the minister during the Communion service, 308, h. reason of it, ibid. why prescribed to the priest when he pronounces the Absolution at the Communion service, 300, p. why prescribed to the priest at the consecration of the elements, 314, d.
States of life, virtues suitable to different ones, 793, m.
Statutes of God, delight of meditating on them, 620, d. grief of the righteous at seeing them broken, 631, d.
Stephen, St., the only martyr commemorated solely as such by the Church, 94, z. account of him, ibid.; antiquity of his festival, ibid. uses to be made of the narrative of his martyrdom, 95, a. his virtues rather than his vision, to be our pattern, ibid. why especially mentioned in the Ordering of Deacons, 683, f. his example recommended to them, ibid.
Storms and tempests, why selected as figures of the divine displeasure, 470, q.
Strange children, who meant by them, 654, d.
Stranger upon earth, consequence of regarding ourselves as such, 621, h.
Strangers, propriety of regarding ourselves as such, 502, k.
Strangers, what persons so described, 521, z.
Study, what kind of, necessary for the clergy, 701, e. and what to be omitted, 701, f.
Sublapsarians, their doctrine, 772, i.
Submission to temporal jurisdiction, a Christian duty, 112, g.
Sudden death, prayer against it justified, 63, q.
Suffering with Christ, reasonableness of being contented with it, 190, f.
Sufferings, how to be regarded and undergone, 163, l. acknowledged to be the just punishment of our sins, 63, d.
Sufficiency, lessons derived from the doctrine that our sufficiency is of God, 203 h.
Sun, representative of the Sun of Righteousness, 474, p. comparison between them, 474, q, r.
Sunday, why observed by Christians for publick worship, xxxiii. b.

Sundays, "vacant," what Sundays formerly so called, 215, b.
Sundays after Trinity, if more or fewer than twenty-five, provision of the rubrick explained, 230, c. preferable practice when more, ibid.
Sundays and holydays, observations on the service when they coincide, xxxiii. a; xxxv. b.
"Sung, or Said," signification of the phrase, 17, a.
Supererogation, works of, how otherwise called and defined by the Romanists, 768, u. not agreeable to the Gospel, ibid. inconsistent both with the general and particular precepts of the Gospel, 768, v. manifest absurdity of the doctrine, ibid.
Supralapsarians, their doctrine, 772, i.
Sureties, Godfathers and Godmothers why so called, 333, t.
Susannah, history of, an instance of the good effect of trust in God, 497, r.
Swearing, what sort of, forbidden by the Gospel, 798, q; 799, r.
Swithun, Bishop, account of him, li.
"Sword of God," wicked men why so called, 469, g. a similar phrase, ibid.
Swords, malicious language compared to them, 527, y.
Symbolum, Creed why so called, 760, h.
Synodals, what meant by them, xxix. k.

T.

Table, Communion, when so called, 279, s. how the term is distinguished from altar, 280, s. remarks on the covering provided for it, 280, t. and on its situation, 280, u. at what time the bread and wine should be placed on it, 298, s. ancient practice in this respect, ibid. why the priest stands at the north side of it, 280, y.
Tares of the field, parable of, lesson to be drawn from it, 115, l.
Taylor, Bp. Jeremy, his character of the Liturgy, x. admitted very early into orders, 674, i.
Te Deum, by whom composed, 22, s. its contents, 23, s. its excellence, ibid. why so called, ibid. remarks on several particulars in it, ibid.; 23, 24, t—z. why the doxology not added to it, 23, s. Amen not to be said after it, ibid. admonition about the manner of saying it, ibid. propriety of its place in the service, 24, z.
"Teeth, breaking the," what it signifies, 453, y.
Temple at Jerusalem, its destruction by Nebuchadnezzar, 550, f, g. afflicting circumstances of its desolation, 550, e. contrasted with the skill used in building it, 550, f.
Temple of God, happiness of frequenting it described under an affecting image, 566, 567, q, r. Jewish practice of annually visiting it, 567, s.
Temptation, general sense of the word, 249, d. restricted sense of it, ibid. when said to come from God, ibid. when from the devil, and our own corrupt inclinations, ibid. end which our enemy intends by them, 530, c.
Testament, service of God under the New, described in Scripture by terms belonging to the Old, 320, e.
Testaments, New and Old, cause of the manner in which they are read, 26, d. connexion and dependence between them, 758, d.
Testimonials before orders, practice of the ancient church and of the Church of England concerning them, 674, k. duty of those who sign them, 675, k. mischief and scandal of giving sham ones, ibid.
Testimonies, law of God, why so called, 619, t. God to be sought in and by them, ibid.
Testimonies of God, what they are, 582, x. necessity of adhering to them, 622, p. the bonds of our inheritance, 629, i. unalterable and everlasting, 633, n.
"Thanks be to God for this Gospel," anciently said after the Gospel, 288, r.
Thanksgiving, instructions in the duty of it, 219, i. for deliverance, example of, 507, y. to God, form of words used by the Israelites for the purpose, 539, s. duty of, after deliverance, 561, c. why the duty and delight of a Christian, 580, t. temporal losses no reason for withholding it, 624, r.
Thanksgiving, general, when inserted and why, 75, m, o. propriety of it, 75, p. its distinct arrangement, ibid. advantages of it, ibid. its transition from thanks to petitions, 76, p.
Thanksgiving, a part of the Communion service, 310, l. fit place of its introduction, ibid. antiquity of it, ibid. and excellence, 310, t.
Thanksgiving, its propriety after communicating, 319, b. why offered through Jesus Christ, 320, g.
Thanksgiving, second form after communicating, 320, h. of what it consists, ibid.
Thanksgiving, form of, in the Communion service, explained, 321, k.
Thanksgiving, after the Gospel in the baptismal office, fitness of it, 339, u.
Thanksgiving, after baptism, its propriety, 350, x. an imitation of the Jews, ibid. practice of the ancient church, ibid. more spiritual than the Jewish prayer, 350, y.
Thanksgivings, particular, occasion of their being added to the Liturgy, 75, o. when to be used, 76, q. observations on them, ibid.
Thief, impenitent, probable emblem of those who delay repentance, 148, m. penitent, reflections on his case, ibid. not an example to late penitents, ibid.
Thomas, St., why called by another name, 233, g. meaning of them both, ibid. account of him, ibid. why his day comes next to St. Andrew's, ibid. how his doubting conduced to the more confirmation of the faith, 233, h. occasion of his falling into unbelief, 234, k. use of his unbelief being recorded, ibid. nobleness of his subsequent confession, ibid.
Three Children, Song of, why so called, 25, b. See Benedicite.
Thunder and lightning, their effects, 486, 487, s—y.
Time, how it may be redeemed, 219, i. short when compared with the duration of the Eternal, 578, t.
Title for orders, required by the ancient church, 688, s.
Titus, the Roman Emperor, his confession respecting the conquest of Jerusalem, 532, q.
Tokens of divine favour, all centred in one, 571, s.
Toleration, Act of, what sort of liberty it affords to dissenters, x.
Tongue, when the "glory" of man, 488, k. difficulty and use of restraining it under provocation, 501, z.
Torrents, destruction of the wicked compared to them, 526, n.
Traditions, two significations of the word, 792, q.
Traitors, their punishment, 489, x. examples of their disappointment, 522, g. ingredients in their composition, 523, i. their tragical fate, 523, k. their perfidy, 523, n.
Transfiguration of our Lord, account of the day, liii.
Transubstantiation, doctrine of, disclaimed by our Church, 328, n. contradicted by our senses, 788, u. cannot be proved by holy writ, ibid. but is repugnant to it, 788, x. destroys the nature of a sacrament, ibid. gives occasion to superstitions, ibid. unscriptural and superstitious practices that have arisen from it, 788, a. its origin, 787, t. and progress, ibid. when established in the church of Rome, ibid. when brought into England, ibid. why a favourite doctrine with the Romanists, ibid. opposed at its introduction, ibid. how treated by the Reformers, 788, t.
Travell, Mr., his Paraphrase on the Psalms recommended, 447.
Traveller, Eastern, comparison to one, 631, c.
Travellers, in a desert, an emblem of Christians in the world, 603, z. acknowledgments due from them, 603, a.
Treason, its sin and evil effects, 523, i.
Tribes of Israel, how designated by David, 529, l. correspondence of the spiritual Israel, ibid. why four only are mentioned in the commemoration of the removal of the ark, 539, t. for what each of the four was distinguished, ibid. their periodical journeys to Jerusalem, 636, s.
Tribulation, should not prevent religious joy, 587, m.
Trinity, acknowledged throughout God's holy church, 23, x. denial of either of the three Persons, an opposition to Christ, 24, x. each Person the object of divine worship, 36, e. the three Persons the joint object of faith and worship, 41, z. the blessed spirits our pattern for acknowledging and worshipping it, 131, r. and for the manner of contemplating it, ibid. intimations of the doctrine from the Old Testament, 182, r. more manifest assertions of it in the New, ibid.
Trinity, absurdity of objecting to the word, 53, r.
Trinity, doctrine of, doctrine of the Gospel, and of the universal church, 51, n. not a speculative, but a practical doctrine, ibid. the first and fundamental article of the Christian faith, 53, r. importance and necessity of it, 55, 56, y. proofs of it plain, short, and easy, ibid. consistent with that of the Unity, 182, r. point why necessary to be guarded, ibid. no need of avoiding the plain construction of the texts alleged in defence of it, ibid. no affront to our reason, 183, r. motives to the humble and reverential acknowledgment of it, ibid.

Trinity, faith in, professed at baptism, 346, p.
Trinity, Persons of, phrase best sets forth the sense of Scripture, 53, s. has scriptural authority, ibid. not to be confounded, why noticed in the Athanasian Creed, ibid.
Trinity, substance of, not to be divided, why noticed in the Athanasian Creed, 53, s.
Trinity, worship of, injoined and instanced in baptism, 53, r. appropriated to Christians, ibid. authorized by Scripture, 55, x. the object of worship in the short Litany, 33, v. and in the Lord's Prayer, 34, v. why each Person severally invoked in the Litany, 61, 62, k—m. why invoked jointly, 62, n. conformable to the ancient practice of the church, ibid.
Trinity, works of, for the benefit of man, an inexhaustible but neglected subject of praise, 503, q.
Trinity of Persons, the principle on which the Apostles' Creed proceeds, 31, o.
Trinity, the mystery of, a fit subject for a special festival, 180, o. obscurely made known to the Jews, ibid. more plainly manifested by the Gospel, ibid.
Trinity Sunday, a proper close to the series of festivals in the Church, 180, o. suitableness of the service to the day, ibid.
Trinity Sunday, collect for, an obscurity in the language of it explained, 180, p.
Trisagium, hymn in the Communion service, why so called, 311, z. its scriptural foundation, ibid. and antiquity, ibid. peculiarly proper for the Communion, 311, z; 313, b. an adoration of the holy Trinity, 311, z.
Troth, the giving of, what it means, 400, u; 401, s.
Trouble, motives to compose our minds under, 166, p. comfortable reflection under it, 648, l.
Troubles, compared to the deluge of a storm, 506, r.
"Truly and indifferently," what meant by so ministering justice, 299, x.
Trust, distinguished from feeling, 685, o.
Trust in God, reward of it, 492, 493, d. f. beautiful exhortation to it, 506, l. those who do so contrasted with the wicked, 521, u. encouragement to it, 523, o. the comforts of it but seldom sought, 531, d. promises made to those who do so, 544, f. comfortable state of a mind that does so, 549, x. the only one which can never be disappointed, 617, d. those who do so have cause to praise Him continually, 633, r. character and security of it, 637, 638, i.
Truth, inward, the necessity of it, 519, e.
Turtle dove, the church represented under the appellation of, 551, p. r.
Tyre, Gentiles why prophesied of under that name, 511, b.

U.

Unbaptized persons, why not admitted to Christian burial, 424, r.
Unbelievers, works of, reason why they are not acceptable to God, 766, q.
Uncharitableness, warning against it, 187, z.
Uncleanness, sins of, difficult to be enlarged on, 126, 127, l their hatefulness and danger, 127, l.
Understanding, needful to the observation of God's law, 622, s.
Ungodly, why said of him that he borroweth and payeth not again, 498, b.
Ungodly men, their characters and end foretold, 526, i. their punishment follows from God's attributes, 650, l. their destruction set forth by strong similitudes, 526, m. how they will be affected at the sight of Christ in glory, 612, u.
Uniformity, Acts of, to what Book of Common Prayer applicable, xvi. a.
Union of the two natures in our Saviour, illustrated by the union of our souls and bodies, 57, a.
Union between Christ and Christians, earnestly enforced by our Lord and St. Paul, 247, b. necessity of it, ibid. liturgical provisions of our Church relating to it, ibid.
Unity among Christians, powerful arguments for it, 213, z. of the church, in what it consists, 233, i. practical inference from it, ibid. among brethren, recommended and celebrated, 643, e. productive both of profit and pleasure, 644, f. aptly compared to ointment and dew, 544, g. of heart and profession, requisite for the good of the church, 698, z.
Unjust men, will suffer proportionably to their deserts, 651, d.
Use of Salisbury, York, &c., why mentioned, xxx. p.
Usher, Abp., admitted early into orders, 674, i.
Uzziah, application of his case, 796, f.

V.

Valentine, account of him, xli.
C. Valerius Flaccus, an anecdote of him, 340, x.
Vaults for burying, privileges relating to them, 425, z.
Vengeance, the property not of the church but of God, 582, z.
Veni Creator Spiritus, hymn to the Holy Ghost, by whom composed, 703, l. use of it in the Church, ibid. English translations of it, ibid. importance of the prayer contained in it, ibid.
"Venite exultemus," the ninety-fifth Psalm, why so called, 19, e.
Verses in the Roman service, what they are, xxix. h.
Versicles, portions of divine worship so called, 16, u. duty of the minister and people in repeating them, ibid.
Versicles, in the Communion service, probably derived from the apostles, 310, l. how called by the ancients, 311, u. proof of their great antiquity, ibid. comments upon them, 311, u, x.
Versicles, in the Confirmation service, their antiquity and propriety, 389, g. authorities for the use of them, 389, 390, g. their purport, ibid. and fitness to the office, ibid.
Vicar, who he is, xx, o.
Vigils, why so called, lxiv. c. probable cause of them, ibid. what now meant by the term, ibid. why some festivals have vigils, and some not, ibid. why no vigil on a Sunday, ibid. query concering the rubrick relating thereto, ibid. different practices observed in consequence, lxiv. d.
Vincent, account of him, xxxix.
Vine, why a lively emblem of the church, 562, i. an emblem of a virtuous and faithful wife, 640, c.
Vineyard, Israel compared to one, 562, l. fate of the spoilers of it, 562, o.
Violence and strife, personified, 522, h.
Virgin Mary, her exaltation from poverty to honour, 45, e. respect properly due to her, ibid. profaneness and impiety of worshipping her, ibid. holydays kept in memory of her, 233, o. their relation to our Saviour, ibid. account of her, 243, u. her assumption, a legendary tale, ibid. excellent graces attributed to her in the Gospel, 244, 245, y. her purity, humility, and faith, ibid. monstrous opinion concerning her at the Reformation, corrected, 752, i.
Virtues, moral and social, the dispositions prescribed for attaining true blessedness, 276, m. plain and easy marks to judge by, ibid. all bound upon us by the same authority, ibid.
Visitation of the Sick, foundation of the office, 409, l. contents of it, ibid. different forms of, 410, l. excellence of our office, ibid. use of the peculiar prayers annexed to it, 418, 419, m, n, o, p.
Visitation of the blessed Virgin Mary, account of the day, li.
Vocabulary of old English words in our Common Prayer Book translation of the Psalms, 448.
Voice, loud voice, what intended by it, 2, b.
"Vulgar tongue," why the phrase substituted in the office of Baptism for "English tongue," 351, a.

W.

Wafers, improperly substituted for bread at the Communion, 316, 317, l. how used by the Romish church, ibid. 317, r. at the Communion, the use of them not agreeable to our Saviour's institution, 327, g. a novel custom, ibid.
Wages and gift, difference justly put between them by St. Paul, 196, p.

Waiting patiently for the Lord, the duty of Christians after the example of Christ, 502, n.
Wall, out of the perpendicular, the wicked compared to one, 530, a.
War and tumult, prayer in the time of, exposition of it, 72, f.
Warrior, spiritual, how armed for the battle, 472, b.
Wars, serving in them not forbidden by Christianity, 797, k. would cease if the Gospel had a full and general influence, ibid.
Wars and captivities, the judgments of God against sin, 559, r.
Washing the hands, when used by the Jews, 484, x.
Watches, night divided into four, 578, t.
Water, an essential of baptism, 334, z. why it is required to be pure, ibid. how said to be sanctified in baptism, 337, o. prayer for the consecration of, in baptism, reason of it, 344, f. agreeable to the practice of the primitive Christians, ibid.; 344, h. comparison of the forms, 344, f. how changed in baptism, 344, i. a necessary part of baptism, 378, t. rejection of it by a modern sect unscriptural, ibid. not esteemed sufficient by the church of Rome, ibid.
Water and the Spirit, necessity of their going together in baptism, 336, e.
Water and blood, coming out of our Saviour's side at his passion, remark on the mention made of it in the office of Baptism, 336, g.
"Waters of the sea," how said to be "gathered together on a heap," 491, r.
Waters, power of God in disposition of them, 594, r. the means of preserving animals, 594, s.
Waters, mighty, an image of sin and sorrow, 499, n. powerful enemies compared to them, 654, d.
Waterspouts, why a probable allusion for a Jewish poet, 506, r.
Ways of God, contrasted with our own ways, 8, t.
Weakness, human, proof of God's compassion upon it, 264, t.
Wealth, practice of acquiring it, blamed and imitated, 515, y.
Wednesdays and Fridays, why kept in the primitive church as weekly fasts, lxv. e.
Week, "great" or "holy week," why so called, 132, y.
Whitsuntide, why baptism then administered by the ancients, 156, a.
Whit- Sunday, why kept holy, 173, e. reason of the name, ibid. and of its being of old appointed for baptism, ibid. antiquity of the festival, ibid. why called Pentecost, ibid. fitness and harmony of its services, ibid.
Whit-Sunday, collect for, a grammatical inaccuracy in it, 174, f.
Whitsun-week, how observed by the ancients, 176, i. description of the services for Monday and Tuesday, ibid.
Wicked men, why God lets them run on in their courses, 99, k. disappointment and guilt of their designs exemplified, 141, g. why they sometimes reject the Gospel, 177, l. do not commit crimes without the knowledge of God, 241, s. their thoughts and doings nevertheless their own, ibid. moral not physical restraints given to them, ibid. figurative description of them, 457, g. equity of their suffering the punishment intended by them for the innocent, 457, h. their judgment anticipated by faith, 459, b. a proof of the providence of God, ibid. their origin and destination, 459, c. their propensity to praise the crimes of others, 460, h. their self-sufficiency the cause of their ruin, 460, i. their madness and want of common sense, 465, z. their misery, ibid. their scoffing at confidence in God reproved, 465, b. their enmity against the just, 497, x. its consequence, ibid. their destruction compared to a sacrifice, 498, a. their destruction represented under six similitudes, 526, m. their punishment often a mark of their crime, 528, d. their counsels deprecated, 532, o. their prosperity, antidote to the temptation occasioned by it, 547, i; 548, l. impiety of their discourse, 548, m. consequence of it, 548, n. their prosperity, suggestions of nature at seeing it, 548, o, p. how corrected, 548, q; 548, 549, r, s. vanity of their enjoyments, 549, t. can escape neither the eye nor the hand of Heaven, 582, d. connexions not to be formed with them, 589, l. their society to be renounced, 629, n. their worthlessness and destruction figuratively represented, 641, i.
Wickedness, a moral madness, 454, l. its power not permanent, 463, m.
Wickedness, used for punishment of wickedness, 499, n.
Wife, why obliged to obey and serve her husband, 399, k. in what sense the husband promises to worship her, 402, z. what maintenance promised to her, 403, a.
Wilderness, the people of, what meant by them, 551, m. God's kindness to Israel in it, an emblem of his mercy to us, 555, x. Israelites who fell there have their counterpart in the Christian church, 557, h. mercies experienced by the Israelites in it, emblematical of those in the Christian church, 559, o.
Will, making of one, necessity of it, 414, c. why the minister is to admonish sick persons on this subject, ibid. when to admonish them, ibid. grounds and antiquity of the practice of making wills, 414, d.
Will of God, our own to be submitted to it after Christ's example, 478, t. what motives it requires us to act upon, 767, t. character of resistance to it, ibid. how to be known, 774, p. what use to be made of it, ibid.
Wilson, Bp., his Introduction to the Lord's Supper recommended, 318, u.
Wine, an emblem of blessings, 552, z. and of calamities, ibid.
Wisdom, true, instruction to be derived by one possessed of it, 606, h.
Wisdom, Book of, striking reflections on the plagues of Egypt in it, 558, l.
Wise men from the East, birth of Christ announced to them as representing the Gentiles, 105, t. their conduct a pattern for imitation in zeal and joyfulness, ibid.
Woman of Canaan, her exemplary faith, 127, m. her perseverance in prayer, ibid.
Woman, why given by her father in marriage, 400, m. o.
Women, to come to church, for the purpose of thanksgiving after child-birth, 436, f. not to endeavour to have the office performed at home, ibid. how to be apparelled, 436, g. to repeat the psalm after the minister, 436, l. under what notion their offering at churching is to be understood, 438, q. why to receive the Communion, ibid. examples for their so doing, and utility of it, ibid.
Word, why resembled to a glass, 168, u. ways in which it is misapplied, ibid.
Word of God, hearing it not sufficient, 129, p. intended for our trial, 222, n. various names by which it is called, 619, q. proper result of meditating on it, 620, y. its precepts as well as promises to be regarded, 622, y. its immeasurable excellency, 627, u. how said to be tried, 632, h. peculiar blessing of the Christian church, 659, c. its power, 660, 661, o.
Word of truth, directions for our behaviour with regard to it, 166, r. what meant by its being engrafted, 167, r.
Words and actions, a prayer for the proper guidance of them, 652, g.
Works, what necessary that they may be perfectly good, 764, q.
Works, good, distinguished from the works of the law, 130, r. duties of eternal obligation, ibid. exhortation to practise them, ibid.
Works of God, divided into three kinds, 656, i.
World, a Christian's duty to overcome it, 162, h. how it is to be overcome, ibid. not the object of a Christian's ambition, 264, t. what meant by renouncing its pomps and vanities, 369, k. why called wicked, ibid. proof of the estimation in which it ought to be held, 469, h. happiness of escaping its pollutions, 484, u. authoritative call on its attention, how received, 515, n. its unprofitableness to those who lose their own souls, 516, f.
World, established course of, God to be praised for it, 646, n.
Worldling, proper light to be viewed in, 516, c. contrast between his present and future state, 516, d.
Worship, bodily as well as spiritual, prescribed, 512, p. what sort of required, 518, x. evangelical, described by legal phrases, 572, c. internal and external required, 584, p.
Worship of God, what it is, 374, e. different parts of it, ibid. universal predicted, 534, g.
Worship, public, danger of neglecting it, exemplified and inforced, 234, k.
Worship, grounds on which due to a wife, 402, z. harmlessness of the term, ibid. objection to it owing to want of due consideration of its meaning, ibid. corresponding expressions in common use, ibid. ancient use of the term, ibid.

Y.

Year, ecclesiastical, two parts into which it is divided, 83, c. corresponding adaptation of the Church services, ibid. why it begins with Advent, 85, e.

Year, revolving, a constant instructor and monitor, 551, o.
Youth, how to be directed in the right way, 620, a.

Z.

Zacharias, remarks on the language of his hymn, 597, o.
Zeal, character and effects of it, 632, g. what sort of, acceptable to God, 601, o.
Zechariah, fulfilment of a prophecy delivered by him, 86, h. his prophecy concerning the King of Sion, 546, z.

THE END.

Gilbert & Rivington, Printers, St. John's Square, London.

UC SOUTHERN REGIONAL LIBRARY FACILITY
D 000 012 132 7

BOUND BY H.NEW